FVLKE 8 Damaſcene, although he lived in a corrupt time, meaneth not Tranſubſtantiation, which was not invented in his time, but the ſpirituall and ſupernaturall change of the elements in the faithfull receiver, into the divine food of our ſoules, which is the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, as appeareth firſt by his compariſon, of the like change of the water in Baptiſme, by grace of the holy Ghoſt, into the laver of regeneration. So he ſaith, To the bread and wine which we are accuſtomed to eat, he hath ioyned his Godhead and made them his body and blood, that by things accuſtomed, and that are according to nature, we may be converſant in things which are above nature. His body is truly united to the Godhead, the body which is of the holy Virgin. Not that the ſame body which was taken up into heaven, commeth downe, but that the ſame bread and wine are changed into the body and blood of God. If you require the manner how it is done, it ſufficeth to heare that it is done by the holy Ghoſt, as the Lord of the holy mother of God, by the holy Ghoſt made fleſh to ſubſiſt to himſelfe, and in himſelfe. Theſe words declare his meaning, to be of a ſpirituall and ſupernaturall change, not of a corporall change of the bread and wine, whereunto he ſaith Chriſt hath ioyned his Godhead, that by eating of bread and drinking of wine, which be things accuſtomed and naturall, we might be acquainted with things ſupernaturall. But if his words of tranſmutation, or changing, do ſeeme to import a Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation: Then mark theſe words, in which he uſeth the terme μετουσία, which, if there be any Greeke word for Tranſubſtantiation, might ſignifie the change of being or of ſubſtance. Yet he taketh it for communication. For exhorting men with earneſt affection to come to the Communion, he ſaith, τοῦ θείου ἄνθρακος, &c. Let us be partakers of that divine fire coale, that the fire of the deſire, which is in us, taking firing of that coale, may burne up our ſinnes, and lighten our heartes, and that by participation of the divine fire, we may bee fiered and Deified. I thinke no man doubteth, but this whole ſpeech is figurative: and ſo is the reſt. Cyprians words are theſe: Panis iſte, &c. This bread which our Lord did reach unto his Diſciples, being changed not in ſhape, but in nature, by almighty power of the word is made fleſh: and as in the perſon of Chriſt, the humanity was ſeene, and the Divinity was hidden, ſo the divine eſſence hath unſpeakeably infuſed it ſelfe into the viſible Sacrament, that devotion might be unto religion about the Sacrament, and a more ſincere acceſſe unto the truth, whoſe body the Sacraments are, might be open unto the participation of the ſpirit. This Authour, by change in nature, meaneth not change of ſubſtance, but of the qualities or properties of naturall bread, whoſe nature is to feed the body, whereas this bread is made to nouriſh the ſoule. Therefore he ſaith: That which meat is to the fleſh, faith is to the ſoule: that meat is to the body, the word is to the ſpirit. Againe, Therefore the eating of this fleſh, is a certaine earneſt affection and deſire to continue in him. Againe, When we doe theſe things, we prepare not our teeth to bite, but with ſincere faith we breake and divide this holy bread. And the undoubted Cyprian (for of the Authour of this worke it is uncertaine) in his Epiſtle ad Magn.l.1.Ep.6. expreſly calleth the Lords body bread moulded together of many graines, and his blood wine, which is preſſed out of cluſters of grapes. Againe, Lib.2.Ep.3.Cæcilio, he ſaith, The blood of Chriſt is not water, but wine. Theſe words are plaine againſt Tranſubſtantiation. Tranſubſtantiation. Ep.63.

Neither doth S. Ambroſe, by the change which is wrought in the Sacrament by the words of Chriſt, meane the Popiſh pretended change: for of the bread and the wine, when they are conſecrated by the word of God, he ſaith: If there were ſuch force in the word of our Lord Ieſus, that thoſe things began to be, which were not, how much more effectuall in working is it, that they may be ſtill which they were, and alſo be changed into another thing? An example hereof he giveth in every Chriſtian man: Tu ipſe eras, &c. Thou thy ſelfe waſt, but thou waſt an old creature, but after thou waſt conſecrated, thou beganeſt to be a new creature. Here the change is manifeſt, not in ſubſtance, but in quality. And even in the Chapter by you cited, his words are evident to declare, that he ſpeaketh of no Tranſubſtantiation. For after he hath ſaid, that our Lord Ieſus, contrary to the order of nature, was borne of a Virgine, he addeth: Vera utique, &c. It was the true fleſh of Chriſt that was crucified, that was buried: therefore this is truly a Sacrament of that fleſh. Our Lord Ieſus crieth out: This is my body: before the bleſſing of the heavenly words, it is called another kinde: after conſecration, the body of Chriſt is ſignified. He himſelfe ſaith, it is his blood: before conſecration, it is called another thing: after conſecration, it is named blood. Alſo, by the ſame argument, of the ſupernaturall generation of Chriſt by the holy Ghoſt of the Virgin Mary, he proveth the truth of regeneration in Baptiſme, where there is no change of ſubſtance, but in qualities and conditions. Therefore in the one Sacrament he meaneth no more Tranſubſtantiation, then in the other. Rabanus Maurus de inſtit. Cler. lib.1. cap.31. Sacramentum in alimentum corporis redigitur, virtute autem Sacramenti æternæ vitæ dignitas adipiſcitur. De iis qui myſter. cap.9.

RHEM. 9 26. My body.] He ſaid not, This bread is a figure of my body: or, This wine is a figure of my blood: but, This is my body, and, This is my blood. Damaſc.l.4.c.14. Theoph. in hunc locum. Conc.2. Nic. act.6. to.4. eiuſdem actionis in fine: when ſome Fathers call it a figure or ſigne, they meane the outward formes of bread and wine. No figurative, but a reall preſence.

FVLKE 9 The text is plaine, he ſaid, This is my body, This is my blood, to declare, that he gave to the faith of the worthy receiver, his very body and blood, by thoſe outward elements of bread and wine, which are figures and ſignes of his body and blood. And therefore, though he ſaid not, This is a figure or ſigne of my body and blood: yet he ſaid in the ſame ſenſe, This Cup is the New Teſtament in my blood. By which forme of ſpeech, he declared, that the viſible element is a ſigne or ſeale of the New Teſtament eſtabliſhed in his blood, ſhed on the Croſſe, and not converted or turned into his blood. For his naturall blood is not the New Teſtament in his blood, neither is the Cup properly, but figuratively the New Teſtament. Wherefore it remaineth, that it is a Sacrament, that is, an holy ſigne and ſeale of the New Teſtament, confirmed by the death and bloodſhedding of Chriſt. And ſo the ancient Fathers doe meane, when they call the bread a figure or ſigne of his body, and not the outward formes or accidents of bread, ſeparated from the ſubſtance of bread, for of that monſter they never heard. Tertullian againſt Marcion, which denied Chriſt to have a true body, writeth thus, Reall preſence.

thus, The bread [illegible] of my body, [illegible] body. For [illegible] have a figure [illegible] to be his body, because [illegible] bread [illegible] have [illegible] for Marcions vanity, that the bread [illegible] have [illegible] crucified. [illegible] Tertullian [illegible], that he meaneth the bread to be a figure of Chriſts true body, and not the [illegible] of bread. For [illegible] of [illegible]tiation, had beene thought of in thoſe da[illegible] hold of the [illegible] of the ſub[illegible] of bread, to prove the body of Chriſt to be onely in [illegible], and not in deed, as the [illegible]ad which is turned into it is. Againe, he might have confirmed his here[illegible] the world was not created by God, the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, ſeeing he did away the creature of [illegible] it his body. But Tertullian lib.5. ſaith: By the Sacrament of the Bread and the Cup now in the Goſpel, we have proved the truth of our Lords body and blood, againſt the phantaſme of Marcion. Likewiſe S. Auguſtine [illegible]: Nam ex eo &c. For of that it is written, that the blood of a beaſt is the ſoule of it, beſide that I ſaid, that it pert[illegible]h not to me, what becommeth of the ſoule of a beaſt, I may alſo interprete that precept in a ſigne. For our Lord doubted not to ſay, This is my body, when he gave the ſigne of his body, Cont. Adimant. c.12. The blood of a beaſt is the ſigne of the ſoule, or life thereof, ſo is the bread a ſigne of the body of Chriſt. What place is here for accidents of bread, to be called the ſigne of his body? except you will ſay, the accidents of blood were forbidden in the Law, and not the blood it ſelfe. But blood it ſelfe, as a ſigne of the life of the beaſt, was forbidden to be eaten, as bread is given to be eaten, as a ſigne of Chriſt. Other ancient Fathers are alſo in plaine words directly againſt Tranſubſtantiation, as Chryſ. in Ep. ad Cæſar. Theod. Dial.2. Gelaſius Biſhop of Rome, cont. Eutych. All theſe in plaine words affirme, the ſubſtance of bread and wine to remaine after conſecration. T[illegible]tion.

RHEM. 10 28 Blood of the new Teſtament.] As the old Teſtament was dedicated with blood in theſe words, This is the blood of the Teſtament, &c. Heb.9. So here is the inſtitution of the new Teſtament in Chriſts blood, by theſe words, This is the blood of the new Teſtament, &c. which is here myſtically ſhed, and not onely afterward upon the Croſſe: for the Greeke is the preſent tenſe in all the Evangeliſts, and S. Paul: and likewiſe ſpeaking of the body, 1 Cor.11. it is in the Greeke the preſent tenſe, and Luc.22. and in the Latine here. And the Heretikes themſelves ſo put it in their Tranſlations. ἐκχυνόμενον. κλώμενον. διδόμενον.

FVLKE 10 The blood of Chriſt was not myſtically ſhed in the Sacrament, but as it is myſtically preſent. The Apoſtles and Evangeliſts uſing the preſent tenſe for the future, doe ſignifie, that the Paſſion of Chriſt was even at hand. And therefore your vulgar Interpreter, according to the ſenſe, hath truly tranſlated the word, by the future tenſe. For it is not onely ſaid, that his blood is ſhed, but it is added for many, unto remiſſion of ſinnes, and his body is broken, which was not but on the Croſſe. For if the blood of Chriſt was ſhed for the remiſſion of the ſinnes of the world in the Sacrament, the Paſſion of Chriſt was needleſſe: and ſo to eſtabliſh your blaſphemous ſacrifice of the Maſſe, you make void and fruſtrate the moſt glorious and onely ſacrifice, propitiatory for ſinnes, offered by our Saviour Chriſt upon the Croſſe. Vocationis ad pœnitentiam principale eſt beneficium gratuita remiſſio peccatorum: pro qua idem Redemptor noſter, peracto paſchali cœnæ convivio, ſanguinem ſuum [illegible] effundendum, Bibite, inquit, ex hoc omnes; hic eſt enim Sanguis meus novi Teſtamenti, qui pro multis effundetur in remiſſionem peccatorum, Fulg. de remiſſ. pec. l.1. c.5. Sacrifice of the Maſſe.

RHEM. 11 29 Fruit of the vine.] S. Luke putteth theſe words before he come to the conſecration: whereby it ſeemeth that he ſpeaketh of the wine of the Paſchal lambe, and therefore nameth it, the fruit of the Vine. But if he ſpeake of the wine which was now his blood, he nameth it notwithſtanding wine, as S. Paul nameth the other bread, for three cauſes: Firſt, becauſe it was ſo before: as Eve is called Adams bone, and Aarons rod devoured their rods: whereas they were not now rods, but ſerpents: and He taſted the water turned into wine; whereas it was now wine, and not water: and ſuch like. Secondly, becauſe it keepeth the formes of bread and wine, and things are called as they appeare: as when Raphael is called a young man, Tob.5. and Three men appeared to Abraham, Gen.18. whereas they were three Angels. Thirdly, becauſe Chriſt in this Sacrament is very true and principall bread and wine, feeding and refreſhing us in body and ſoule to everlaſting life. The elements after conſecration called bread and wine. Gen.2. Exod.7. Io.2.

FVLKE 11 Vaine ſhifts againſt the plaine truth of the text, and the evident words thereof. The demonſtrative Pronoune, This, declareth, that he ſpake of the wine in his hand. And ſo the Ancient Fathers have alwayes taken it. Clemens Alexandrinus ſaith: Quod autem vinum eſſet, &c. That it was wine which was bleſſed, he ſheweth again, ſaying to his Diſciples, I will not drinke of the fruit of the vine, Pædag.l.2.c.2. S. Cyprian upon theſe words of the fruit of the vine, which he calleth the creature of the vine, inferreth: Qua in parte, &c. In which part we finde, that the Cup which our Lord offered, was mixt, and that it was wine which he called his blood, Ep.65. Cæcilio. Chryſoſtome alſo upon the ſame text, ſaith: He meant to pull up by the roots a certaine pernicious hereſie, of them which uſe water in the myſteries, ſo that he ſhewed, that when he delivered this myſterie, he delivered wine, and now after his reſurrection, in the bare table of the myſterie, he uſed wine. He ſaith, Of the fruit of the vine, which truly bringeth forth wine, and not water. In Mat. hom.83. Seeing Chriſt therefore delivered wine, as the Text and the Fathers ſay, your three cauſes are vaine. For the Sacrament is called bread and wine, becauſe it is ſo indeed, although it be alſo called the body and blood of Chriſt, as it is indeed, after a ſpirituall manner, to the worthy receiver. But to examine your cauſes a little: you ſay, S. Paul nameth it bread, becauſe it was ſo before, as Eve is called Adams bone. But Eve was not called Adams bone abſolutely, but bone of his bones, and fleſh of his fleſh. And that ſhe was indeed, at that preſent, in reſpect of her body, for I ſuppoſe you will not ſay, her ſoule was made of Adams bone. Likewiſe in your ſecond example: Aarons rod devoured their rods; Moſes calleth it Aarons rod, that it was when he wrote, namely a rod, and the Sorcerers rods were not true Serpents, but in ſhew. Therefore S. Auguſtine ſaith of Aarons rod: The thing was called by that name, from whence it was turned, and into which it was returned againe, therefore it ought to be called that which it was principally, Queſt. ſup. Exod. l.2. Queſt.21. Your third example of water turned into wine, is moſt impertinent: for there it is expreſſed, both what it was before the turning, and what it was after. Your ſecond forged cauſe, for that ſome things are called as they appeare, and not as they are, as Angels are called men, is alſo unlike your matter, for the Angels that appeared, were not phantaſticall ſhewes of accidents, but they appeared in very bodies, as of men, which they aſſumed for the time, as it is plaine by the text. Your third cauſe is alſo vaine: that the Sacraments ſhould be called bread and wine, becauſe Chriſt is the true bread and wine, feeding us in body and ſoule unto eternall life: for S. Paul nameth it bread, in them which eat it unworthily, to their condemnation.

RHEM. 12 41 Watch and pray.] Hereof came Vigils and Nocturnes, that is, watching and praying in the night, commonly uſed in the Primitive Church of all Chriſtians, as is plaine by S. Cyprian, and * S. Hierome: but afterward, and untill this day, ſpecially of Religious perſons. Vigils and Nocturnes. * Adv. Vigilant. Ep.13.

Watching unto prayer is commended in this place, and in many [illegible] of the Scripture, And [illegible] in the Primitive Church they had ſet times of watching in prayer. [illegible] Vigils, that is, holy day eves, and nocturnes, that is, a certeine taske of Pſalmes, and other prayers, are rather mockeries of watches and prayers, [illegible] either that which Chriſt willed his Diſciples to doe, or the Primitive Church uſed: although you ſay your religious perſons uſe them ſtill.

Good Friday.

AND when morning was come, all the chiefe Prieſts and ancients of the people conſulted together againſt IESVS, that they might put him to death.

2 And they brought him bound, and delivered him to Ponce Pilate the Preſident.

3 Then Iudas that betrayed him, ſeeing that he was condemned, || repenting him, returned the thirty ſilver pieces to the chiefe Prieſts and Ancients,

4 Saying, I have ſinned, betraying juſt blood. But they ſaid, What is that to us? looke thou to it.

5 And caſting downe the ſilver pieces in the Temple, he departed: and went and || hanged himſelfe with an halter.

6 And the chiefe Prieſts having taken the ſilver pieces, ſaid, It is not lawfull to caſt them into the ‡ Corbana: becauſe it is the price of blood.

‡ This Corbana was a place about the Temple, which received the peoples gifts or offerings. See Mar. 12, v. 42.

7 And after they had conſulted together, they bought with them the potters field, to be a burying place for ſtrangers.

8 For this cauſe that field was called Haceldama, that is, The field of blood, even to this preſent day.

22 Pilate ſaith to them, What ſhall I doe then with IESVS that is called Chriſt? They ſay all, Let him be crucified.

23 The Preſident ſaid to them, Why what evill hath he done? But they cryed the more, ſaying, Let him be crucified.

25 And the whole people anſwering, ſaid, His blood be upon us, and upon our children.

26 Then he releaſed to them Barabbas, and having ſcourged IESVS, delivered him unto them for to be crucified.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XXVII.

RHEM. 3 Repenting him.] Note how ſpeedily the plague of God falleth after ſinne, and ſpecially men muſt note what torment of conſcience, and deſperation often followeth the ſhedding of innocent blood.

Horror of conſcience.

5 Hanged himſelfe.] If he had rightly repented, notwithſtanding his horrible treaſon, he might have obtained mercy: but by hanging himſelfe, he tooke away all meanes of mercy and ſalvation, becauſe he died finally impenitent.

Deſperation.

RHEM. 1. 24 Innocent of his blood.] Though Pilate was much more innocent then the Iewes, and would have borne free from the murder of our Saviour, ſeeking all the meanes that he could (without offending the people and the Emperours lawes) to dimiſſe him: Yet he is damned for being the miniſter of the peoples wicked will againſt his owne conſcience, even as all officers be, and ſpecially the Iudges and Iuries which execute lawes of temporall Princes againſt Catholike men: for all ſuch be guilty of innocent blood, and be nothing excuſed by that they executed other mens will according to the laws, which be uniuſt. For they ſhould rather ſuffer death themſelves, then put an innocent man to death.

They that execute lawes againſt their conſcience, are like to Pilate.

FVLKE 1 They that execute godly lawes, againſt Popiſh traitors and heretikes, be in no danger of Pilates condemnation.

RHEM. 2 40 If thou be the Sonne.] Marvell not, when thou heareſt our Saviour in the bleſſed Sacrament mocked at, or ſeeſt him abuſed of wicked men, that he ſtraight revengeth not ſuch blaſphemies: or that he ſheweth not himſelfe there viſibly, and to the ſenſe, when faithleſſe heretikes will ſay, Let me ſee him, taſte him, &c. for he ſuffered here the like on the Croſſe, when he might at his will have come downe with as much eaſe as he roſe when he was dead.

Chriſt derided in the bleſſed Sacrament, even as upon the Croſſe.

FVLKE 2 You muſt firſt prove, that Chriſt is as verily preſent in your Popiſh ſinging Cake, as he was preſent on the Croſſe, and had by many arguments approved himſelfe to be the Sonne of God, or elſe your compariſon is vaine and ridiculous.

RHEM. 3 46 Why haſt thou forſaken me?] Beware here of the deteſtable blaſphemy of Calvin and the Calviniſts, who thinking not the bodily death of Chriſt ſufficient, ſay that he was alſo here ſo forſaken and abandoned of his Father, that he ſuſtained in ſoule and conſcience the very feares and torments of the damned. And to take away the Article of his deſcending into hell after his death, (which was with triumph and not in paine) they ſay that his deſcending was nothing elſe, but that his ſoule ſuffered the very paines of hell upon the Croſſe, whereas indeed by theſe words out of the Pſalme, our Saviour will ſignifie no more but that his paines (being now ſo long on the Croſſe and ready to die) were very great, and therefore according to the infirmity of his humane nature, for very anguiſh (as before in the garden when he was but toward his paſſion) he ſaith he was forſaken, for two cauſes, firſt becauſe it was the will of God not [illegible] him, but that he [illegible] did [illegible] that he [illegible] thereof at all but was left to [illegible] as a meere man.

FVLKE 3 [illegible] blaſphemeth not, but honoureth [illegible] when he ſaith that he ſuffered [illegible] the wrath [illegible] the ſinnes of the world: [illegible] bodily paine or death only, [illegible] greater [illegible], then many of his [illegible] faith in him, have rejoyced in [illegible]. Therefore it was the [illegible] of ſinne, which he bare, and the curſe of God [illegible], which he tooke [illegible], to deliver us from [illegible] the puniſhment thereof, not [illegible] only the bodily paine of death, that [illegible] him that was God, [illegible] forſaken of God. As for the triumph over hell gained by [illegible] death, Calvin doth not deny, [illegible] Scripture you can prove [illegible] deſcent of his ſoule into hell after his death, it ſhall be yeelded unto you.

RHEM. 4 59 Wrapped.] This honour and duty done to Chriſts body being dead, was marvellous grateful and meritorious. And this wrapping of it in cleane ſindon may ſignifie by S. Hierome, that the body of our Lord is to be wrapped not in gold, precious ſtones, and ſilke, but in pure linnen. And ſo in the whole Church it is obſerved by S. Silveſters conſtitution, that the Corporall whereupon our Lords body lieth on the Altar, muſt be pure and plaine linnen.

FVLKE 4 The honour done to Chriſt's dead body, was no doubt gratefull, as a token of [illegible] love towards him, but meritorious you cannot prove it. S. Hierome ſpeaketh not of the laying of the S[illegible] on the Altar in the Corporall: for there was no ſuch laying and wrapping of it in S. Hieromes time. But he ſpeaketh of a ſpirituall underſtanding, which afterward he expreſſeth, when he ſaith, He wrappeth Jeſus in a cleane ſindon, which ſhall receive him in a pure minde. And of the miniſtration of the Lords Supper, he ſaith, None is richer then he which carieth the Lords body in a wicker basket, and his blood in a glaſſe. And if it be S. Silveſters conſtitution (as you ſay) that the Corporall whereon our Lords body lieth, muſt be pure linnen: Why doe you lay it upon a gilt patten, and carry his blood (which by Concomitance you wot is his body alſo) in a gilt Chalice? Againe, you have a certaine poke for Reſervation: whether you call it Corporall, or Corporax, lined indeed with linnen, but the outſide is ſilk, gold, ſilver, & pearles, &c. How doth that, and even your Pix and Canopie, agree with Silveſters conſtitution? I would alſo have marvelled, why you lay the body of Chriſt, as it was buried, but that you told us before, that he dieth in myſterie and Sacrament, and therefore belike he muſt be wrapped in the Corporall and buried. But the decree is as truly S. Silveſters, as it is true that the ſame authors affirme, that Conſtantine was baptized by him after he was cleanſed of a leproſie: which the ancient Hiſtories prove to be falſe, Euſeb. in vita Conſtant. l. 4. who was preſent at his Baptiſme in Nicomedia, as ſeemeth by *Hiſt. FULKE. 1 The booke that Philo did write, is of a Sect of Iewes, not Chriſtians, ſuch as Ioſephus deſcribeth the Eſſenes. And S. Hieronym confeſſeth, that he writeth it as in praiſe of his owne nation, In Mar. Who alſo ſaith, the life of all Chriſtians, at that time, was ſuch as Monkes in his time endeavoured to be, ſo that they had no ſpeciall order of Monkes in that time, except all Chriſtians were Monkes. Epiphanius ſaith, this booke of Philo, was intituled, περὶ ἰεσσαίων, which name, though he labour to draw to Chriſtians, by his conjectures, as though it were derived of Iſſe Davids father, or of Ieſus, before the name of Chriſtians was publiſhed from Antiochia: yet it is moſt like, that Philo meant the ſame, whom Ioſephus calleth Eſſenes, and even that deſcription of them, which Euſebius tranſcribeth out of Philo, though he would draw it to Chriſtians, is plain enough for that Sect of the Iewes, and unlike to the profeſſion of Chriſtians, except in certaine ceremonies, of praying, faſting, and ſuch like, which the Iewes, and ſpecially the Sect of the Eſſenes, obſerved. For they had (ſaith he) the written bookes of men of old time, which being Authors of their Sect, left them many monuments of the forme of allegoricall interpretations. Which though Euſebius doe underſtand of the writings of the Apoſtles and Evangeliſts: yet it is certaine, that the Apoſtles and the Evangeliſts, being many then living, or not long before that time, when Philo did write, could not be called by him παλαιοὺς ἄνδρας, men of ancient time. Therefore as Epiphanius and Hierome ſaith, they were common Chriſtians of that time, or elſe as it is moſt like, a Sect of Iewiſh Eſſenes, ſomewhat like indeed to Popiſh Cloiſterers.

For if they had had reſpect to Peter, they would have preferred the See of Antioche where Peter himſelfe ſate, rather then Alexandria, where Marke ſent by Peter did ſit. The ſixt Canon is plaine. They decree, That the ancient cuſtome be obſerved, that the Biſhop of Alexandria, have the overſight of the Churches of Ægypt, Lybia, and Pentapolis, becauſe the Biſhop of Rome hath the like authority of the Churches neere the city, which Ruffinus called Suburbicarias l. 1. c. 6. Indeed Leo Biſhop of Rome could not brooke the decree of the generall Councell of Chalcedon, by which the Biſhop of Conſtantinople was not only preferred before the Biſhop of Alexandria, but alſo made equall with the Biſhop of Rome, and therefore writeth to Anatolius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, to diſſwade him, as alſo to Martian the Emperor, and to Pulcheria the Empreſſe, to have the decree ſtaid, but for all his gainſaying and labour againſt it, the Councell decreed it. For in matters of diſcipline and government of the Church, the Fathers of Chalcedon knew, they had as great authority as the Fathers of Nice; Or as the Fathers of Conſtantinople the firſt, where the like decree was made without any interruption or contradiction of the Romiſh See, which now in the time of Leo had gotten great ſtomacke, and therefore could not away with it. No marvell then, if Gregorie, comming after Leo, did not well allow it. Yet l. 5. ep. 60. he is content, that in as much as Marke was ſent to Alexandria by Peter, he himſelfe being Biſhop of Rome, ſhould ſeeme to have authority over the ſeat of the diſciple, for the maſters ſake, and the Biſhop of Alexandria ſhould have authority over the ſeat of the maſter (that was Rome) for the diſciples ſake. This was greater modeſty, then any of his ſucceſſors would ever ſhew. In the other Epiſtle, you quote l. 6. ep. 37. He acknowledgeth three Sees of Peter, all equall in Principality, Antioche, Rome, and Alexandria. And whereas Eulogius Biſhop of Alexandria, had aſcribed as much to himſelfe (as ſitting in Peters chaire even by Gregories confeſſion) as he did unto Gregory: he anſwereth in theſe words, Et cum me ſpecialis honor, &c. And whereas ſpeciall honour by no meanes doth delight me, yet I rejoyced greatly that you (moſt holy) gave unto your ſelfe, the ſame that you beſtowed upon me. Thus was Gregory a more fellowlike Biſhop then thoſe that came after him, which can abide no man to ſit in Peters chaire, but themſelves, no man to have principality of dignity, or ſpeciall honor, but themſelves. Thus while you will needs bring in the dignity of Peters diſciple for his ſake, unawares you have given Peters chaire of Rome a mate.

THE HOLY GOSPEL OF IESUS CHRIST ACCORDING TO S^t. MARKE.

CHAP. I.

The firſt part of this Goſpel: of the preparation to Chriſts manifeſtation.

Iohn (a the Eremite of whom the Prophet) preaching penance, and living himſelfe accordingly, baptizeth the people to prepare them to Chriſt, 7 telling them, that it is not his, but Chriſts Baptiſme, in which they ſhall receive the holy Ghoſt. 9 Ieſus there is manifeſted from heaven: 12 and by and by he alſo goeth into the wilderneſſe. 14 Beginning in Galilee, 16 after that he hath called foure Diſciples, 21 he preacheth firſt in Capernaum, confirming his Doctrine with beneficiall Miracles, to the great admiration of all: 35 then alſo (but firſt retiring into the wilderneſſe) in all the reſt of Galilee with like Miracles.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 4 Unto remiſſion.] Iohns Baptiſme put them in hope onely of remiſſion of ſinnes, as a preparative to Chriſts Sacrament, by which ſinnes were indeed to be remitted, Aug.l.5.de bapt.c.10.

FULKE 1 Forgiveneſſe of ſinnes is onely in Chriſt: yet was the Baptiſme of Iohn a true ſeale of forgiveneſſe of ſinnes by Chriſt, as the Baptiſme of Chriſts Diſciples was. As for the preparative to Chriſts Sacrament, by which ſinnes were indeed to be remitted be your owne words, and none of Saint Auguſtines: who was indeed diſtreined becauſe he ſuppoſed, that ſome were baptized againe by Paul, which had received Iohns Baptiſme, which the text rightly tranſlated, doth not ſay: yet, he concludeth the matter in theſe words: Tamen ne quiſquam, &c. To let any man ſhould contend, that even in the Baptiſme of Iohn, ſinnes were forgiven, after ſome larger ſanctification to be given by the Baptiſme of Chriſt, unto thoſe whom Paul commanded to be baptized againe, I doe not greatly ſtrive. Iohns Baptiſme. Acts 19.

RHEM. 2 15 Be penitent.] He doth not preach beleeve, or faith onely, but penance alſo.

FULKE 2 No Chriſtian man doth preach faith onely, without repentance, or void of good workes, though they preach, that faith without workes doth iuſtifie. Faith onely.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 3 5 Confeſſing their ſinnes.] A certaine confeſſion of ſinnes there was, even in that penance which Iohn preached, and which was made before men were baptized. Whereby it is cleare that Iohn made a preparation to the Sacrament of penance, which afterward was inſtituted by Chriſt, as well as he did by baptizing prepare the way to Chriſts Baptiſme. Confeſſion.

FULKE 3 You are never able to prove, that Chriſt did inſtitute any Sacrament of penance. Iohn by his Doctrine and Baptiſme, which was the ſeale thereof, prepared a way to Chriſt, but not to the Baptiſme of Chriſt, for he preached not his owne Baptiſme, but the waſhing away of our ſinnes by Chriſt: therefore he alſo was a miniſter of the Baptiſme of Chriſt. The Popiſh Sacrament of penance.

RHEM. 4 5 Their ſinnes.] He doth not ſay, that they confeſſed themſelves to be ſinners, which may be done by a generall confeſſion: but that they confeſſed their ſinnes, which is a particular confeſſion. Particular confeſſion.

FULKE 4 If he heard a particular confeſſion of ſinnes, of ſo many thouſands as he baptized, he needed to have exerciſed his office more yeeres then he did moneths. Confeſſion or ſhrift.

RHEM. 6 Clothed.] The holy Ghoſt thought it worthy of ſpeciall reporting, how ſtraitly this Prophet lived, and how he abſtained from delicate meates and apparell. See Mat. c. 3. Iohns example of penance.

RHEM. 5 8 With water.] Iohn with water onely, Chriſt with the holy Ghoſt, not onely, as the Heretikes hold, that ſay, water is not neceſſary, but with water and the holy Ghoſt, as it is plaine Iohn 3. Unleſſe a man be borne againe of water, and the holy Ghoſt, he ſhall not enter into the kingdome of heaven. Baptiſme in water. Calv.4.inſt.c.16.

FULKE 5 Chriſt baptized none with water Iohn 4. 2. Notwithſtanding, the Baptiſme with water by his Miniſters, is neceſſary, if it may be had, according to Chriſts inſtitution, neither doth Calvine teach otherwiſe. But if it cannot be had, in them that are prevented by death, the lacke of water ſhall not deprive Gods children of their inheritance. Ambroſ. de obitu Valentini Imper. doubteth not of the ſalvation of the Emperour, which was ſlaine before he was baptized. Sed audio vos dolere, &c. But I have heard (ſaith he) that you are grieved, becauſe he received not the Sacrament of Baptiſme. Tell me what other thing is there in us, but a will, but a requeſt? Further he citeth the ſaying of the Wiſe man, The iuſt, by what death ſoever he be prevented, his ſoule ſhall be in reſt. And the example of Martyrs which were ſlaine before they were baptized, Who if they be waſhed in their owne blood (ſaith he) this mans will hath waſhed him. And the text of Iohn 3. maketh no more for the neceſſity of water, then the like Iohn 6. for giving the Communion to Infants, Except ye eat the fleſh of the Sonne of man, &c. The neceſſity of Baptiſme. Slander.

9 Baptized of Iohn.] The humility of Christ not diſdaining his ſervants Baptiſme, which is an example for all faithfull, not to diſdaine Chriſts Sacraments of any Prieſt be he never ſo ſimple, being by the Catholike Church lawfully called Aug. l.5. de Bapt. c.9.

10 The Spirit.] Expreſſe mention of the bleſſed Trinity, the Father ſpeaketh from heaven, the holy Ghoſt appeareth in the likeneſſe of a dove, the Sonne alſo is recommended unto us Ambr. l.1. de Sacram. c.5. The bleſſed Trinitie.

12 Deſert.] Chriſt doing penance by long faſting, ſolitarineſſe, and converſing with wilde beaſts, gave example and inſtructions to the Church for Lent faſt, and to holy Eremites of retiring themſelves to the wilderneſſe and prayer. Chriſts example of penance.

Blaſphemy: Chriſt was free from ſinne, and therefore needed no repentance. But if to ſalve the matter you ſay, that doing penance is nothing but faſting, and ſuch exerciſes of an auſtere and ſtraight life: then with you there may be doing of penance without repentance and ſorrow for ſinnes. And ſo your doing of penance is not that converſion changing of minde, whereunto Iohn and Chriſt exhorted. For Lent faſt, and Eremites, See Mat. 3. 4. the notes there. Chriſt did no penance.

35 Deſert place.]: Chriſt uſed very often to retire into ſolitary places, no doubt for our example, to teach us that ſuch places are beſt for prayer and contemplation, and that we ſhould often retire our ſelves from worldly matters to ſolitary meditation of heavenly things. Solitary contemplation.

CHAP. II.

Againſt the Scribes and Phariſees he defendeth, firſt, his power to remit ſinnes in earth, 13 and his eating with ſinners, (as being the Phyſician of ſoules, ſignified in thoſe his miraculous cures upon bodies:) 18 then alſo he defendeth his Diſciples, not having as yet any faſts by him preſcribed unto them, and plucking eares of corne upon the Sabbath: ſignifying withall that he will change their ceremonies.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 4 Vncovered.] Such diligence ought to be vſed to bring ſinners to Chriſt in his Sacraments, as was vſed to procure this man and others, by Chriſt, the healing of their bodies.

RHEM. 5 Sicke of the palſie.] Such as this man was in body by diſſolution of his limmes, ſuch alſo was he in ſoule by the noiſome deſires of the world occupying his heart, and withdrawing him from all good workes, Aug. de Paſtor. cap. 6. to. 9.

RHEM. 1 5 Thy ſinnes.] Hereby it appeareth that Chriſt healed this ſicke man, firſt, in his ſoule, before he tooke away his bodily infirmity: which may be an inſtruction for all men in bodily diſeaſe; firſt, to call for the Sacraments, which be medicines of the ſoule. As hereby alſo may be gathered, that many diſeaſes come from ſinne, and therefore cannot be healed till the ſinnes be remitted.

The Sacraments to be called for in ſickneſſe.

FVLKE 1 Seeing ſicknes commeth for ſin, men in ſicknes ought firſt to repent of their ſins. For the Sacraments without repentance, doe nothing availe, in them that be of yeeres of diſcretion. But when they are truly penitent of their ſins to confirme their faith in the promiſes of God concerning the remiſſion of ſins, they may deſire the Sacrament of the Lords Supper: other Sacraments, for men baptized, the Church of God doth not acknowledge.

Sacraments.

RHEM. 2 10 The Sonne of man.] As Chriſt proveth unto them, that himſelfe as man, and not as God onely, hath power to remit ſins, by that in all their ſights he was able to doe miracles, and make the ſicke man ſuddenly ariſe: ſo the Apoſtles having power granted them to doe miracles, though they be not God, may in like maner, have authority from God to remit ſinne, not as God, but as Gods miniſters.

Man hath power to remit ſinnes.

FVLKE 2 The Sonne of man did forgive ſinnes properly, as he was God; his Apoſtles, by aſſuring men of Gods forgiveneſſe, as Gods miniſters, did alſo forgive ſinnes. See the notes upon Matth. 9.

Remiſſion of ſinnes.

RHEM. 3 10 In earth.] This power that the Sonne of man hath to remit ſins in earth, was never taken from him, but dureth ſtill in the Sacraments, and miniſters, by whom he remitteth ſins in the Church, and not in heaven only. For concerning ſin, there is one court of conſcience in earth, and another in heaven: and the iudgement in heaven followeth and approveth this on earth: as is plaine by the words of our Saviour to Peter firſt, and then to all the Apoſtles. Whatſoever you ſhall binde upon earth, ſhall be bound in heaven: Whatſoever you ſhall looſe upon earth, ſhall be looſed in heaven: Whereupon S. Hierome ſaith, That Prieſts having the keyes of the kingdome of heaven, iudge after a ſort before the day of iudgement. And S. Chry. l. 3. de Sacer. paul. poſt prin. more at large.

Chriſt remitteth ſinnes by the Prieſts miniſtery. Mat. 16. 19. Mat. 18. 18. ad Heliod. ep. 1.

FVLKE 3 God onely forgiveth ſinnes abſolutely and properly: his miniſters follow the ſentence of Gods word, in binding and looſing, remitting and reteining of ſinnes, or elſe they loſe their labour. And though their ſentence be given before the day of iudgement; yet it is according to the ſentence that God before them, gave in his holy word, by which they know, who is to be bound, and who to be looſed, Hier. in Mat. 16. See more the notes in Matth. 9.

RHEM. 25 In neceſſity.] In neceſſity many things be done without ſinne, which elſe might not be done: and ſo the very Chalices and conſecrated Iewels and veſſels of the Church in caſes of neceſſity, are by lawfull authority turned to profane uſes: which otherwiſe to alienate to a mans private commodity is ſacriledge.

CHAP. III.

The blinde Phariſees ſeeking his death for doing good on the Sabbath, he meekly goeth out of the way: where the people that flocke unto him, and his miracles, are innumerable. 13 Yea to his twelve alſo (having need of more workemen) he giveth power to worke miracles. 20 He ſo occupieth himſelfe for ſoules, that his kinne thinke him mad. 22 The Scribes of Hieruſalem come ſo farre, and yet have nothing, but abſurdly to blaſpheme his caſting out of Devils, to their owne damnation. 31 That the Iewes ſhould not (after their manner) thinke it enough, that he is of their blood, he telleth that ſuch rather are deare to him, as keepe Gods Commandements.

If they be heretikes cloſely to themſelves, they hurt themſelves and not us, which communicate with the truth which they profeſſe openly; and not with hereſie, which they hold privily. But if they preach hereſie, though they preach ſome truth among, as all heretikes doe, the weake ſhall doe well to forbeare their Sermons, and all men ought to refuſe communion or fellowſhip in Prayers and Sacraments with them.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 ‡ 11 Them that.] Such as be out of the Church, though they heare and reade never so much they cannot understand. Bed. in 4. Mar.

FVLKE 1 You slander S. Bede, he saith not so. For how should heretikes be brought to the Church, if they did not profit by reading and hearing? How was S. Augustine when he was an heretike, brought to be a Catholike, but by reading, and hearing of S. Ambrose, as he himselfe confesseth? Bedes words are these: Illis ergo qui foris sunt, &c. To them that are without, and come not neere to our Lords feet, that they may be partakers of his doctrine, all things are done in parables, both the workes and the words of our Saviour; for neither in those wonders which he wrought, nor in those secrets which he preached, they are able to know God: therefore they are not meete to attaine to remission of sinnes, which is to be attained by grace of this faith. Of these words it is plaine, that Bede spake not of every one that is out of the Church, but of obstinate despisers of the truth, which will not become Schollers to our Saviour Christ.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 2 12 Lest they should be converted.] These speeches here and elsewhere, we must not so understand as though he spake in parables of purpose and to this end, that the hearers might not understand lest they should be converted; which were as much to say as that he would not have them understand, nor be converted: but we must learne the true sense of this very place in S. Matthew and in the Acts, where our Saviour and S. Paul speake thus; They have heard heavily, and have shut their eyes, lest perhaps they may see, and understand, and be converted, and I heale them. Whereby it is evident, that the speaking in parables was not the cause (for many beside the Apostles heard and understood) but themselves would not heare, and understand, and be converted; and so were the cause of their owne wilfull and obstinate infidelity. And therefore also he spake in parables, because they were not worthy to understand, as the other to whom he expounded them.

God is not author of sinne, but mans owne will.

Matth.13. Act.28.

FVLKE 2 We need not feare lest in these speeches God bee made Authour of sinne; for hee withdraweth his grace from the wicked, and giveth them over to a reprobate minde, not as an evill Authour but as a righteous Iudge: And both those sayings are true, They have shut their eyes that they should not see, &c. And to them without all things are in parables, that seeing they may see and not see, &c. For those that maliciously and obstinately refuse his grace offered, God will not have them to see that they may take it. And Christ revealed the truth to his Disciples, not because they were worthy; but because through Gods grace they were willing to learne.

God is not author of evill.

RHEM. 27 And sleepe.] *The Church, and Christs doctrine (sleepe we, wake we) increaseth by the great providence of God, onely the Preachers must sow, and plant, and water, and * God will give the increase, nourishing the seed in mens hearts. And therefore we may not give over, or be impatient and solicitous, if we have not alwayes good successe; but doing our duty, commit the rest to God.*

Rhem. 1 28. If I ſhall touch.] So the good Catholike ſaith, If I might but touch one of his Apoſtles, yea one of his Apoſtles napkins, yea but the ſhadow of one of his Saints, I ſhould be better for it, Act.5. and 19. See S. Chr.to.5.con.Gen.in prin. in vit.Babylæ. Yea S. Baſil ſaith, He that toucheth the bone of a Martyr, receiveth in ſome degree holineſſe of the grace or vertue that is therein. — The touch of reliques. Baſil.in pſ.115.

Fulke 1 When Chriſt diſpenſeth the miraculous gift of healing by touching of his garment, or his Apoſtles, or their napkins, or their ſhadow, the good Catholike conceiveth hope to be healed by ſuch meanes. But ſince the gift of miracles is ceaſed, to looke for helpe or holineſſe of ſuch things, it is ſuperſtition, or tempting of God. Chryſoſtome in that place quoted, ſpeaketh of the miracles done in the Primitive Church by the Apoſtles, and other which had the gift of working miracles in thoſe times. That which S. Baſil ſaith is this: He ſheweth that the death of all the Saints of God (that is, of all true Chriſtians) is precious in the ſight of God, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith. And although by the Iewiſh Law, he that touched a dead body, was uncleane, and muſt waſh his garments; Yet now (ſaith he) he that hath touched a Martyrs bones, receiveth a certaine participation of ſanctification, of the grace, that reſted in the body: therefore precious in the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints. By touching a Martyrs bones, he meaneth not ſuperſtitious touching (for which you abuſe his words) but ſuch touching, as is neceſſary in them that bury the Saints, or gather their bones together for buriall, after they be burnt, or otherwiſe diſperſed by their perſecutors. As it is manifeſt, by the Iewiſh pollution by touching, which was the office of buriall, forbidden to the Prieſts. And the participation of ſanctification which he nameth, is the holy communion or fellowſhip that Chriſtians have, with the Saints departed in the grace of God, whereof they were partakers in their life. Whereof they declare themſelves to be partakers, which exerciſe ſuch offices of charity, towards the bodies and bones of the Saints and Martyrs departed. And this is the right meaning of Baſils words, which you have perverted both in ſenſe and tranſlation. For what honour he thought meet to be given to the Martyrs, he teſtifieth in the Homily upon the Martyr Gordium, Ho.48. It is the moſt ridiculous thing that can be (ſaith he) when the righteous deſpiſed the whole world, that we ſhould take upon us to ſet forth their full commendation, of a few things which they contemned. Therefore a remembrance is ſufficient for our perpetuall profit. For they have no need of any increaſe to their glory; but a remembrance is needfull for us, that we may imitate or follow them. In theſe words Baſil declareth, that all other wayes of honouring the Martyrs and Saints departed, then by imitation, are vaine, and ſuperfluous. And that a remembrance for imitation, is ſufficient for us to take perpetuall profit by them. As for grace or vertue that is in their bones, to communicate to them that ſuperſtitiouſly touch them, is farre, both from his words, and from his meaning. — Miracles. Holineſſe of creatures. Rhem. 2 30. Vertue.] Vertue to heale this womans maladie, proceeded from Chriſt, though ſhe touched but his coat: ſo when the Saints by their reliques or garments doe miracles, the grace and force thereof commeth from our Saviour, they being but the meanes or inſtruments of the ſame.

Fulke 2 While the gift of miracles continued in the Church, it is true that the grace and force of them, came from our Saviour. But that by reliques or garments of Saints, Chriſt worketh miracles at this day, it is more needfull to prove, then to ſhew whence the grace and force of them doth come. Except you will advouch, all the fained miracles rehearſed in your Legends, and the bookes of Saints lives to be true: by this argument. Chriſt can worke miracles by reliques and garments of Saints, ergo there is no queſtion to be made, but all miracles of the Legend were as truly done, as thoſe that be recorded in the Goſpel. — Reliques. Miracles.

Rhem. 3 36. Onely beleeve.] It is our common [illegible] when we require one thing ſpecially, though other things [illegible] be as neceſſary, and more [illegible] to his patient: Onely have a good heart; when he muſt alſo [illegible] a diet, and take potions, [illegible] more [illegible]. So Chriſt, in this great infidelity of the Iewes, required [illegible] that they would beleeve he was able to doe ſuch a cure, ſuch a miracle, and then he did it: otherwiſe it followeth in the next Chapter, He could not doe miracles there, becauſe of their incredulity. Againe, for this faith he gave them here and in all like places health of body, which they deſired: and therefore he ſaith not, Thy faith hath iuſtified thee: but, hath made thee ſafe or whole. Againe, this was the fathers faith, which could not iuſtifie the daughter: whereby it is moſt evident, that this Scripture, and the like, are fooliſhly abuſed of the Heretikes, to prove, that onely faith iuſtifieth.

Fulke 3 You would beare your ſottiſh Diſciples the Papiſts in hand, that we have no better arguments to prove iuſtification by faith onely, without the workes of the Law, then theſe words of our Saviour, Only beleeve. And therefore you draw our Saviours words to be like a common inconſiderate ſpeech of ours, when the Phyſician ſaith, Onely have a good heart, where other things are neceſſary. But although the queſtion of iuſtification in this place be not handled ſpecially, nor directly: yet the words of our Saviour Chriſt, declare generally, that to receive any benefit from him, there is required at our hand nothing elſe but faith, that we may be able to receive it. And yet he meaneth not a dead and ſolitary faith, but a faith living, and which is fruitfull of good workes, yet not by the workes, but by the faith onely, his benefit is received. Hierome and Bede upon this text, extend it to iuſtification by faith, as the very analogie from the body to the ſoule doth leade them. — Iuſtification by faith only.

‡ Of Tyre and Sidon he came

[illegible]

14 And when he had called all the people unto him, he ſaid unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and underſtand.

15 There is nothing from without a man, that can defile him, when it entreth into him: but the things which proceed out of him, thoſe are they that defile the man.

16 If any man have eares to heare, let him heare.

17 And when he came into the houſe away from the people, his Diſciples asked him of the ſimilitude,

18 And he ſaith unto them, Are ye alſo ſo without underſtanding? Doe ye not perceive that whatſoever thing from without entreth into the man, it cannot defile him, 19 Becauſe it entreth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all the meats?

20 And he ſaid, That which commeth out of the man, defileth the man.

*21 * For from within, even out of the heart of men, proceed evill thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders,*

22 Thefts, covetouſneſſe, wickedneſſe, deceit, wantonneſſe, a wicked eye, blaſphemie, pride, fooliſhneſſe.

23 All theſe evill things come from within, and defile the man.

24 And from thence he aroſe, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and entred into an houſe, and would that no man ſhould have knowne, but he could not be hid.

25 For a certaine woman, whoſe yong daughter had an uncleane ſpirit, when ſhe had heard of him, came and fell at his feet.

26 (The woman was a Greeke, out of the nation of Syrophenicia:) and ſhe beſought him that hee would caſt out the devill from her daughter.

27 But Ieſus ſaid unto her: Let the children firſt be fed: for it is not meet to take the childrens bread, and to caſt it unto the little dogs.

28 Shee anſwered and ſaid unto him, Yes Lord, for the little dogs alſo eat under the table of the childrens crummes.

29 And he ſaid unto her, For this ſaying, goe thy way, the devill is gone out of thy daughter.

30 And when ſhee was come home to her houſe, ſhe found that the devill was departed, and her daughter lying on the bed.

31 And when he was departed againe from the coaſts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the ſea of Galilee

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. VII.

RHEM. 2 Common.] Common and uncleane is all one. For the Iewes were commanded by the Law to eate certaine kindes of meates onely and not all indifferently: and becauſe theſe were ſeparated from other meates and thus were ſanctified to their uſe, they called the other common and profane: and becauſe the Law calleth theſe cleane and thoſe uncleane, thereof it is, that uncleane and common is all one, as in this Chapter often, and Acts 10.

RHEM. 1 7 Precepts of men.] Mens ordinances which be repugnant to Gods Commandements, be here condemned: as all obſervations not edifying nor profitable to the fulfilling of Gods Commandements, be vaine and ſuperſtitious: as many obſervations of the Phariſees were then, and the like traditions of Heretickes be now; for howſoever they brag of Scriptures, all their manner of adminiſtration and miniſtery is their owne tradition and invention without all Scripture and warrant of Gods word. But the traditions of the Apoſtles and Auncients, and all the precepts of holy Church we are commanded to keepe as things not preſcribed by man, but by the holy Ghoſt, Act.15, 28.41. 2 Theſſalon. 2, 15.

FVLKE 1 Precepts of men be not onely ſuch, as be repugnant to Gods Commandements, but even ſuch as are beſide Gods Commandements, wherein any part of Religion or the Service of God is placed: As this waſhing of hands before meat, and ſuch like of themſelves, are not repugnant to Gods Commandements, and may be uſed for cleanlineſſe, but not for Religion. So the Popiſh traditions, which they call the traditions of the Apoſtles and Ancients, and precepts of the holy Church, are either manifeſtly repugnant to Gods Commandements, or elſe ſuperſtitious inventions of men, by which God is worſhipped in vaine. And are nothing like to the Decrees of the Councell of the Apoſtles, Act 15. nor to the Doctrine which S. Paul delivered, 2. Theſſ. 2. 15. See the notes upon Matth. 15. Sect. 2. & 3. That our miniſtery and miniſtration are agreeable to the Scriptures, both the Scriptures beare witneſſe, yea your owne conſcience and confeſſion by ſilence: for if any thing could have beene alledged out of the Scripture againſt us, it ſhould not have beene ſpared.

RHEM. 2 11 Gift.] To give to the Church or Altar is not forbidden, but the forſaking of a mans parents in their neceſſity, pretending or excuſing the matter upon his giving that which ſhould releeve them, to God or to the Altar, that is impious and unnaturall. And theſe Phariſees teaching children ſo to neglect their duties to their parents, did wickedly.

FVLKE 2 Chriſt ſpeaketh of the Iewiſh Altar. The Church of Chriſt hath none ſuch: therefore it is ſin to give to the idolatrous Altar of Popery. But to the maintenance of Gods Religion, it is not forbidden to give, ſo we neglect not under that pretence, other neceſſary duties commanded by God.

RHEM. 3 15 Nothing entring into a man.] As theſe words of our Saviour doe not import, that the Iewes then might have eaten of thoſe meates which God forbade them: no more doe they now, that we Chriſtians may eat of meats which the Church forbiddeth us. And yet both then and now all meats are cleane, and nothing entring into a man, defileth a man. For neither they then, nor we now abſtaine, for that any meats are of their nature abominable, or defile the eaters, but they for ſignification, we for obedience and chaſtiſement of our bodies.

FVLKE 3 The Church of Chriſt forbiddeth not meats for Religions ſake: but Antichriſt attending to lying ſpirits, and the doctrine of Devils, forbiddeth meats and marriages for Religion, and in the abſtinence placeth Religion, and holineſſe. As for your pretence of obedience, and chaſtiſement, is but lying in hypocriſie, for that there is no chaſtiſement of the body, in change of the meat. And thoſe things which of you are not forbidden, as wines, ſpices, fruits, &c. are more incentive of luſt, then common fleſh, which you doe forbid. Durande alſo (howſoever you would cloke the matter) ſaith, fleſh is forbidden, and fiſh allowed, becauſe God curſed the earth, but not the waters. See more upon Mat. 15. Sect. 4. & 5.

RHEM. 4 33 Spitting.] Not onely by Chriſts word and will, but alſo by ceremony and by application of externall creatures which be holy, miracles are wrought; as by Chriſts ſpittle, which was not part of his perſon, being a ſuperfluity of his body, but yet moſt holy, Theophil. in 7. Marc.

FVLKE 4 Chriſts ſpittle worketh not miracles, but Chriſt by it, or any other thing whatſoever it pleaſeth him, or without any thing, but by his owne word or will worketh miracles. Therefore we muſt not imagine any power or holineſſe in ceremonies or creatures inſenſible, to doe any thing of themſelves, but when it pleaſeth our Saviour Chriſt to uſe them to ſuch purpoſes, as in his Sacraments uſually, or in his miracles extraordinarily.

RHEM. 5 34 Ephphetha.] The Church doth moſt godly imitate and uſe theſe very words and ceremonies of our Saviour in the Exorciſmes before Baptiſme, to the healing of their ſoules that are to be baptized, as Chriſt here healed the bodily infirmity and the diſeaſe of the ſoule together, Ambroſ. l. 1. de Sacram. c. 1.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 1 22 Touch him.] Our Saviour uſed to worke much by touching: that we may learne not to contemne the corporall and externall application of holy things, not to challenge by the ſpirit and faith only, as Heretikes doe.

FVLKE. 1 When our Saviour worketh miracles by touching, we are reverently and faithfully to eſteeme of it. But ſuperſtitious touching of any thing, where we have no word or promiſe of God, to receive benefit by ſuch touching, we learne not of our Saviour Chriſt. By faith and the Spirit of God, we challenge to obtaine that which God hath promiſed in his holy word. But further to preſume, by corporall touching or externall application, of (I cannot tell, and you are belike aſhamed to expreſſe, what) holy things, without faith grounded upon Gods word, and his Spirit tried and proved by the ſame word, we know it is vaine ſuperſtition, yea wicked preſumption.

Superſtitious touching.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 6 Gave to his Diſciples.] He ſerveth the people not immediatly himſelfe, but by the Apoſtles miniſtery: to teach us that we muſt receive Chriſts Sacraments and Doctrine, not at our owne hand, but of his Prieſts and our Paſtours.

RHEM. 2 7 Bleſſed them.] So is it in ſome ancient Greeke copies, agreeable to our Latine, and in S. Luke expreſly in the common Greeke text, that he bleſſed the five loaves and the two fiſhes: which muſt be alwaies marked againſt the heretiks, which deny this bleſſing to pertaine to the creatures, but faine it alwayes to be referred to God for thankſgiving. For if it were ſo, he would have ſaid grace but once for that whole refection: but he did ſeverally bleſſe both the bread firſt, and afterward the fiſhes alſo, multiplying them by his ſaid bleſſing (as he did mankinde and other creatures in the beginning by bleſſing them) and ſo working effectually ſome change or alteration in the very creatures themſelves.*

Luke 9, 16. εὐλογήσεν αὐτὰ. Bleſſing of creatures worketh an effect in them. Gen. 1, 22, 28.

FVLKE 2 That Chriſt by his bleſſing multiplied the loaves and fiſhes, it is alwayes acknowledged of us. But that Popiſh bleſſing of bread, water, candles, floures, and ſuch like, whereof we have no commandement, nor warrant in the holy Scriptures, we ſay ſtill, worketh no effect in them: but argueth an Antichriſtian arrogancie in the bleſſers, which take upon thẽ to adde greater vertue or holines unto them, then God hath given in the right uſe of them.

Popiſh bleſſing of bread, candles, water, floures, &c.

RHEM. 3 35 For mee and the Goſpel.] By the Goſpel is ſignified not onely the foure Evangeliſts, but all Scriptures, and whatſoever Chriſt ſaid that is not in Scripture: for he ſaith in this very place, He that ſhalbe aſhamed of my words, the Son of man will bee aſhamed of him, &c. Neither his owne words only, but whatſoever the Apoſtles taught in word or writing: for our Saviour ſaith, He that deſpiſeth you deſpiſeth me. For defence of any of all theſe and of every Article of the Catholike faith, we ought to die, and this is to loſe our life for Chriſt and his Goſpel.

FVLKE 3 All the words of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, that pertaine to the ſalvation of Gods children, though not in number and ſound, yet in weight and ſubſtance, are comprehended and expreſſed in the holy Scriptures: which are able to make us wiſe unto ſalvation, 2 Tim. 3. 15. The Lord of us all gave to his Apoſtles (ſaith Irenæus) power of the Goſpel; by whom we have knowne the truth, that is, the Doctrine of the Sonne of God, to whom alſo the Lord ſaith: He that heareth you heareth me: and he that deſpiſeth you deſpiſeth me and him that ſent me. We have not known the diſpoſition of our ſalvation by any other, then by them, by whom the Goſpel came unto us, which then indeed they preached, and afterward by the will of God, delivered it in the Scriptures, to be a foundation and pillar of our faith, l. 3. c. 1. If any thing therefore be alledged, as the Goſpel, which is not contained in the holy Scriptures, we may ſafely ſay with S. Hierome. This, becauſe it hath no authority of the Scriptures, may as eaſily be contemned, as it is alledged for proofe. In Matth. 23.

The ſufficiencie of the Scriptures.

That Elias ſhalbe a Precurſor of Chriſt in his ſecond comming to judgement, it is boldly affirmed without authority of the Scriptures. That he was in the deſert ſometime, wee find in the Scriptures, but continually he did not remaine in the wilderneſſe. And if he had, by ſo much he had been more unlike to Popiſh Eremites, of whom many never came in the wilderneſſe, except you count that place, which is a quarter of a mile from a great city, or a populous towne, a wilderneſſe. S. Hierome ſaith: It hath beene doubted among many, by which of the Monkes or ſolitary men chiefly, the wilderneſſe became to be inhabited. For ſome fetching the matter a farre off have taken the beginning from bleſſed Helias and Iohn. Of which Helias ſeemeth to us to have beene more then a Monke, and Iohn to have profeſſed before he was borne. But other, unto which opinion all the common ſort doth agree, doe affirme that Antony was the head or the beginning of this profeſſion, which is partly true, for he was not ſo much before all as by him the deſires of all have beene ſtirred up. But Amathas and Macarius the diſciples of Antony, of which the former buried his maſters body, doe yet ſtill affirme, that one Paul a Thebæan, was the prince, or firſt beginner of this matter, which we alſo, not ſo much in the name, as in opinion doe approove. In theſe words you may ſee what principall profeſſors of Heremites life, Elias and Iohn Baptiſt were accounted by S. Hieronym. Yet the Eremites of his time, were nothing like Popiſh Eremites but onely in name. doe miracles among the heathens, to proove any [illegible] of the Chriſtian faith; but they never did nor ever ſhall worke any miracle to proove any of their erronious opinions, as to proove that Chriſt is not really in the Bleſſed Sacrament.

[illegible] may worke miracles to confirme their erronious opinions, but they cannot proove their erronious opinions by the Scriptures, Deut. 13. Auguſt. de unit. eccleſ. c. 16. It is ſufficient that we proove by the Scriptures [illegible] teſtifie of the truth of Chriſts naturall body, that it is not preſent in the Sacrament, according to the Popiſh imagination, which is contrary to the Scriptures, and the judgement of the ancient Fathers. As for lying miracles, ſuch as Papiſts worke, to proove it by pricking their fingers [illegible] appeare bloody, or by ſorcery as Marcus the heretike jugled with the cup, to make it appeare purple and red, that Chriſt might ſeeme to drop his blood into this cup: we leave to Popiſh heretikes. The word of God is a ſufficient warrant for our doctrine, againſt all falſe and counterfeit miracles.

38 And Iesvs ſaid to them, You wote not what you aske; can you drinke the cup that I drinke? or bee baptized with the baptiſme wherewith I am baptized?

39 But they ſaid to him, We can. And Iesvs ſaid to them, The cup indeed which I drinke, you ſhall drinke: and with the baptiſme wherewith I am baptized, you ſhall be baptized:

40 But to ſit on my right hand or on my left, is not mine to give vnto you, but to whom it is prepared.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. 10.

RHEM. 1 9. Let no man ſeparate.] The obligation betwixt man and wife is ſo great, that during life it cannot be broken.

FVLKE 1 Except it be for fornication. Matth.5,32.19.9.

RHEM. 2 19. Commandements.] Note that the keeping of Gods Commandements procureth life everlaſting.

FVLKE 2 The perfect keeping of Gods Commandements procureth everlaſting life, but every breach of them deſerveth the curſe of God. Galat.3.10 Therefore no man attaineth to everlaſting life by keeping of Gods Commandements, but by the mercy of God in Chriſt, apprehended by faith without reſpect of workes or merits.

RHEM. 3. 21 Goe, ſell whatſoever.] This is counſell of perfection (not a precept) which the religious profeſſing and keeping voluntary poverty, doe follow.

FVLKE. 3. This was a ſpeciall precept to this one perſon, in obſerving whereof, hee ſhould have declared in part, that hee had kept the Commandements with ſuch affection, as the law of God requireth. But in neglecting this precept, he declareth that he was a carnall worldly man, farre from the true love of God and his neighbours: preferring temporall things before the reward of eternall life. As for the ſuperſtitious profeſſion of Popiſh Monkes and Friers, with their blaſphemous opinion, to merit for themſelves and for others that will pay for it: was farre from the meaning of our Saviour Chriſt. Beſide that, not one among a thouſand of them, if they have any goods or lands before their profeſſion, doe ſell them, and give them to the poore, but rather to their friends and kinſefolkes, or vnto the Abbeyes, where they know they ſhall be wealthily and daintily mainteined. The Pope alſo is good to many, and granteth them capacities to poſſeſſe temporall goods and benefices, contrary to their former vow. Popiſh Monks.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. X.

RHEM. 4 4 Permitted.] Some things are permitted, though not approoved, or allowed, to avoid greater inconveniences. No man may doe evill for any cauſe, but he may permit other mens evils for divers cauſes: as God himſelfe doth, who can doe no evill. So doth the prince and Common-wealth permit leſſer evils, to eſchew greater, and ſo may the Holy Church much more (as S. Auguſtine ſaith ſhe doth) being placed among ſuch chaffe, and much cockle, tollerate many things: and yet, whatſoever is againſt faith and good life, ſhe neither approoveth, nor diſſembleth with ſilence, nor committeth. Tolleration and permiſſion of evill. Aug. ep. 119. c. 19.

FVLKE 4 The Chriſtian Magiſtrate or Common-wealth, ought to permit no wickedneſſe, which hee knoweth and can puniſh: neither doth the holy Church tollerate any thing that is againſt faith and good life, as S. Auguſtine ſaith. Therefore the Church of Rome, and thoſe Princes and Common-wealthes, that permit open whoredome in Stewes, are not the Church of Chriſt, nor they godly Princes and Common-wealthes, that ſuffer ſuch groſſe wickedneſſe, openly and dayly committed. Stewes permitted in Popery.

RHEM. 5. 11 And marrieth another.] That which S. Matthew vttered more obſcurely, and is miſtaken of ſome, as though he meant that for fornication a man might put away his wife and marry another, is here by this Evangeliſt (as alſo by S. Luke) put out of doubt; generally avouching that whoſoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery. Aug. lib. 1. de adult. conjug. c. 11. & ſequentibus. Mariage after divorce vnlawfull. Luke 16,18.

FVLKE 5 S. Marke, S. Luke, and S. Matthew did write all by one ſpirit, therefore the exception expreſſed in the one, muſt needs be underſtood in the other. Elſe you may aſwell ſay, there can be no ſeparation for any cauſe as you ſay, there can be no marriage after divorce for any cauſe. Mariage after divorce.

RHEM. 18 None is good.] None is entirely, ſubſtantially, and of himſelfe good, but God: though by participation of Gods goodneſſe, men are truely alſo called good.

25 A rich man.] He is here called a rich man that hath his confidence (as here is expreſſed) in his treaſure, and had rather forſake his faith and duty to God, then loſe them, as all they which live in ſchiſme or hereſie to ſave their goods.

30 An hundred times ſo much.] Sometime God doth ſo bleſſe men alſo in worldly benefites that have forſaken all for him, as S. Gregory, S. Auguſtine, and S. Paulinus: but the principall meaning is, * that he will give to ſuch men in this life abundance of grace and ſpirituall comfort and contentation, and ioy of conſcience (as they feele which have experience) the which ſpirituall gifts exceede the temporall commodities, more then an hundred fold; inſomuch that he that hath fully forſaken but ſmall things for religion, would not forſake religion to have all the world. Their reward in this life that forſake ought for Gods ſake. RHEM. 3 16 Veſſell thorow the Temple.] Hee could not abide to ſee the Temple of God profaned, no nor ſuffered thoſe things to be done in it, which otherwiſe were not unlawfull, but honeſt, if they had beene done in due place. How much leſſe can he abide the profaning of Churches now with hereticall Service, and preaching of hereſie and blaſphemie?

Profaning of Gods Church.

FVLKE 3 God cannot abide the profaning of the Church with hereticall Service, and preaching of hereſie and blaſphemie, therefore he abhorreth the Popiſh Service and preaching, which is full of hereſie and blaſphemy. As for our Church Service and Preaching, being juſtified by the word of God expreſſed in the Scriptures; and referring all honour and glory of our ſalvation, to God and Chriſt onely, muſt needs be farre from blaſphemy. But Popery giving part of the honour of God and Chriſt to creatures, and part to their owne merits, and ceremonies of their owne invention, is both hereticall and blaſphemous.

RHEM. 4 17 Den of theeves.] If the Temple was then a den of theeves, becauſe of profane and ſecular merchandiſe: how much more now, when the houſe appointed for the holy Sacrifice and Sacrament of the body of Chriſt, is made a den for the Miniſters of Calvins bread?

FVLKE 4 The Sacrifice of Chriſts Body, was performed once by himſelfe, to the eternall ſalvation of all his choſen, Heb.9.& 10. And therefore the repetition thereof, ſuppoſed in the Popiſh Maſſe, is a moſt horrible blaſphemie againſt the Sacrifice and eternall Prieſthood of our Saviour Chriſt. We miniſter the Lords Supper, according to his owne inſtitution. We have nothing to doe with Calvins bread, or any mans invention in celebration of the bleſſed Sacrament. The Bread which we breake is the participation of the Body of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10.

Rhem. 1 33 To love his.] This excellencie of charity teacheth us that faith onely is not ſufficient.

Fvlke. 1 To the keeping of the Law faith onely is not ſufficient, but perfect piety and charity are required. But to juſtification of a ſinner, that hath not kept the Law, faith onely is ſufficient, Rom. 4. & 5. yet that faith which worketh by charity.

ANNOTATIONS, CHAP. XII.

Rhem. 2 17 To God.] Theſe men were very circumſpect and wary to doe all duties to Cæſar, but of their duty to God they had no regard. So Hereticks to flatter temporall princes, and by them to uphold their hereſies, doe not onely inculcate mens duty to the Prince, diſſembling that which is due to God: but alſo give to the Prince more then due, and take from God his right and duty. But Chriſt allowing Cæſar his right, warneth them alſo of their duty toward God. And that is it which Catholikes inculcate, Obey God, doe as he commandeth, Serve him firſt, and then the Prince.

God firſt to be ſerved, and then the Prince.

Fvlke 2 This is a meere ſlander of godly Preachers, who as well teach the Princes duty to God, as the ſubjects duty to the Prince. But Papiſts forbid Princes to yeeld that duty to God which they owe to him as Princes, namely, to ſet forth and maintaine his Religion by their Lawes, and to puniſh all contemners thereof, Aug. Ep. ad Bonif. 50. And the Pope forbiddeth ſubjects to yeeld their obedience to their Princes if they diſpleaſe him: not onely thoſe that renownce his hereſie, but even them that agree with him in religion: yea hireth devilliſh Monkes and Friers to murder them, as the example is manifeſt in France this day.

Slander.

Rhem. 3 19 His brother ſhall take.] Marke well here, that the Law which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not marry thy brothers wife, is not ſuch as admitteth no diſpenſation, as though this marriage were againſt nature. For here the ſame Law ſaith, that in ſome caſe, the brother not onely might, but then was bound to marry his brothers wife.

Levit. 18,16. Deut. 25,5.

Marrying the brothers wife.

Fvlke 3 A traiterous and hereticall note, confuted before, Chap. 6. Sect. 2.

Rhem. 4 24 Not knowing the Scriptures.] Who would have thought that by this place of Scripture alledged by Chriſt, the Reſurrection were proved? and yet we ſee that Chriſt doth hereby deduce it, and chargeth theſe great Doctours and Maſters (which arrogated to themſelves the knowledge of Scriptures) that it is their ignorance, that they knew not ſo to deduce it. No marvell then if the holy Doctours and Catholike Church make the like deductions ſometime and proofes, where the Hereticke doth not nor will not ſee ſo much, therefore no doubt, becauſe he knoweth not the Scriptures, whereof he boaſteth ſo much, nor the ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt in them. For example, when of that place, It ſhall not be forgiven in this world nor in the world to come, ancient Fathers deduce, that there are ſins remitted after this life in purgatory. See Math. 12,32.

Many truths deduced out of Scripture, which Heretikes ſee not.

Fvlke 4 Whenſoever the Doctours deduce any argument out of the Scriptures, as rightly as this is deduced by our Saviour Chriſt, that it may be concluded in true and lawfull ſyllogiſmes, out of the words of the Scripture, we acknowledge it to be the word of God, as well as that which is expreſſed in the text. But not every ſurmiſe, or unneceſſary collection is warranted by this deduction. Neither would the Doctours themſelves be otherwiſe credited in their collections, then if they be conſonant to the holy Scriptures. In my writings (ſaith S. Auguſtine) I deſire not onely a godly Reader, but alſo a free Corrector, De Trinit. lib. 3. cap. 7. Againe, We ought not to account the diſputations of any men, though they be Catholike and praiſe-worthy men, as Canonicall Scriptures, ſo that we may not, ſaving the reverence due to thoſe men, diſallow or refuſe any thing in their writings, if perhaps we finde that Rhem. 5 24 The [illegible] of God.] Even ſo doe Heretickes erre two wayes: becauſe they [illegible] the Scriptures, which they interpret [illegible] to the ſenſe of the whole Church, and of all the ancient Fathers: and becauſe they know not the power of God, that as he is able to raiſe the ſelfe ſame bodies againe, ſo he can make his body preſent in many places, but being altogether faithleſſe and not beleeving his power, they diſpute of all ſuch matters onely by reaſon and their owne imaginations.

Fvlke 5 We interpret the Scriptures, according to the analogie of faith, and confirme our interpretation by the authority of the Scriptures themſelves, taking the ſenſe of the Scriptures out of the Scriptures themſelves, as all true Catholikes ought to doe, by the judgement of Clemens, cited in the Decrees, Diſt. 37. c. relatum. When the Law of God is read, let it not be read or taught according to the power or underſtanding of our owne wit. For there are many words in the holy Scriptures, which may be drawne to that ſenſe, which every man ſhall preſume of his owne head: but it may not be ſo. For you ought not to ſeeke a forraigne and ſtrange ſenſe without the Scriptures, that you may confirme it by any meanes by authority of the Scriptures; but you muſt take their ſenſe of truth, or the true ſenſe out of the Scriptures themſelves. And in the chiefe matters of controverſie betweene us and the Papiſts, we have the conſent of the whole Primitive Church, and the moſt ancient and approved Fathers of the ſame, as may appeare in many of our writings, and namely in confutation of theſe Popiſh notes. The power of God how great it is, we know; but wee doe not acknowledge that he will doe any thing contrary to his will and his word. Therefore we doe not beleeve, that his body is preſent in many places at once, for then he ſhould not be like his brethren in all things, except ſinne, Heb. 2. 17. Hee ſhould not retaine a true body, whereunto our bodies in the reſurrection, ſhould be made conformable, Phil. 3. 21. yea he ſhould have no body at all, Aug. Ep. 57. Dardano.

RHEM. 2 14 The abhomination of deſolation.] *No hereſie doth ſo properly and purpoſely tend to this abomination of deſolation, * which by Antichriſt ſhalbe atchieved, as this Calviniſme: which taketh away, with other Sacraments and externall worſhip of God, the very ſacrifice of Chriſts body and blood, which being taken away (as* S. Cyprian ſayth) no religion can remaine.

Calviniſme tendeth to the abbomination of deſolation.

FULKE 2 Calvins doctrine tendeth to none other end, but that God and Chriſt only might ſtand in the holy place, and have all that honour and ſervice, which is due to him alone. The Sacraments of the Church, which be of Chriſts inſtitution, he acknowledgeth. As for the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, as an horrible blaſphemy againſt the onely ſacrifice of Chriſts death, once offered for ever, he doth worthily abhorre. And more properly is the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, the abhomination of deſolation, which overthroweth the effect of Chriſts onely ſacrifice, and maketh it like the ſacrifices of the Law, which being often repeated, could never take away ſinnes, Heb.10.11. Concerning the teſtimony of Hippolitus, ſee Matth.24. ſect.5. Cyprian, or whoſoever, was author of that Treatiſe, ſpeaketh not a word of the ſacrifice of the Maſſe: but the words you take hold of, be theſe, againſt the Capernaites, which thought they ſhould eate the fleſh of Chriſt, ſodde, or roſted, and chopped in pieces: whereas (ſayth he) the fleſh of his perſon, if it were parted in gobbets, could not ſuffice all mankind, which being once ſpent, religion might have ſeemed to have beene loſt, ſeeing he ſhould have nothing left for ſacrifice. His meaning is playne, if the fleſh of Chriſt had bin conſumed before his paſſion, he ſhould not have had his body to be offered in ſacrifice, for the redemption of the world, & ſo the religion of Chriſt ſhould have come to nothing. For that he knew not your tranſubſtantiation, his words following a little after doe teſtifie, where hee ſayth: The bread is meat, blood, life, fleſh, ſubſtance, his body, the Church, which muſt needes be vnderſtood ſpiritually and ſacramentally, or els you muſt make more tranſubſtantiations then one.

In the ſame Booke and Chapter, hee hath theſe wordes, Thou haſt learned, that of bread it is made the body of Chriſt, and that wine and water is put into the Cuppe but by conſecration of the heavenly Word it is made blood. But peradventure thou wilt ſay, I ſee not the ſhew of blood, But yet it hath a ſimilitude. For as thou haſt received the ſimilitude of his death, ſo alſo thou drinkeſt the ſimilitude of his precious blood, that there be no horror of blood, and yet it may worke the force of redemption. Alſo cap. 5. of the ſame booke, hee rehearſeth the words of the Prieſt in the Liturgy uſed in his time, Dicit ſacerdos, &c. The Prieſt ſayth, Make unto us this oblation aſcribed, reaſonable, acceptable, which is the figure of the body and blood of Chriſt our Lord Ieſus. Loe what a friend S. Ambroſe is to your Tranſubſtantiation, corporall Preſence, Communion under one kind, and the Sacrifice of the very body and blood of Chriſt in the Maſſe. — Tranſubſtantiation. Reall preſence. Communion in one kinde. Sacrifice of the Maſſe.

RHEM. 7 23 Chalice.] Wine and water is put into the Chalice but is made blood by Conſecration of the heavenly Word: though to avoid the lothſomeneſſe which would be in the ſight of blood; thou receiveſt that which hath the likeneſſe and reſemblance thereof. Ambr. ibidem. — Very blood under the formes of wine.

FULKE 7 The wordes of S. Ambroſe are impudently falſified, which I have ſet downe truely in the Section next before.

RHEM. 8. 22, 24. My body, my blood.] Whoſoever beleeveth it not to be true that is ſayd, he falleth from grace and ſalvation, Epiphan. in Ancorato. Let us ever give credit to God, and never reſiſt him, though the thing that he ſaith ſeeme never ſo abſurd in our imagination, or farre paſſe all our ſenſe and underſtanding. For his words cannot beguile us, but our ſenſe may eaſily be deceived. Seeing therefore that he ſaid, This is my body, let us have no doubt of the matter. Chryſoſt. hom. 83. in Matth. ſub. finem. — Faith neceſſary in the B. Sacrament.

FULKE 8. We doe certainely beleeve the words of Chriſt to bee true, and his very body and blood to bee given us, to bee received ſpiritually. And yet we hold with Epiphanius in the ſame place, that the Sacramentall bread is neither equall, nor like to Chriſt, neither to the ſimilitude of his fleſh, nor to his inviſible Diety, but is inſenſible as concerning power, whereas we know, that our Lord is all ſenſe, all ſenſible, all God, all moving, all working, &c. Likewiſe wee ſay with Chryſoſtome, that this ſacrifice is a token and ſigne of Chriſts death: and that when our Saviour Chriſt delivered this myſtery, he delivered wine of the fruit of the Vine. Chryſoſtome therefore was no maintainer of Tranſubſtantiation, but of the truth of our Saviour Chriſts words, in their right and ſacramentall ſenſe and meaning, in Matth. hom. 83. — Tranſubſtantiation.

RHEM. 9 71 He began to curſe.] In this one Apoſtle, Peter, the firſt and chiefe in the order of Apoſtles, in whom the Church was figured, both ſorts were to be ſignified, to wit, the ſtrong and the weake, becauſe without both, the Church is not. Aug. ſer. 13. de verb. Dom. Againe, our Saviour would ſhew by the example of the chiefe Apoſtle, that no man ought to preſume of himſelfe, when neither S. Peter could avoyd the danger of mutability. Aug. 66. in Evang. Ioan. Leo Ser. 6. de Paſſ. Dom. — Peter.

FULKE 9 Marke, that in S. Auguſtines wordes, Peters primacy and preferment is in order of the Apoſtles, not in degree, honour, dignity, or authority. Ambr. de incarn. Dom. c. 4. Cypr. de unitate Eccleſiæ. Hieron. cont. Iou. lib. 1. — Peters Primacy.

The chiefe of the Iewes accuſe him to Pilate the Gentile. 6 And (he ſeeking to deliver him) they perſwade the common people (who hitherto were alwayes ready to defend him) not only to preferre the murderer Barabbas, but alſo to cry CRUCIFIGE (to the reprobation of the whole nation.) 16 After many illuſions, 20 he is crucified by the Gentiles. 29 Which the Iewes ſeeing, doe triumph as if they had now the victory. 33 But even then by many wonderfull workes he declareth his might, 42 and finally, is buried honourably.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XV.

RHEM. 1 30 Save thy selfe.] So hereticks say of the blessed Sacrament, If it be Christ, let him save himselfe from all injuries.

FVLKE 1 True Christians say not so, but rather thus: The naturall body of Christ can suffer no hurt or contumelie: the Popish Masse-Cake, can suffer hurt or contumelie: Ergo, the naturall body of Christ is not the Popish Masse-Cake, or the Popish Masse-Cake is not the naturall body of Christ. — Slander.

RHEM. 2 34 Forsaken me?] See (Mat. c. 27,46.) the blasphemous exposition of Calvin and his followers, and take heed thereof.

FVLKE 2 See the answere there, and thou shalt plainely perceive, that Calvin hath written nothing that soundeth against the honour of God, and Christ our onely Redeemer. — Slander.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XV.

RHEM. 3 11 Chiefe Priests.] Heretiks abuse the ignorant people with these naughty Priests of the old Testament, to make that name odious, and to discredit the Priests of Christ in the new Testament. But for these Priests, thou maist not marvell that — The Priests of the old Testament.

[illegible] partly [illegible] ding [illegible] God [illegible] Usurers, and that [illegible] the Ancients. And the Priesthood of the new Testament [illegible] unto the end of the world, and hath (as being the principall part of the Church) the assistance of the holy Ghost [illegible] promised [illegible] all truth: and [illegible] Peter the chiefe Priest thereof under Christ our Saviour prayed, That his faith [illegible] and to [illegible] be said, He that heareth you, heareth me. — [illegible] The Priesthood of the new Testament.

FVLKE 3 When the Pope and his Prelates, follow the tyranny of the Iewish high Priests, in persecuting Christ in his members, they are rightly compared unto them. And yet the name and office remaineth honourable, as of Gods institution. For we acknowledge the singular sacrificing Priesthood of our Saviour Christ, and the spirituall Priesthood of all true Christians. And according to right Etymologie, the Priesthood of the Law of Christ, and of his members, should have another name then that which in the new Testament, is given to the Ministers of the Church: as in Hebrew, Greeke and Latine it hath. But seeing use hath otherwise gotten the upper hand, we contend not about the word. But where you say, the new Priesthood after the order of Melchisedec, was begun when the old Priesthood of Aaron ceased, it is true, if you understand it rightly, of the singular Priesthood of our Saviour Christ, which never passeth from his person, and of which order there is no more, but he Heb. 7. But when you meane thereby, your Popish sacrificing Priesthood, and that every Popish Priest, is a Priest after the order of Melchisedec, it is most horrible blasphemie against the Sonne of God, who onely is a Priest after the order of Melchisedec. Because as he onely is the King of peace, and King of righteousnesse, so onely is without father of his manhood, and mother of his Godhead, without genealogie of his Godhead, having neither beginning of his dayes nor end of his life, and therefore continueth a Priest for ever, and hath no successours in this Priesthood, being confirmed to him by oath of the Lord himselfe, after he hath said unto him: Sit thou on my right hand untill I make thine enemies thy footstoole. Reade the whole seventh Chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrewes, and the 110. Psalme, and I marvell if you will not spit in the face of every Popish Priest, that dare open his blasphemous mouth, and say he is a Priest after the order of Melchisedec. That the Ministery, Eldership, or Priesthood of the new Testament shall continue to the end of the world, we doe acknowledge, and shall have the assistance of the holy Ghost to teach it all truth, as every true Christian man hath the same promise, Ioh. 16.13: also Ioh. 14.16. and Ioh. 15.26. But thereof it followeth not that every Priest shall alwayes hold the truth, nor that every one that is called a Christian shall continue in true Doctrine. — The name of Priests. The Popish Priesthood.

The prayer of Christ was performed in Peter, that in his great and grievous fall, his faith failed not, but brought him to repentance. Our Saviour Christ prayed for all his Apostles, that God would sanctifie them in his truth, and for all that should beleeve in him through their preaching, Ioh. 17. Yet no man gathereth thereof, that every successour of the Apostles, and every true Christian hath a priviledge hereby, that he cannot erre, as you would insinuate by Christs prayer for Peter that the Pope hath as Peters successours. Whereas that prayer specially concerneth Peters person, in respect of his particular danger through his fall: and by analogie all Christians, as well as Peters successours, who by Christs intercession are holden, that their faith faileth not in temptation. See Luke 22; Sect. 11. And that Christ saith to all the Apostles, and in them to all true Preachers: Hee that heareth you, heareth me: it is true while they preach nothing but that they have learned of Christ. For otherwise Christ speaketh not in them, nor by them. — The Pope not priviledged from erring.

RHEM. 4 15 To satisfie the people.] Pilate should have suffered death, rather then by other mens provocation or commandement have executed an innocent: as a Christian Iudge should rather suffer all extremity, then give sentence of death against a Catholike man for his faith. — Executing lawes against innocents.

FVLKE 4 If it be the faith of Popish Catholikes (for all Christian Catholikes abhorre it) to conspire to murder their Prince, to invade their countrey with forraine power, to acknowledge the authority of an Italian Priest, that hath set forth his Antichristian Bull, to deprive their naturall and most lawfull Prince of her royall estate, crowne and dignity, life and allegiance of her subjects: No Christian Iudge need to feare, to give sentence against such Popish Catholikes, for their hereticall and traiterous faith.

RHEM. 5 46 Buying sindon.] This duty done to Christs body after his departure, was exceeding meritorious, and is therefore by holy Writ so often commended for an example to faithfull men, to use all honour and devotion towards the bodies of Saints and holy persons. — Religious duty toward the bodies of Christ and his Saints.

FVLK. 5 This duty was acceptable before God, as proceeding from faith, and love towards our Saviour Christ, but not meritorious. Neither is it commended as an example to faithfull men, to use all honour and devotion towards the bodies of Saints, and holy persons, for that were horrible idolatry, to use all honour and devotion, (which is due onely to God) towards dead mens bodies. But it is an example to use such reverent handling and laying of them up, as is a duty of charity towards the departed, and of faith in the Resurrection, without any superstitious worshipping of the bodies. From which Ioseph and Nicodemus abstained, though they buried the body of Christ himselfe, infinitely much more precious then the body of any other holy person. By this simple buriall of our Lord (saith Beda) the ambition of rich men is condemned which cannot be without their riches, no not in their grave. — Honour of Saints bodies.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XVI.

RHEM. 1 — 7 Peter is named.] Peter is named in ſpeciall (as often elſewhere) for prerogative.

FVLKE 1 — A poore prerogative in naming Peter, to build up the kingdome of Antichriſt. Although Peter bee here named ſpecially, not in reſpect of dignity, but in reſpect of his infirmity, becauſe he having moſt ſhamefully fallen, was now eſpecially to rejoyce at the reſurrection of his Maſter, by whom he obtained recovery from his fall.

Merits.

FVLKE 2 — [illegible] plead for Corban, your offering box, upon which foundation your Church is builded. Theſe women's good will was commendable, but void of merit. And their faith had beene a great deale more commendable, if they had not beſtowed this coſt, as upon one that was dead, but had waited for his reſurrection the third day, according to his promiſe. There were other cauſes of his appearing firſt unto the women, then their charges beſtowed in ſpices for his funerall.

RHEM. 3 — 12 In another ſhape.] Chriſt though he have but one corporall ſhape, naturall to his perſon, yet by his omnipotencie he may be in whatſoever forme, and appeare in the likeneſſe of any other man or creature, as he liſt. Therefore let no man thinke it ſtrange that he may be under the forme of bread in the bleſſed Sacrament.

Chriſts body under divers formes.

FVLKE 3 — Chriſt tooke upon him none other ſhapes, but his Diſciples eyes were holden, that they did not knowe him, as it is manifeſt, Luke 24.16. ſo that the alteration of ſhape, was in their eyes, not in his body, Beda in Mar. 16. & Luc. 24. What Chriſt can doe in altering his ſhape, we doubt not, but what he will doe or hath done, we muſt learne out of his word.

The body of Chriſt.

RHEM. 4 — 16 He that beleeveth.] Note well, that whereas this Evangeliſt mentioneth onely faith and Baptiſme, as though to beleeve and to be baptized were enough, S. Matthew addeth theſe wordes alſo of our Saviour, teaching them to obſerve all things whatſoever I have commanded you, which containeth all good workes and the whole juſtice of a Chriſtian man.

Not onely faith.

FVLKE 4 — A fond argument againſt juſtification by faith onely, ſo often repeated. That faith which God reſpecteth only in juſtifying the ungodly man, is afterward fruitfull of good workes, which as S. Auguſtine ſaith, goe not before juſtification, but follow him that is juſtified. De Fid. & Oper. c. 14.

RHEM. 5 — 17 Theſe ſignes ſhall follow.] It is not meant that all Chriſtians or true beleevers ſhould doe miracles: but that ſome for the proofe of the faith of all ſhould have that gift. The which is the grace or gift of the whole Church, executed by certaine, for the edification and profit of the whole.

The gift of miracles.

FVLK. 5 — You are in hope to delude the world againe with fained miracles, and therefore you ſpeake of the gift of miracles, as though it were ſtill executed by certaine. But if you will obtaine credit by working of miracles, you muſt not bring in counterfeit crankes, out of whom you have caſt out devils, or whom you have made whole, as of late Margaret Ieſop, an honeſt woman of your religion: But you muſt bring them, that ſpeake with new tongues, that take away Serpents, that drinke any deadly thing and it ſhall not hurt them, ſo ſhall you declare, that your former workes are not fained and lying miracles, but ſuch as Chriſt gave power to his Diſciples to worke in his name. And yet if you could doe theſe things indeed, except your doctrine were agreeable to the holy Scriptures, we would hold you accurſed.

THE ARGVMENT OF S^T. LVKE'S GOSPEL.

RHEM.

SAint Lukes Goſpel may be divided into five parts.

The firſt part is of the infancie both of the Precurſor, and of Chriſt himſelfe, Chap. 1. and 2.

The ſecond, of the preparation that was made to the manifeſtation of Chriſt, Chap. 3. and a piece of the 4.

The third, of Chriſts manifeſting himſelfe, by preaching and miracles, ſpecially in Galilee; the other piece of Chap. 4. unto the midſt of the 17.

The fourth, of his comming into Iewry towards his Paſſion: the other piece of Chap. 17. unto the midſt of the 19.

The fift, of the Holy weeke of his Paſſion in Hieruſalem: the other part of Chap. 19. unto the end of the booke.

S. Luke, was Sectator (ſaith S. Hierome) that is, a diſciple of the Apoſtle Paul, and a companion of all his peregrination. And the ſame we ſee in the Acts of the Apoſtles: Where from the 16. chapter S. Luke putteth himſelfe in the traine of S. Paul, writing thus in the ſtory, Forthwith we ſought to goe into Macedonia; and in like maner, in the firſt perſon, commonly thorow the reſt of that booke. Of him and his Goſpel, S. Hierom underſtandeth this ſaying of S. Paul: We have ſent with him the brother, whoſe praiſe is in the Goſpel thorow all Churches; where alſo he addeth: Some ſuppoſe ſo often as Paul in his Epiſtles ſaith, According to my Goſpel, that he meaneth of Lukes booke. And againe, Luke learned the Goſpel not only of the Apoſtle Paul, who had not beene with our Lord in fleſh, but of the other Apoſtles: which himſelfe alſo in the beginning of his booke declareth, ſaying, As they delivered to us who themſelves from the beginning ſaw, and were Miniſters of the word. It followeth in S. Hierome: Therefore he wrote the Goſpel, as he had heard: but the Acts of the Apoſtles he compiled as he had ſeene. S. Paul writeth of him by name to the Coloſſians: Luke the Phyſician ſaluteth you; and to Timothy: Luke alone is with me. Finally, of his end thus doth S. Hier. write: He lived fourſcore and foure yeres, having no wife.

RHEM. 1 — He is buried at Conſtantinople: to which city his bones with the Reliques of Andrew the Apoſtle were tranſlated out of Achaia the twentieth yeere of Conſtantius. And of the ſame tranſlation alſo in another place againſt Vigilantius the Heretike: It grieveth him that the Reliques of the Martyrs are covered with precious covering, and that they are not either tied in clouts, or throwne to the dunghill: why, are we then * ſacrilegious, when we enter the Churches of the Apoſtles? was † Conſtantius the Emperour ſacrilegious, who tranſlated to Conſtantinople the holy Reliques of Andrew, Luke, and Timothee: at which the devils roare, and the inhabiters of Vigilantius confeſſe that they feele their preſence? His ſacred body is now at Padua in Italie, whither it was againe tranſlated from Conſtantinople.

The Hereticke ſo counted the Catholikes for their honouring of Saints, & Reliques.

The Reliques

The eſtimation of Saints Reliques, in S. Hieromes time, though it was ſomewhat exceſſive, yet it was far from the idolatry, and ſuperſtition of the Papiſts. For this he writeth ad Ripar. contra Vigilant. Nos autem, &c. But we doe not worſhip and adore, I ſay not, the Reliques of Martyrs, but neither the Sunne and Moone, not Angels, not Arch-angels, not Cherubin, not Seraphin, or any name that is named in this world or in the world to come, leſt we ſhould ſerve the creature, rather then the Creator which is bleſſed for ever. But we honour the Reliques of the Martyrs, that we might worſhip him, whoſe Martyrs they are. You ſee by theſe words that he alloweth honor, that is, a [illegible] eſtimation, but no worſhip, adoration or ſervice, to be done to the bodies or Reliques of Saints: when yet it is to be thought, they had the true Reliques of the Saints. Whereas yours are for the moſt part, falſe, and counterfeit, to deceive the people, & to procure full offerings. And where you ſay S. Lukes body is now at Padua, whither it was againe tranſlated from Conſtantinople, how are you able to prove it? or how is it like, the Emperors of Conſtantinople, would ſuffer it to be brought into Italie? The firſt Leſſon upon S. Lukes day in your Popiſh Portuis, ſaith it is ſtill working miracles at Conſtantinople. But Blondus ſaith it is at Padua, with S. Mathias body, and as like the one as the other. For S. Mathie hath another body at Rome, ad [illegible] Maioris, and a third at Trevers, beſides parts in other places. And a little to touch the report of Hierome, concerning S. Lukes bones (Gaudentius Biſhop of Brixia, ſomewhat elder then he, was perſwaded that they were in a Church which he dedicated at Fundi, (as appeareth by his ſermon made at the dedication) and ſo was Paulinus Biſhop of Nola ep. 12.) he ſaith they were brought out of Achaia, where Gaudentius ſaith, he ended his life with Andrew in the city of Patra: your Portuis ſaith, he was buried in Bithinia: Hierom ſaith this tranſlation was in the 20. yeere of Conſtantius, you ſay of Conſtantinus. And although in his ſecond invective againſt Vigilantius, Conſtantinus is named in ſtead of Conſtantius, through the Printers fault, yet the error is eaſily diſcovered, by the ancient Chronicle, that goeth under the name of S. Hierome: referring this tranſlation plainly, to the time of Conſtantius, though not agreeing with S. Hierome in the 20. yeere, but noting it in the 22. yeere of Conſtantius. And might not Vigilantius have replied that Conſtantius was a ſacrilegious Arian? of whoſe tranſlation, Hierome taketh ſo great authority, whatſoever the Reliques were, and whether the devils did roare at their preſence or no.

MARGINALL NOTES. Chap. I.

Rhem. 1 10 Praying without.] We ſee heere that the Prieſt did his duety within, the people in the meane time praying without; and that the Prieſts functions did profit them, though they neither heard, nor ſaw his doings.

Fulke. 1 The condition of the Church of Chriſt is otherwiſe, then it was then under the Law. For now all things muſt be done in the congregation to the underſtanding and edifying of the people; in ſo much, as if a man had the miraculous gift of tongues, he might not ſpeake in the Church without an interpretor. 1 Cor.14. Unknowen tongues.

Rhem. 2 28 Haile.] The beginning of the Ave Marie. See the reſt. v. 42.

Fulke 2 The holy words of the Angel, are prophanely, ſuperſtitiouſly, and Idolatrouſly abuſed by the ignorant Papiſts, as a prayer when they are none, mumbled in Latine, whereof they know not the ſenſe, ſayd unto ſtocks and ſtones, yea to God himſelfe: the learned ſort, if not approving, yet wincking at ſuch ſhamefull abſurdities. The Ave Marie.

Rhem. 3 48. All generations.] Have the Proteſtants had alwayes generations to fulfill this prophecie? or doe they call her bleſſed, that derogate what they can from her graces, bleſſings, and all her honour?

Fulke 3 The Church of God, whereof we are members, hath alwaies had, and alwaies ſhal have generations, in which the Virgine Mary hath beene and ſhall be called bleſſed: Neither doe we derogate from her graces, bleſſings, or honour that is due unto her, when we cannot abide, that of a moſt bleſſed and holy Virgine, the honourable mother of our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, ſhe ſhould be made an Idole, as ſhe was of your forefathers the Collyridian heretikes; and as evill, if not worſe, of you Papiſts. For the Collyridians never deſired her to command her ſonne, now ſitting at the right hand of God the Father, as your blaſphemous prayer doth. The perpetuity of the Church. Idolatry. Honour of the bleſſed virgine Mary.

Fulke 4. The office of Iohn the Baptiſt was ſingular, and therefore his living in the deſert is no example for other men, leaſt of all for Popiſh Eremites, who live not at all in the deſert, but neerer to cities and places frequented, then many huſbandmen in the countrey. Neither doth Hierom allow the opinion of them that counted Iohn to be the firſt Eremite. See the note upon S. Marke, chap.9. ſect.3. Eremites.

ANNOTATIONS. Chap. I.

Rhem. 5 3 Having diligently atteined.] Heereby we ſee, that though the holy Ghoſt ruled the penne of holy writers that they might not erre, yet did they uſe humane meanes to ſearch out and find the truth of the things they wrote of. Even ſo doe Councels, and the Preſident of them, Gods vicar, diſcuſſe and examine all cauſes by humane meanes, the aſſiſtance of the holy Ghoſt concurring and directing them into all truth, according to Chriſts promiſe, Iohn 16.13. as in the very firſt Councell of the Apoſtles themſelves at Hieruſalem, is manifeſt, Acts 15.7. and 28. Againe, heere we have a familiar preface of the Author, as to his friend, or to every godly Reader. (ſignified by Theophilus) concerning the cauſe, and purpoſe, and manner of his writing, and yet the very ſame is confeſſed Scripture, with the whole booke following. Marvell not then if the Author of the ſecond booke of the Macchabees * uſe the like humane ſpeeches both at the beginning and in the latter end, neither doe thou therefore reiect the booke for no Scripture, as our heretikes doe; or not thinke him a ſacred writer. 2 Mach.2.& 15. Sacred writers and holy Councels. The ſecond booke of the Machabees

Fulke. 5. Ordinary meanes are not to be neglected, but uſed for the diſcuſſing of controverſies in Councels, but the holy Scripture is the rule whereby the definition muſt be made, if it bee true, as in the Councell of the Apoſtles, Acts 15. But that the Pope is Gods vicar, or preſident of generall Councels, or hath any promiſe, that he cannot erre, or any ſpeciall direction of Gods ſpirit, as the holy men of God had, which did indite the Scriptures, it is never able to be prooved. Neither is the preface, nor concluſion of the author of the ſecond booke of Maccabees, any thing like to this preface of S. Luke. Which though it be directed to one ſpeciall perſon, yet it containeth nothing unworthy of the majeſty of the holy Ghoſt, as thoſe of the Maccabees doe. Where the author acknowledgeth his infirmity, asketh pardon if he have not done ſufficiently, writeth to ſerve the vaine delight of men by variety of Story. Whereas S. Luke as the pen of the holy Ghoſt, doubteth not to ſay, that he hath exactly atteined to the truth of all things, and ſet foorth the ſame to the certaine confirmation of the faith, wherein Theophilus had beene inſtructed, which is neceſſary for every Chriſtian, though it was firſt written unto Theophilus. Beſide, that ſecond booke of ſtories hath many things falſe, that are diſprooved by the firſt booke of the Maccabees, and by Ioſephus, but ſpecially matter contrary to the canonicall Scriptures, as a commendation of Razis for killing

Rhem. 6 6 [illegible]] [illegible] of this time, how it is evident that they may be iuſt, not only by the eſtimation of men [illegible] before God.

Fulke. 6 [illegible] iuſt before God, though not by their owne merite, but by the iuſtice of Chriſt imputed [illegible] through faith. [illegible] de pecc. mer. & re. lib.2. c.13.

Rhem. 7 6. In all the commandements.] Three things to be noted directly againſt the Heretikes of our time: firſt, that good men doe keepe all Gods Commandements; which (they ſay) are impoſſible to be kept. Againe, that men be iuſtified not by onely imputation of Chriſts iuſtice, nor by faith alone, but by walking in the Commandements. Againe, that the keeping and doing of the Commandements is properly our iuſtification.

Fulke 7 Neither of thoſe three things can be prooved out of the text. For good men may walke in all the commandements of God, though they can keepe never a one perfectly. And faith onely in the merites of Chriſt, is imputed for righteouſneſſe to all thoſe that are iuſtified by God without reſpect of workes. Rom.4. Therefore keeping and doing of Gods commandements, is not the cauſe of our iuſtification before God, but the effect and fruit thereof, Gaudent. Brixi. epiſt. ad Paulum. Nam ſanctiſſimus medicina Chriſti non indigent, cum ſanctos eius non niſi fides eius effecerit. So were Zacharie and Elizabeth iuſtified before God by faith, as Abraham was, and as a fruit of true iuſtification, walked in all the commandements of God, in the ſight of men blameleſſe. For otherwiſe no man can ſay his heart is cleane. If God ſhould examine our iniquities, who were able to abide it? Zachary and Elizabeth were holy, and iuſt perſons, yet not free from ſinne. For Zachary as one of Gods people looked to have remiſſion of his ſinnes, and ſalvation by Chriſt and not by his workes. Luc.1.77. Quod de Zacharia & eius coniuge ſcriptum eſt, in omnibus mandatis & iuſtificationibus Domini. Hoc ille (Paulus) breviter dixit in lege. Non n. alia lex illis, alia iſtis fuit ante Evangelium, ſed non eadem quam legimus per Moſen datam patribus eorum, ſecundum quam etiam ſacerdos erat Zacharias & vice ſua ſacrificabat: Et tamen Apoſtolus qui ſimili tunc iuſtitia praeditus fuit, ſequitur & dicit: Quae mihi lucra fuerunt, haec propter Chriſtum damna eſſe non ſolum duxi, verum etiam & arbitror omnia damnum eſſe propter eminentem ſcientiam Domini noſtri Ieſu Chriſti, propter quem omnia non ſolum detrimenta credidi, verum etiam & ſtercora eſtimavi eſſe, ut Chriſtum lucrifaciam, & inveniar, &c. in reſurrectionem mortuorum. Tantum ergo longe eſt ut propter illa verba Zachariam & Elizabeth ſine ullo peccato, credamus perfectam habuiſſe iuſtitiam, ut nec ipſum Apoſtolum ad eiuſdem regulae ſimilitudinem arbitremur fuiſſe perfectum, non ſolum in illa legis iuſtitia, quam ſimilem iſtis habuit, quam inter damna & ſtercora deputat in comparatione excellentiſſimae iuſtitiae quae in fide Chriſti eſt: Verum etiam in ipſo quoque evangelio, ubi & tanti apoſtolatus meruit principatum, quod dicere non auderem niſi ei non credere nefas ducerem. Aug. de pecc. mer. & remiſſ. lib.2. cap.13. None keepeth the law. Iuſtification by faith onely.

Rhem. 8 6 Iuſtifications.] This word is ſo uſuall in the Scriptures (namely in the Pſal. 118.) to ſignifie the Commandements of God, becauſe the keeping of them is iuſtification, and the Greeke is alwaies ſo iuſtly correſpondent to the ſame, that the heretikes in this place (otherwiſe pretending to eſteeme much of the Greeke) bluſh not to ſay, that they avoid this word of purpoſe againſt the iuſtification of the Papiſts. And therefore one uſeth Tullies word forſooth, in Latine conſtituta: and his ſchollers in their Engliſh Bibles ſay, Ordinances. Corrupt tranſlation of heretikes. δικαιώματα. Beza in Annot. an. Teſt. 1556. Iuſtification.

Fulke 8 The word uſed by the Prophet in the 119. Pſalme is חקים, Chuckim which ſignifieth properly ordinances and ſtatutes, as all that are meanely learned in the Hebrew, doe know. And although the Greeke interpreter in that Pſalme, tranſlated it δικαιώματα, your vulgar Latine interpreter, doth moſt commonly in the law, tranſlate it Ceremonias, ceremonies, Deut.4,5,6,7. and ſo commonly almoſt in every Chapter. The Greeke interpreter, not alwayes δικαιώματα, but ſometimes νόμον, προστάγματα, ἐντολὰς, that is, the Law, Ordinances, Commandements. And in the ſame Chapter he tranſlateth it both δικαιώματα and προστάγματα. Deut.11. ver.32. by which it is evident, that the one word ſignifieth no more then the other. And that in δικαιώματα, we muſt ſeeke no greater myſtery of iuſtification, then in προστάγματα, which ſignifieth Ordinances, Commandements, Decrees, or Statutes. Saving that the Hebrew word is many times referred to precepts which be of Ceremonies, as the vulgar Latine interpreter doth commonly tranſlate it. And ſo it is moſt like, that Saint Luke uſeth the word δικαιώματα, as it is commonly uſed in the Greeke text of the Law. Therefore ſeeing you cavill about the ſound of a word, contrary to the uſe thereof; our interpreters did well to avoyde the terme iuſtifications, whereabout you quarrell, and to tranſlate it according to the meaning of the Greeke writer, and the uſuall acceptation of the Greeke word. And why ſhould not a Latine interpreter uſe Tullies word (forſooth) being apt for the Greeke, rather then any barbarous terme, not ſo fit or agreeable unto it? But this matter you may ſee more at large diſcuſſed in the defence againſt Martins diſcovery, c.8. ſect.1.2.& 3. Exod.18.20. Num.9.3. 1 Reg.2.3.

Rhem. 9 14 Ioy and exultation.] This was fulfilled not onely when he was borne, but now alſo through the whole Church for ever, in ioyfull celebrating of his Nativity.

Fulke 9. Belike Saint Iohn is borne againe with you every Midſommer day. The ioy that was at the birth of Iohn, (though it were great) yet it was obſcured by the glorious birth of Chriſt. And ſeeing Chriſt is not onely borne, but alſo hath ſuffered death, is riſen againe, and aſcended into heaven: The ioy of Iohns birth in the Catholike Church of Chriſt, is hidden and dimmed, as the light of a ſtarre, by the Sunne ſhining at noone dayes. Iohn himſelfe acknowledged, that he was to diminiſh, as Chriſt encreaſed, Iohn 3.30. The Angell therefore did not prophecy of your Popiſh celebrating of his Nativity, but of the ioy that many ſhould have, which looked for the redemption of Iſrael which was at hand, when Iohn the forerunner of Chriſt was borne. Otherwiſe the Church of God communicateth with the ioy of Gods Saints at that time, not onely, nor chiefly, in celebration of the memory of Iohns Nativity, but in contemplation of the performance of Gods promiſes, at all times of the yeere. The feſtivity of S. Iohn Baptiſt.

Rhem. 10 23 He departed] In the old Law (ſaith Saint Hierome*) they that offered hoſtes for the people, were not onely, not in their houſes, but were purified for the time, being ſeparated from their wives, and they dranke neither wine nor any ſtrong drinke, which are wont to provoke concupiſcence. Much more the Prieſts of the new Law that muſt alwayes offer ſacrifices, muſt alwayes be free from Matrimony.* Lib.1. cap.19. advers. Iovin. and epiſt.50.ca.3. See Saint Ambroſe in 1. Tim.3. And therefore if there were any religion in Calvins Communion, they would at the leaſt give as much reverence to this point, as they in the old Law did to their ſacrifices, and to the loaves of propoſition. 1. Reg.21. The continency of Prieſts.

Fulke. 10 Saint Paul, who alloweth a Biſhop and Elder to be the huſband of one wife, is to be credited, what is meete for the Miniſters of the Church, rather then Saint Hierome and Saint Ambroſe. Againſt whom I oppoſe Clements Alexandrinus and Paphnutius, with the whole generall Councell of Nice, who thought it not expedient that the Miniſters of the Church ſhould abſtaine from their lawfull wives. [illegible] wiues, we take vpon vs to be wiſer then God. Otherwiſe all men are [illegible] ſo-berly, and temperatly: but not to ſeparate themſelues one from another, except it be [illegible] that they may [illegible] to faſting and prayer, and then to come together againe, leſt Satan tempt them for their incontinency. 1. Fvlke 11. Papiſts in often repetition of theſe words (though excellent good of themſelues) doe ſhamefully abuſe them, ſeeing they ſay them not, nor can ſay them in that ſenſe they were vttered by the Angel and Elizabeth: Seeing they doe ſo often, and ſo vainely repeat them vpon their [illegible] the [illegible] in deriſion, then honour of Chriſt and the Bleſſed Virgine, Matth. 6. 7. And what myſtery or ſumme of the Goſpell ſoeuer be contained in them, the ignorant people vnderſtand nothing at all, who by your good will, ſhould not vnderſtand the words in their mother tongue. If the Grecians vſe them well in their Maſſe, why doe not you vſe them in yours? If they vſe them ſuperſtitiouſly, why doe you alledge their example? The liturgies that you [illegible], be counterfeit vnder the names of Iames and Chryſoſtome. And the one of them is a good confutation of the [illegible]. For if the Greeke Church had a Liturgie written by Iames the Apoſtle, who would thinke that Chryſoſtome would make a new? Againe, if Chryſoſtome had made a Liturgy, he would not haue made a prayer for Pope Nicholas, that liued almoſt fiue hundred yeeres after him, nor for the Emperour Alexius, who liued ſeuen hundred yeeres after him: This ſtuffe therefore is much later then the Apoſtle Iames, or Chryſoſtomes age.

Fvlke 12. Firſt, it is a ſlander, that we make the virgine Mary no better then other vulgar women. For we acknowledge that ſhe was bleſſed aboue all other women, in that ſhe was choſen to be the mother of our Sauiour Chriſt, and that ſhe was full of the graces of the holy Ghoſt, but yet a woman, no goddeſſe, a ſinner, no Sauiour, and yet as free from ſinne, as the infirmity of mans nature could be. Secondly, concerning our tranſlation, we ſay, the Greeke word ſignifieth, freely beloued, not full of grace: both in this place, and in the Epheſians the firſt: by the teſtimony of all Greeke Dictionaries: by Chryſoſtomes iudgement, whoſe wordes are theſe: ἐχαρίτωσε, hee ſayth not ἐχαρίσατο, which he hath giuen, but ἐχαρίτωσεν, but whereby he hath made vs freely beloued, that is, he hath not onely deliuered vs from our ſins, but alſo hath made vs his beloued friends. as if one had gotten a certaine ſcabbed fellow, rotten through peſtilent ſickeneſſe, age, pouerty, and famine, and ſhould by and by make him a beautifull young man which ſhall exceede all other in beauty, &c. what clearer teſtimony can we haue, that the Greeke word doth ſignifie, freely beloued? And yet it is true, that the virgine Mary eſpecially, and all other Chriſtians generally, were, and are endued with excellent gifts of Gods grace: as Chryſoſtome ſayth of all, and the reſt of the Fathers, whom you quote, ſay of the virgine Mary. But our queſtion is, whether the virgine Mary had theſe graces of her ſelfe, or of the free gift and loue of God, without her merits. And what the Greeke word ſignifieth properly, not how it hath of ſome heeretofore beene vnperfectly tranſlated into Latine. Chryſoſtome Ex Luc. cap. 1. De natiuitate Iohannis Baptiſtæ, rehearſeth theſe words of the Angel in this ſort: Pax tecum, quæ inueniſti gratiam apud Dominum: Peace be to thee, which haſt found fauour with the Lord. That ἡλκωμένος. Luk. 16. is tranſlated, full of ſores, it prooueth not, that all ſuch Participles deriued of ſuch Verbes, muſt ſignifie ſuch a fulneſſe as you imagine, whereof I referre the Reader to the anſwer of your Preface ſect. 53. and to the defence againſt Martines diſcouery c. 1. ſect. 43. and chap. 18. ſect. 4. 5. 6.

Slander.

The Bleſſed virgin Mary.

Rhem. 13 34 I know not man.] Theſe words declare (ſayth Saint Auguſtine*) that ſhee had now vowed virginity to God. For otherwiſe, neither would ſhee ſay,* How ſhall this bee done? nor haue added, becauſe I know not man. Yea, if ſhee had ſayd onely the firſt words, How ſhall this be done? it is euident, that ſhee would not haue asked ſuch a queſtion, How a woman ſhould beare a ſonne promiſed her, if ſhee had mar-ried; meaning to haue carnall copulation. cap. 4. de virgin. As if he ſhould ſay, if ſhe might haue knowne a man and ſo haue had a childe, ſhee would neuer haue asked, How ſhall this bee done? but becauſe that ordinary way was excluded by her vow of virginity, therefore ſhee asketh, How? and in asking, How? ſhee plainely declareth that ſhe might not haue a child by knowing man, becauſe of her vow. See Saint Grego. Niſſene de ſancta Chriſti Natiuitate.

Our Bleſſed Lady vowed virginity.

Fvlke 13 Though Saint Auguſtine gather that ſhe had vowed virginity, yet it followeth not of the words of the text Therefore Saint Ambroſe bringeth another cauſe, why ſhe asked how ſhall this be? &c. She had read (ſayth hee) the Prophecy of Eſay. Behold a Virgine ſhall conceiue, and bring foorth a ſonne, therefore ſhe beleeued that it ſhould be, but ſhe had not read how it ſhould be. For, how it ſhould be, it was not reuealed to that great Prophet. For ſo great a myſtery of meſſage was not to be vttered by the mouth of a man, but of an Angell. Therefore now it is firſt heard: The holy Ghoſt ſhall come vpon thee. It is both heard and beleeued. The like ſayings are in Euthymius and Theo-philact: Euch. Non eſt virginis Mariæ diffidentia quod ait: Quomodo fiet iſtud quoniam virum non cognoſco? Quod enim futurum erat, certa erat: modum quo fieret inquirebat, & hoc cum quæſiſſet, audiuit. In Gen. lib. 2. cap. 10, Euſeb. Emiſſ. Non dubitat fieri quod angelus fieri promittit: interrogat tantum quomodo fiat, quoniam quamuis virginem aliquando parituram audierat, quomodo tamen pareret, non audierat. Dicit enim Eſaias. Ecce virgo concipiet & pariet filium: quomodo tamen pariet non dicit: Quia igitur virgo eſt, & virum non cognoſcit, quomodo pariet & virgo maneat, interrogat, quia nulli adhuc reuelatum erat. Although Gregory Nyſſene be of Saint Auguſtines opinion concerning her purpoſe of virginity: which is not like, ſeeing ſhe promiſed to marry with Ioſeph, as it is playne by the text.

Whether the Bleſſed Virgine vowed virginity.

Rhem. 36 Elizabeth thy Coſin.] By this that Elizabeth and our Lady were coſins, the one of the tribe of Leui, the other of Iuda, is gathered that Chriſt came of both tribes, Iuda and Leui, of the Kings, and the Prieſts: himſelfe both a king and a prieſt, and the Annoynted (to wit) by grace ſpiritually, as they were with oyle materially and corporally, Auguſt. 2. de Conſenſ. Rhem. 16 63 Iohn is his name.] We ſee that names are of ſignification and importance, God himſelfe changing or giuing names in both Teſtaments: as, Abraham, Iſrael, Peter, and the principall of all others, Ieſus: and here Iohn, which ſignifieth, Gods grace or mercy, or God will haue mercy. For he was the Precurſor and prophet of the mercy and grace that cometh by Chriſt Ieſus. Note alſo that as then in Circumciſion, ſo now in Baptiſme (which anſwereth thereunto) names are giuen. And as we ſee here and in all the old Teſtament great reſpect was had of names: ſo we muſt be-ware of ſtrange, prophane, and ſecular names (now alwayes too common) and rather according to the * Catechiſme of the holy Councell of Trent, take names of Saints and holy men that may put vs in minde of their vertues.

Cap. de Bapt. in fine.

Myſtery and ſignification in names.

What names to be giuen in Baptiſme.

Fvlke 16 Strange and prophane names, are no where ſo common, as in Italie and Rome, where euen the holy Cardi-nals, carry the names of heathen Romanes, and Grecians. Yea your holy Fathers the Popes aforetime, haue like Antichriſts, reiected the names giuen them in Baptiſme, by which they were firſt dedicated vnto Chriſt, and afterwardes choſe vnto themſelues prophane names, as Sergius, Leo, Iulius, Pius, [illegible] I ſpeake nothing of the [illegible] from the heathen Saxons and Normans, [illegible] in Popery [illegible] preferred by Popiſh Biſhops in Confirmation, before names of godly ſignification taken out of the Scripture, and giuen to children at their Baptiſme.

Rhem. 17 75 Iuſtice before him.] Here alſo we ſee that we may haue true iuſtice not onely in the ſight of men, as by the im-putation of God, but indeed before him and in his ſight: and that the comming of Chriſt was to giue men ſuch iuſtice.

True iuſtice not imputatiue.

Fvlke 17 We may haue true iuſtice before God, and true holineſſe alſo in his ſight, but not perfect iuſtice, nor perfect holineſſe in our ſelues. And the end of our redemption by Chriſt, is, that we ſhould ſerue God in true holineſſe, and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our life: and this grace wee haue alſo by our Sauiour Chriſts gift, as in the verſe 13. being iuſtified by faith, as a fruit thereof, not as the cauſe of our iuſtification before God.

True iuſtice.

Rhem. 18 78 The orient.] *Maruell not if Heretikes contemne the old eccleſiaſticall tranſlation, as thing [illegible] from the Greeke; whereas here they make much adoe to contemne not onely all the Greeke interpreters of the old Teſtament, but alſo S. The Heretikes contemne both Greeke and Latine text.

Fvlke 18 This is nothing but a malicious ſlander. Beza onely compareth thoſe Prophecies Zachary had reſpect, where the Greeke interpreter vſeth this word, which S. Luke vſeth in this place.

Faſting an act of Religion.

FVLKE 4 There is no doubt, but faſting though of it ſelfe it be not a part of Gods worſhip which conſiſteth in ſpirit & truth, being alſo, as Hierome ſaith, not a perfect vertue, but a foundation of vertues, yet it may, and ought to be exerciſed to the glory and ſeruice of God, while by humbling our fleſh, wee are made more apt to worſhip him in ſpirit. FVLKE 1 Iohn by preaching repentance, prepared a way to Chriſt.

RHEM. 2 8 Fruites worthy of penance.] Fruites of penance be workes ſatisfactory.

FVLKE 2 The fruites of repentance, being good workes, declare the repentance to be true and unfained: If the repentance be true, the ſinnes are forgiven, therefore the works are not ſatiſfactory: for ſatiſfaction pertaineth to juſtice, forgiveneſſe to mercy. Satiſfaction.

FVLKE 4 There was infinite difference betweene the holineſſe of Iohn and of Chriſt, therefore Iohns holineſſe was no occaſion of mens error, but their owne negligence, which did not know the Scriptures concerning Chriſt. But this is your manner, to make ſmall difference betweene the Lord and his ſervants. Yet it was moſt certainely knowne (ſayth Beda) to the Iewes by the Scriptures, that the time of our Lords incarnation was at hand. But it was marvelous blindneſſe, that they beleeved of Iohn of their owne accord, not to beleeve of our Saviour, who was approoved by ſo great ſignes and wonders, and teſtified by Iohn himſelfe alſo.

CHAP. IIII.

Chriſt going into the Deſert to prepare himſelfe before his manifeſtation, overcommeth the tentation of the devill. 14 Then beginning gloriouſly in Galilee, 16 he ſheweth to them of Nazareth his commiſſion out of Eſay the Prophet, 23 Inſinuating by occaſion the Iewes his countriemens reprobation. 31 In Capharnaum his doctrine is admired, 33 ſpecially for his miracle in the Synagogue. 38 from which, going to Peters houſe, he ſheweth there much more power. 42 Then retiring into the wilderneſſe, he preacheth afterwards to the other cities of Galilee.

Mat.4,1. Mar.1,12. AND IESVS full of the Holy Ghoſt, returned from Iordan, and was driven in the ſpirit into the deſert,

2 ‡ Fourty dayes, and was tempted of the devill. And he did eate nothing in thoſe dayes: and when they were ended, he was an hungred.

3 And the devill ſaid to him, If thou be the ſonne of God, ſay to this ſtone that it be made bread.

4 And IESVS made anſwere vnto him, It is written, That not in bread alone ſhall man live, but in every word of God. Deut.8,3.

5 And the devill brought him into an high mountaine, and ſhewed him all the kingdomes of the whole world in a moment of time:

6 And he ſaid to him, To thee will I give this whole power, and the glory of them: for to me they are delivered, and to whom I wil, I doe give them:

7 Thou therefore if thou wilt adore before me, they ſhall all be thine.

*4 And Ieſus anſwered him, ſaying, * It is written, that man ſhall not live by bread onely, but by every word of God.* Deut.8.3. mat.4.4.

5 And when the devill had taken him vp into an high mountaine, he ſhewed him all the Kingdomes of the worlde in a moment of time.

6 And the devill ſayd vnto him, All this power will I give thee every whit, and the glory of them, for that is delivered vnto me, and to whomſoever I will, I give it.

7 If thou therefore wilt worſhip me, it ſhalbe all thine.

*8 Ieſus anſwering, ſayd vnto him, Get thee hence behind me, Satan: for it is written, * Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerve.* Deut.6.13. and 10.20.

9 And he caried him to Hieruſalem, and ſet him on a pinacle of the Temple, and ſaid vnto him; If thou be the ſonne of God, caſt thy ſelfe downe from hence.

*10 For it is written, * that he ſhall give his angels charge over thee, to keepe thee.* Pſal.91.12.

11 And in their hands they ſhall beare thee vp, that thou daſh not thy foote at any time againſt a ſtone.

*12 And Ieſus anſwering, ſaid vnto him, It is ſayd, * Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God.* Deut.6.16.

13 And when the devill had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a ſeaſon.

14 And Ieſus returned by the power of the ſpirit into Galilee, and there went a fame of him throughout all the region round about.

15 And he taught in their Synagogues, being glorified of all men.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 1 — 3 One ſhip Simons.] It is purpoſely expreſſed that there were two ſhips, and that one of them was Peters, and that Chriſt went into that one, and ſate downe in it, and that ſitting he taught out of that ſhip: no doubt to ſignifie the Church reſembled by Peters ſhip, and that in it is the chaire of Chriſt, and onely true preaching.

Peters ſhip.

FVLKE 1 — Although it be true, that Chriſts chaire is in the Church, yet this is a fond collection. For if the ſhip were here the Church, then all to whom Chriſt preached that were on the ſhore and in the other ſhip, were out of the Church.

The Church.

RHEM. 2 — 6 A great multitude of fiſhes.] Likewiſe by this ſignificative miracle wrought about Peters fiſhing, is evidently foreſhewed what wonderfull ſucceſſe Peter *ſhould have in converting men to Chriſt, both Iewes and Gentiles; as when at one draught, that is to ſay, * at one Sermon he drew into his ſhip, which is Chriſts Church, a great number of men, as he did now fiſhes: and ſo continually by himſelfe and his ſucceſſors unto the worlds end.*

Peters fiſhing.
Act.2,41. 4,4.

FVLKE 2 — Peters ſucceſſors be true preachers of the Goſpel, as for the Pope that never preacheth the Goſpel, never caſteth out Peters net, to fiſh for men as he did.

Succeſſors of Peter.

RHEM. — 7 Beckened to their fellowes.] Peter had ſo much worke that he called for helpe and joyned unto him the other ſhip, repreſenting unto us, his Copartners in the preaching of the Goſpel, and the conjunction of the Synagogue and the people of Gentility unto Peters ſhip, that is, to the Church of Chriſt, Ambroſ. l.4. in Luc. c.ult.

Peters coadjutors.

RHEM. 3 — 10 Thou ſhalt be taking men.] That all this aforeſaid did properly meane Peters travailes to come, in the converſion of the world to Chriſt, and his prerogative before all men therein, it is evident by Chriſts ſpeciall promiſe made to him ſeverally and apart in this place, that he ſhould be made the taker of men; though to other he giveth alſo, as to Peters cooperators and coadjutors, the like office. Mat.4,19.

Peters preeminence in fiſhing for mens ſoules.

FVLKE 3 — By S. Matthew and S. Marke, it is evident, that Chriſt ſpake joyntly to Peter and Andrew, I will make you fiſhers of men. Matth.4.19. Mark.1.17. Therefore it is a bruitiſh collection, to gather Peters prerogative, before all men in the office of fiſhing.

Peters primacie.

RHEM. — 19 Went up upon the roofe.] A ſtrange diligence in procuring corporall health of and by Chriſt: and an example for us of the like or greater, to obtaine ſalvation of him either for our ſelves or our friends, and to ſeeke to his Church and Sacraments with what extraordinary paine ſoever.

Zeale of ſoules.

RHEM. 4 — 20 Whoſe faith.] Great is God (ſaith S. Ambroſe*) and pardoneth one ſort through the merits of others, therefore if thou doubt to obtaine forgiveneſſe of thy great offences, joyne unto thy ſelfe interceſſors, uſe the Churches helpe, which may pray for thee and obtaine for thee that which our Lord might deny to thy ſelfe,* Amb. l.5. in Luc.

The interceſſion of others.

FVLKE 4 — The words of Ambroſe be otherwiſe then you cite them, Magnus Dominus, qui aliorum merito ignoſcit aliis, &c. The Lord is great, which for other mens ſake forgiveth other men: and while he alloweth ſome, hee releaſeth the faults of other, why ſhould not a man thy fellow prevaile with thee, when with God the ſervant hath the meane of interceſſion and the right of obtaining? Learne thou that judgeſt, to forgive; learne thou that art ſicke, to obtaine forgiveneſſe. If thou doubteſt to obtaine pardon of grievous ſinnes: take to thee intreators, take to thee the Church which may pray for thee, by contemplation whereof, the Lord forgiveth that which he might deny thee. There is nothing hard in this ſpeech, but the name of merit, which the Fathers uſe oftentimes, when they ſignifie any meanes of obtaining, and not as Papiſts take it, for deſerts. And the argument that he draweth from hence, that one man ſhould be intreated by another to forgive, declareth that he meaneth not worthines, or merit of works, to prevaile with God: as he expreſſeth moſt plainely in other places, where he ſaith, Whence ſhould I have ſo great merite, ſeeing mercy is my crowne? Exhort. ad Virgin. Affirming alſo, that a man is juſtified and ſaved by faith alone, very oftentimes, In ep. ad Rom. c. 2. & 3. 4. 9. 10. 11. 1 Cor. 1. Gal. c. 3. 5. and elſewhere.

24 The Sonne of man in earth.] *By which act (ſaith Cyril) it is cleere that the Sonne of man hath power in earth to remit ſinnes: which he ſaid both for himſelfe and us. For he, as God being made man and Lord of the Law, forgiveth ſinnes: And we alſo have obtained by him that wonderfull grace; for it is ſaid to his Diſciples, Whoſe ſinnes you ſhall remit, they are remitted to them. And how ſhould not he be able to remit ſinnes, who gave other power to doe the ſame.

Prieſts doe remit ſinnes. In contra S. Thomas. Io. 20, 23.

FVLKE 5

Chriſt as God forgiveth ſinnes properly, here to the ſicke of the Palſie. But Matth. 9. Sect. 6. you hold, that Chriſt as man, forgave ſinnes to this man. The power that Chriſt gave to his Diſciples to forgive ſinnes, is to declare them to be forgiven by God, S. Hieron. in Matth. 16.

Forgiveneſſe of ſinnes.

Forſaking all and following Chriſt.

28 Leaving all followed him.] *The * profane* Iulian charged Matthew of too much lightneſſe, to leave all and follow a ſtranger, at one word; but indeed hereby is ſeene the marvellous efficacie of Chriſts word and internall working, that in a moment can alter the heart of man, and cauſe him nothing to eſteeme the things which were unto him, which he did not onely then in preſence, but alſo daily doth in the Church. For ſo S. Anthony, S. Francis, and others, by hearing onely the word of our Saviour read in the Church, forſooke all and followed him.

Francis followed not Chriſt in preaching the Goſpel, but did ſet up a new Sect of his owne religion, of whom they be called Franciſcanes, as of Chriſt Chriſtians have their names. Yea Francis was crucified for his Sect, if we may beleeve his diſciples writings and paintings of him. Who alſo with the reſt of begging Friers, goe about to aboliſh the Goſpel of Chriſt, and therefore did write a new Goſpel, and called it the Goſpel of the ſpirit, and eternall Goſpel, which was expounded openly in Paris, and had beene preached 55. yeeres without controlment, till at laſt it was burnt ſecretly, at the importunate requeſt and outcrying of Guilielmus de ſancto Amore, and others of Paris: *Guil. de ſanct. MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 1 1 Sabboth ſecond firſt.] S. Hierome (ep. 2. ad Nepotian.) writeth of himſelfe, that being at Conſtantinople, he aſked his maſter Gregorie Nazianzene, the famous Doctour, then Biſhop there, what Sabboth this was, who by his anſwer declared that it was very hard to tell, whether it is yet knowne to the beſt learned. Yet the Proteſtants are wont to ſay, All is very eaſie.

FVLKE 1 A falſe ſlander: we ſay not, that all things in the Scripture are very eaſie. But we ſay with S. Auguſtine, That God hath graciouſly, and wholeſomely ſo tempered the Scriptures, that by evident or plaine places, he might provide for hunger, and by darke places, wipe away lothſomeneſſe. For nothing almoſt is beaten out of thoſe obſcurities, which is not found elſewhere ſpoken moſt plainely, De Doct. Chriſt. l.2. c.6. And as for this Sabboth ſecond principall, Epiphanius ſheweth plainely, that it was the laſt ſolemne day of the feaſt of unleavened bread, by conference of the Law, Levit. 23. Epiph. Hæreſ. 51.

RHEM. 2 48 Building an houſe.] He buildeth right and ſurely, that hath both faith and good workes: he buildeth on ſand, that truſteth to his faith, or reading, or knowledge of the Scripture, and doth not worke or live accordingly.

FVLKE 2 If faith be taken for bare knowledge, as in Iames 2. he that truſteth to ſuch a faith buildeth in the ſand. Yet true faith onely ſuffiſeth to juſtification, and bringeth forth good workes as the fruits of a juſtified man: as Auguſtine ſheweth plentifully, De Fide & Oper. c.14. & 22. & 23.

Iuſtification by faith onely.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 3 3 Neither this have you read.] The Scribes and Phariſees boaſted moſt of their knowledge of the Scriptures: but our Saviour often ſheweth their great ignorance. Even ſo the Heretikes that now adayes vaunt moſt of the Scriptures and of their underſtanding of them, may ſoone be proved to underſtand little or nothing.

Heretikes underſtand not the Scriptures.

FVLKE 3 It is enough for you to call us Heretikes, and ſay that we underſtand little or nothing in the Scriptures, but thereof let our preachings, writings and conferences beare witneſſe. Yet we vaunt not of our underſtanding, but humbly thanke the Authour thereof.

Slander.

RHEM. 9 Save a ſoule.] Hereby it ſeemeth that Chriſt (as at other times lightly alwayes) did not onely heale this man in body, but of ſome correſpondent diſeaſe in his ſoule.

RHEM. 4 12 The whole night.] Our Saviour diligently prayed, alone in the mount without doore, all night long, as a preparation to the deſignement of his Apoſtles the day after: to give example to the Church of praying inſtantly when Prelates are to be ordained, and a leſſon to us all what we ſhould doe for our owne neceſſities, when Chriſt did ſo for other mens.

The Churches prayers at the times of giving holy Orders.

FVLKE 4 The Church ought to follow our Saviour Chriſt in praying earneſtly, when miniſters of the word and Sacraments are ordained. But this example is little followed in Poperie, as common experience teacheth, where ſimonie ſo greatly prevaileth in this matter, and moſt of all at Rome.

RHEM. 5 13 Whom he named Apoſtles.] Here it is to be noted againſt our Adverſaries that deceitfully meaſure to the ſimple the whole nature and quality of certaine ſacred functions, by the primitive ſignification and compaſſe of the names or words whereby they be called, as that a Prieſt is but an Elder, and a Biſhop, a watchman or Superintendent, ſo an Apoſtle is nothing but a Legate or Meſſenger; and therefore are they (argue) to make no Lawes nor preſcribe or teach any thing not expreſſed in his commandement. Know therefore againſt ſuch deceivers, that ſuch things are not to be ruled by the vulgar ſignification of the word or calling, but by uſe and application of the holy writers, and in this point by Chriſts owne expreſſe impoſition. And ſo this word Apoſtle, is a calling of Office, government, authority, and moſt high dignity given by our Maſter, ſpecially to the Colledge of the Twelve: whom he endued above that which the vulgar etymologie of their name requireth, with power to binde and looſe, to puniſh and pardon, to teach and rule his Church. Out of which roome and dignity, which is called in the Pſalme and in the Acts, a Biſhopricke, when Iudas fell, Mathias was choſen to ſupplie it, and was numbred among the reſt; who were as founders or foundations of our religion, as the Apoſtle termeth them. Therefore to that Colledge this name agreeth by ſpeciall impoſition and prerogative, though afterward it was by uſe of the Scriptures, extended to S. Paul and Barnabas, and ſometimes to the Apoſtles ſucceſſours: as alſo (by the like uſe of Scriptures) to the firſt converters of countreys to the faith, or their coadjutors in that function. In which ſenſe S. Paul challengeth to be the Corinthians Apoſtle, and named Epaphroditus the Philippians Apoſtle: as we call S. Gregorie and his diſciple S. Auguſtine, our Apoſtle of England. In all which taking, it ever ſignifieth dignity, regiment, Paternity, Principality and Primacie in the Church of God; according to S. Paul, 1 Cor. 12. He hath placed in his Church, firſt indeed Apoſtles, &c. Whereby we may ſee that S. Peters dignity was a wonderfull eminent prerogative and ſoveraignty, when he was the head not onely of other Chriſtian men, but the head of all Apoſtles, yea even of the Colledge of the Twelve. And if our Adverſaries liſt to have learned any profitable leſſon by the word Apoſtle, more profitably and truly they might have gathered, that Chriſt called theſe his principall officers, Apoſtles, or Sent (himſelfe alſo ſpecially and above all other being Miſſus, that is Sent, and called alſo Apoſtle in the Scriptures) to warne us by the nature of the word that none are true Apoſtles, Paſtors, or Preachers, that are not ſpecially ſent and called, or that cannot ſhew by whom they be ſent; and that all Heretikes therefore be rather Apoſtates then Apoſtles, for that they be not ſent, nor duely called, nor choſen to preach.

FVLKE 5 Our Saviour Chriſt gave names of ſignification to his Miniſters, that we might not onely learne the dignity of their office, but alſo their duty. And therefore we doe rightly make our argument of the notation of the Apoſtles name: They be Legates or Ambaſſadors, Ergo, they cannot make lawes or preſcribe or teach any thing beſide their commiſſion, for this is the duty of Legates. Yet is their office of high dignity and authority, being the Ambaſſadors of the King of kings: becauſe a Legate or Ambaſſador repreſenteth the perſon and authority of the Prince from whom he is ſent. So an Elder is a name of dignity, gravity and authority, a Biſhop of vigilancie, watching, diligence, which in worldly affaires as [illegible] [illegible] honour and authority. Therefore it is a lewd ſlander, that we deceive the ſimple in meaſuring the nature of ſacred functions by the primitive ſignification of their names. Their offices and functions are ſet downe plainely in the Scriptures, as well for the dignity, as for the duty that belongeth unto them. And they have apt names given by the holy RHEM. 7 23 Be glad.] The common miſeries that fall to the true preachers and other Catholike men for Chriſts ſake, as poverty, famine, mourning, and perſecutions, be indeed the greateſt bleſſings that can be, and are meritorious of the reward of heaven. Contrariwiſe, all the felicities of this world without Chriſt, are indeed nothing but woe, and the entrance to everlaſting miſerie.

All perſecution for Chriſt, is a bleſſing.

FVLKE 7 The ſufferings of this life are not worthy of the glory that ſhall be revealed in the children of God, Rom. 8, 18. Therefore they be not meritorious of the reward of heaven. For eternall life is the free gift of God in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord, Rom. 6, 23.

Merit.

RHEM. 8 26 Shall bleſſe you.] This woe pertaineth to the Heretikes of our dayes, that delight to have the peoples praiſes, bleſſings and ſhoutes, preaching pleaſant things of purpoſe, to their itching eares, as did the falſe prophets, when they were magnified and commended therefore of the carnall Iewes.

The vanity of Hereticall preachers.

FVLKE 8 We preach mortification, and bearing of the Croſſe of Chriſt to be neceſſary for all Chriſtian men, under paine of eternall damnation, which is no pleaſant doctrine to carnall men. But your doctrine of Pardons, Abſolutions, Diſpenſations, converting of eternall paines into temporall, & then ſatisfaction by meritorious deeds, and other mens workes ſweetly paid for, be preachings of pleaſant things, to ſerve the humour of itching eares.

Preachers of carnall libertie.

RHEM. 9 35 Lend, hoping nothing.] In that we may ſeeme here to be moved to lend thoſe whom we thinke not able ever to repay againe, it muſt be holden for a councell rather then a commandement, except the caſe of [illegible] but it may be rather taken for a precept, wherein uſury, that is to ſay the expectation not of the money lent, but of vantage for lone, is forbidden. For by other places of Scripture it is condemned, and is a thing againſt the law of nature and nations. And great ſhame and pity it is, that it ſhould be ſo much uſed or ſuffered among Chriſtians, be it covered and cloked under the habite of other contracts, as it is.

Againſt uſury.

FVLKE 9 If any precept be too heavy for you to beare, you mitigate it by making it a voluntary Councell. But to lend without hope of reſtitution, is a part of true charity, which is one of the great Commandements. Yet it is not to be meant of all men, but ſuch as have need to borrow, not to ſerve their pleaſure, or to increaſe their gaine, but for their neceſſity. And it is manifeſt, that where we are commanded to lend, not onely uſury is not to be looked for, but even the principall muſt be adventured never to be reſtored.

Councels and Precepts.

CHAP. VII.

He teſtifieth the faith of the Centurion who was a Gentile, to be greater then be found among all the Iewes, and cureth his ſervant abſent. 11 The widowes ſonne he reviveth and reſtoreth to her, and is renowned thereupon. 18 To Iohns meſſengers he anſwereth with miracles, leaving to Iohn to preach thereby unto them that he is Chriſt. 24 And afterward he declareth how worthy credit was Iohns teſtimony. 29 Inveighing againſt the Phariſees, 31 Who with neither of their manners of living could be wonne. 36 Shewing alſo unto them by occaſion of Marie Magdalene; how he is a friend to ſinners, not to maintaine them in ſinne, but to forgive them their ſinnes upon their faith and penance.

AND when hee had fully ſaid all his words into the eares of the people, he entred into Capharnaum.

2 And the ſervant of a certaine Centurion being ſicke, was ready to die: who was deare unto him.

3 And when he had heard of IESVS, he ſent unto him the Ancients of the Iewes, deſiring him to come and heale his ſervant.

4 But they being come to IESVS, beſought him earneſtly, ſaying to him, That he is worthy that thou ſhouldeſt doe this for him.

5 For he loveth our nation: and he hath ‖ built a Synagogue for us.

6 And IESVS went with them. And when he was [illegible] not farre from the houſe, the Centurion ſent his friends unto him, ſaying, Lord, trouble not thy ſelfe; for ‡ I am not worthy that thou ſhouldeſt enter under my roofe.

7 For the which cauſe neither did I thinke my ſelfe worthy to come to thee: but ſay the word, and my ſervant ſhall be made whole.

8 For I alſo am a man ſubject to authority, having under me ſouldiers: and I ſay to this, Goe, and he goeth: and to another, Come, and he commeth: and to my ſervant, Doe this, and he doth it.

9 Which IESVS hearing, marvelled: and turning to the multitudes that followed him he ſayd, Amen I ſay to you, neither in Iſrael have I found ſo great faith.

10 And they that were ſent, being returned home, found the ſervant that had beene ſicke, whole.

11 And it came to paſſe, afterward he went into a city that is called Naim: and there went with him his Diſciples and a very great multitude.

12 And when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold a dead man was carried forth, the only ſonne of his mother: and ſhe was a widow: and a great multitude of the city with her.

13 Whom when our Lord had ſeene, being mooved with mercy upon her, he ſaid to her, Weepe not.

14 And he came neere and touched the coffin. And they that caried it, ſtood ſtill: and he ſaid, Yong man, I ſay to thee, Ariſe.

15 And he that was dead, ſate up, and began to ſpeake. And he gave him to his mother.

16 And feare tooke them all: and they magnified God, ſaying, That a great Prophet is riſen among us: and, That God hath viſited his people.

17 And this ſaying went foorth into all Iewry of him, and into all the countrey about.

18 And Iohns Diſciples ſhewed him of all theſe things.

19 * And Iohn called two of his diſciples, and ſent them to IESVS, ſaying, Art thou he that art to come: or expect we another?

20 And when the men were come unto him, they ſayd, Iohn the Baptiſt hath ſent us to thee, ſaying, Art thou he that art to come: or expect we another?

21 (And the ſelfe ſame houre, he cured many of maladies, and hurts, and evill ſpirits: and to many blind he c gave ſight.)

22 And anſwering, he ſaid to them, Goe and report to Iohn what you have heard and ſeene: * That the blind ſee, the lame walke, the lepers are made cleane, the deafe heare, the dead riſe againe,

15 And he that was dead ſate up, and began to ſpeake: and he delivered him to his mother.

16 And there came a feare on them all, and they gave the glory unto God, ſaying, that a great Prophet is riſen up among us, and verily God hath viſited his people.

17 And this rumor of him went foorth throwout all Iury, and throwout all the regions which lie round about.

18 * And the diſciples of Iohn ſhewed him of all theſe things.

Math. 11, 2.

19 And Iohn, when he had called unto him two of his Diſciples, he ſent them to Ieſus, ſaying, Art thou he that commeth, or looke we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they ſayd, Iohn Baptiſt hath ſent us unto thee, ſaying, Art thou he that commeth, or looke we for another?

21 And in that ſame houre he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evill ſpirits, and unto many that were blinde he gave ſight.

22 Then Ieſus anſwering, ſayd unto them, Goe your way, and bring word againe to Iohn, what things ye have ſeene and heard, how that the blinde ſee againe, the halt goe, the lepers are clenſed, the deafe heare, the dead riſe, to the poore is the Goſpell preached.

24 And when Iohns meſſengers were departed, he began to ſay of Iohn to the multitudes, What went you out into the deſert to ſee? a reed mooved with the winde?

25 But what went you forth to ſee? a man clothed in ‡ ſoft garments? behold they that are in coſtly apparell and delicacies, are in the houſes of Kings.

26 But what went you out for to ſee? a Prophet? Certes I ſay to you, and more then a Prophet.

27 This is he of whom it is written, Behold I ſend mine Angel before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I ſay to you, A greater Prophet among the children of women then Iohn the Baptiſt, there is no man ; but he that is the leſſer in the kingdome of God, is greater then he.

29 And all the people hearing and the Publicans, juſtified God, being baptized with Iohns baptiſme.

30 But the Phariſees and the Lawyers ‡ deſpiſed the counſell of God againſt themſelves, being not baptized of him.

31 And our Lord ſayd, Whereunto then ſhall I liken the men of this generation, and whereunto are they like?

32 They are like to children ſitting in the market-place, and ſpeaking one to another, and ſaying, We have piped to you, and you have not danced : wee have lamented, and you have not wept.

Math.3,4.

33 For Iohn the Baptiſt came * neither eating bread nor drinking wine : and you ſay, He hath a devill.

34 The ſonne of man came eating and drinking : and you ſay, Behold a man that is a gurmander and a drinker of wine, a friend of Publicans and ſinners.

35 And wiſedome is juſtified of all her children.

36 And one of the Phariſees deſired him to eat with him. And being entered into the houſe of the Phariſee, he ſat downe to meat.

37 And behold a woman that was in the city, a ſinner, as ſhe knew that he was ſet downe in the Phariſees houſe, ſhe brought an alabaſter boxe of oyntment :

38 And ſtanding behind beſide his feet, ſhe began to ‡ water his feet with teares, and wiped them with the haires of her head, and kiſſed his feet, and anoynted them with the oyntment.

39 And the Phariſee that had bid him, ſeeing it, ſpake within himſelfe, ſaying, This man if he were a Prophet, would know certes who and what manner of woman ſhee is which toucheth him, that ſhe is a ſinner.

40 And Iesvs anſwering ſayd to him, Simon,

23 And happy is hee whoſoever ſhall not bee offended in me.

24 And when the meſſengers of Iohn were departed, hee began to ſpeake unto the people concerning Iohn : What went ye out into the wilderneſſe for to ſee? A reed ſhaken with the winde?

25 But what went ye out for to ſee? A man clothed in ſoft rayment? Behold, they which are gorgeouſly apparelled, and live delicately, are in kings courtes.

26 But what went ye out for to ſee? A Prophet? Yea, I ſay unto you, and more then a Prophet.

*27 This is hee of whom it is written, Behold I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I ſay unto you, among womens children is there not a greater Prophet then Iohn Baptiſt : neverthelesse, he that is leaſt in the kingdome of God, is greater then he.

29 And all the people that heard him, and the Publicans, being baptized with the baptiſme of Iohn, juſtified God.

30 But the Phariſees and Lawyers deſpiſed the counſell of God againſt themſelves, being not baptized of him.

32 They are like unto children ſitting in the market place, and crying one to another, and ſaying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced : We have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

33 For Iohn Baptiſt came, neither eating bread, nor drinking wine, and ye ſay, He hath a devill.

34 The Sonne of man is come, eating and drinking, and ye ſay, Behold a gluttonous man, and a wine bibber, a friend of Publicanes and ſinners.

35 And wiſedome is juſtified of all her children.

36 And one of the Phariſees deſired him that hee would eat with him. And hee went into the Phariſees houſe, and ſate downe to meat.

*38 * And ſtood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to waſh his feete with teares, and did wipe them cleane with the haires of her head, and all to kiſſed his feet, and anoynted them with the oyntment.*

40 And Ieſus anſwering, ſayd unto him, Simon, mon, I have ſomewhat to ſay to thee. But he ſayd, Maiſter, ſay.

41 A certaine creditor had two debters : one ought five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42 They having not wherewith to pay, he forgave both. Whether therefore doth love him more?

43 Simon anſwering, ſayd, I ſuppoſe that he to whom he forgave more. But he ſaid to him, Thou haſt judged rightly.

44 And turning to the woman, he ſaid unto Simon, Doeſt thou ſee this woman? I entred || into thy houſe, water to my feete thou didſt not give : but ſhe with teares hath watered my feet, and with her haires hath wiped them.

45 Kiſſe thou gaveſt me not : but ſhe ſince I came in, hath not ceaſed to kiſſe my feet.

46 With oyle thou diddeſt not anoint my head : but ſhe with oyntment hath anointed my feet.

47 For the which I ſay to thee, Many ſinnes are forgiven her, becauſe ſhe hath ‡ loved much. But to whom leſſe is forgiven, he loveth leſſe.

48 And he ſaid to her, Thy ſinnes are forgiven thee.

49 And they that ſate together at the table, began to ſay within themſelves, ‡ Who is this that alſo forgiveth ſinnes?

50 And he ſaid to the woman, || Thy faith hath made thee ſafe, goe in peace.

ſimon, I have ſomewhat to ſay unto thee. And he ſaith, Maiſter, ſay on.

41 There was a certaine lender, which had two debters : the one ought five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42 When they had nothing to pay, he forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him moſt?

43 Simon anſwered, and ſaid, I ſuppoſe that hee to whom he forgave moſt. And he ſaid unto him, Thou haſt truely judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and ſaid unto Simon, Seeſt thou this woman? I entred into thine houſe, thou gaveſt me no water for my feete : but ſhe hath waſhed my feete with teares, and wiped them with the haires of her head.

45 Thou gaveſt me no kiſſe : but this woman, ſince the time I came in, hath not ceaſed to kiſſe my feete.

46 Mine head with oyle thou diddeſt not annoint : but this woman hath annointed my feet with oyntment.

47 Wherefore, I ſay unto thee, many ſinnes are forgiven her, for ſhe loved much. To whom little is forgiven, the ſame loveth little.

48 And hee ſayd unto her, Thy ſinnes are forgiven thee.

49 And they that ſate at meat with him, began to ſay within themſelves, who is this that forgiveth ſinnes alſo?

50 And he ſaid to the woman, Thy faith hath ſaved thee, goe in peace.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VII.

RHEM. 2 30 Deſpiſed the counſell.] As they that contemned Iohns Baptiſme, rejected Gods counſell and wiſedome; ſo much more they that make no account of the Sacraments of the Church, deſpiſe Gods counſell and ordinance touching their ſalvation, to their owne damnation.

Iohns Baptiſme.

FVLKE 2. Iohns baptiſme was a Sacrament of the Church, as verily as the Baptiſme and Supper of the Lord be now.

RHEM. 3 38 Water his feet.] A perfect patterne of true penance in this woman, who ſought of Chriſt with open teares and other ſtrange workes of ſatisfaction and devotion, remiſſion of her ſinnes.

FVLKE 3 Outward ſignes of true repentance, and effects of love and thankefulneſſe for ſinnes forgiven, as our Saviour Chriſt himſelfe interpreteth them, not works of ſatisfaction to obtaine forgiveneſſe of ſinnes. For as Ambroſe ſayth of Peters teares, We read his teares, we read not his ſatisfaction, in Luc. cap. 22.

Satisfaction.

RHEM. 4 47 Loved much.] Not onely faith (as you may perceive) but love or charity obtaineth remiſſion of ſinnes.

FVLKE 4 Onely faith obtaineth remiſſion of ſinnes; whereof love is an effect. For the argument is (not as the whole diſcourſe of the text is manifeſt) from the cauſe to the effect, but from the effect to the cauſe. Many ſinnes are forgiven her, therefore ſhe hath loved much, as the words following doe make it manifeſt. For to whom little is remitted he loveth little. The ſame thing declareth the parable of the two debters, that forgiveneſſe of the debt goeth before love, therefore is cauſe of love, and not love the cauſe of forgiveneſſe of ſinnes. So ſaith Saint Ambroſe: Who is according to man offended more, who ought be more? but by the mercy of our Lord, the cauſe is changed, that he loveth more which ought more, if he have obtained grace or forgiveneſſe. in Luc. c. 7. The like manner of ſpeaking and uſe of the particle ὅτι, is in Iohn 15.15. I have called you friends, for I have declared to you all that I have heard of my father, where this declaring is the effect, and not the cauſe of his love.

RHEM. 5 49 Who is this that.] As the Phariſees did alwayes carpe Chriſt for remiſſion of ſinnes in earth, ſo the heretikes reprehend his Church that remitteth ſinnes by his authority.

FVLKE 5 A ſlander; for we acknowledge the power of forgiveneſſe of ſinnes by the miniſters of the Church, yet farre differing from the power of our Saviour Chriſt, who as God forgave abſolutely of his owne authority, his ſervants by declaring his will in forgiveneſſe of ſinnes. Hierom. in Matth. 16.

Slander. Remiſſion of ſinnes.

RHEM. 6 5 Built a Synagogue.] If as at that time to found a Synagogue, was acceptable to God, and procured the prayers of the faithfull people for whoſe uſe it was made : ſo how much more in the New Teſtament, to build a Church, Monaſtery, Colledge, or any like worke for the honour and ſervice of God, is gratefull to him, and procureth the prayers of the good people for whoſe uſe ſuch things be founded.

Building of Churches, monaſteries, &c.

[illegible] Churches [illegible] for the [illegible] of Gods ſeruice [illegible] is a good worke. But to build a Church [illegible] for the maintenance of idolatry, or idle ſuperſtition [illegible] is [illegible] to God [illegible] diſpleaſing him.

Becauſe when there be diuers cauſes concurring to one effect, the Scriptures commonly name but one, and that eſpecially which is moſt [illegible] the purpoſe and time, not excluding the other. And therefore his working miracles upon any perſon, is attributed to the faith of them on whom or at whoſe deſire they be done. Becauſe he wrought his miracles to induce all men to beleeue in him, and therefore ſpecially required faith at their hands, and namely before other things, whether they did beleeue that he was able to doe that which they asked at his hands: without which it had beene rather a mockerie and tentation of him, then a true deſire of benefit at his hands.*

Iuſtification attributed not to faith onely.

FVLKE 8. [illegible] Remiſſion of her ſinnes, was not before attributed to charity, but by her great loue it was ſhewed, that many ſinnes were forgiuen her: as unto the debter of a great ſumme. Charity therefore, was not cauſe of remiſſion, but an effect thereof. And true it is, that faith onely iuſtifying, doth not exclude other cauſes, but only the merit of good works, *which follow a iuſtified man, goe not before to iuſtification. CHAP. VIII.

Going about all Galiley with his traine, 4 he preacheth to the Iewes in parables becauſe of their reprobation: 9 but to his Diſciples manifeſtly, becauſe he will not for the Iewes incredulity haue his comming fruſtrate. 19 ſignifying alſo that we are his kin (though we be Gentiles) and not his carnall brethren the Iewes. 22 To whom alſo (ſignified by the Geraſens) after the tempeſt in his ſleepe (that is, in his death) and calme in his reſurrection, he commeth: but they preferring their temporals before his preſence, he leaueth them againe. 41 Likewiſe comming to cure the Iewes (who were borne when the Gentiles ſickned about Abrahams time) he is preuented with the faith of the Gentiles, and then the Iewes die; but them alſo in the end he will reſtore.

AND it came to paſſe afterward, and he made his iourney by cities and townes preaching and euangelizing the kingdome of God: and the Twelue with him,

2 And ſome women that had beene cured of wicked ſpirits and infirmities, * Mary which is called Magdalene, out of whom ſeuen deuils were gone forth. — Mar. 16, 9.

3 And Ioane the wife of Chuſa Herods procurator, and Suſan, and ^c many others that || did miniſter unto him of their ſubſtance. — c [illegible]

4 And * when a very great multitude aſſembled, and haſtened out of the cities unto him, he ſaid by a ſimilitude. — The Goſpel upon the Sunday of Sexageſime. Mat. 13, 2. Marke 4, 1.

5 The ſower went forth to ſow his ſeed, and whiles he ſoweth, ſome fell by the way ſide, and was troden upon, and the fowles of the ayre did eat it.

6 And other ſome fell upon the rocke: and being ſhot up it withered, becauſe it had not moiſture.

7 And otherſome fell among thornes: and the thornes growing up withall, choked it.

8 And otherſome fell upon good ground: and being ſhot up, yeelded fruit an hundred fold. Saying theſe things he cryed, Hee that hath eares to heare, let him heare.

AND it came to paſſe afterward, that he himſelfe went thorowout euery citie and village preaching, and ſhewing the glad tidings of the kingdome of God: and the twelue were with him:

2 *And alſo certaine women which had bin healed of euill ſpirits and infirmities, Mary which is called Magdalene, * out of whom went ſeuen deuils.* — Mark. 16, 9.

3 And Ioanna the wife of Chuza, Herods ſteward, and Suſanna, and many other, which miniſtred unto him of their ſubſtance.

4 * When much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of all cities, hee ſpake by a ſimilitude. — Matt. 13. 2. marke 4. 1.

5 The Sower went out to ſowe his ſeed: and as he ſowed ſome fell by the way ſide, and it was troden downe, and the fowles of the ayre deuoured it up.

6 And ſome fell on ſtones, and aſſoone as it was ſprung up, it withered away, becauſe it lacked moiſtneſſe.

7 And ſome fell among thornes, || and the thornes ſprang up with it, and choked it. — || Or, rather thus: And ſome fell among thiſtles, & the thiſtles ſprang up with it, and choked it.

8 And ſome fell on good ground, and ſprang up, and bare fruit an hundred fold. And as he ſayd theſe things, he cryed, He that hath eares to heare, let him heare.

9 And his Diſciples asked him what this parable was.

10 To whom he ſaid, To you it is giuen to know the myſterie of the kingdome of God, but to the reſt in parables, ‡ that * ſeeing they may not ſee, and hearing may not underſtand. — ‡ See the Annotations upon S. Matthew c. 13, 14. Eſa. 6, 9.

11 And the parable is this: The ſeed, is the word of God.

12 And they beſides the way: are thoſe that heare, then the deuill commeth, and taketh the word out of their heart, leſt beleeuing they be ſaued.

13 For they upon the rocke: ſuch as when they heare, with ioy receiue the word: and theſe haue no rootes: becauſe ‡ for a time they beleeue, and in time of tentation they reuolt.

14 And that which fell into thornes; are they that haue heard, and going their wayes, are choked with cares and riches and pleaſures of this life, and render not fruit.

15 And that upon good ground: are they which in a good and very good heart, hearing the word, doe reteine it, and yeeld fruit in patience.

16 And no man lighting a candle, doeth couer it with a veſſell, or put it under a bed: but ſetteth it upon a candleſticke, that they that enter in, may ſee the light.

17 For there is not any thing ſecret, that ſhall not be made manifeſt: nor hid, that ſhall not be knowen, and come abroad.

18 See therefore how you heare. For he that hath, to him ſhall be giuen: and whoſoeuer hath not, that alſo which he thinketh he hath, ſhalbe taken away from him.

19 And * his mother and brethren came unto him: and they could not come at him for the multitude.

20 And it was told him, Thy mother and || thy brethren ſtand without, deſirous to ſee thee.

25 And he ſaid to them, Where is your faith? Who fearing, marvelled one to another, ſaying, Who is this (trow ye) that he commandeth both the windes and the ſea, and they obey him?

9 And his Diſciples asked him, ſaying, What maner of ſimilitude is this?

* And they ſailed to the countrey of the Geraſens which is over againſt Galilee.

27 And when he was come forth to the land, there met him a certaine man that had a devill now a very long time, and he did weare no clothes, neither did he tarry in houſe, but in the monuments.

28 And as he ſaw IESVS, he fell downe before him: and crying out with a great voice, he ſaid, What is to me and thee IESVS Sonne of God moſt high? I beſeech thee doe not torment me.

29 For he commanded the uncleane ſpirit to goe foorth out of the man. For many times he caught him, and he was bound with chaines, and kept with fetters: and breaking the bondes was driven of the devill into the deſerts.

30 And IESVS asked him ſaying, What is thy name? But he ſaid, Legion; becauſe many devils were entred into him.

31 And they beſought him that he would not command them to goe into the depth.

32 And there was there a heard of many ſwine feeding on the mountaine: and they deſired him, that he would permit them to enter into them. And he permitted them.

33 The devils therefore went foorth out of the man, and entred into the ſwine: and the heard with violence went headlong into the lake, and was ſtifled.

34 Which when the ſwineheards ſaw done, they fled: and told into the city and into the townes.

35 And they went forth to ſee that which was done: and they came to IESVS, and found the man, out of whom the devils were gone foorth, ſitting at his feet, clothed, and well in his wits, and they were afraid.

36 And they alſo that had ſeene, told them how he had bin made whole from the legion.

37 And all the multitude of the countrey of the Geraſens beſought him to depart from them: for they were taken with great feare. And he going up into the boat, returned.

38 And the man out of whom the devils were departed, deſired him that he might be with him. But IESVS diſmiſſed him, ſaying, 39 Returne into thy houſe, and tell how great things God hath done to thee. And he went thorow the whole city, preaching how great things IESVS had done to him.

40 And it came to paſſe: when IESVS was returned, the multitude received him; and all were expecting him.

Matt.8,28. marke 5.1.

27 And when he went out to land, there met him out of the city a certaine man which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any houſe, but in graves.

28 When he ſaw Ieſus, and had cryed aloud, he fell downe before him, and with a loud voice ſaid, What have I to doe with thee Ieſus, thou Sonne of God moſt higheſt? I beſeech thee torment me not,

29 (For he commanded the foule ſpirit to come out of the man: For often times he had caught him, and he was bound with chaines, and kept with fetters: and he brake the bands, and was carried of the feend into the wilderneſſe.)

30 And Ieſus asked him, ſaying, What is thy name? And he ſaid, Legion: becauſe many devils were entred into him.

31 And they beſought him that he would not command them to goe out into the deepe.

32 And there was there an heard of many ſwine feeding on an hill: and they beſought him that he would ſuffer them to enter into them: and he ſuffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entred into the ſwine: and the heard ran headlong with violence into the lake, and were choked.

34 When the heardmen ſaw what was done, they fled: and when they were departed, they told it in the city, and in the villages.

35 Therefore they came out to ſee what was done, and came to Ieſus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, ſitting at the feet of Ieſus, clothed, and in his right minde: and they were afraid.

36 They alſo that ſaw it, told them by what meanes he that was poſſeſſed of the devils, was healed.

37 Then the whole multitude of the countrey about the Gadarenites, beſought him that hee would depart from them, for they were taken with great feare: and hee gate him up into the ſhip, and returned backe againe.

38 Then the man, out of whom the devils were departed, beſought him that he might be with him: but Ieſus ſent him away, ſaying, 39 Goe home againe to thine owne houſe, and ſhew what † things ſoever God hath done for thee. And he went his way, and preached thorowout all the city, what things ſoever Ieſus had done unto him.

† Or, what great things God hath done unto thee.

40 And it came to paſſe, that when Ieſus was come againe, the people received him: for they were all waiting for him.

*41 And behold, there came a man, named Iairus, * and he was a ruler in the Synagogue, and he fell downe at Ieſus feet, praying him that he would come into his houſe:*

51 And it came to paſſe, when the time was come that he ſhould be received up, he ſtedfaſtly ſet his face to goe to Hieruſalem, 52 And ſent meſſengers before his face, and they went and entred into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And they did not receive him, becauſe his face was as though he would goe to Hieruſalem.

54 When his Diſciples, Iames and Iohn ſaw this, they ſaid, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come downe from heaven, and conſume them, even as Elias did?

55 Ieſus turning about, rebuked them, ſaying, Ye wote not what maner ſpirit ye are of.

Math. 8.19.

*56 * For the Sonne of man is not come to deſtroy mens lives, but to ſave them. And they went to another village.*

57 And it came to paſſe, that as they went walking in the way, a certaine man ſaid unto him, I will follow thee, Lord, whitherſoever thou goeſt.

58 And Ieſus ſaid unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the aire have neſts: but the Sonne of man hath not whereto lay his head.

Math. 8.21.

*59 * And he ſaid unto another, Follow me: And the ſame ſaid, Lord, ſuffer me firſt to goe and bury my father.*

60 Ieſus ſaid unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but goe thou and preach the kingdome of God.

61 And another ſaid, Lord, I will follow thee: but let me firſt goe bid them farewell which are at home at my houſe.

62 Ieſus ſaid unto him, No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking backe, is apt to the kingdome of God.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1 1 Vertue and power.] To command devils and diſeaſes either of body or ſoule, is by nature proper to God onely: but by Gods gift, man alſo may have the ſame; even ſo to forgive ſinnes.

FVLKE 1 That which is proper to God, cannot be communicated to men. Therefore God onely worketh miracles, and forgiveth ſinnes by the miniſtery of man.

Miracles. Remiſſion of ſins.

RHEM. 2 41 O faithleſſe.] Incredulity hindereth the effect of exorciſmes, and other miraculous power given to the Church.

FVLKE 2 The Church hath not at this day, power to caſt out devils, or to worke miracles ordinarily: therefore your ordinary offices of exorciſts, exorciſmes, and unctions, be mockeries of the gracious gifts of miracles.

RHEM. 53 Face to goe to Hieruſalem.] The Samaritans were Schiſmatickes from the Iewes, and had a Schiſmaticall temple in mount Garizim, of purpoſe to draw men thither from Gods Temple in Hieruſalem where only was the true, and as it were, the Catholike ſervice and ſacrifice unto God. Therefore they did not gladly receive our Saviour, becauſe they perceived he was going to Hieruſalem.

62 No man looking backe.] It is a dangerous temptation for a man that hath lost or left his goods for Christ, to looke much backe at them, and to remember with delight the pleasures and eases of this world; for it breedeth in him discontentment of the troubles and crosses that are incident to the state of such as fully follow Christ. In which case a man should ever looke forward towards heaven, and never backward to the world.

CHAP. X.

He sendeth yet seventy two moe to preach to the Iewes, with power also of miracles, 13 crying woe to the cities impenitent. 17 At their returne he agnizeth the great power he gave them, but yet teacheth them not to be proud thereof, 21 and praiseth God for his grace, 23 his Church also for her happy state. 25 To one of the Scribes he sheweth, that the love of God and of his neighbour will bring him to life everlasting, 29 teaching him by the parable of the Samaritane, to take every one for his neighbour that needeth his charity. 38 To Martha he sheweth that Maries contemplative life is the better.

The Gospel upon S. Markes day and Saint Lukes.

‡ As the 12. Apostles did represent the higher degree of the Clergie, called Bishops: so these seventy two beare the figure of the inferiour Clergie, called Priests, Beda.

AND after this our Lord designed also other ‡ seventy two: and he sent them two and two before his face into every city and place whither himselfe would come.

2 And he said to them, The harvest truly is much: but the workmen few. Desire therfore the Lord of the harvest, that he send workmen into his harvest.

3 Goe: behold I send you as lambes among wolves.

4 Carry not purse nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no body by the way.

5 Into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace to this house.

6 And if the Son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon him: but if not, it shall returne to you.

7 And in the same house tarry you, eating and drinking such things as they have. * For the workman is worthy of his hire. Remove not from house to house.

1 Tim. 5. 18.

8 And into what city soever you enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you:

9 And cure the sick that are in it, and say to them, The kingdome of God is come nigh upon you. ☞

10 And into whatsoever city you enter, and they receive you not, going forth into the streets thereof, say, 11 The dust also of your city that cleaveth to us, we doe wipe off against you; yet this know ye that the kingdom of God is at hand.

12 I say to you, it shall be ‡ more tolerable for Sodom in that day, then for that city.

‡ Differences of paines and damnation in hell, according to the differences of demerits, Aug. l. 5 c. 5. contr. Iul.

13 Woe to thee Corazaim, woe to thee Bethsaida: for if in Tyre and Sidon had beene wrought the miracles that have bin wrought in you, they had done penance sitting ‡ in sackcloth and ashes long agoe.

14 But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the judgement, then for you.

15 And thou Capharnaum that art exalted unto heaven: thou shalt be thrust downe even unto hell.

16 ‡ He that heareth you heareth me: and he that despiseth you, despiseth me. And he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me.

17 And

AFter these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face, into every city and place, whither he himselfe would come.

*2 Therefore said he unto them, * The harvest is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, to † send forth labourers into his harvest.*

Matth. 10. 14.

6 And if the Sonne of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon him: if not, it shall turne to you againe.

7 And in the same house tarry still, eating and drinking such things as they have: For the labourer is worthy of his reward. Goe not from house to house.

*8 * And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you:*

Matth. 10. 11.

9 And heale the sicke that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh upon you.

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, get your wayes out into the streets of the same, and say,

*11 * Even the very dust of your city which cleaveth on us, we doe wipe off against you: notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdome of God was come nigh upon you.*

Act. 13. 51.

12 I say unto you, That it shall be easier in that day for Sodom, then for that city.

*13 * Woe unto thee Chorazin, woe unto thee Bethsaida: For if the mighty workes had beene done in Tyre and Sidon, which have beene done in you, they had a great while agoe repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.*

Marke 11. 21.

14 Therefore it shall be easier for Tyre and Sidon at the judgement, then for you.

15 And thou Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust downe to hell.

31 And it chanced, that a certaine Priest went downe the same way: and seeing him, passed by.

32 In like manner also a Levite, when he was neere the place, and saw him, passed by.

34 And going unto him, bound his wounds, powring in oyle and wine: and setting him upon his owne beast, brought him into an Inne, and tooke care of him.

21 The same houre Iesus rejoyced in the spirit, and said, I confesse unto thee, Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast opened them unto babes: even so Father, for so it pleased thee.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. X.

RHEM. 1 13 In ſackcloth and aſhes.] True penance not onely to lead a new life, but to puniſh the body by ſuch things as here be recorded, for the ill life paſt.

FVLKE. 1 Puniſhing of the body by ſackcloth and aſhes, is no ſatisfaction for ſinnes paſt; but an helpe vnto repent[illegible] a ſigne of humiliation. Baſil. in Pſ. 29.

RHEM. 2 16 He that heareth.] It is all one to deſpiſe Chriſt; and to deſpiſe his Prieſts and [illegible] Church: to refuſe his doctrine, and theirs.

FVLKE 2. It is all one to deſpiſe the Miniſters of Chriſts Catholike Church, and to deſpiſe Chriſt. [illegible] Church, and the Popiſh Prieſts, it is not true.

RHEM. 3 35 Supererogate.] S. Auguſtine ſayth, that the Apoſtle (1 Cor. 9.) according to [illegible] is did more then he needed, or was bound to doe, when he might haue required all things for preaching [illegible] Goſpel, but would not. Li. de op. Monach. c. 5. whereof it commeth, that the workes which we doe more then precept, be called workes of ſupererogation: and whereby it is alſo evident againſt the Proteſtants, that there be ſuch workes. See Optatus, li. 6. cont. Parmen. how aptly he applyeth this parable to Saint Pauls counſell of virginity (1 Cor. 7.) as to a worke of ſupererogation.

FVLKE 3 That which is beſtowed for the full recovery of the wounded man is a duty of charity, therefore commanded. So is whatſoever we are able to doe, pertaining either to the perfect love of God, or the love of our neighbour as our ſelfe, is of duty, though it be not expreſly named, but generally commanded, and it is ſinne to [illegible]. That which S. Auguſtine ſaith of S. Paul: Amplius erogabat, &c. He did beſtow more, when he went [illegible] at his owne coſt is to be underſtood of the generall liberty that all Preachers have to live of the Goſpel. [illegible] it his duty, in that ſpeciall caſe, to forbeare that liberty, or any other thing that is lawfull, that he ſhould not give any hinderance to the Goſpel of Chriſt. 1 Cor. 9.12. Therefore it had beene ſinne in him, to uſe that liberty to the hinderance of the Goſpel. So that it was no worke of ſupererogation (as you terme it) but of duty in that caſe, to forbeare it. Againe he forbeareth, that he ſhould not abuſe his power in the Goſpel. 1 Cor. 9.18. If he abuſe his power in the Goſpel, he ſinneth, ergo he forbeareth of duty: for it is his duty to avoid ſinne. What then, did the other Apoſtles ſinne in not labouring as the idle Monkes objected to S. Auguſtine? No, their caſe differed from his, as he ſheweth plainely in the ſame booke, cap. 22. They uſed their liberty to no hinderance of the Goſpel: he could not uſe it, but with impediment of the Goſpel. Therefore workes of ſupererogation are not proved by S. Pauls example. Neither by his counſell unto Virginity, which is not to be neglected where God hath given the gift, and it may ſerue to the advancement of Gods glory, which every one is bound to procure, to the uttermoſt of his ſtrength, Deut. 6.5. Luke 10.27. though the ſpeciall ſtate of Virginity be not commanded generally, because God hath not given the gift to all men generally. And ſo muſt Optatus be underſtood. S. Chryſoſtome interpreting this parable allegorically (as many of the Fathers doe) yet acknowledgeth, that the governour of the Church can beſtow no more, then is contained in the Goſpel. Nam cum &c. For ſeeing nothing can be added to the two Teſtaments, neither may the Law of God receive any increaſe or diminiſhing, what is it then, which the governour can beſtow more then he hath received? but that which is his owne duty, to which he is bound to endevour, that he lay out that which is committed to him, that he hath received, &c. De eo qui [illegible] ſermon. By Chryſoſtomes judgement therefore in this place, he can doe no workes of ſupererogation. [illegible] upon this place ſayth, I will pay thee if thou ſhalt beſtow any thing of thine owne that may profit him. [illegible] teachers doe adde of their owne, when they dilate the interpretation of the words of God. For they take indeede the argument or ſubſtance of the matter out of the two Teſtaments, but by their owne ſpeeches they beſtow greater [illegible] upon them that are diſeaſed. This Author gathering the judgement of the ancient Fathers of the Greeke Church, could find no workes of ſupererogation in this text.

Workes of Supererogation.

RHEM. 4 21 To little ones.] By this place every vulgar artificer may not preſume that God hath revealed all truth to him, and therefore refuſe to be taught of the learned: for Chriſt did not afterward make [illegible] men, nor any other with the gifts of wiſedome and tongues without their induſtry, ſtudy, and [illegible]: though in the beginning of great providence he did it, that it might be cleare to the world, that all Nations were converted to him, not by [illegible]

FVLKE 4 [illegible] Word of God [illegible]

RHEM. 5 [illegible] 4 Reg. [illegible] by Chriſt [illegible]

The Command[illegible] be kept.

FVLKE 5 [illegible] Therefore he mocketh [illegible] performe [illegible] of the Law, [illegible] the mercy of God in Chriſt. [illegible] none is juſtified by the Law, but by faith in Chriſt [illegible] that have [illegible] and fulfilled it, as far as it is requiſite in this life. [illegible] of [illegible] that he kept his Commandements, and followed me with his whole heart. What [illegible] of the Scripture is this? Is not the fall of David notorious? And doth he [illegible] mes, crave pardon for his ſins, and tranſgreſſions of the Law? Therefore he kept Gods Commandements, but not perfectly, nor loved God with all his heart, might, ſtrength, according to the Commandement [illegible] though he walked after God with all his heart, that is unfainedly, and not as hypocrites & carnall [illegible] profeſſe Religion. The like is to be ſaid of the people in Aſa his dayes, which ſware with all their heart, that is, with full purpoſe to keepe their oath, and unfained deſire to ſeeke the Lord: yet did they not fulfill the Law, but were ſinners; and were juſtified freely by grace in Chriſt, as S. Paul affirmeth of all men without exception, Rom. 3.23. As for the Prophet Pſ. 119. confeſſeth, that he hath gone aſtray as a loſt ſheepe, and [illegible] in the ſame verſe you quote, prayeth that he may not erre from Gods Commandements. Therfore that he ſought God with all his heart, is not to be taken for a perfect keeping of Gods law, but for an earneſt and unfained deſire of the ſpirit, againſt which (even in the regenerate) the fleſh alwaies rebelleth, ſo that they cannot doe what they deſire, Gal. 5.17. Eccleſiaſticus doth not ſay, that David loved God with all his heart, but from al his heart, that is, from the bottom of his heart, unfainedly; yet not perfectly. For who can ſay, my heart is cleane? I am pure from ſin. Pro. 20.9. And David confeſſeth his owne ſins even from his conception, Pſa. 51.7. The like is to be ſaid of Ezechias, who with a ſound heart walked before God in truth, that is, without diſſimulation or halting, as hypocrites do, yet kept not the Law perfectly, ſo that he could live thereby, nor loved God with all his heart, might, ſoule, &c. Laſt of all, Zachary and Elizabeth walked in all the Commandements of God, yet fulfilled not the law, and though their life was blameleſſe in the ſight of men, yet were they not able to ſtand before Gods Iuſtice, in whoſe ſight no man living ſhalbe righteous. Pſ. 143.2. Now where you have a vaine evaſion, in theſe words, as much as is requiſite, &c. It is requiſite of every one, that ſeeketh to be juſtified by the Law, that he kept it perfectly without ſin, elſe he is under the curſe, and cannot be juſtified by the works of the law, Gal. 3.

Iuſtification.

Keeping of Gods Law.

RHEM. 6 30 Halfe dead.] Here is ſignified man wounded very ſore in his underſtanding and free-will, and all other powers of ſoule and body, by the ſinne of Adam: but yet, that neither underſtanding, nor free-will, nor the reſt, were extinguiſhed in man, or taken away: The Prieſt and Levite, ſignifie the Law of Moſes: this Samaritane, is Chriſt the Prieſt of the New Teſtament: the Oyle and Wine, his Sacraments: the hoſt, the Prieſts his miniſters. Whereby is ſignified, that the Law could not recover the ſpirituall life of mankind from the death of ſinne, that is, juſtifie man: but Chriſt onely, who by his paſſion and the grace and vertue thereof, miniſtred in and by his Sacraments, juſtifieth and increaſeth the juſtice of man, healing and abling free-will to doe all good workes.

The parable of the wounded man, explicated.

FVLKE 6. Againſt this vaine collection by allegory, the Scripture is plaine, that we are all dead in ſin, by the ſin of Adam. Ro. 5.12. Ep. 2.1.5. Col. 2.13. The Councell Arauſicanum, which you quote (belike to prove that the freedome of will is not loſt in Adam) ſaith: It is ſo inclined by the ſin of the firſt man and attenuated, that no man [illegible] could love God as he ought, or worke that which is good for Gods ſake; except the grace and mercy of God prevent [illegible]. And if by thoſe words you thinke there is any life left unto it, c. 22. the Councell ſaith, No man hath any thing of his owne, but lyes and ſinne. And c. 21. Nature by Adam loſt, by Chriſt is repaired. And whereas you ſeeme to leave ſome life, juſtice, and freedome of will in man, which by Chriſt is recovered, increaſed, healed, and abled. Thus we read cap. 7. the Title of which is, That we are not apt to thinke any thing of our ſelves, as of our ſelves. If any man doe hold, that a man by the force of nature can thinke any good thing, which pertaineth unto eternall life, or that he can chuſe either to be ſaved, that is, to conſent to the preaching of the Goſpel, without illumination and inſpiration of the holy Ghoſt, which giveth to all men the ſweeteneſſe, in conſenting and beleeving the truth, he is deceived with an hereticall ſpirit, not underſtanding the voice of God, ſaying in the Goſpel, Without me ye can doe nothing: and that of the Apoſtle, Not that we are apt of our ſelves to thinke any thing as of our ſelves, but our ſufficiency is of God. And touching underſtanding, the Apoſtle ſaith, The naturall man underſtandeth not the things that be of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe unto him, neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. So that neither the will nor the underſtanding have any heavenly life in them.

Free-will.

RHEM. 7 42 Mary the beſt part.] Two notable examples, one of the life Active, in Martha: the other of the life Contemplative, in Mary: repreſenting unto us, that in holy Church there ſhould be alwaies ſome to ſerve God in both theſe ſeverall ſorts. The life Contemplative is here preferred before the Active: the Religious of both ſexes are of that more excellent ſtate; and therefore our Proteſtants have wholly abandoned them out of their Common wealth, which the true Church never wanted. But to ſay truth, they have neither Martha nor Mary, *our Lord give them grace to ſee their miſery. If ours were not anſwerable to their profeſſion, or were degenerated, why have they no new ones? If our Churches Votaries vowed unlawfull things, Chaſtity, Poverty, Obedience, Pilgrimage: what other Votaries of lawfull vowes have they? For to offer voluntarily by vow (beſides the keeping of Gods Commandements, whereunto [illegible] bound by precept and promiſe in our Baptiſme) our ſoules, bodies, goods, or any other acceptable thing to God, is [illegible] religious worſhip belonging to God onely: and there was never true Religion, without ſuch Vowes and Votaries [illegible] be none in their whole Church that profeſſe continencie, or that vow any thing at all to God voluntarily, [illegible] their bodies due to their goods? MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XIX.

RHEM. 1 17 Ten cities.] Marke here against the Adverſaries, that the rewards of theſe two good ſervants be divers and unequall, according to the diverſitie or inequality of their gaines, that is, their merits, and yet one receiveth the peny (Mat. 20, 9.) as well as the other, that is, heaven or life everlaſting.

FVLKE 1 The diverſity of the rewards we acknowledge, which are according to the diverſity of his gifts. For of his mercy he crowneth his gifts, not our merits, Aug. in Pſal. 70. conc. 2. Otherwiſe every childe may conceive, that the gaine of ten pounds, doth not deſerve the governement of ten cities. Merit.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIX.

RHEM. 2 4 Went up.] Not onely inward devotion of faith and charity towards Chriſt, but externall offices of ſeeing, following, touching, receiving, harbouring him, are recommended to us in this example: even ſo our manifold exterior devotion towards his Sacraments, Saints, and ſervants, be gratefull: ſpecially the indeavour of good people not onely to be preſent at Maſſe or in the Church, but to be neere the bleſſed Sacrament, and to ſee it with all reverence and devotion according to the order of the Church, much more to receive it into the houſe of their body. Externall devotion.

FVLKE 2 Externall offices done to Chriſts perſon by them that believed in him, were acceptable to him, otherwiſe not. Herod deſired to ſee Chriſt, the multitude followed him, and thronged him, which after were ready to cry Crucifie him. The Phariſees divers times entertained him. Iudas kiſſed him. But whereas you ſay, the externall offices of devotion, &c. are recommended to us for example: we know he hath recommended the poore afflicted for his ſake to be releeved, but not to be honoured in all reſpects as his perſon was, of them who acknowledged him to be the Sonne of the living God. As for his Sacraments and Saints, require no ſuch externall offices, neither are they acceptable to him or his Saints. As for the preſſing of ſuperſtitious Papiſts, to be neere the idoll of the Maſſe, and to ſee it held up or carried about, contrary to the inſtitution of the bleſſed Sacrament, hath no colour of defence by example of Zacheus who deſired to ſee Chriſt, no although Chriſt were as verily to be ſeene in the Sacrament, as he was in the way, ſeeing this Sacrament was ordained to bee eaten and drunken, and not to be gazed and looked upon. Superſtition.

RHEM. 3 8 I reſtore fourefold.] That which we give of our owne, is almes and [illegible] for our ſinnes: but that which we reſtore of ill gotten goods, by Extortion, Vſury, Simonie, Bribery, Theft or otherwiſe, that is called here reſtoring. And it is of duty and not of free almes) and muſt be rendred not to whom we liſt, but to the parties annoyed if it be poſſible, otherwiſe it muſt be beſtowed upon the poore, or other good uſes, according to the adviſe of our ſuperiour and ſuch as have charge of our ſoules. But that he yeelded fourefold, that was more then he was bound, but very ſatisfactorie for his former ſinnes alſo. And herewith we may note, that it is not the giving of a peny, groat, or crowne, of a rich mans ſuperfluity, that is ſo much recommended to ſinners for redeeming their faults: but this large beſtowing upon Chriſt, to ſell all and give it to almes, to give the halfe of our goods, to render foure times ſo much for that which is wrongfully gotten, that extinguiſheth ſinnes. The poore widowes braſſe peny was very gratefull, becauſe it was all, or much of that ſhe had: but the rich mans pound of his ſuperfluity, though it be good, yet is nothing ſo gratefull. Reſtitution. Satisfaction.

FVLKE 3 Almes and all other deeds of charity, are a duty of thankfulneſſe for ſinnes forgiven, no ſatisfaction, as is manifeſt by the parable of the ſervant, that ought ten thouſand talents, Matth. 6, 18. But in your diſcourſe of reſtitution, you open a great myſterie of iniquity, whereby the Ieſuites, Seminaries, and other broods of treaſon and impiety are maintained, and live of the Popes meere liberality. For while you teach reſtitution to be neceſſary (which all good men doe acknowledge) you have found out a caſe whereby infinite maſſes of money may be brought to the Popes diſpoſition, and ſuch as be factours under him. For if the parties injured be not knowne, dead, or otherwiſe not to be ſatisfied, you determine, that the goods ill gotten, muſt be beſtowed on the poore, or upon good uſes, [illegible] it is not amiſſe. But you will not truſt the conſcience of the wrong doer, to beſtow it as he liſt, but according to the adviſe of your ſuperiour, which is the Pope and his Clergie, which have care of ſoules. So that while you challenge to the Pope and your ſelves, the diſpoſition of goods gotten wrongfully, you take upon you an office farre worſe than Iudas exerciſed, and by this meanes, ill gotten goods are worſe beſtowed, to maintaine treaſons, hereſies, and murders, and if need be, open warres againſt Chriſtian Princes. But why I pray you, if the Extortioner, Vſurer, Simoniake, Briber, &c. have the conſcience to reſtore where he cannot to the parties injured, which ought firſt to be regarded, may he not beſtow it uprightly and ſincerely upon the poore, or other good uſes? Or, if he lacke advice, why may he not take Satisfaction. The Pope challengeth the diſpoſition of goods ill gotten.

HOLY WEEKE. [illegible] though they were not the charge of his body, and though the Pope were [illegible] of it? [illegible] as if he had beene [illegible] of theſe. Therefore [illegible] Chriſt [illegible] a tenth, or fourefold reſtitution, deſpiſing the rich mans peny, groat, or crowne, you plead [illegible] and yet you are content to play ſmall game [illegible] the poore widowes mite, if ſhe have no more, or not much more to give, not contemning the rich mans pound. But why did not Chriſt challenge the diſpoſition of that fourefold reſtitution, that Iudas might have had the bagging of it? Or by what right [illegible] Chriſts good Vicar challenge that Chriſt did not? At the wiſe, if Chriſt could not intend it, why did he not commit the diſpoſition of it to Peter, as his deputy in ſuch weighty caſes of conſcience, reſerved to his owne juriſdiction? we know that liberall almes of a cheerefull giver pleaſeth God, as a fruit of faith, and ſhall have great reward. He is blinde that cannot ſee, as well in this place, as in divers other, how under colour of merit, ſatiſfaction, extinguiſhing of ſinne, and laſt of all, of reſtitution, you ſeeke not onely to devoure poore widowes houſes, but to be lords of rich uſurers and oppreſſors goods.

CHAP. XX.

To the Iewes he avoucheth his power by the witneſſe of Iohn who was a man ſent of God: 9 and foretelleth in a parable their reprobation moſt worthy (with the vocation of the Gentiles in their place) 17 and conſequently their irreparable damnation that ſhall enſue thereof. 20 He defeateth their ſnare about paying tribute to Caeſar: 27 he anſwereth alſo the invention of the Sadduces againſt the Reſurrection. 40 And ſo having put them all to ſilence, 41 he turneth and poſeth them, becauſe they imagined that Chriſt ſhould be no more but a man: 45 bidding all to beware of the Scribes (authors of the Iewes ſchiſme from him) being ambitious and hypocrites.

12 Againe, he ſent the third, and when they had wounded him alſo, they caſt him out.

13 Then ſaid the lord of the vineyard, What ſhall I doe? I will ſend my deere ſonne: it may be they will reverence him when they ſee him.

14 But when the husbandmen ſaw him, they reaſoned within themſelves, ſaying, This is the heire, come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

Rhem. 1. 35 Counted worthy.] The Greeke, καταξιωθέντες, importeth alſo this much, They that are made worthy, to wit, by the grace of God, and ſo they are indeed worthy, as alſo in the next chap. ver. 36. & 2 Theſſ. 1,5.

Fulke 1. The Greeke is none other then your owne tranſlation which you may be aſhamed to correct, having in your Preface preferred it before the Greeke.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XX.

Rhem. 2 35 Shall be counted worthy.] This truth and ſpeech that good men be worthy of heaven, is according to the Scriptures, and ſignifieth that mans workes done by Chriſts grace doe condignely or worthily deſerve eternall joy, as Sap. 3. God prooved them and found them worthy of himſelfe; and Mat. 10. He that loveth his father more then me, is not worthy of me; and Coloſſ. 1. That you may walke worthy of God; and moſt plainely, Apoc. 3. They ſhall walke with me in white, becauſe they are worthy; as of Chriſt (c. 2.) Thou art worthy O Lord to receive glory, &c. And that to be counted worthy, and to be worthy, is here all one, it is plaine by the Greeke word, which S. Paul uſeth ſo, as the adverſaries owne Engliſh Teſtaments doe teſtifie, reading thus, Heb. 10. Of how much ſorer puniſhment ſhall he be worthy, which &c. and it muſt needes ſo ſignifie, becauſe men for ſinnes are not onely counted, but are indeede worthy puniſhment, as themſelves doe grant. They doe greatly therefore forget themſelves, and are ignorant in the Scriptures, and know not the force nor the valure of the grace of God, which doth not onely make our labours gratefull to God, but worthy of the reward which he hath provided for ſuch as love him. See the Annot. 2 Theſſ. 1,5.

To be worthy of heaven or to deſerve & merit.

The New Teſtament. an. 1580.

καταξιωθῆναι, & ἀξιωθῆναι &c.

Fulke 2 The Scriptures never affirme, that good men by their works, merits, or deſerts, are worthy of heaven: but only by the grace of God in Chriſt Ieſus. In whom they are accepted as worthy. And that mans works, done by Chriſts grace, doe condignly or worthily deſerve eternall joy, it is contrary to the opinion of the beſt of the Schoolemen, who upon the ſaying of S. Paul, Rom. 8. The ſufferings of this life, are not worthy or condigne, &c. invented the diſtinction of Congruum & Condignum. But to examine your texts of Scripture, which you bring to proove your new Popery. The firſt being no canonicall Scripture, muſt either be underſtood according to the perpetuall doctrine of the canonicall Scripture, or elſe be rejected. By faith therefore, which is tried in temptation, they were found worthy, and not of the merit of their works. And though he that loveth his father more then Chriſt, is not worthy of him; yet it followeth not, that he which loveth Chriſt more then his father, is worthy of Chriſt. For our ſinnes doe properly deſerve Gods wrath, but our good works, becauſe they are not perfect, nor ours, but Gods gifts in us, deſerve not to us Gods favour and grace, which is freely given. Thirdly, S. Paul prayeth, that the Coloſſians may walke worthy of God, according to his acceptation, not according to the merit of their good workes in this life, but that at the length, they may be made worthy in Chriſt their Redeemer, by whom they obtaine remiſſion of their ſinnes. Fourthly, Chriſt ſheweth not what the faithfull are by the

the [illegible] their [illegible], but by [illegible] of his grace, through his merits: [illegible] workes in Chriſt is called worthy, Apoc. 3. [illegible] 4. [illegible] and [illegible] it: but the [illegible] Apoc. [illegible] and the [illegible] Goſpel [illegible] blaſphemy you [illegible], while you [illegible] by the grace of Chriſt) to make them as worthy of the [illegible], as God is of glory, [illegible] you ſay it is [illegible] counted worthy, and to be [illegible] by [illegible] of our Engliſh [illegible] the word [illegible], yet the [illegible] are [illegible] onely by imputation, but by merit of [illegible] and [illegible] that is [illegible]: whereas the [illegible] are not perfectly juſt, by merit of juſtice inherent, but by [illegible] of the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt through faith. [illegible] are we ſo ignorant of the Scripture, but that we know the dignity of Gods grace, whereby [illegible], but alſo our labours rewarded [illegible] the grace of God, and not of the merit of [illegible] are not made worthy of reward, (for then they ſhould be perfect) but in the merits and worthineſſe of Chriſt, are counted worthy of eternall life.

Rhem. 3 36 Equall to Angels] Saints of our kinde, now in their ſoules, and after their [illegible] in body and ſoule together, ſhall be in all things equall to Angels: and for degree of bliſſe, many Saints of greater [illegible] ſhall be above divers Angels: as S. Iohn Baptiſt, the Apoſtles, and others, and our Bleſſed Lady above all the orders of holy ſpirits in dignity and bliſſe; and no marvell, our nature by Chriſt being ſo highly exalted above all Angels.

The dignity of Saints.

Fulke. 3 Our Saviour ſayth not, that the Saints are now, but after the reſurrection they ſhall be equall to the Angels. Neither ſaith he, in all things, but in that, they ſhall have no need or uſe of marriage. That any Saints, as the Bleſſed Virgine Mary, Iohn Baptiſt, the Apoſtles, ſhall be above all Angels in dignity, the Scripture doth not teach, therefore it is preſumptuouſly, and blindly, though never ſo boldly affirmed.

The Saints departed not like the Angels in all points.

CHAP. XXI.

He commendeth the poore widow for her two mites, above all. 5 Having ſaid that the temple ſhould be quite deſtroyed, 7 He foretelleth firſt many things that ſhall goe before, 20 then a ſigne alſo when it is neere, after which ſhall come the deſtruction it ſelfe in moſt horrible manner, without hope of reſtitution, untill all nations of the Gentiles be gathered into his Church in the very end of the world. 25 And then what ſignes ſhall come of the laſt day, terrible to the world, 28 but comfortable to us of his Church, 34 ſo that we be alwaies watchfull.

Mar. 12,41.

AND beholding, he ſaw them that did caſt their gifts into the treaſury, rich perſons.

2 And he ſaw alſo a certaine poore widow caſting two braſſe mites.

3 And he ſaid, Verily I ſay to you, that this poore widow hath caſt more then all.

4 For all theſe of their abundance have caſt into the gifts of God: but ſhe ‖ of her penury, hath caſt in all her living that ſhe had.

RHEM. 1 37 Mount that is called.] Solitarinesse to eremitage (as S. Gregory Nazian. saith,) is a godly thing; this doth the mount Carmel of Elias teach, Iohns desert, and that mount unto which Iesus often retired, and was quietly alone with himselfe. Ser. 26, de amore pauperum.

FVLKE. 1 The godly may take great profit of solitarinesse, though they goe not into the wildernesse. Yet idle in solitarinesse, is not so good, as well occupied in the Church.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XXI.

RHEM. 2 4 Of her penny.] To offer or give almes of our superfluities, is not so acceptable nor meritorious, as to bestow some of that which is of our necessary provision, and which we may hardly spare from our selves: for, that proceedeth of greater zeale, will, and intention, which be more respected of God then the substance of the gift.

FVLKE 2. No almes is meritorious in any respect, nor any almes is acceptable, without true faith and love. Beda allegorizing this widdow to be the Church, saith, The Church casteth all her living into the gifts of God: which understandeth even all that she liveth not to be of her merit, but of Gods gift, when she saith, God be mercifull to me a sinner.

CHAP. XXII.

*Iudas doth sell him to the Iewes. 7 After the old Paschal 19 he giveth to his Disciples the bread of life in a mysticall * sacrifice of his body and blood, for an everlasting commemoration of his passion. 21 He covertly admonisheth the traitour. 24 Against their ambitious contention he sheweth them that the majority of any among them in this world is for their service as his owne also was: 28 And how he will exalt them all in the world to come: 31 foretelling Peter the * singular priviledge of his faith never failing, 33 and his three negations: 35 and how they shall all now be put to their shifts. 39 And that night, after his prayer with sweating of blood, 47 he is taken of the Iewes men, Iudas being their captaine: yet shewing them both by miracle and word, that they could doe nothing unto him but by his owne permission. 54 Then in the chiefe Priests house he is thrise denied of Peter, 63 shamefully abused of his keepers, 66 and in the morning impiously condemned of their Councell, for confessing himselfe to be the Sonne of God.*

AND the festivall day of the Azymes approched, which is called Pasche:

2 And the chiefe Priests and the Scribes sought how they might kill him: but they feared the people.

3 And Satan entred into Iudas that was surnamed Iscariot, one of the Twelve.

4 And hee went and talked with the chiefe Priests and Magistrates, how he might betray him to them.

5 And they were glad, and bargained to give him money.

6 And he promised. And he sought opportunity to betray him apart from the multitudes.

Matt. 26, 17. Mark. 14, 12. Maundy Thursday.

7 * And the day of the Azymes came, wherein it was necessary that the Pasche should be killed.

8 And he sent Peter and Iohn, saying, Go and prepare us the Pasche, that we may eate.

Matt. 20, 25. Mar. 10, 42.

26 But you not so: but he that is the greater among you, let him become as the younger: and he that is the leader, as the waiter.

27 For which is greater, he that sitteth at the table, or he that ministreth? is not he that sitteth? but I am in the middes of you, as he that ministreth:

16 For I say unto you, henceforth I will not in any wise eat of it any more, untill it be fulfilled in the kingdome of God.

17 And when he had taken the cup, and given thankes, he said, Take this, and devide it among you.

70 Then ſaid they all, Art thou then the Sonne of God? He ſaid, Ye ſay that I am.

71 And they ſaid, What need we any further witneſſe? For we our ſelves have heard of his owne mouth.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XXII.

RHEM. I 20 THIS IS THE CHALICE.] The Greeke is here ſo plaine, that there was very blood in the Chalice ſhed for us, that Beza ſaith it is a corruption in the Greeke. See the Annotations upon this place.

FVLKE I The Greeke maketh nothing for very blood in the Chalice, but ſpeaketh of the blood of Chriſt, ſhed upon the Croſſe: for in the Chalice it was not ſhed, but the Cup is the new Teſtament, in the blood of Chriſt, ſhed upon the Croſſe, for the redemption of the world. [illegible]

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XXII.

RHEM. 2 15 With deſire [I haue deſired.] [illegible] to eat this Paſchal Lambe, [illegible] be [illegible] new Paſcha [illegible] and in which the old Teſtament and Law, [illegible] of his Church) ſhould begin. [illegible] the very paſſage from the old Law to the new was [illegible]

The old Paſchal ceaſeth, and a new is inſtituted.

FVLKE 2 [illegible] our Paſchall Lambe was ſacrificed on the Croſſe, where he was ſlaine for vs, 1 Cor. 5.7. [illegible] memoriall of which oblation, he inſtituted in the laſt Supper.

The Sacrament no ſacrifice propitiatory.

RHEM. 3 17 Taking the Chalice.] This Chalice, according to the very evidence of the text it ſelfe alſo, is not the ſecond part of the holy Sacrament, but that [illegible] cup of wine which belonged [illegible] of the Paſchal Lambe. Which being a figure ſpecially of the [illegible] Chalice, [illegible] and giuen to the Apoſtles alſo, with declaration, that it ſhould be the laſt cup of the Law, not to be [illegible] till it ſhould be drunken new in the kingdome of God: that is to ſay, in the celebration of the bleſſed Sacrament of his blood of the new Teſtament. And by this place it ſeemeth very like, that the words in S. Matthew, I will not [illegible] the fruit of the vine, &c. were pertaining to this cup of the old Law, and not to the holy Sacrament, though they be there [illegible] or recapitulation ſpoken after the holy Chalice.

Two Cups or Chalices at Chriſts laſt Supper. Matth. 26,29.

FVLKE 3 Whether there were two Cups divided, or one onely whereof S. Luke ſpeaketh here by anticipation, certaine it is, by S. Matthew and S. Marke, and the conſent of all the ancient writers, that thoſe words, I will not drinke of the fruit of the vine, were ſpoken of the cup of the new Teſtament. And although they were not, yet you could not ſo avoid the fruit of the vine: for according to your owne expoſition, he did drinke the fruit of the vine now in the kingdome of God, which is the celebration of the bleſſed Sacrament of his blood in the new Teſtament.

Tranſubſtantiation.

RHEM. 4 19 This is my body.] Although ſenſe tell thee it is bread, yet it is the body, according to his words; let faith confirme thee, iudge not by ſenſe, after the words of our Lord let no doubt riſe in thy minde, Cyril, myſtag. 4. Of the verity of fleſh and blood there is left no place to doubt: by the profeſſion of our Lord himſelfe, and by our faith, it is fleſh and blood indeed. Is not this truth? To them be it vntrue, which deny IESVS CHRIST to be true God, Hilar. lib. 8. de Trin.

The reall preſence.

FVLKE 4 As the bread of the Euchariſt, after the invocation of the holy Ghoſt, is no more common bread, but is the body of Chriſt, ſo alſo this holy ointment is no more bare ointment, nor (if a man had rather ſo call it) common ointment, after it is conſecrated, but it is the gracious gift of Chriſt, which through the comming of the holy Ghoſt to it, by his Divinitie hath power to worke, Cyrill. myſt. 3. As the ointment is the gracious gift of Chriſt, ſo the Sacrament is the body of Chriſt by his iudgement, nor any other tranſubſtantiation in the one, then in the other. Of the veritie of Chriſts fleſh and blood, we doubt not: neither doe we doubt, But that the ſame being eaten and drunken, doe bring to paſſe, that both Chriſt is in vs, and we in Chriſt: which words, becauſe you deny the ſenſe of them, you haue gelded out of S. Hilaries ſaying, which declare that he ſpeaketh of a ſpirituall manner of eating, as he ſaith before: We doe truly vnder a myſterie, receiue the fleſh of his body, and thereby we ſhall be one, becauſe the Father is in him, and he in vs.

Reall preſence.

RHEM. 5 19 Which is given.] As the former words make and proue his body preſent, ſo theſe words plainely ſignifie, that it is preſent, as giuen, offered, or ſacrificed for vs: and being vttered in the * *preſent tenſe, it ſignifieth not onely that it ſhould afterward be giuen or offered on the Croſſe, but that it was then alſo in the Sacrament giuen and offered for vs. Whereby it is invincibly proued, that his body is preſent as an hoſt or ſacrifice: and that the making or conſecrating thereof muſt needs be ſacrificing. Chriſt ſacrificed his body & blood in Sacrament at his Supper.

The ſacrifice of the Altar.

Cyril. Alex. anathem. 11.

FVLKE 5 The former words proue no preſence, but myſticall and ſacramentall, yet that Chriſt is truly receiued of the faithfull. The word of the Preſent tenſe, Which is given, ſignifieth, that the body of Chriſt was then giuen to be offered on the Croſſe, and not in the Sacrament. For Chriſt offered himſelfe but once, like as he died but once, and by one oblation found eternall redemption, and made perfect for ever thoſe that are ſanctified, Heb. 7. 27. cap. 9. 12. 25. 26. 28. cap. 10. 10. 12. 14. Againſt theſe plaine teſtimonies of the Scripture, what blaſphemie is it to ſay, he offered himſelfe twice, died twice, ſhed his blood in ſacrifice twice? yea to ſet vp a continuall repetition of that ſacrifice which was ſingular, becauſe once offered it was ſufficient, which none could offer but himſelfe, who is an eternall Prieſt, void of ſinne, immortall, and which he offered by his eternall Spirit, Heb. 7. 24. 26. 27. 28. cap. 9. 14. And therefore the holy Fathers of the Primitive Church, doe not call the celebration of the Lords Supper a ſacrifice in that ſenſe, you ſay, but becauſe a ſpirituall ſacrifice of thankeſgiving is offered therein: and vnproperly, becauſe it is a memory of the onely ſacrifice of Chriſt offered on the Croſſe. Not one of them ſaith it is a ſacrifice propitiatory, or that Chriſt offered himſelfe twice, or died twice for vs. No not Gregorie Niſſen, whom you place in the firſt ranke, becauſe he ſeemeth to ſay moſt for you: for his ſcope is to proue, that Chriſt ſuffered death of his owne will, not by neceſſity of nature, or malice of his enemies; and therefore he ſaith, He tarried not for the neceſſity that hung over him of Iudas treaſon, nor the violence of the Iewes, as theeues, nor the vniuſt ſentence of Pilate, that their malice ſhould be the beginning and cauſe of the common ſalvation of men: but prevented it by his owne purpoſe, and by a ſecret kinde of ſacrifice, which could not be ſeene of men, he offereth himſelfe a ſacrifice for vs, and ſacrificeth an oblation, being both the Prieſt and the Lambe of God, which taketh away the ſinne of the world. When did he performe that? when he gave to his Diſciples, being gathered together, his body to be eaten, and his blood to be drunken, then he openly declared, that the ſacrifice of the Lambe was already finiſhed. For the body of a ſacrifice is not meet to be eaten, if it be living: wherefore when he gaue his body to be eaten, and his blood to be drunken, vnto his Diſciples, his body was already offered by a ſecret and inviſible meanes, as it pleaſed the power of him, that worketh the myſterie. And his life was in them in whom the ſame power laid it downe, and together with the divine vertue that was ioyned with it, was in that region of the heart. Therefore if any man will begin to meaſure the time from thence, when the ſacrifice was made to God by that great high Prieſt, which by a meane that could not be expreſſed in words, nor ſeene with eyes, offered as it were a Lambe, he ſhall not depart from the truth. Theſe words of Niſſen declare, that Chriſt, in purpoſe of his death, offered himſelfe to God, before he was ſlaine of the Iewes: not that he inſtituted tuted a ſacrifice to be offered of others: [illegible] the actuall oblation of himſelfe on the Croſſe, [illegible] by his death. Therefore, though in ſhew of his words, you [illegible] yet in [illegible] he helpeth you nothing at all. But if he be well marked, [illegible] you. Leo neither of [illegible] the Sermons, calleth the Lords Supper a ſacrifice, but ſpeaketh of the onely ſacrifice of Chriſt, offered on the Croſſe. In the former he ſaith, that Ieſus being certaine of his purpoſe, and void of feare in the worke of his Fathers diſpoſition, finiſhed the old Teſtament, and did erect a new Paſchal: for when his Diſciples ſate downe with him, to eat the [illegible] , while in [illegible] they were treating how Chriſt might be ſlaine: he ordaining the Sacrament of his body and blood, did teach what manner of ſacrifice ſhould be offered not removing from this myſterie the very traitour. The Sacrament of his body and blood did ſhew, that his body and blood ſhould be that ſacrifice, which he ſhould offer. For eating this Bread, and drinking this Cup, we ſhew the Lords death, wherein his body and blood was ſacrificed. If you aske of Leo, where, and when this ſacrifice was offered, in the next Sermon he telleth you: Chriſt our Paſchal (as the Apoſtle ſaith) was offered, who offering himſelfe a new and true ſacrifice of reconciliation to his Father, was crucified, not in the Temple, the reverence whereof now was ended, nor within the compaſſe of the city, which was to be deſtroyed, for the merit of the wickedneſſe thereof, but abroad and without the tents: that the myſterie of the old ſacrifices ceaſing, a new ſacrifice ſhould be laid on a new Altar, and the Croſſe of Chriſt ſhould not be the Altar of the Temple, but of the world: of the ſame ſacrifice he ſpeaketh in the apoſtrophe vnto Chriſt: Now alſo, the variety of carnall ſacrifices ceaſing, that one oblation of thy body and blood, fulfilleth the differences of all ſacrifices: for thou art the true Lambe of God, which takeſt away the ſinnes of the world, and doſt ſo performe all myſteries in thy ſelfe, that as there is one ſacrifice for all oblations, ſo there is one kingdome of all Nations. Theſe words of Leo, as every man may ſee, pertaine to the death of Chriſt, which fulfilled the difference of all ſacrifices: which thing, if it had beene done by a ſacrifice in the Supper, the ſacrifice of his death had beene needleſſe. Heſychius calleth the Lords Supper a ſacrifice, by alluſion vnto the old ſacrifices, and as it is a memory of the onely true ſacrifice of Chriſts death, ſaying: Aaron and his ſonnes, doe rightly eat it: for except Chriſt entreated by the mouth of the Prieſts, doe come himſelfe, and ſanctifie the Supper, and dedicate thoſe things which are done, they are by no meanes made the Lords ſacrifice. The ſame myſterie he ſaith a little before, to be both bread and fleſh. And Lib. 1. he ſaith, that the Croſſe did make the fleſh of Chriſt, which was not apt to be eaten before his Paſſion: for who deſired to eat the fleſh of God? apt for meat after his Paſſion. For if he had not beene crucified, we ſhould not eat the ſacrifice of his body. But now we eat this meat, receiving the remembrance of his Paſſion. Theſe places of Heſychius, doe open his meaning ſufficiently, in what ſenſe he calleth the bleſſed Sacrament a ſacrifice. Gregorie lived in a corrupt time, more then ſix hundred yeeres after Chriſt, yet that he meaneth not a ſacrifice properly, but figuratively, it appeareth in the latter place by you quoted moſt plainly. But it is neceſſary, when we doe theſe things, that we ſlay our ſelues in contrition of heart vnto God: for we which doe celebrate the myſteries of our Lords Paſſion, ought to follow that we doe. Therefore it ſhall then be truly a ſacrifice to God for vs, when we haue made our ſelues a ſacrifice. See you not that it is a ſpirituall ſacrifice, as the ſacrifice of our ſelues?

Cyrillus, though not ſo ancient as the Biſhop of Hieruſalem, whoſe title the booke of Myſtagogie doth carry, yet doth expreſly call it a ſpirituall ſacrifice. Dionyſius calleth it often ἱερουργίαν, a ſacrifice or holy worke: yet by many words declareth, that he meaneth a ſacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiving for the death of Chriſt, whereof the Sacrament is a memoriall. How ſhould the divine imitation (ſaith he) be otherwiſe performed in vs? if the remembrance of the moſt holy workes of God, were not alwayes renewed with praiſes and ſacrifices of the Prieſts. For this we doe, (as the Scripture ſaith) in the remembrance of him. In Ignatius is nothing but the name of ſacrifice, which ſheweth not what kinde of ſacrifice, and therefore if we ſhould admit that Epiſtle as authenticall, it is nothing to the purpoſe, to or fro. But Iuſtinus doth moſt expreſly ſay, it is a ſacrifice of thankſgiving, and that Chriſtians have none other ſacrifice [illegible], &c. For I my ſelfe doe affirme, that prayers and thankſgiving (made by worthy perſons) are the onely perfect and acceptable ſacrifices to God. For theſe are the onely ſacrifices that Chriſtians haue received to make, to be put in minde by their dry and moiſt nouriſhment, of the Paſſion which God the Sonne of God, is recorded to haue ſuffered for them. Where is now the ſacrifice propitiatory of the body and blood of Chriſt? Likewiſe Irenæus (ſpeaking of the celebration of the Lords Supper) calleth it an oblation which the Church in all the world doth offer to God, even to him which giueth vs nouriſhment, the firſt fruits of his gifts in the new Teſtament, according to the Prophecy of Mal. Which afterward c. 33. he interpreteth to be the prayers of Saints. And c. 34. he ſaith, We offer vnto him not as to one that hath need, but giving thankes for his gift, and ſanctifying the creature. Tertull. in neither of both the places hath any more then the name of ſacrifice, whereby he meaneth the publike prayers and thankſgiving of the Chriſtians. We ſacrifice (ſaith he) for the Emperours health, but to our God and his, and as God hath commanded, with pure prayer, Ad Scapul. Likewiſe the Prophecie of Malachie he interpreteth of ſpirituall ſacrifices. Adverſ. Iudæ. namely, ſetting forth of Gods glory, bleſſing, praiſe, and hymnes, Adv. Marc. l. 3. and ſimple prayer out of a pure conſcience, l. 4. Other ſacrifices then theſe Tertullian never knew. Cyprian in his Epiſtle to Cæcilius, declareth ſufficiently that the ſacrifice whereof he ſpeaketh, is onely a memoriall of thankſgiving for the Paſſion of Chriſt. Becauſe (ſaith he) we make mention of his Paſſion in all ſacrifices (for the ſacrifice which we offer, is the Paſſion of our Lord) we ought to doe nothing but that which he did. And ſo it is called by Rabbanus Maurus, who lived 800. yeeres after Chriſt; and yet ſheweth that there was none other ſacrifice in his time, De inſti. Cler. l. 1. c. 32. The celebration of the Supper therefore is a ſacrifice, as it is the Paſſion of Chriſt, namely, a thankfull memoriall of the ſacrifice of Chriſts Paſſion.

Euſebius is as plaine as is poſſible for the ſacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiving, prayers and memoriall of Chriſts one ſacrifice offered on the Croſſe. Tiνα ϑύειν, &c. A memory of this ſacrifice we haue received to celebrate, at the table by the ſignes of his body, and of his healthfull blood, according to the divine Lawes of the new Teſtament. Againe he concludeth the whole matter of ſacrifice in theſe words, We offer ſacrifice and incenſe, when we celebrate the memorie of that great ſacrifice according to the myſteries delivered concerning it. And offering to God for our ſalvation, thankeſgiving by devout hymnes and prayers: and when we ſacrifice our ſelues vnto him wholly, and to his word, the high Prieſt leaning on him with body and ſoule? What can be plainer againſt your blaſphemous ſacrifice? Nazianzen onely nameth the oblation of vnbloody ſacrifice, by which we are vnited to Chriſt, and made partakers of his Paſſion and Divinity, meaning doubtleſſe the memoriall of that ſacrifice. For the propitiatory ſacrifice of the body of Chriſt, for the redemption of the world, he calleth, The ſacrifice that cannot be ſanctified, or the vnſpeakable ſacrifice, In ſanct. Paſch. Or. 4. And the Sacrament it ſelfe, he calleth The figures of ſalvation, Ad imper. Theſſ. Chryſoſtome (as other ancient Fathers doe) divers times calleth the Sacrament a ſacrifice: but in one place he expoundeth his meaning ſo plainely, as no man but he that is overcome with impudencie, would wrangle any longer about that terme. For reſolving that doubt, how Chriſt is ſaid to be offered daily, whom the Apoſtle to the Hebrewes, teacheth to have offered himſelfe but once, he concludeth in theſe words, This which we doe, is done in remembrance of that which was done. For doe this (ſaith he) in remembrance of me: we offer not another ſacrifice as the high Prieſt, but the ſame alwaies: but rather we worke the remembrance of a ſacrifice, In ep. ad Heb. Hom. 17. Ambroſe [illegible] Therefore having in remembrance his moſt glorious Paſsion and Reſurrection from the dead, and Aſcenſion into heaven, we offer unto thee this undefiled Sacrifice, this reaſonable Sacrifice, this unbloody Sacrifice, this holy bread and cup of eternall life. And in the firſt Chapter of that ſame Booke, he ſaith, This reaſonable Oblation is the figure of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, meaning, a holy ſigne for memory of Chriſt offered on the Croſſe. In the ſecond place which you quote, he ſaith, Before a lambe was offered, now Chriſt is offered, he is offered as a man as receiving paſſion: and he offereth himſelfe as Prieſt, that he may remit our ſins: but here in an image, there in truth, where [illegible] interceſsion for us, as an advocate with the Father. Marke that Chriſt is not offered here in truth but in an image or ſimilitude: and that he is not offered by the Prieſt, but by himſelfe as he was on the Croſſe, ſeeing the Sacrament is an image and repreſentation of that Sacrifice, not a Sacrifice in truth.

Hierome alſo divers times uſeth the name of Sacrifice, but his meaning was none other, then of the reſt of the Fathers in that time. Chriſt (ſaith he) offred in the figure of his Blood, wine and not water. Againe he calleth the inſtitution of the Sacrament, The myſterie which he expreſſed for a figure of his Paſsion, and of proving the truth of his body. Here is not a ſacrifice propitiatory of the body and blood of Chriſt, but bread and wine offered in a figure of his body and blood, and of his Paſsion. Auguſtine likewiſe calleth it a ſacrifice, but not in that ſenſe you ſay. For thus he writeth of it: Chriſt is our Prieſt for ever according to the order of Melchiſedech, which offered himſelfe a ſacrifice for our ſinnes, and hath commended the ſimilitude of that ſacrifice to be celebrated in the remembrance of his Paſsion, that the ſame thing which Melchiſedech offered to God, now we ſee to be offered in the Church of Chriſt thorowout the whole world, Octog.trium.queſt.q.61. Now chuſe whether you will ſay, that Melchiſedech offered praiſe and thankſgiving, or bread and wine. For the naturall body of Chriſt he did not offer. But the ſame that Melchiſedech offered, the Church doth offer, a ſimilitude of the ſacrifice of Chriſts death. Againe he ſaith, This is the ſacrifice of the Chriſtians, we being many, are one body: which alſo the Church frequenteth in the Sacrament of the Altar knowne unto the faithfull, where it is ſhewed unto her that in the ſame oblation which ſhe offereth, ſhe her ſelfe is offered, De civit. Dei l.20.c.6. Againe, ſpeaking of the ſacrifice of Chriſts death, he ſaith, He himſelfe is the Prieſt that offereth, he himſelfe is the oblation, of which thing he would the daily ſacrifice of Church to bee a Sacrament, ſeeing he is the head of his owne body, and ſhe is the body of the ſame head. As well ſhe by him, as he by her accuſtomed to be offered, cap.20. And moſt plainely againſt Fauſtus the Manichee, l.20.c.21. Sed quid agam &c. But what ſhall I doe, and when ſhall I make manifeſt to ſo great blindneſſe of the heretikes, what force that hath which is ſong in the Pſalmes. The ſacrifice of praiſe ſhall glorifie me, and there is the way where I will ſhew my ſaving health: The fleſh and blood of this ſacrifice before the comming of Chriſt, was promiſed by ſacrifices of ſimilitudes: in the Paſsion of Chriſt, it was given by the truth it ſelfe: after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, it is celebrated by the Sacrament of remembrance. Much more hath Auguſtine in other places, but this is ſufficient to declare, in what ſenſe he calleth the celebration of the Lords Supper a ſacrifice.

Fulgentius alſo, which followed him much in doctrine, thereof thus writeth, Firmiſsime tene, &c. Hold this moſt ſtedfaſtly, and doubt nothing that God the onely begotten Sonne, the Word, being made fleſh, offered himſelfe for us, a ſacrifice and oblation of ſweet ſavour unto God: to whom with the Father and the holy Ghoſt, by the Patriarches, Prophets, and Prieſts, in the time of the old Teſtament beaſts were ſacrificed: and to whom now, that is in the time of the new Teſtament, with the Father and the holy Ghoſt with whom he is one God, the holy Catholike Church ceaſeth not to offer the ſacrifice of bread and wine in faith and love. For in thoſe carnall ſacrifices there was a figuring of the fleſh of Chriſt, which he himſelfe being without ſinne, was to offer for our ſinnes, and of that blood which he was to ſhed for the remiſsion of our ſinnes. But in this ſacrifice there is thankeſgiving and commemoration of the fleſh of Chriſt, which he offered for us, and of the blood which the ſame God ſhed for us. Marke that Chriſt is not offered to God his Father, but the ſacrifice of bread and wine to Chriſt, with the Father and the holy Ghoſt; for thankeſgiving and remembrance of the death of Chriſt.

Your next quotation is, of all the Greekes upon the ninth to the Hebrewes. For Chryſoſtomes judgement you have it before, that the oblation of the Church, is rather a remembrance of a ſacrifice, then a ſacrifice properly.

Theophylact following him, in Heb.10. ſaith, Here ariſeth a queſtion, Whether we alſo doe offer unbloody ſacrifices? I anſwere, we doe: but we keepe a remembrance of the Lords death, and it is one, not many ſacrifices, ſeeing he was offered but once. For we offer the ſame Chriſt alwayes, nay rather we keepe a memory of that oblation, wherein he offered himſelfe, as though it were done now. Theſe words are manifeſt, that it is called a ſacrifice figuratively, and unproperly, which is rather a memoriall of the ſacrifice offered by Chriſt himſelfe.

Oecumenius with all the Greekes, out of whom he gathered his Commentarie, hath in a manner the very ſame words: And ſaith further, that Gregorie in his Apologetico ſaith, That the myſteries which now are done and practiſed, are exemplers of greater myſteries: meaning redemption purchaſed by the death and paſſion of Chriſt.

Primaſius alſo agreeing with Chryſoſtome, and the other Greeke interpreters, anſwereth to the ſame objection, Whether our Prieſts do not daily offer ſacrifices? Truly (ſaith he) they offer, but in the remembrance of his death: and becauſe we ſinne daily, and have need daily to be cleanſed, becauſe he can die no more, he hath given us this Sacrament of his body and blood, that as his Paſsion was the redemption and abſolution of the world: ſo this oblation might be redemption and abſolution to all that offer in true faith, and have good intention. Againe he ſaith, Iſtud, &c. This is not repeated for the infirmity thereof, becauſe it could not give perfect health, but in remembrance of the Paſsion of Chriſt, as he himſelfe ſaid, Doe this in remembrance of me. His meaning therefore is, that our faith being confirmed by this Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt, applieth the benefit of Chriſts Paſſion to the forgiveneſſe of our daily offences, and therfore is not properly a ſacrifice, nor a repetition of the ſacrifice of Chriſt, but a celebration of the remembrance of Chriſts death, according to Chriſts owne inſtitution. In which there is no one word that ſoundeth toward the ſetting up of a ſacrifice: though the celebration of the Supper were commonly called ſo.

The Councell of Nice 1. nameth oblation and offering in divers Canons, but in none other ſenſe, then the Fathers before cited.

The Councell of Epheſus in the Epiſtle to Neſtorius uſe more words, and therefore doe more plainly expreſſe their meaning: Annunciantes enim, &c. For ſhewing the death of the onely begotten Sonne of God, that is of Ieſus Chriſt according to the fleſh, and likewiſe confeſsing his Reſurrection, and Aſcenſion into heaven, we celebrate in the Churches, the unbloody ſervice of that ſacrifice, ſo alſo we come to the myſticall bleſſings, and are ſanctified, being made partakers of the holy body and precious blood of Chriſt the Redeemer of us all, &c. It were hard to gather a ſacrifice propitiatory of theſe words, which ſhew how the ſervice of the ſacrifice is celebrated, namely, by preaching of the Lords Death, Reſurrection, and Aſcenſion, and participation of the holy Sacrament of the very body and blood of the Sonne of God.

The

The ſixt Councell of Conſtantinople, cap.32. nameth the unbloody Sacrifice, in the celebration of the Communion [illegible] called; whereby was meant, that it was not properly a ſacrifice, but a ſacrifice [illegible] without ſhedding of blood, [illegible] 1. And alſo it findeth fault [illegible] authority in [illegible] of S. [illegible] offered wine onely in the holy Table, and did not mingle water with it. By the oblation of wine, we may ſee they were farre from a propitiatory ſacrifice of the body and blood of Chriſt.

The ſecond Councell of Nice, though it were a collection of an idolatrous and unlearned company of Greekiſh Prelates, gathered to ſerve the idolatrous humour of Irene the wicked Empreſſe, yet approving that counterfeit Epiſtle of Athanaſius, wherein mention is made of blood that flowed out of an image of Chriſt, that was crucified at Berytus: They allow alſo theſe words of it; This is that blood of our Lord, which is ſaid to be found among many men, neither muſt true Catholikes thinke otherwiſe, then that which is written of us, as though any part of the fleſh and blood of Chriſt, might be found in the world, but that which is daily made ſpiritually in the altar by the hands of the Prieſt. So that although againſt the Councell of Epheſus, they ſpeake groſſly of the preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, yet they meane not carnally, as the words doe ſound, but as appeareth by theſe words of the Epiſtle, they meane that the fleſh and blood of Chriſt is preſent ſpiritually.

As for the Councels of Laterane, Conſtance, Florens, and Trent, being late chapters of hereticall and blaſphemous Papiſts, they are not to be alledged in any controverſie betweene us, ſeeing they were gathered by heretikes, eſpecially and purpoſely againſt the faith of the Catholike Church.

RHEM. 6 19 Doe this.] In theſe words the holy Sacrament of Order is inſtituted, becauſe power and commiſsion to doe the principall act and worke of Prieſthood, is given to the Apoſtles: that is, to doe that which Chriſt then did concerning his body: which was, to make and offer his body as a ſacrifice for us and for all that have need of ſacrifice, and to give it to be eaten as Chriſts body ſacrificed, to all faithfull. For as the Paſchal lambe was firſt ſacrificed, and then eaten: ſo was his body: and thus to doe he here giveth commiſsion and authority to the Apoſtles, and to all Prieſts which be their ſucceſſours in this matter, Dionyſ.cæl.Hierar.c.3. Iren.l.4.c.32. Cypr.ep.ad Cæcil. Chryſ.hom.17.in ep.ad Hebr. Ambroſ.in Pſ.38.& in c.10.ad Hebr.

The Apoſtles were made Prieſts, and the Sacrament of holy Order inſtituted.

FVLK. 6 In theſe words authority and commandement is given to the Church, to celebrate the myſterie of the Lords Supper: but the ſpeciall calling, ordaining, and appointing of the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors, to be miniſters of the Church, was after his reſurrection: as appeareth Mat 28. Mar.16. Luke 24. But moſt expreſly Joh.20. But to make his body, or to offer it in ſacrifice, there is no authority given by theſe words, for Chriſt inſtituted a Sacrament, not a ſacrifice, of his body and blood. For the faithfull being made perfect by the onely oblation of Chriſt offered by himſelfe on the Croſſe, need none other ſacrifice, but a memoriall and Sacrament thereof, to confirme their faith in the remiſſion of ſinnes, purchaſed by his ſacrifice. And although the Paſchal lambe was ſlaine before it was eaten, yet Chriſt did inſtitute the Sacrament of his body and blood, before he was ſlaine, nevertheleſſe to be continued as a perpetuall memoriall of his death. As the Sacrament of the Paſchal lambe was inſtituted before the deliverance of the people out of Egypt, yet to be a perpetuall remembrance of that deliverance, which figured the ſpirituall deliverance of all the Church, from the tyranny of Satan and the power of hell. Now whereas you quote divers ancient Fathers, to prove that Chriſt by theſe words, gave commiſsion and authority to the Apoſtles and to all Prieſts that be their ſucceſſours, to ſacrifice his body. Concerning the firſt, Dionyſ.cæl.Hierar.c.3. hath no word of any ſuch matter: and to goe further with you, not in all his workes. Irenæus ſaith, That Chriſt giving counſell to his Diſciples, to offer unto God the firſt fruits of his creatures, not as though he had need, but that they themſelves ſhould be neither unfruitfull nor unthankefull: he tooke that bread which is of the creature, and giving thankes, ſaid; This is my body. And the cup likewiſe, which is of that creature that is with us, he confeſſed to be his blood, and taught the new oblation of the new Teſtament, which the Church receiving from the Apoſtles, offreth to God in all the world, to him which giveth nouriſhment unto us, the firſt fruits of his gifts in the new Teſtament, whereof in the 12. Prophets, Malachie did foreſhew, &c. This Prophecie of the ſacrifice, afterward he doth expound of prayers, thankſgiving, praiſes, and workes of charity, c.33. & 34. His words declare, that in his time, bread and wine was offered to God, that is, dedicated to the holy uſe of the Sacrament, whereby thankſgiving, prayers, and praiſes, were offered to God, and charity among Chriſtians confirmed.

Sacrifice of the Maſſe, and Papiſts ſacrificing Prieſthood.

Cyprian in that Epiſtle to Cæcilius, contendeth earneſtly for wine to be offered in the Cup, as Chriſt did inſtitute the Sacrament in wine and not in water. But by the oblation and ſacrifice, he meaneth none otherwiſe then Irenæus doth, and as we have ſhewed in the Section next before: not a ſacrifice of his naturall bodie and blood. I would have thee know (ſaith he) that we are admoniſhed that in offering the Cup, the Lords tradition be obſerved, and that nothing elſe be done, but that our Lord did firſt for us. That the Cup which is offered in remembrance of him, be offered mixt with wine. For when Chriſt ſaith, I am the true vine, the blood of Chriſt verily is not water but wine. Neither can the blood of him by whom we are redeemed and quickened, ſeeme to be in the Cup, when to the Cup is wanting wine, by which the blood of Chriſt is ſhewed, which is ſet forth by the Sacrament and teſtimony of all the Scriptures. The Cup, the wine, the bread, is offered in remembrance of Chriſt, not his body and blood properly ſacrificed or offered. Chryſoſtome Hom.17. in Ep. ad Heb. as we have declared before, ſaith, it is rather a memory of a ſacrifice, then a ſacrifice indeed, which the Church offereth, An exemplar of that which was offered once, and offered into the holy of holies. Ambr.in Pſal.38. ſaith, Let us Prieſts follow him as we may, and offer a ſacrifice for the people, &c. But in cap.10. ad Heb. he hath the very words that Chryſoſtome writeth upon the ſame text: anſwering the objection how the Church offereth a ſacrifice, when the ſacrifice of Chriſt once offered, was ſufficient. Hoc autem quod nos facimus, &c. This that we doe, is done in remembrance of that which hath beene done. For doe you this (ſaith he) in the remembrance of me, we offer not another ſacrifice as the high Prieſt, but the ſame alwayes, but rather we worke the remembrance of a ſacrifice. But of this matter, more in the next Section.

RHEM. 7 19 For a commemoration.] This Sacrifice and Sacrament is to be done perpetually in the Church for the commemoration of Chriſt, ſpecially of his Paſsion: that is to ſay, that it may be a lively repreſentation, exemplar, and forme of his ſacrifice upon the Croſſe. Of which one oblation on the Croſſe, not onely all other ſacrifices of the Law were figures, but this alſo: though this in a more nigh, high, myſticall, and marvellous ſort then any other; for in them Chriſts death was ſignified as by reſemblance and ſimilitudes of externall creatures and bodies of bruit beaſts; but in this of the new Teſtament, his body viſibly ſacrificed on the Croſſe, in and by the ſelfe ſame body ſacrificed and immolated in Sacrament, and under the ſhapes of bread and wine, is moſt neerely and perfectly reſembled: and therefore this is moſt properly commemoratiue, as moſt neerely expreſſing the very condition, nature, efficacie, ſort, and ſubſtance of that on the Croſſe. For which the holy Fathers call it the very ſelfe ſame ſacrifice (though in other manner) which was done on the Croſſe, as it is the ſelfe ſame thing, that is offered in the Sacrament, and on the Croſſe. Whereby you may ſee the perverſity of the Proteſtants, or their ignorance, that thinke it therefore not to be Chriſts body, becauſe it is a memory of his body, or a figure of his body upon the Croſſe: nor to be a true ſacrifice, becauſe it is a commemoratiue ſacrifice, sacrifice; for as the thing that more lively, neerely, and truly resembleth or representeth, is a better figure then that which resembleth it afarre off: so this his body in the Sacrament, is more perfectly a figure of Christs body and sacrifice then any other. Christ himselfe the Sonne of God is a figure and character of his Fathers person, being yet of the selfe same substance; and Christs body transfigured on the holy Mount, was a figure and resemblance of his person glorified in heaven; even so is his body in the Sacrament to a faithfull man that knoweth by his beleefe grounded on Christs owne word, that in the one forme is his body, in the other his blood the most perfect representation of his death that can be. As for the sacrifice it is no lesse a true sacrifice, because it is commemorative of Christs Passion; then those of the old Testament were the lesse true, because they were prefigurative; for that is the condition annexed to all sacrifice of every Law to represent Christs Passion.

A commemoratiue ſacrifice is a true ſacrifice, no leſſe then the prefiguratiue ſacrifices were true ſacrifices.

Amb. in 10. Heb. Chryſ. hom. 17. in ep. ad Hebr.

To be a figure of a thing, and yet the thing it selfe, repugneth not.

FVLK. 7 The text and the ancient Doctors are so plaine in this case, that you are constrained to confesse, that this Sacrament is a lively representation, exemplar and forme, and also a figure of Christs sacrifice upon the Crosse. But it is so a figure of that sacrifice (you say) that it is the selfe same body sacrificed and immolated in the Sacrament, under the shapes of bread and wine. This saith none of the ancient Fathers, which say, it is an exemplar, a commemoration, a figure of that sacrifice, no not Chrysostome and Ambrose, whom you quote, but as I have set downe their words before. It is so the same sacrifice, that it is rather a remembrance of a sacrifice then a sacrifice indeed, or properly. But here you accuse our perversity or ignorance, that thinke it therefore not to be Christs body, because it is a memory or figure of his body. For to be a figure of a thing, and yet the thing it selfe, you say in the margent, repugneth not. Your ignorance (although it be great) I will not here accuse, but your impudence, that shame not to say, that to be a Relative, and the Correlative of the same at the same time, and in the same respect, repugneth not. I thinke Sorbone it selfe, would hisse out this monstrous absurdity: For you may as well say, that Isaac to be Iacobs father, and Iacobs sonne also, repugneth not.

Reall presence.

But you have examples to demonstrate the matter, that a thing may be a figure of it selfe. First you say, Christ the Sonne of God, is a figure and character of his Fathers person, being yet of the selfe same substance. If you had been well jerked when you were lads for giving the Correlative to his Relative, you would have said thus: The Sonne of God is a figure or character of his Fathers person, yet he is the selfe same person that his Father is. And if you will abide by this conclusion, your example may serve to prove: That this is a figure of Christs body and sacrifice, yet is it also the selfe same body and sacrifice. But if you dare not affirme so much, lest you should fall into flat Sabellianisme, what perversity shall I say, or ignorance, or impudence is it, to frame your example, so, as it is nothing like to the matter which it is brought to demonstrate?

Your second example is, Christs body transfigured in the holy Mount, was a figure and resemblance of his person glorified in heaven: Why say you not of his body glorified in heaven: that the relation may be right and proper? but because you seeke to runne away under a mist of doubtfull words. But who will grant unto you, that Christs body there transfigured, was a figure of his body glorified, when not his body, but the glorious shape which then he tooke upon him, was a figure or a part of his divine and heavenly glory, wherewith he is now invested in heaven. For his face now shineth not as the Sunne, but ten thousand times more bright then the Sunne: his body is not now covered with garments white as light, but shineth most gloriously as the body of the Sonne of God.

A third example you have, That the sacrifice is no lesse a true sacrifice, because it is commemorative of Christs Passion, then those of the old Testament were lesse true, because they were prefigurative of the same. Indeed it wanteth nothing but Christs institution, but that it might be a true sacrifice. For if the Sacrament had beene ordained by Christ to be a sacrifice commemorative, as they were to be sacrifices prefigurative, it had beene as true a sacrifice as they: and yet being commemorative, as it is, though not a sacrifice, it could not have beene the same thing whereof it is commemorative, no more then those sacrifices were the same sacrifice, or thing, whereof they were prefigurative.

RHEM. 8 20 The new Testament in my blood.] Moses tooke the blood of the first sacrifice that was made after the giving of the Law, Exod. 24. and with blood confirmed the covenant and compact betwixt God and his people, and so dedicated the old Testament, which without blood (saith S. Paul) was not dedicated. Moses put that blood also into a standing piece, and sprinkled all the people, &c. with the same, and said these formall words, This is the blood of the Covenant, &c. or (as it is read in S. Paul) of the Testament which God hath delivered unto you. Unto all which, Christ in this action about the second part of this his sacrifice, in every of the Evangelists most clearely alludeth, expressing that the new Testament is begun and dedicated in his blood in the Chalice, no lesse then the Old was dedicated, begun, and ratified in that blood of Calves contained in the goblet of Moses; with which his owne blood he sprinkled inwardly the Apostles as the first fruits of the new Testament, imitating the words of Moses, and saying, This is the Chalice the new Testament, &c. which the other Evangelists spake more plainely, This is my blood of the new Testament. By all which it is most certaine, that Christs blood in the Chalice, is the blood of Sacrifice, and that in this sacrifice of the Altar consisteth the externall religion and proper service of the new Testament, no lesse then the soveraigne worship of God in the old Law did consist in the sacrifices of the same. For though Christs sacrifice on the Crosse, and his blood shed for us there, be the generall price, redemption, and satisfaction for us all, and is the last and perfectest sealing or confirmation of the new Law and Testament: yet the service and sacrifice which the people of the new Testament might resort unto, could not be that violent action of the Crosse, but this on the Altar, which by Christs owne appointment is and shall be the eternall office of the new Testament, and the continuall application of all the benefits of his Passion unto us.

Heb. 9. Both Testaments dedicated in blood. Verse 20.

The externall religion of the new Testament principally in the sacrifice of the Altar.

FVLK. 8 The Apostle to the Hebrewes, chap. 9. doth most plainely declare, the figure of the sprinkling of blood by Moses, Exodus 24. to be accomplished in the sacrifice of Christs death, and blood-shedding once offered upon the Crosse: whereof the Sacrament is a memoriall, and no sacrifice. Therefore it is a most wilfull perverting of the sense of the holy Ghost, to draw those words of Christ, (This Cup is the new Testament in my blood) to a second sacrifice. And whereas you say, he alludeth unto the words of Moses, Exodus 24. it is more like, that he alludeth to the words of Moses used about the institution of Circumcision and the Paschal lambe, Genesis 17. Exodus 12. which were Sacraments as this is. The difference you make of the standing piece or goblet of Moses (as you call it) and the Chalice of Christ, is ridiculous. By which you would make fooles beleeve, that Christ used not a common cup or pot, usuall to be drunke in at meat, but a consecrated Chalice, such as you occupie at Masse. Whereas the Greeke word used by all the three Evangelists, and S. Paul, signifieth none other but an usuall drinking cup or pot, whether you will call it a standing piece, bowle, goblet, or Chalice. Wherefore your conclusions are such, as you are accustomed to make, either upon none, or upon false premisses, or upon true premisses most absurdly and brutishly inferred, as in this place. The Cup is the new Testament in Christs blood: Ergo, Christs blood in the Chalice, is the blood of Sacrifice. Whereas by true Logicke, it followeth after this manner, that all the Papists in the world are not able to avoid.

Chalice or cup.

The

The cup is the New Testament in Christs blood. The [illegible] Christ, [illegible] Testament in Christs blood. [illegible] blood of Christ, [illegible] of Christ [illegible] consist, as in [illegible] Baptisme. And by these Sacraments, in that they [illegible] the benefits of Christs [illegible] unto us, through the working of the holy Ghost, but not by sacrificing againe the body and blood of Christ. Yet doth not the soveraigne worship of God in the New Testament, consist principally in any externall religion, service, or sacrifice, offered by any mortall creature, but as our Saviour Christ sayth expresly, in spirit and truth. Iohn 4.23.

RHEM. 9. 20 Which shalbe shed.] It is much to be observed that the relative, Which, in these words is not governed or ruled (as some would perhaps thinke) of the nowne blood, but of the word chalice; which is most plaine by the Greeke. Which taketh away all cavillations and shifts from the Protestants, both against the reall presence and the true Sacrificing. For it sheweth evidently, that the blood as the contents of the chalice, or as in the chalice, is shed for us (for so the Greeke readeth in the present tense) and not onely as upon the crosse. And therefore as it followeth thereof invincibly, that it is no bare figure but his blood indeed, so it enforceth necessarily, that it is a Sacrifice, and propitiatory, because the chalice (that is the Blood contained in the same) is shed for our sinnes. For all that know the nature of the Scriptures speeches, know also that this, Blood to be shed for sinne, *is to be sacrificed for propitiation or for pardon of sinnes. And this text proveth all this so plainely, that  Beza turneth himselfe roundly upon the holy Evangelist, charging him with Solœcisme or false Greeke, or else that the words (which yet he confesseth to be in all copies Greeke and Latine) are thrust into the text out of some other place: which he rather standeth upon then that S. Luke should speake incongruously in so plaine a matter. And therefore he saith plainely that it cannot be truely said neither of the chalice it selfe nor of the contents thereof: which is indeed to give the lie to the blessed Evangelist, or to deny this to be Scripture. So cleare is the Scripture for us, so miserable slights and shifts in falshood put unto, God be thanked.

Calix qui the chalice which τὸ ποτήριον τὸ ἐκχυνόμενον.

The chalice shed for us, must signifie the [illegible] therein, not [illegible] and the same sacrificed.

* Annot. No. Test. 1556.

Beza condemneth the Gospel it selfe of falsehood and impossibility.

FVLK. 9 The relative (which) in the Greeke, as well as in the Latine, is governed of the nowne blood, and not of the word chalice. For the relative must, according to true Grammer, be referred to that, which went next before it in construction and composition, which is the name blood, and not the word chalice. The Greeke (as it is now read indeed) following the Hebrew phrase, which is usuall in the holy Scripture of the New Testament, goeth somewhat from the common phrase of the Greeke tongue, but of S. Basil was read, without all controversie, according to the common Greeke construction. And therefore all your trifling of the reall presence, and true sacrificing, is nothing but vaine and unlearned insultation. For no ancient writer, for a thousand yeares after Christ, or more, ever observed any such matter, out of this text. And therefore, whereas you say, that Beza turneth himselfe roundly upon the holy Evangelist, charging him with Solœcisme or false Greeke: without all conscience and honesty you slander him most impudently. For he nameth not Solœcisme, or false Greeke, but Solœcophanes, which is an appearance of incongruity, where there is none indeed. Except you would be taken for such ignorant asses, that you know not the difference, of Solœcismus and Solœcophanes, your malicious slander can have none excuse. Indeed, he sayth, that these words might be added to the text, out of the other Evangelists, as in divers other places both he and other have observed, by conference of copies, and testimony of the ancient Fathers: Yet he standeth not upon this conjecture, but that either the ancient reading was, as S. Basil witnesseth, or else, that it is an hebraisme in the same sense, whereof I have shewed like examples out of the Scripture in my defence against Gregory Martine, cap. 1. Sect. 37. 38, 39. And where he sayth, it cannot be truely said, neither of the Chalice it selfe, nor of the content thereof, that it was shed for us: you affirme, it is to give the lie to the blessed Evangelist, or to deny this to be Scripture. But I pray you, consider, upon what ground you charge him with such open blasphemy. Doe you hold indeede, that the Chalice (in proper speech) was, or could be shedde for us? Nay, the contents you will say. Well, there is one figure granted. And for the contents, shall we not beleeve the word of Christ, which saith this cuppe is the New Testament? Yes doubtlesse. Why then it followeth, that the New Testament is the contents of the cup. Was the New Testament shedde for us, or could it be shedde for us? No verely. Therefore Beza without giving the lie to the holy Evangelist, might say, that it cannot be sayd in proper maner of speaking either of the cup, or of the contents thereof, that it was shed for us. And yet acknowledge, those words to be Scripture, being referred to the nowne, blood, which was indeed shed for us on the crosse: So miserable be your slights, and shifts of falsehood, forged upon impudent lies, and malicious slanders, grosse ignorance, and unlearned collections, God be praised, who daily maketh your folly and madnesse, more and more manifest to all men.

RHEM. 10. 24 Contention.] The Apostles perceiving Christs departure from them and his kingdome to be neere, as infirme men and not yet endewed with the spirit of God, began to have emulation and cogitations of Superiority one over another: which our Master represseth in them by exhortation to humility and by his owne example, that being their Lord, yet so lately served them: not forbidding Majority or Superiority in them, but pride, tyrannie, and contempt of their inferiours.

Ambition.

FVLK. 10. The Apostles were not voyde of the Spirit of God, for no man can acknowledge Iesus to be the Lord, but in the Spirit of God: although they were not so plentifully endued with the gifts of the holy Ghost as afterward.

RHEM. 11. 30 Simon, Simon.] Lastly to put them out of doubt, he calleth Peter twise by name, and telling him the Divels desire to sift and try them all to the uttermost (as he did that night) saith that he hath specially prayed for him, that his faith should never faile, and that he being once converted, should after that for ever confirme, establish, and uphold the rest in their faith. Which is to say, that Peter is that man whom he would make Superiour over them and the whole Church. Whereby we may learne that it was thought fit in the providence of God, that he which should be the head of the Church should have a speciall priviledge by Christs prayer and promise, never to faile in faith, and that none other either Apostle, Bishop, or Priest may challenge any such singular or speciall prerogative either of his office or person, otherwise then joyning in faith with Peter and by holding of him. The danger (saith S. Leo) was common to all the Apostles, but our Lord tooke speciall care of Peter, that the state of all the rest might be more sure, if the head were invincible: God so dispensing the aide of his grace, that the assurance and strength which Christ gave to Peter, might redound by Peter to the rest of the Apostles. S. Augustine also: Christ praying for Peter, prayed for the rest, because in the Pastor and prelate the people is corrected or commended. And S. [illegible] that Peter after his conversion was made Pastor of the Church, because it was said to him, Thou being converted confirme thy brethren. Neither was this the priviledge of S. Peters person, but of his office, that he should not faile in faith, but ever confirme all other in their faith. For the Church, for whose sake that priviledge was thought necessary in Peter the head thereof, was to be preserved no lesse afterward, then in the Apostles time. Whereupon all the Fathers apply this priviledge of not failing and of confirming other in faith, to the Romane Church and Peters successors in the same. To which (sayth S. Cyprian) infidelity or false faith cannot come. And S. Bernard sayth writing to Innocentius pope against Abailardus the Heretike, we must referre to your Apostleship all the scandals and perils which may fall, in matter of faith specially.

Peters faith shall never faile.

Serm. 3. assump. ad Pontif.

Lib. 4. Regist.

The Romane faith of Peters successors cannot faile.

[illegible] For there the defects of faith muſt be holpen, where faith cannot faile. For to what other [illegible] ſaid I have prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith doe not faile? So ſay the Fathers, not meaning that none of Peters [illegible] ſhall ever erre in perſon, underſtanding, private doctrine or writings, but that they cannot nor ſhall not ever judicially conclude or give definitive ſentence for falſhood or hereſie againſt the Catholike faith, in their Conſiſtories, Courts, Councels, Decrees, deliberations or conſultations kept for deciſion and determination of ſuch controverſies, doubts, or queſtions of faith as ſhall be propoſed unto them: becauſe Chriſts prayer and promiſe protecteth them therein for confirmation of their brethren. And no marvell that our Maſter would have his vicars Conſiſtory and Seat infallible, ſeeing even in the old Law the high Prieſthood and Chayre of Moſes wanted not great priviledge in this caſe, though nothing like the Churches and Peters prerogative. But in both, any man of ſenſe may ſee the difference betweene the perſon, and the office, as well in doctrine as life. Liberius in perſecution might yeeld, Marcellinus for feare might commit Idolatry, Honorius might fall to hereſie, and more then all this, ſome Iudas might creepe into the Office: and yet all this without prejudice of the Office and Seate, in which (ſayth S. Auguſtine) our Lord hath ſet the doctrine of truth. Caiphas by priviledge of his Office propheſied right of Chriſt, but according to his owne knowledge and faith, knew not Chriſt. The Evangeliſts and other penners of holy writ, for the execution of that function had the aſſiſtance of God, and ſo farre could not poſſibly erre: but that Luke, Marke, Salomon or the reſt might not erre in other their private writings, that we ſay not. It was not the perſonall wiſedome, vertue, learning, or faith of Chriſts vicars, that made S. Bernard ſeeke to Innocentius the third: S. Auguſtine and the Biſhops of Afrike to Innocentius the firſt, and to Celeſtinus. ep. 90. 92. 95. S. Chryſoſtome to the ſaid Innocentius: S. Baſil to the Pope in his time ep. 52. S. Hierom to Damaſus ep. 57. 58. tom. 2. but it was the prerogative of their Office and higher degree of Function, and Chriſts ordinance, that would have all Apoſtles and Paſtors in the world, for their confirmation in faith and Eccleſiaſticall regiment, depend on Peter. The lacke of knowledge and humble acceptation of which Gods providence, that is, that one is not honoured and obeyed of all the brotherhood, is the cauſe of all Schiſmes and Hereſies, ſayth S. Cyprian. A poynt of ſuch importance, that all the Twelve being in Apoſtleſhip like, Chriſt would yet for the better keeping of unity and truth, have one to be head of them all, that a head being once appointed, occaſion of Schiſme might be taken away, ſayth S. Hierom lib. 1. adu. Iovinian. c. 14.

FVLK. 11. Our Saviour Chriſt, by theſe words giveth no ſuperiority to Peter, but foreſheweth his infirmity, greater then of the reſt, in reſpect whereof, he had neede of a ſpeciall prayer to uphold him, that his faith ſhould not faile in that great temptation: Admoniſhing him, what his duty was, after he had experience of his owne frailty, and of the comfort of Gods grace, to ſtrengthen his brethren, by aſſurance of Gods mercy, whereof he had ſo great triall in himſelfe. And as concerning the Popes ſupremacy, or prerogative, not to erre, (I ſay, as in the like collections of the Papiſts) All the Logicians that are, or ever were, cannot rightly conclude in due forme of Syllogiſme, either the one or the other, out of the words of this text. Which is ſufficient to confute all the large diſcourſe that followeth. Nevertheleſſe, I will examine all the arguments, as they lie in order. Firſt, he calleth Peter by name twiſe, not to put them out of doubt, that he is their ſuperiour, but to admoniſh him ſeriouſly, in what danger he ſpecially, and the reſt generally, were through the malice of Sathan, and their owne weakeneſſe, which was not yet knowne unto them. And leſt the eleven Apoſtles (ſaith Beda) ſhould glory, or attribute unto their owne ſtrength, that they almoſt alone, among ſo many thouſand Iewes ſhould be ſaid to have continued with the Lord in temptations, he ſheweth, that they alſo, if they had not beene protected by the aide of the Lord, aſſiſting them, might have beene broken in pieces with the reſt, through the ſame ſtorme or tempeſt. Neither doth any of the ancient Fathers for 500. yeeres after Chriſt, gather out of this place Peters ſuperiority or prerogative of not erring: and although they had done ſo, yet their collection ſhould have had no ground out of the words of the text. Proſper cont. Coll. cap. 35: Hujus tolerantiæ fortitudo unde deſcenderet beatus Petrus, & in illo omnis Eccleſia Veritatis ipſius voce diſcebat, dicentis: Ecce Satanas poſtulavit ut cribraret vos: Ego autem rogavi pro te Petre, ne deficiat fides tua. Quiſquis igitur in tribulatione non deficit, ab illo ſe non dubitet adjuvari, ad quem quotidie corda univerſorum fidelium clamant: Ne inferas nos in tentationem, &c. De vocatione gentium lib. 2. cap. 24. In evangelio ſecundum Lucam, Deum dare ut in fide perſeveretur ita promittitur: Dixit autem Ieſus Petro, Simon, &c. Fratres tuos: & rogate ne intretis in tentationem. Voluiſſet quidem Satanas, ſi tamen licuiſſet, tamdiu Petrum colaphizando cribrare ſicut triticum, donec omnem ab eo fidei medullam excuſſiſſet: Sed ego, inquit, Petre rogavi pro te, ut non deficiat fides tua. Vnde reſpexit eum Chriſtus, & egreſſus foras flevit amarè. Drogo de ſacram. Dominicæ paſſion. Bernardi contemporaneus. S. Baſil citeth this text to proove that we ought to pray for them that are ſought in tentations. In aſcet. Secondly, you ſay he prayed ſpecially for Peter, to this end that his faith ſhould never faile, and that he being once converted, ſhould after that for ever, confirme, eſtabliſh, or uphold the reſt in their faith. But the truth is, he prayed ſpecially for Peter, becauſe Peter ſpecially, and through his greater preſumption, was in danger of greater temptation: that in ſo grievous a fall, he ſhould not through weakeneſſe of faith, fall away, for that ſignifieth the word ἐκλείπειν: but be converted, and become an example of Gods mercy, to all penitent ſinners. As I (ſayth Bede ſpeaking in the perſon of Chriſt) have by prayers protected thy faith, leſt by temptation of Sathan it ſhould have failed: So thou alſo remember, to lift up and comfort thy weake brethren, by example of thy repentance, leſt peradventure they ſhould deſpaire of pardon. In theſe words therefore, is taught the duety of Peter, and of every Chriſtian man, that hath taſted of Gods protection in temptation: to uſe his example and experience, to the comfort of others, no prerogative granted, that Peter from henceforth ſhall never erre, nor any that ſucceedeth in his chayre at Rome, whereof heere is no mention in the world. Neither was Peter ever after this, appoynted to confirme, eſtabliſh, or uphold the reſt of the Apoſtles in their faith otherwiſe, then a fellow member, of charity to comfort them, in this preſent danger, or in any like. And as for the confirmation, eſtabliſhing, or upholding of the reſt of the Apoſtles in the truth of the Goſpel, they received it of the Spirit of Chriſt, equally with Peter, and not of the prerogative of Peters chayre. Yea when Peter walked not aright according to the truth of the Goſpel, in a contention being ſtirred up, by Cerinthus the heretike (as Epiphanius teſtifieth) at Antioche in his owne See, he was reprehended openly by Paul, and ſo his faith, which began to waver, was confirmed by another Apoſtle, as the faith of the reſt at another time was by him. Therefore Peter, by theſe words, was not made ſuperiour over the reſt of the Apoſtles, and the whole Church: neither had any ſingular priviledge, by Chriſts prayer and promiſe, that his faith ſhould never faile. Chriſt prayeth for all his Apoſtles, that God would ſanctifie them in his truth, Yea for all that ſhould beleeve in him through their preaching, yet hath not every true Chriſtian ſuch a priviledge, but that he may erre from the true faith, though not finally unto condemnation.

Peters prerogative.

The Pope may erre.

Iohn 17.

Further, where you ſay that none other Apoſtle, Biſhop or Prieſt, may challenge any ſuch prerogative, either of his office or perſon, otherwiſe, then joyning in faith with Peter, and by holding of him: In part it is true. For neither Peter, nor any other man hath any ſuch prerogative, as you ſurmiſe. But Paul the Apoſtle, neither joyning with Peter, nor holding of Peter, was bold to reprehend Peter, Barnabas and other, upon aſſurance of the truth of the Goſpel, which he had learned by revelation, according to the Scripture, and to convince him

Rom. 1. Galat. 1. 12.

[illegible] in the generall Councell of Chalcedon, [illegible] Leo? Verily his words doe not a [illegible] you would [illegible] in hand, by your [illegible]. The words of [illegible]; Pro ſide Petri proprie ſupplicatur, tanquam aliorum ſtatus certior ſit futurus, ſi mens Principis victa non fuerit. In Petro ergo omnium fortitudo munitur, & divinæ gratiæ ita ordinatur auxilium, ut firmitas quæ per Chriſtum Petro tribuitur, per Petrum Apoſtolis conferatur. Prayer is made ſpecially for the faith of Peter, as though the ſtate of the other ſhould be more ſure, if the minde of the principall were not to be overcome. In Peter therefore, the ſtrength of all is defended, and the aid of Gods grace is ſo ordered, that the ſtedfaſtneſſe, which by Chriſt is given to Peter, by Peter ſhould be conferred to the Apoſtles. In theſe words Peter is neither called the head, nor ſaid to be invincible. But if we ſhould further aſke of Leo, how this ſtedfaſtneſſe is conferred by Peter to the reſt of the Apoſtles, and to the whole Church, he will not anſwer, by his Succeſſor the Pope: but Confirmans nos cohortationibus ſuis & pro nobis orare non ceſſans, ne ulla tentatione ſuperemur. Confirming us by his exhortations, and not ceaſing to pray for us, that we be not overcome by any temptation. And this he ſaith not onely for himſelfe, as Pope and Peters Succeſſor, but for all the people of God, and ſpecially for the citizens of Rome, where Peter ſate and died, as in the words following it is manifeſt. Therefore Leo out of theſe words of Chriſt, gathered no ſuch ſuperiority or prerogative of the Pope, in not erring, as you would enforce out of him, but without any warrant of his words or meaning.

Next followeth Auguſtine lib. Q. Nov. Teſt. Q. 75. an Author worthy to avouch ſuch a matter. Namely, a counterfeit Auguſtine, for a falſe interpretation, which no man but more then beaſtly impudent, will aſcribe unto S. Auguſtine the Ancient Father, whom neither in words, nor matter, this Writer doth any thing reſemble, but rather writeth many things directly againſt S. Auguſtine. And yet he is falſified both in words and ſenſe: for theſe are his words; Pro Petro rogabat, & pro Iacobo & Ioanne non rogabat, ut cæteros taceam? Manifeſtum eſt in Petro omnes contineri. Quia & in alio loco dicit, Ego pro his rogo quos mihi dediſti Pater, & volo ut ubi ego ſum, & ipſi ſint mecum. He prayed for Peter, and he did not pray for Iames and Iohn, that I ſpeake not of the reſt? It is manifeſt, that in Peter all are contained. Becauſe he ſaith in another place, I pray for them Father, whom thou haſt given unto me, and I will that where I am, they alſo be with me. Theſe words (if the authority of the writer were any thing worth) are againſt the prerogative of Peter, ſhewing that the prayer of Chriſt, extended to all the Apoſtles as well as to Peter. But the circumſtance of the text is plaine, that it was ſpecially for Peter, in reſpect of his greater infirmity and danger.

Thirdly, S. Ambroſe is brought in, writing (but no place noted where) leſt your falſification and falſe collection might more eaſily be eſpied. But by likelihood you meane, Enar. in Pſal. 43. where he hath theſe words, Cogitur autem adverſarius, &c. The adverſary is compelled to tempt the holy ones of the Lord to his owne loſſe. For while he tempteth them, he maketh them better, that he which is tempted may inſtruct others, who ſeemed weake to his owne ſelfe. Finally Peter is ſet over the Church, after he hath beene tempted of the devill. And therefore our Lord ſignifieth beforehand, what thing that is, that afterward he choſe him a Paſtor of the Lords flocke. For to him he ſaid: But thou after thou be converted, confirme thy brethren. Therefore the holy Apoſtle Peter, was converted at his commandement, to become good corne, and was ſifted as wheat, that with the Saints of the Lord, he might be one bread which ſhould be nouriſhment unto us. For while we reade the Acts of Peter, and keepe the precepts of Peter, he is made unto us a nouriſhment unto eternall life and ſalvation. Here is Peter made an example of the profit, that the Saints reape by temptation, but no priviledge of ſupremacie or prerogative, of not erring, aſcribed either to his perſon, or office, or ſucceſſion. But you argue that the Church was to be preſerved, no leſſe afterward, then in the Apoſtles time, therefore the priviledge was granted to the office in ſucceſſion, and not to the perſon of Peter. Thankes be to God, the Churches preſervation is otherwiſe provided for by Chriſt the onely true head thereof, and needeth not the Popes ſupremacie, or infallibility, as is manifeſt by the Scripture, Epheſ. 4. 11, 12, 13, &c. This argument therefore, conſiſteth of two vile ſophiſmes: The one a beggerly petition of the whole controverſie, that Peter had ſuch a priviledge and prerogative, as cannot ever be proved out of the holy Scriptures: the other a falſe aſſignation of that to be cauſe, which is no cauſe at all of the Churches preſervation. Yet you are not aſhamed to ſay, Whereupon all the Fathers apply this priviledge of not failing, and of confirming other in faith, to the Romane Church and Peters Succeſſors in the ſame. And yet you are not able to bring any one of the ancient and authenticall Fathers, that lived within foure or five hundred yeeres after Chriſt, that either acknowledgeth ſuch a priviledge of the Romiſh Church, or of the Biſhops thereof, or that gather any ſuch thing out of this text. Cyprian ſaith: To the Romanes, whoſe faith by commendation of the Apoſtle is praiſed (perfidia) falſhood or falſe dealing can have no acceſſe. He ſpeaketh againſt the impudencie of certaine heretikes, that being driven out of Africa, ſought entertainement at Rome, which the godly Church there would not conſent unto. Cyprian therefore ſpeaketh not of the Romanes abſolutely, but thoſe whoſe faith was praiſed by the Apoſtle, from which faith, if they ſwerved, (as they confeſſe themſelves) it ſhould be to their greater ſhame, Ep. 55. Againe he ſpeaketh not of errour in faith, but of falſe dealing, and neglect of diſcipline. For if Cyprian had beene perſwaded, that the Church and Biſhop of Rome could not erre, he would never have ſo openly diſſented from them as he did in the queſtion of rebaptizing of them, that were baptized by heretickes; in which he with the Councell of Africa, did openly oppoſe himſelfe, againſt Stephanus Biſhop of Rome, and the Church of Rome alſo, as many other Biſhops of the Eaſt Church did, declaring thereby that the Biſhop of Romes authoritie, in thoſe times was not acknowledged, nor his priviledge of not failing in faith, once heard of. And as for this preſent text, of Chriſts prayer for Peter, it is ſo farre off, that Cyprian could gather any prerogative of the Biſhop of Rome out of it, that he doth extend it generally, to all the members of Chriſt: For he prayed ſo earneſtly for us (ſaith he) that we reade in another place: And the Lord ſaid to Peter: behold Satan hath deſired to ſifte you, as wheat: but I have prayed for thee, leſt thy faith ſhould faile. If then he laboureth, and watcheth and prayeth for us, and our offences, how much more ought we to be earneſt in prayer, and to pray, and firſt of all to intreat our Lord himſelfe, then by him to ſatisfie God the Father, Epiſt. 8. Againe he writeth: Our Lord prayed, and hee prayed not for himſelfe, for what ſhould hee intreat for himſelfe being innocent? but for our offences, as hee himſelfe declareth, when hee ſaith to Peter; Behold Satan hath deſired to ſifte you as wheat; but I have prayed for thee, leſt thy faith ſhould faile. This is Cyprians judgement upon this text, which proveth, that hee acknowledged no ſuch priviledge, or prerogative, as is now ſo deeply pretended.

[illegible] who [illegible] Aquileia [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] Church [illegible]. As for the [illegible] neither of both parts, [illegible] Neither had the high Prieſthood, or Moſes Chaire any ſuch priviledge [illegible] that the high Prieſt could not erre: [illegible] the contrary is manifeſt in the Scripture. Vrias the high Prieſt did ſet vp an idolatrous altar in the Lords Temple, and did offer ſacrifice vpon it, 2. King. 16. Eliaſib, through ignorance of Gods Law, [illegible] with Tobia the Ammonite, [illegible] a great chamber in the houſe of the Lord, Nehem. 13. 4. [illegible] was a Sadducee, and [illegible] Chriſt. But admitting your diſtinction, it is to be proued that Biſhops of Rome haue erred [illegible], and definitiuely. The Biſhop of Rome in Tertullians time erred not onely perſonally, but alſo definitiuely, when he acknowledged the prophecies of Montanus, Priſca, and Maximilla, and gaue letters of peace to the hereticall Churches of Aſia and Phrygia, which had beene excommunicated by his Predeceſſour, as witneſſeth Tertullian contr. Praxeam. Liberius erred not perſonally, but publikely, and definitiuely, when he ſubſcribed to the Arriens, as teſtifieth Athanaſius, Apolog. 2. ad ſolitariam vitam agentes, Hieronym. in Catalogo, Damaſus in Pontificali. Marianus Scotus, Petrus Damianus, epiſt. 15. c. 16. Honorius did not onely fall into hereſie, but alſo in a decretall Epiſtle, did publiſh and confirme the ſame, as was proved in the Councell of Conſtantinople, the ſixth, where he was condemned for an Heretike. Cum his vero ſimul, &c. With theſe alſo (ſaith the Councell) we haue foreſeene to be caſt out of the holy Catholike Church of God, and to be accurſed, Honorius, which had beene Pope of old Rome, becauſe we finde by his writings, which he made to Sergius, that in all things he followed his minde, and confirmed wicked doctrines, Conſ. 6. act. 13. Likewiſe Leo 2. in his Epiſtle to Conſtantinus, approuing the ſixth generall Councell, writeth thus, Likewiſe we accurſe the inuentors of this new error. Theodorus Biſhop of Faran, Cyrus of Alexandria Sergius, Pyrrhus, Paulus, Petrus, Succeſſors of the Church of Conſtantinople rather then Prelates. And alſo Honorius, which did not lighten this Apoſtolike Church, with the doctrine of Apoſtolike tradition, but by profane treaſon, endeuoured to ſubuert the immaculate faith. S. Auguſtine alſo citeth the decretall Epiſtle of Innocentius to the Biſhops of Numidia, wherein he holdeth, that to receiue the Communion, it is neceſſary for infants, Cont. duas Ep. Pel. ad Bonifac. lib. 2. cap. 4. And ſaith of him expreſly. Qui dixit paruulos defecturos, &c. Who defined that little children, cannot haue life in them, except they eat the fleſh of the Sonne of Man. Thus did Innocentius erre definitiuely, in a matter confeſſed by the Papiſts themſelues, to be an errour, that the Communion is neceſſary for infants: which was a common errour in S. Auguſtines time, holden of all the Church, for any thing that we can reade to the contrary. And it is a monſtrous lie to report, that S. Auguſtine ſaith: That in the office, or ſeat of the Pope, our Lord hath ſet forth the doctrine of truth. For writing againſt the Schiſme of the Donatiſts, he ſpeaketh of the Chaire of vnitie, not of Poperie. Our heauenly Maſter (ſaith he) hath forewarned this thing (meaning Schiſme or diſſention) ſo greatly to be auoided, that of euill gouernours he aſſureth the people, that the Chaire of wholſome doctrine ſhould not be forſaken of them, in which euen euill men, are compelled to ſpeake good things. For they are not their matters which ſpeake them, but Gods, who hath placed the doctrine of truth in the chaire of vnitie. Wherefore he being true, and the truth it ſelfe, of gouernours doing their owne euill things, and ſpeaking the good things of God, ſaith: doe ye thoſe things which they ſay, but doe not thoſe things which they doe, for they ſay and doe not. All men ſee, that here is nothing in the world, for the prerogatiue of the Popes Chaire that he cannot erre: but that vnity is not to be broken for the euill manners of the teachers, ſo long as they teach the truth. When you proue, that the Pope for his publike, judiciall and definitiue writings, hath as good warrant, as Luke, Marke, Salomon, had for their Goſpels, the Prouerbs, Eccleſiaſtes, and Canticles, we will admit their caſe to be like. But while the world ſtandeth you ſhall neuer proue the beſt of the Popes writings, to be equall with the Canonicall Scripture. For in any mens writings, although there be the like truth, yet is there not equall authority, as S. Auguſtine ſaith.

That S. Auguſtine and the Biſhops of Africa, did write to Innocentius and Celeſtinus, Biſhops of Rome, it was not for that they aſcribed this pretended prerogatiue, either to their perſons, or to their office and ſeat, but as good Catholike Biſhops, haue alwayes vſed to conferre one with another, when any queſtion hath ariſen in the Church, to require their mutuall conſent in the truth, and againſt hereſies, as in thoſe three Epiſtles quoted, which were written to Innocentius, of their proceeding againſt the Pelagians it appeareth: But when the Biſhops of Rome, would haue vſurped authority ouer the Churches of Africa, by colour of a counterfeit Canon of the Councell of Nice, they were not regarded, either in reſpect of their perſons, or their office and ſeat, Conc. Afric. c. 105. Yea they count it an abſurd thing, that any man ſhould beleeue, that God could inſpire any one man, with the iuſtice of examination, and did deny the ſame to innumerable Prieſts, gathered together in Councell, as they were, to cut off appeales unto the See of Rome, Epiſt. ad Celeſt. Neither doth Chryſoſtome, in his Epiſtles to Innocentius, acknowledge any ſuch prerogatiue or priuiledge of the See of Rome, but as one Chriſtian friend to another, being himſelfe in baniſhment, deſireth his furtherance for the benefit of the Church, ſhewing how iniuriouſly he had beene dealt withall.

S. Baſil alſo in purpoſing to write to the Biſhop of Rome for his counſell, concerning the affaires of the Church, and touching the Councell of Ariminum, doth but practiſe that care of all Churches, which in the ſame Epiſtle he commendeth in Athanaſius, without aſcribing any ſuperioritie or prerogatiue to the Biſhop of Rome. If Hieronyme being a Prieſt of the Church of Rome, doth once or twice aſke counſell of Damaſus his proper Biſhop and Dioceſſan: what great marvell is it? or what priviledge or prerogatiue of the See doth he acknowledge? which confeſſeth that Liberius ſubſcribed to the Arrians. And yet in diuers Epiſtles Damaſus aſketh counſell of Hierome in many queſtions, as Hierome did of him in one, about the vſe of the terme Hypoſtaſis for vnities ſake.

Cyprian in the place quoted, ſpeaketh not of the Biſhop of Romes prerogatiue, but of obedience to be giuen to euery Biſhop in his owne Dioceſſe, and namely to himſelfe, againſt the vnreaſonableneſſe of Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, who was moued by the threatning brags of one Feliciſſimus, a wicked Schiſmaticke, excommunicated by Cyprian and other Biſhops of Africa, to yeeld ſomething vnto him. Whereupon Cyprian ſheweth, what inconuenience would enſue, if he did not continue conſtant, in reiecting him and his proud hereticall company, after their cauſe hath beene once iudged by their proper Biſhop, in the Prouince where their offences were well knowne. And therefore writing againſt their gadding to the See of Rome: he ſaith, [illegible] and what cauſe had they, to come and to bring tidings [illegible] [illegible] cauſe ſhould be heard there, where the crime was committed, and a portion of the flock is aſſigned to euery Paſtor, which

The [illegible] of Cornelius and his election, [illegible] of the Biſhops of Rome [illegible] Cyprian would neuer acknowledge [illegible] him.

The words of Hierome are [illegible] But thou wilt ſay, the Church is founded vpon Peter, although [illegible] another place, the ſame thing is done vpon all the Apoſtles, and they all receiue the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, and the ſtrength of the Church is eſtabliſhed equally vpon them: yet [illegible] the heading appointed, the occaſion of ſchiſme might be taken away. By which words Hierome [illegible] Peter was chiefe of the Apoſtles in order, to avoyd diuiſion, not in authority or prerogatiue of power. And elſewhere he acknowledgeth euery Biſhop to be of equall authority with the Biſhop of Rome, as in his Epiſtle to Euagrius, [illegible] a cuſtome of the Church of Rome. Nec altera, &c. Neither is the Church of the city of Rome to be eſteemed one, and the Church of the whole world another, both France and Britaine, and Africk and Perſis, and the Eaſt, and India, and all the barbarous nations, adore one Chriſt, obſerue one rule of truth. If authority be ſought, the world is greater then a citie. Whereſoeuer a Biſhop be, either at Rome or at Eugubium, either at Conſtantinople or at Rhegium, either at Alexandria, or at Tanis, he is of the ſame worthineſſe, of the ſame prieſthood. [illegible] of pouerty, make not a Biſhop higher or lower. But they are all ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XXIII.

Rhem. 34 Forgive them.] A perfect example of charity in our Saviour praying for his [illegible], which the firſt martyr S. Steven did follow, Act. 7. and the prayers of both were heard: Chriſts prayer taking [illegible] in the [illegible] and others, Stevens in Paul.

Rhem. 1 43 In Paradiſe.] Thou mayſt not hereupon deferre thy converſion or amendment, preſuming of [illegible] the laſt houre of thy life, nor looke to have ſalvation by faith and confeſſion of Chriſt without good workes, nor to goe ſtraight to heaven without ſatisfaction, penance, or puniſhment for thy former ſinnes and life ill ſpent, nor challenge ſecurity and certaine knowledge of thy ſalvation; for this good theeves caſe is not common, but a rare example of mercie and prerogative, but for the firſt point, learne onely not to deſpaire, though thou haſt beene ill to the laſt moment of thy life; for the ſecond, that faith, hope and charity, repentance, and good will be ſufficient, and good workes not required, where for want of time and opportunity they cannot be had; for the third, that Chriſt gave to this happie man for his zealous confeſſion of him and reprehending his fellow, not onely remiſſion of his ſinnes, but alſo by extraordinary grace; a pardon of all penance and ſatisfaction due either in this life or in the next for the ſame; even as the holy Church by his example and commiſſion giveth pardons alſo to ſome of her zealous children, of all puniſhment due for their offences, and ſuch goe ſtraight to heaven; laſtly, that every one hath not a revelation of his ſalvation as this man had, and therefore cannot be ſo ſure as he was.

Pardon of due penance and ſatisfaction.

Fulke 1 No man ought to deferre converſion, but to repent as ſoone as he is called, as this theefe did, for God giveth not the grace of repentance, according to the will of man, but according to his owne pleaſure, and purpoſe. Neither muſt any man looke to obtaine ſalvation by faith, which is void of good workes. For ſuch was not the faith of this penitent theefe, but fruitfull of good workes, as the place and time could ſuffer. But to goe ſtraight to heaven, without ſatisfaction or puniſhment for his former ſinnes, every Chriſtian man may be aſſured, not onely by this example, but alſo by manifeſt teſtimonies of Scripture, if he die in the Lord, Apoc. 14.13. Ioh. 17.24. 1 Cor. 5.1. Ioh. 5.24 &c. And as for ſatisfaction and puniſhment for our former ſinnes, is not found in the Scripture, but is contrary to the generall doctrine of remiſſion of ſinnes by the free grace and mercy of God. For thereby every one that truly beleeveth and confeſſeth Chriſt, may challenge as certaine knowledge of his ſalvation by the generall promiſes of God in the Scriptures, as the theefe by theſe ſpeciall words of Chriſt uttered unto him. Neither was this good theefe ſaved by any other meanes, then all Chriſtians are ſaved, namely, by the free mercy of God in Ieſus Chriſt apprehended by faith: Proſp. cont. Caſſ. c. 24. *In latronis iuſtificatione etiam ſi nulla operantis gratiae intelligerentur indicia, nonne cum omnibus credentibus etiam ipſum acciperemus attractum? dicente Domino, Omnia mihi tradita ſunt à patre meo. Et cum exaltatus fuero, à terra omnia traham ad me. Procopius Gazeus in Gen.c.*3. Cum per lignum in orbem exturriſſet mors, neceſſitas requirebat ut per alterum lignum, videlicet crucis, vita enicaret. Admiranda ſane Dei ſapientia primitiis vere poenitentibus, in [illegible] modum eos alloquendo [illegible] Hodie mecum eris in paradiſo. Which Angelomus in 2 Reg. 22. confirmeth by the example of Peter and this theefe.

A lively faith. Satisfaction. Purgatory.

Drogo de ſacra Dom. paſſion. Nonatravit, decima Paradiſum intravit. He maketh this theefe to be Adam that is a patterne of all ſinners that are ſaved. *Iulian. Tolet prog. l.*2.*c.*1. Quod ita deberi credi Dominus noſter Ieſus Chriſtus ſua authoritate firmavit, ubi latroni dicendo, Hodie mecum eris in Paradiſo, ſine ulla ambiguitate probavit, quod beatas animas ſuis exutas corporibus Paradiſus coeleſtis ſine ullo intervallo temporis ſuſcipiat. Wherefore we ſhould learne, not onely not to deſpaire, but to beleeve ſtedfaſtly, that if we doe truly repent as this theefe did, we ſhall as certainely receive pardon for our ſinnes, at what time ſoever it be, as God promiſeth by Ezechiel 18.21. For God will not reject an humble and contrite heart, Pſal. 51.19. Secondly, that true faith is never void of good workes, as repentance, love of God and our neighbour, hatred of ſinne, confeſſion, and other externall workes, as time and opportunity may ſerve. Thirdly, that Chriſt gave remiſſion of ſinnes freely, and not of merit for zeale or reprehenſion of his fellow, but of his meere mercy and grace, by which he gave him faith and repentance: as he doth to all that are converted to him. So the Miniſters of the Church ought to aſſure penitent ſinners of forgiveneſſe and the kingdome of heaven, without any ſatisfaction or puniſhment for ſatisfaction, which is never required on their part in the holy Scriptures. Neither have they any cõmiſſion to require it of any of Gods Elect, or to delay the reward of any for whom Chriſt hath ſatisfied to his Father, as he hath for all that are redeemed by him. Laſt of all, every man that by faith applieth unto himſelfe the generall promiſes of God, may be as ſure of ſalvation, as he was. For they are as true of every one in ſingular, as they are of all in generall. And this theefe was juſtified on the Croſſe (ſaith S. Auguſtine) by that conſummation and brevity (which the Apoſtle Rom.10. *maketh generall to all men) who having all other members of his body faſtened on the croſſe, and having theſe two free, beleeved with his heart to righteouſneſſe, and confeſſed with his mouth to ſalvation; and immediatly obtained to heare, This day thou ſhalt be with me in Paradiſe. Ad Simplicia lib.*1.*q.*2. Likewiſe Ambroſe ſaith: It is a moſt excellent example to deſire converſion, that pardon is ſo ſoone granted to the theefe, and that grace is more plentifull then his prayer: for our Lord doth alwayes grant more then is asked, In Luc. cap. 23. The like comfort for all penitent ſinners, is gathered out of this example, by Cypr. de Coen. Dom. ſerm. 7. And Chryſ. in Gen. hom. 55. and in a manner by all the ancient Fathers. Therefore the Papiſts doe wickedly goe about to make it almoſt ſingular and extraordinary.

Certainty of ſalvation.

CHAP. XXIIII.

Devout women not finding his body in the Sepulchre, 4 Angels tell them that he is riſen according to his owne prediction: 9 yet the Apoſtles will not beleeve it: 12 but neither Peter findeth his body there. 13 He walketh with two Diſciples, declaring all this unto them out of the Scriptures, and is knowne of them by breaking of bread. 36 The ſame day he appeareth to the Eleven and others being together, is felt of them, and eateth with them; finally teaching them out of the Scriptures not onely of his Paſſion and Reſurrection, 47 but alſo of his Catholike Church, 49 he promiſeth the holy Ghoſt to comfort them: 50 and ſo aſcendeth into heaven.

16 But their eyes were held that they might not know him.

17 And he said to them, What are these communications that you conferre one with another walking, and are sad?

18 And one whose name was Cleophas, answering, said to him, Art thou onely a ſtranger in Hieruſalem, and haſt not knowne the things that have beene done in it, theſe dayes?

19 To whom he ſaid, What things? And they ſaid, concerning IESVS of Nazareth, who was a man a Prophet, mighty in worke and word before God and all the people, 20 And how our chiefe Prieſts and Princes delivered him into condemnation of death, and crucified him.

21 But wee hoped that it was hee that ſhould redeeme Iſrael: and now beſides all this, to day is the third day ſince theſe things were done.

22 But certaine women alſo of ours made us afraid: who before it was light, were at the monument, 23 And not finding his body, came, ſaying that they ſaw a viſion alſo of Angels, who ſay that he is alive.

24 And certaine men of ours went to the monument: and they found it ſo as the women ſaid, but him they found not.

25 And he ſaid to them, O fooliſh, and ſlow of heart to beleeve, in all things which the Prophets have ſpoken.

26 Ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and ſo to enter into his glory?

27 And beginning from Moſes and all the Prophets, he did interpret to them in all the Scriptures the things that were concerning him.

28 And they drew nigh to the towne whither they went: and he made ſemblance to goe further.

33 And riſing up the ſame houre they went backe into Hieruſalem: and they found the eleven gathered together, and thoſe that were with them, 34 Saying, that our Lord is riſen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

35 And they told the things that were done in the way: and how they knew him in the breaking of bread.☞

16 But their eyes were holden that they should not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are theſe that ye have one to another as ye walke, and are ſad?

21 But we truſted that it had been he which ſhould have redeemed Iſrael: and as touching all theſe things, to day is even the third day ſince they were done.

22 Yea, and certaine women alſo of our company made us aſtonied, which came early unto the Sepulchre, 24 And certaine of them which were with us, went to the Sepulchre, and found it even ſo as the women had ſaid, but him they ſaw not.

25 And he ſaid unto them, O fooles, and ſlow of heart, to beleeve all that the Prophets have ſpoken:

26 Ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and to enter into his glory?

27 And he began at Moſes, and all the Prophets, and thorowly interpreted unto them in all the Scriptures, thoſe things which were written of himſelfe.

28 And they drew nigh unto the village which they went unto, and he made as though he would have gone further.

29 And they conſtrained him, ſaying, Abide with us, for it draweth towards night, and the day is far paſſed: And he went in to tarry with them.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XXIIII.

RHEM. 1 1 First of the Sabbath.] *That is firſt after the Sabbath, which is (ſaith S.*Hier.q.4. ad Hedib.) dies Dominica, our Lords day, wherein he aroſe; for the weeke is divided into the Sabbath, and the 1.2.3.4.5.6. of the Sabbath, and the Apoſtle (1 Cor.16,2.) commanded a collection of money to be made on the firſt of the Sabbath, whereby we learne, both the keeping of Sunday, and the Churches count of dayes by the 2,3,4. of the Sabbath, to be Apoſtolicall, which S. Sylveſter afterward named 2,3,4. feriam, &c. Breviar.Roman.Decemb.31.

FVLKE 1 The obſervation of the Lords day, is taught in the Scripture to be Apoſtolicall, and not grounded upon uncertaine Tradition unwritten, as other Papiſts affirme.

The Scriptures ſufficient.

RHEM. 2 47 And ª penance.] *As he ſhall be Anathema (ſaith S.*Auguſtine) which preacheth that Chriſt neither ſuffered nor roſe againe, becauſe we learne by the Goſpel, That it behooved Chriſt to ſuffer, and to riſe againe the third day: ſo he ſhall alſo be Anathema, whoſoever preacheth the Church to be elſewhere then in the communion of all nations: becauſe by the ſelfe ſame Goſpel we learne in the words next following, and penance to be preached in his name and remiſſion of ſinnes thorowout all nations, Aug.ep.48.

FVLKE 2 The Papiſts are under this curſe, which preach that the Church conſiſteth in communion of the Romiſh Pope, and not in the communion of all nations.

The Popiſh communion.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XXIIII.

RHEM. 3 [illegible] bread.] The Fathers in divers places take this to be meant of the bleſſed [illegible]. *Auctor operis imperfecti hom.*17. *S.Auguſtine l.*3.*de conſenſu Evang.c.*25.& *Ser.*140.de temp.& *ep.*59.*ad Paulinum q.*5. [illegible] in the next Epiſtle before that among S.Auguſtines. Venerable Bede alſo upon this place. Theophylact upon this place. And that it ſhould be meant of the holy Sacrament, the forme of ſolemne taking the bread into his hands, bleſſing it, breaking it, and reaching it to his Diſciples (exceeding proper to the conſecration, and common to none other vulgar benediction, nor any where uſed but in Chriſts miraculous multiplying the loaves) and the ſingular effect in notifying Chriſt unto them doe prove. And if it be the Sacrament (as it is moſt probable) then is it an evident example and warrant of miniſtration in one kinde.

The bleſſed Sacrament in one kinde.

FULKE 3 Although this were to be underſtood, of the celebration of the Lords Supper, (as ſome of the ancient Fathers doe thinke) yet it is no example, nor warrant of miniſtration in one kinde. For the breaking of bread, ſhould be here taken figuratively for the whole Sacrament, by Synecdoche, which is uſed when a part is named for the whole. And Chryſoſtome upon that promiſe of Chriſt, (that he will drinke the cup of the fruit of the vine, anew in the kingdome of his Father) ſaith expreſly, Poſt reſurrectionem in nuda myſterij menſa vino uſus eſt. Ex geninine autem ait vitis, quæ certè vinum non aquam producit. After his reſurrection in the bare table of this myſterie, he uſed wine. Of the fruit of the vine (ſaith he) which verely bringeth forth wine and not water. Neither is there any of the ancient Fathers which thinke that our Saviour Chriſt here gave the Sacrament, that gathereth example or warrant of miniſtration in one kinde. Finally, you cannot ſay, that he gave bread onely, as the Sacrament, except you will alſo ſay that he conſecrated in one kinde, which you all confeſſe to be unlawfull and ſacrilegious.

Communion in one kinde.

RHEM. 4 47 Penance to be preached.] He ſhewed unto them out of the Scriptures, not onely the things that were now accompliſhed in himſelfe, but alſo that were yet to come about his Church: as, where it ſhould begin, to wit, at Hieruſalem: and how far it ſhould goe to wit, to all nations: that he might not ſuffer us (ſaith S.Auguſtine) to erre neither in the Bridegroome nor in the Bride. For this maketh manifeſtly againſt all Heretickes and Sciſmatickes, that ſet up new Churches in particular countreys, drawing the people from the foreſaid onely true Church, which from Hieruſalem ſo groweth * over all nations, till the end of the world come.

The Catholike or univerſall Church. *De unit. Eccl.c.*10.

* Math.24,14.

FULKE 4 The univerſall Church of Chriſt, is whereſoever the Goſpel or doctrine of ſalvation is embraced, and not tied to the city or Congregation of Rome, which when it was a member of Chriſt, was a particular Church, and not the univerſall Church. S. Hierome miſliking the cuſtome of the Church of Rome, that a Prieſt ſhould be ordained by the teſtimony of a Deacon, ſaith: Quid mihi profers unius urbis conſuetudinem? What doeſt thou bring forth unto me the cuſtome of one city? But now Rome is neither the univerſall Church, nor any ſound part thereof: but the whore of Babylon, the ſeat of Antichriſt, *Apoc.*17,18.

RHEM. 5 50 Bleſſed them.] Chriſt our high Prieſt, * prefigured ſpecially therein by Melchiſedec, often gave his bleſſing to his: ſometimes by words, as, Peace be to you: ſometimes by impoſing his hands: and now here by lifting up his hands over his Diſciples as it were for his farewell. In what forme, the Scripture doth not expreſſe, but very like it is that in forme of the croſſe, as Iacob the Patriarch bleſſed his nephewes for ſignification of Chriſts benediction; for now the croſſe began to be glorious among the faithfull: and the Apoſtles (as it is moſt certaine * by the Fathers which call it an ancient tradition) uſed that ſigne for an externall note of benediction. Yea S. Auguſtine ſaith (in Pſal.30.Conc.3.) that Chriſt himſelfe not without cauſe would have his ſigne to be fixed in our foreheads as in the ſeat of ſhamefaſtnes, that a Chriſtian man ſhould not be aſhamed of the reproach of Chriſt; and what forme can a Chriſtian man uſe rather to bleſſe himſelfe or others, then that which was dedicated in Chriſts death, and is a convenient memoriall of the ſame? Howſoever it be that the Biſhops and prieſts of Gods Church bleſſe with an externall ſigne, no man can reprehend, being warranted by Chriſts owne example and action.

Chriſt bleſſed divers wayes.

Bleſſing with the ſigne of the croſſe.

FULKE 5 Seeing the Scripture doth not expreſſe, in what forme Chriſt lifted up his hands, it is great preſumption to affirme, that it was in the ſimilitude of the croſſe. Neither is it any thing like, becauſe Iacob laid his hands overthwart, or a croſſe upon his nephewes heads, that Chriſt did ſo, ſeeing here was not the like cauſe: For Iacob laid his hands after that forme, becauſe the younger ſonne which ſhould be the greater, was placed at his left hand, and the elder at his right hand. Neither was the ſigne or figure of the croſſe in any eſtimation with the Apoſtles, or the faithfull in their time: Valentinus the Hereticke, was the firſt that made any great account of it, as teſtifieth Irenæus l. 1.c. 1. Tertullian indeed, reckoneth ſigning with the croſſe to be an old tradition, which yet it is no more certaine to have beene uſed by the Apoſtles, then other like ceremonies which he there nameth, as the taſting of milke and honey by them that were baptized, and the abſtinence from waſhing for a weeke after Baptiſme, oblations for birth dayes, and ſuch other long ſince aboliſhed, which they ſhould not have beene, if they had beene ordained by the Apoſtles, as neceſſary for Chriſtian religion. The like may be ſaid of Baſils teſtimony. S. Auguſtine in the place noted, ſpeaketh not of the ſigne of the croſſe, which Chriſt never commanded to be ſet on mens foreheads, but of the ſeale or marke wherewith the true worſhippers of Chriſt are marked, Apoc. 7. in their foreheads, to ſignifie that they ſhould not be aſhamed to confeſſe the reproach of Chriſt, which is the glory of the Chriſtians. Finally, when you aske what forme a Chriſtian man can uſe to bleſſe himſelfe, rather then the ſigne of the croſſe? I would firſt know, how a Chriſtian man can bleſſe himſelfe, ſeeing the Apoſtle ſaith, it is without all controverſie, that the leſſer is bleſſed of the greater or better, Heb 7.7.

The ſigne of the croſſe, or croſſing.

Secondly, that the ſigne of the croſſe is dedicated in the death of Chriſt, rather then the ſignes of other things that were likewiſe inſtruments of his Paſſion.

Thirdly, how is it a convenient memoriall of Chriſts death, which is not ordained of Chriſt, nor taught by his Apoſtles to be ſuch.

But you ſay howſoever it be, that Biſhops and prieſts doe bleſſe with an externall ſigne, no man can reprehend, being warranted by Chriſts owne example and action: As though every action of Chriſt, were an example for us to follow. But admitting this to be an example, and action to be followed, Popiſh Biſhops and Prieſts are juſtly to be reprehended, becauſe they are not content with that externall action of Chriſt, which they reade in the holy Scripture, of impoſition or lifting up of hands, but they will uſe another, whereof they have no warrant in the Scriptures, which it is not like that Chriſt at any time did uſe.

THE ARGUMENT OF

S^t. IOHN'S GOSPEL.

SAint Iohns Goſpell may be divided into foure partes.

The firſt part is of the actes of Chriſt before his ſolemne manifeſtation of himſelfe, while Iohn Baptiſt *was yet baptizing: Chap.*1,2,3,4.

*The ſecond, of his acts in Iury (having now begun his ſolemne manifeſtation in Galilee, Mat.*4,12.) *the ſecond Eaſter or Paſche of his Preaching: Chap.*5. *For of the firſt Paſche, we had in the firſt part. Chap.*2,13. And the Paſche of a the Iewes was at hand. *And that feaſt whereof we have in this ſecond part, Chap.*5,1: After this there was a feſtivall day of a the Iewes, is thought of good authors, to be the feaſt of Paſche.

*The third part is, of his actes in Galilee, and in Iury, about the third Paſche, and after it: Chap.*6, to the 12. *For ſo we have chap.*6,4: and Paſche the feſtivall day of a the Iewes was at hand.

*The fourth part is of the fourth Paſche (which we have in the end of the chap.*11,55: And the Paſche of a the Iewes was at hand) that is to ſay of the holy weeke of his Paſſion in Hieruſalem: ch. 12. unto the end of the booke.

By which diviſion it is manifeſt, that the intent of this Evangeliſt writing after the other three, was, to omit the actes of Chriſt in Galilee, becauſe the other three had written them at large: and to report his actes done in Iury, which they had omitted.

And this he doth, becauſe Iury with Hieruſalem and the Temple, being the principall part of the Countrey; there abode the principall of the Iewes, both for authority, and alſo for learning in the Law, or knowledge of the Scriptures; and therefore that was the place, where our Lord IESVS finding in the head it ſelfe, and in the leaders of the reſt, ſuch wilfull obſtinacy and deſperate reſiſtance, as the Prophets had foretold, did by this occaſion, much more plainely then in Galilee, both ſay and prove, at ſundry times; even every yeare of his Preaching, himſelfe to be the CHRIST that had beene ſo long promiſed unto them, and expected of them: and the ſame CHRIST to be not onely a man, as they imagined, but alſo the naturall, conſubſtantiall, and coeternall Sonne of God the Father, who now had ſent him. Therefore theſe were the words and deeds that ſerved beſt the purpoſe of this Evangeliſt, being, to ſhew the glory and excellency of this perſon IESVS, that thereby the Gentiles might ſee, how worthily Hieruſalem and the Iewes were reprobated, who had refuſed, yea, and crucified ſuch an one: and how well, and to their owne ſalvation themſelves might doe, to receive him and to believe in him. For this to have beene his purpoſe, himſelfe declareth in the end, ſaying: Theſe are written, that you may believe that IESVS is CHRIST the Sonne of God: and that believing, you may have life in his name.

a This ſpeech very common in this Goſpel, as appeareth by the places here marked, declareth that he writeth to the Gentiles.

Io.20,31.

And hereupon it is, that S. Hierome writeth thus in his life: Iohn the Apoſtle, a whom IESVS loved very much, the b ſonne of Zebedee, b the brother of Iames the Apoſtle, c whom Herod after our Lords Paſſion beheaded, laſt of all wrote the Goſpel, at the requeſt of the Biſhops of Aſia, againſt Cerinthus, and other Heretikes, and ſpecially againſt the aſſertion of the Ebonites then riſing, who ſay that Chriſt was not before MARIE. Whereupon alſo he was compelled to utter his Divine Nativity. Of his three Epiſtles, and of his Apocalypſe, ſhall be ſaid in their owne places.

b Mat.4,21.
c Act.12,2.

It followeth in S. Hierome, that In the ſecond perſecution under Domitian, fourteene yeeres after the perſecution of Nero he was exiled into the Ile Patmos. But after that Domitian was ſlaine, and his acts for his paſſing cruelty repealed by the Senate: under Nerva the Emperour he returned to Epheſus, and there continuing unto the time of Traiane the Emperour, he founded and governed all the Churches of Aſia, and worne with old age, he died the threeſcore and eighth yeare after the Paſſion of our Lord, and was buried beſides the ſame city.

Whoſe excellency the ſame holy Doctor thus briefly deſcribeth lib. 1. Adverſ. Iovinianum.

IOhn the Apoſtle, one of our Lords Diſciples, who was the yongeſt among the Apoſtles, and whom the faith of Chriſt found a virgin, remained a virgin, and therefore is a more loved of our Lord, and a lieth upon the breſt of IESVS*: and that which* Peter durſt not aske, a he deſired him to aske: and after the reſurrection, when Mary Magdalen had reported that our Lord was riſen againe, both of them ran to the ſepulchre, b but he came thither firſt: and when they were in the ſhip and fiſhed in the lake of Genezareth, IESVS ſtood on the ſhore, neither did the Apoſtles know whom they ſaw: c onely the virgin knoweth the virgin, and ſayth to Peter, It is our Lord. This Iohn was both an Apoſtle, and Evangeliſt, and Prophet; an Apoſtle, becauſe he wrot to the Churches as a Maſter: an Evangeliſt, becauſe he compiled a booke of the Goſpel, which (except Matthew) none other of the twelve Apoſtles did: a Prophet, for he ſaw in the Ile Patmos, where he was baniſhed by Domitian the Emperour for the teſtimony of our Lord, the Apocalyps, containing infinite myſteries of things to come. Tertullian alſo reporteth, that at Rome being caſt into a barrell of hot boyling oyle, he came forth more pure and freſher or livelier, then he went in. Yea and his Goſpell it ſelfe much differeth from the reſt. Matthew beginneth to write as of a man: Marke of the Prophecy of Malachie and Eſay: Luke of the Prieſthood of Zachary*: the firſt hath the face of a man, becauſe of the genealogie: the ſecond the face of a lion, for the voyce of one crying in the deſert: the third the face of a calfe, becauſe of the Prieſthood. But* Iohn as an Eagle flyeth to the things on high, and mounteth to the Father himſelfe, ſaying: In the beginning was the WORD, and the WORD was with God, and God was the WORD. Thus farre S. Hierome.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 Was the word.] The ſecond perſon in Trinity which is the naturall, onely, and eternall Sonne of God the Father, is called the WORD: not as the holy Scriptures or ſpeeches of the Prophets and Apoſtles (written and ſpoken by Gods commandement for the uttering of his diuine will towards man) be called his word; but in a more diuine, and ineffable ſort, to expreſſe unto us in a ſort, by a terme agreeable to our capacity, that the Sonne of God ſo is, and ſo from euerlaſting is borne of God the Father, as our prime conceit (which is our internall and mentall word) is and iſſueth out of our intelligence and mind. This WORD then, Sonne, or ſecond Perſon in the holy Trinity, was and had his being then already, when other creatures (of what ſort ſo euer) had but their beginning, & therefore cannot be a creature, as many Heretikes before the writing of this Goſpel thought, and as the Arrians after taught. And this firſt ſentence of the Goſpel not onely the faithfull, but the Platoniſtes did ſo admire (as S. Auguſtine writeth) that they wiſhed it to be written in gold.

FVLKE. 3 [illegible] of Caluin, who teacheth none otherwiſe of the Godhead of Chriſt, then the Papiſts [illegible], of God the Father, in reſpect of perſon [illegible]; yet very God of [illegible] the ſame Godhead that the Father is God, which is not multiplyed by communication of [illegible], but is one and moſt ſingular in all the three perſons. Which moſt holy and perpetuall doctrine of the Church, he hath maintained in his writings, againſt the Arians, Sabellians, and Tritheites of [illegible], where [illegible] of this Church [illegible] oppoſed themſelues [illegible]. See chap. 10. ſect. 3. Slander.

RHEM. 4 1 God was the Word.] Leſt we ſtay upon the premiſſes, which ſet forth the relation and diſtinction of the ſecond Perſon from the firſt, might thinke that the Father onely were God, the Euangeliſt expreſly teacheth, the WORD to be God; for though the words ſtand otherwiſe (becauſe we haue of purpoſe followed the elegancy which the Euangeliſt himſelfe obſerued in placing them ſo, and therefore they ſtand ſo both in Greeke and Latine) yet ſurely the conſtruction is thus, THE WORD was God, and as (in his firſt Epiſtle the ſame Apoſtle writeth) true God: *leſt any might ſay (as the Arians did) that he was God indeed, but not truely and naturally, but by common adoption or calling as good men in the Church may be called the ſonnes of God. The WORD God by nature.

1 Ioh. 5.20.

The Proteſtants are like the wrangling Arians.

FVLKE 4 The Proteſtants are nothing like the Arians, for they acknowledge the words of Chriſt to be true, in ſuch ſenſe as he ſpake them, and as the ancient Fathers of the Church did take them, and expound them, for many hundred yeres after Chriſt, as in places conuenient is proued: ſee the notes upon Matth. 26. Mar. 14. [illegible] Slander.

RHEM. 3 By him.] Againe, by this be ſignified the eternity, diuinity, omnipotency, and equality of the WORD or Sonne, with God the Father, becauſe by him all things were created; all things he ſayth, both viſible of this world: and inuiſible, as Angels and all ſpirituall creatures. Whereupon it is euident alſo, that himſelfe is no creature, being the creator of all: neither is ſinne of his creation, being a defect of a thing, rather then a thing it ſelfe; and therefore neither of nor by him.

The WORD not a creature but the creator.

RHEM. 5 12 Hee gaue them power.] Free-will to receiue or acknowledge Chriſt, and power giuen to men, if they will, to be made by Chriſt the ſonnes of God: but not forced or drawne thereunto by any neceſſity. Free-will.

FVLKE 5. Men haue no freedome of will, to accept the grace of God offered, untill they be by grace preuented. And although they be not forced or drawne by neceſſity, yet they are by the grace of God made willing, which by nature were altogether unwilling. The word which they haue heere tranſlated power, ſignifieth dignity, or authority, which is giuen onely of Gods grace (as the words of the text are manifeſt) to them that receiue Chriſt by faith: which is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but is the gift of God. Eph. 2.8. Rom. 9.16. By this power (ſayth Cyrillus upon this place) he underſtandeth adoption and grace, afterward moſt ſafely he inferred: that they are borne of God, that he might ſhew the greatneſſe of grace, which ioyneth together ſtrangers from God, and maketh them the ſonnes of God, and of loue giueth freely the nobility of the Lord to his ſeruants. Euſ. Emiſſ. hom. in nat. Dom. Quid enim illis maius dari potuit, quam ut eſſent filij Dei: ſi enim filij (ut ait Apoſtolus) & heredes? Free-will.

RHEM. 6 14 The Word made fleſh.] This is the high and diuine teſtimony of Chriſts incarnation, and that he vouchſafed to become man; for the acknowledging of which inexplicable benefit, and giuing humble thankes for the ſame, all Chriſtian people in the world by tradition of the Fathers, proſtrate themſelues or kneele downe, when they heare it ſung or ſayd at the holy Maſſe, either in this Goſpell: or in the Creede by theſe words, ET HOMO FACTVS EST.

RHEM. 18 No man hath ſeene.] Neuer man in this mortality ſaw God in the very ſhape and naturall forme of the diuine eſſence, but men ſee him onely in the ſhape of viſible creatures, in or by which it pleaſeth him to ſhew himſelfe unto many diuerſly in this world: but neuer in ſuch ſort as when he ſhewed himſelfe in the perſon of the Sonne of God, being made truely man and conuerſing with men.

How mortall men ſee God.

32 The Spirit.] Heere is an euident teſtimony of the third Perſon in Trinity, which is the holy Ghoſt: ſo that in this one Chapter we finde expreſly againſt all Heretikes, Iewes, and Pagans, ſet foorth the truth of the Churches doctrine concerning the whole Trinity.

The bleſſed Trinity.

RHEM. 7. 42 Looke upon him.] This beholding of Simon, inſinuateth Chriſts deſignement and preferring of him to be the chiefe Apoſtle, the Rocke of the Church, and his Vicar; and therefore upon that Diuine prouidence and intention he accordingly changeth his name, calling him for Simon, Cephas, which is a Syriake word, as much to ſay as Rocke or ſtone. And S. Paul commonly calleth him by his name Cephas, whereas other both Greekes and Latines call him altogether by the Greeke word, Peter, which ſignifieth the ſelfe ſame thing. Whereof S. Cyrill ſayth, that our Sauiour by foretelling that his name ſhould no more now be Simon, but Peter, did by the word it ſelfe aptly ſignifie, that on him, as on a Rocke and Stone moſt firme, he would build his Church.

Peter by his new name deſigned to be the Rocke of the Church. Cephas. Petrus. Lib. 2. c. 12. in Ioan.

FVLKE 7 A wretched concluſion: Chriſt looked upon Peter; ergo, he appointed and preferred him to be chiefe Apoſtle, the rocke of his Church, and his Vicar. The addition of his name Cephas, proueth that he was appointed to be a ſtone, whereon the Church ſhould be builded, but not a ſingular or the onely rocke thereof, no more then the addition of Boanerges prooueth that Iames and Iohn were the onely children of thunder, or that Barnabas was the onely ſonne of Conſolation. Neither was the name of Simon changed, for he was ſtill called Simon, by our Sauiour Chriſt, Matt. 16.17. ch. 17.25. Luke 22.31. & Iohn 21.15. and by Iames Acts 15.14. That Chriſt builded his Church upon Peter, as upon a rocke, and moſt firme ſtone, (as Cyrillus ſayth) it is no controuerſie, ſeeing hee built it ioyntly upon the foundation of all the Apoſtles: and the faith and doctrine of Peter, which was the faith and doctrine of all the Apoſtles, is the rocke, whereupon the Church is builded, and not the perſon of Peter, as the ſame Cyrill teſtifieth, Dialog. de Trinit. lib. 4. in Eſai. lib. 4. Peters prerogatiue.

4 And IESVS sayth to her, || What is to me and thee woman? my houre commeth not yet.

5 His mother sayth to the ministers, || Whatsoever he shall say to you doe ye.

6 And there were set there sixe waterpots of stone, according to the purification of the Iewes, holding every one two or three measures.

7 Iesus saith to them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the toppe.

8 And IESVS saith to them, Draw now, and cary to the chiefe steward. And they caried it.

9 And after the chiefe steward tasted the † water made wine, and knew not whence it was, but the ministers knew that had drawen the water: the chiefe steward calleth the bridegrome, 11 This beginning of miracles did IESVS in Cana of Galilee: and he manifested his glory, and his Disciples beleeved in him.

12 After this he went downe to Capernaum, and his mother, and his brethren, and his Disciples, and there continued not many dayes.

13 And the Iewes Passeover was at hand, and Iesus went up to Hierusalem.

16 And found sitting in the Temple those that sold oxen, and sheepe, and doves, and changers of money.

15 And when he had made as it were a scourge of small cordes he drove them all out of the Temple, with the sheepe and oxen, and powred out the changers money, and overthrew the tables:

The onely presence of Christ at the marriage, is not sufficient to make it a Sacrament; [illegible] the Lords Supper are Sacraments. But his word of institution, must come to the outward element, [illegible] may bee made a Sacrament: as Augustine teacheth expresly, *Tract. 70. in Ioan. de Catachysmo. cap. 3. 3 They have no wine.] Our Lady many wayes understood that now the time approached of manifesting himselfe to the world by miracles and preaching, and nothing doubted but that he would now begin at her request. Whereby we learne that Christ ordinarily giveth not his graces, but humbly asked and requested thereunto, and that [illegible] intercession is more then vulgarly effectuall, and that he denieth her not any.

Whether the blessed Virgine knew the time of the manifestation of Christ, it is not certaine: but it is most certaine, that Christ knew his owne time better then she, and therefore had no need to be admonished by her. Although the words doe import no request, but onely signifie that the wine failed. Whereby she might meane, that she did modestly referre it to his pleasure, whether he would supply the want of the wine by some godly exhortation, or by working a miracle. If she were perswaded that he would begin his miracles at her request (as you are bold without all warrant to affirme) she was much deceived: for he would not yeeld to her motion, whatsoever her meaning was. Therefore this place nothing favoureth her intercession to Christ, and much lesse our prayers to her.

The intercession of the blessed Virgine.

RHEM. 5

4 What is to me and thee?] Because this speech is subject to divers senses, we keepe the words of our text lest by turning it into any English phrase, we might straighten the holy Ghosts intention to some certaine sense either not intended, or not onely intended, and so take away the choice and indifferencie from the reader, whereof (in holy Scripture specially) all Translators must beware. Christ then may meane here, What is that, woman, to me and thee being but strangers, that they want wine? as some interpret it; or (which is the more proper use of that kinde of speech in holy writ) what have I to doe with thee? that is, why should I have respect to thy desire in this case? In matters touching my charge, and the commission of my Father for preaching, working miracles, and other graces, I must not be tied to flesh and blood. Which was not a reprehension of our Lady, or signification that he would not heare her in this or other things pertaining to Gods glory or the good of men: for the event sheweth the contrary; but it was a lesson to the company that heard it, and namely to his Disciples, that respect of kinred should not draw them to doe any thing against reason, or to be the principall motion why they doe their duties, but Gods glory.

Translation of holy Scriptures.

The phrase is no more subject to divers senses here, then Matth. 8. 29. where the onely sense is, What have we to doe with thee, Iesus thou Sonne of God. Therefore your latter interpretation is right. Christ had nothing to doe with his mother, nor she with him, in matters pertaining to his office, and commission of his Father. And therefore his words were a reprehension of her intermedling, with that wherein she had nothing to doe. For we may not so excuse her, that we accuse our Saviour Christ, who did not reprehend her unjustly, but as

For it is manifeſt that Chriſt in this place, uſeth his Divine authority, as he declareth by raiſing up the temple of his body, after it was by them put to death, Cyr. in Ioan. l. 2. c. 32. Chryſ. in Ioan. hom. 22. None but Antichriſt therefore, that boaſteth himſelfe as God, will preſume to doe that which Chriſt here did, by the ſame warrant that he did it. The tyranny of Antichriſt.

Rhem. 8 24 Iesvs committed not himſelfe.] S. Auguſtine applieth this their firſt faith and beleefe in Chriſt, ſuddenly raiſed upon the admiration of his wonders, but yet not fully formed or eſtabliſhed in them, unto the faith of Novices or Catechumens in the Church: and Chriſts not committing his perſon to them as yet, to the Churches like warineſſe and wiſdome, in not opening nor giving to them our Lord in the bleſſed Sacrament, becauſe all were not to be truſted with that high [illegible] without full triall of their faith.

Tract. in Io. 11. The bleſſed Sacrament is not to be given to novices or younglings in faith.

Fvlke 8 Howſoever this doctrine be grounded upon the text, the Papiſts practiſe commonly againſt it, who give the Sacrament commonly to them who were never inſtructed in the myſteries of Chriſtian Religion, if they once come to yeeres of diſcretion, although they know neither the Lords Prayer, ten Commandements, Articles of faith, or any thing elſe neceſſary to ſalvation: except it be to pronounce the words ill favouredly, in a tongue whereof they have none underſtanding.

Ignorance in the Popiſh Church.

CHAP. III.

He teacheth Nicodemus, that to come to the kingdome of God, Baptiſme is neceſſary, as being our Regeneration. 10 Which point Nicodemus as then not underſtanding, 14 he ſheweth that they muſt beleeve him, and what good cauſe there is for them ſo to doe. 22 After this he alſo baptizeth, and Iohn likewiſe at the ſame time. 25 Whereupon a queſtion being moved, Whether Baptiſme is better, 27 Iohn anſwereth it by ſaying, that he is ſo far inferiour to Chriſt, as a meere man to God moſt high.

THere was a man of the Phariſees, named Nicodemus, a Ruler of the Iewes:

2 The ſame came to Ieſus by night, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, wee know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can doe theſe

[illegible] which thou doeſt, unleſſe God be with him.

3 Iesvs anſwered, and ſaid to him, Amen, Amen I ſay to thee, Vnleſſe a man be borne againe, he cannot ſee the kingdome of God.

4 Nicodemus ſaid to him, How can a man be borne, when he is old? can he enter into his mothers wombe againe and be borne?

5 Iesvs anſwered, Amen, Amen I ſay to thee, Vnleſſe a man be ‖ borne againe of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God.

6 That which is borne of the fleſh, is fleſh: and that which is borne of the ſpirit, is ſpirit.

7 Marvell not, that I ſay to thee, You muſt be borne againe.

8 The Spirit breatheth where the will: and thou heareſt his voyce, but thou knoweſt not whence he commeth and whither he goeth: ſo is every one that is borne of the Spirit.

‡ We follow rather S. Aug. & thoſe ancient fathers, which moſt commonly underſtand this place of the holy Ghoſt, & not of the winde: although both ſenſes be good.

9 Nicodemus anſwered, and ſaid to him, How can theſe things be done?

10 Iesvs anſwered, and ſaid to him, Thou art a maſter in Iſrael, and art thou ignorant of theſe things?

11 Amen, Amen I ſay to thee, that we ſpeake that which we know, and that which we have ſeene we teſtifie, and our teſtimonie you receiue not.

12 If I have ſpoken to you earthly things, and you beleeve not: how if I ſhall ſpeake to you heavenly things, will you beleeve?

13 And no man hath aſcended into heaven, but hee that deſcended from heaven, the Sonne of man which is in heaven.

14 And as * Moyſes exalted the ſerpent in the deſert, ſo muſt the Sonne of man bee exalted:

Nu. 21, 9.

15 That euery one which beleeveth in him, periſh not, but may have life everlaſting.

The Goſpel vpon Munday in the Whitſon weeke.

16 For ſo God loved the world, that hee gaue his onely-begotten ſonne: that euery one that beleeueth in him, periſh not, but may haue life euerlaſting. ☜

17 For God ſent not his Sonne into the world, to judge the world, but that the world may be ſaued by him.

18 He that beleeueth in him, is not judged; but hee that doth not beleeue, ‖ is already judged: becauſe hee hath not beleeued in the name of the onely-begotten ſonne of God.

19 And this is the judgement: becauſe the light is come into the world, and men have loued the darkeneſſe rather then the light: for their workes were evill.

20 For every one that doth ill, hateth the light, and commeth not to the light, that his workes may not be controuled.

21 But hee that doth veritie, commeth to the light, that his workes may be made manifeſt, becauſe they were done in God. ☜

theſe miracles that thou doeſt, except God bee with him.

3 Ieſus anſwered, and ſaid unto him, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, except a man be borne from above, hee cannot ſee the kingdome of God.

4 Nicodemus ſaith unto him, How can a man be borne when hee is old? can he enter the ſecond time into his mothers wombe, and bee borne?

5 Ieſus anſwered, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, except a man bee borne of water and of the ſpirit, hee cannot enter into the kingdome of God.

6 That which is borne of the fleſh, is fleſh, and that which is borne of the ſpirit, is ſpirit.

7 Marveile not thou that I ſayd unto thee, Yee muſt be borne from above.

8 The winde bloweth where it liſteth, and thou heareſt the ſound thereof, but canſt not tell whence it commeth, and whither it goeth: So is every one that is borne of the ſpirit.

9 Nicodemus anſwered, and ſaid unto him, How can theſe things be?

10 Ieſus anſwered, and ſaid unto him, Art thou a maſter of Iſrael, and knoweſt not theſe things?

11 Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, Wee ſpeake that we do know, and teſtifie that we have ſeen: and ye receive not our witneſſe.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and yee beleeve not: how ſhall yee beleeve if I tell you of heavenly things?

13 And no man hath aſcended up to heaven, but he that came downe from heaven, even the ſonne of man which is in heaven.

*14 * And as Moſes lift up the ſerpent in the wilderneſſe: even ſo muſt the Sonne of man be lift up:*

Num. 21, 9.

15 That whoſoever beleeveth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have eternall life.

*16 * For God ſo loved the world, that he gave his onely begotten ſonne: that whoſoever beleeveth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life.*

1. Iohn 4. 9.

17 For God ſent not his ſonne into the world to condemne the world: but that the world through him might be ſaved.

18 Hee that beleeveth on him is not condemned: but hee that beleeveth not, is condemned already, becauſe hee hath not beleeved in the name of the onely begotten ſonne of God.

*19 And this is the condemnation, * that light is come into the world, and men loved darkeneſſe rather then light: becauſe their deeds were evill.*

Iohn 1. 4.

20 For every one that evill doeth, hateth the light, neither commeth to the light, leſt his deeds ſhould be reproved.

21 But hee that doth truth, commeth to the light, that his deeds may be made manifeſt, that they are wrought in God.

22 After theſe things IESVS came and his Diſciples into the countrey of Iewry: and there he abode with them, and baptized.

23 And Iohn alſo was baptizing in Ænon beſide Salim; becauſe there was much water there, and they came, and were baptized.

24 For Iohn was not yet caſt into priſon.

25 And there roſe a queſtion of Iohns Diſciples with the Iewes concerning purification.

Ioh.1,19.

27 Iohn anſwered, and ſaid, A man can not receive any thing, unleſſe it be given him from heaven.

28 Your ſelves doe beare me witneſſe, * that I ſaid, I am not CHRIST: but that I am ſent before him.

Ioh.1,20.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. III.

RHEM. 2 5 Borne againe of water.] As no man can enter into this world nor have his life and being in the ſame, except he be borne of his carnall parents: no more can a man enter into the life and ſtate of grace which is in Chriſt, or attaine to life everlaſting, unleſſe he be borne and baptized of water and the holy Ghoſt. Whereby we ſee firſt, this Sacrament to be called our regeneration or ſecond birth, in reſpect of our naturall and carnall which was before. Secondly, that this Sacrament conſiſteth of an externall element of water, and internall vertue of the holy Spirit: wherein it excelleth Iohns Baptiſme, which had the externall element, but not the ſpirituall grace. Thirdly, that no man can enter into the kingdome of God nor into the fellowſhip of holy Church, without it. Whereby the * Pelagians and Calviniſts be condemned that promiſe life everlaſting to young children that die without Baptiſme, and all other that thinke onely faith to ſerve, or the externall element of water ſuperfluous or not neceſſary: our Saviours words being plaine and generall. Though in this caſe, God which hath not bound his grace, in reſpect of his owne freedome, to any Sacrament, may and doth accept them as baptized, which either are martyred before they could be baptized, or elſe depart this life with vow and deſire to have that Sacrament, but by ſome remedileſſe neceſſity could not obtaine it. Laſtly, it is proved that this Sacrament giveth grace ex opere operato, that is, of the worke it ſelfe (which all Proteſtants deny) becauſe it ſo breedeth our ſpirituall life in God, as our carnall birth giveth the life of the world.

Baptiſme in water neceſſary to ſalvation.

* Aug. hæreſ.88. Baptiſme in two caſes not neceſſary, but otherwiſe wiſe ſupplied.

FVLKE 2 It is not neceſſary in this place by water to underſtand materiall water, but rather the purifying grace of Chriſt, as in the 4. Chap. verſ.11. whereof the waſhing with water in Baptiſme, is an outward ſigne or ſeale, which alſo is termed fire, Matth. 3. 11. The water therefore in Baptiſme is not our regeneration properly, but a Sacrament and ſeale thereof. Iſidorus Origin. lib. 7. Cap. de Spirit. Sancto. Aliud eſt aqua Sacramenti, aliud aqua quæ ſignificat Spiritum Dei. Aqua enim Sacramenti viſibilis eſt, aqua Spiritus ſancti inviſibilis eſt. Iſta abluit corpus & ſignificat quid fit in anima: per illum autem Spiritum ſanctum anima mundatur & ſaginatur.

The neceſſity of Baptiſme.

Secondly, where you ſay, that Iohns baptiſme, had not the ſpirituall grace, it is falſe: for it had remiſſion of ſins ioyned with it, Mar. 1.4. although not of the miniſtery of Iohn, but of Chriſt the fountaine of all grace.

Iohns Baptiſme.

Thirdly, where you ſay, No man can enter into the kingdome of heauen, without externall Baptiſme, you teach the contrary your ſelfe ſoone after, ſaying, that in two caſes, it is not neceſſary. And S. Auguſtine affirmeth as much, ſaying, That the viſible Sacrament is then ſupplied inuiſibly, when not the contempt of religion, but the article of neceſſity excluded the myſterie of baptiſme. De Baptiſ. cont. Don. lib 4. cap. 22.

Fourthly, you ſlander Caluin, to match him with the Pelagians, which promiſed eternall life to all infants, without Baptiſme, in reſpect of their innocencie, denying Originall ſinne. Whereas Caluin holdeth all infants under the ſentence of eternall damnation for the guilt of Originall ſinne, yet excepteth the Elect who are borne againe by the Spirit of God, although the Sacrament of Baptiſme be ſometime lacking, not through their default, but becauſe they are prevented by death. In which caſe it is otherwiſe ſupplied, as in your two caſes.

Slander.

Fiftly, you ſlander Caluin and us, whom you charge to thinke, that onely faith doth ſo ſerve, that the externall element of water is ſuperfluous or not neceſſary when is may be had according to Chriſts inſtitution. For in ſome caſes you confeſſe it not neceſſary. And indeed the words of our Saviour Chriſt, are not properly of the externall Sacrament, more then Ioh. 6. of the other Sacrament. Except you eat the fleſh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his bloud, you have no life in you. Whereas all infants are excluded from that Sacrament, and conſequently ſhould be excluded from life, if the words were meant of the outward Sacrament. And the Fathers of the ancient Church, which thought Baptiſme was neceſſary, did likewiſe thinke the Communion to be as neceſſary for infants, as Auguſtine, Innocentius Biſhop of Rome, and all the Churches of their time, for any thing that we can gather by their writings. Finally, when the word of water in this text, ſignifieth the purifying grace of Chriſt, rather then the outward element of Baptiſme, here can be no Argument drawne out of this place, that Sacraments conferre grace of the worke wrought, but according to the diſpenſation of Gods Spirit, which worketh according to his owne pleaſure, as in this Chapter, verſe 8. and 1. Cor. 12.

Slander.

Worke wrought.

RHEM. 18 Is judged already.] He that beleeveth in Chriſt with faith which worketh by charity (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) ſhall not be condemned at the latter day, nor at the houre of his death; but the Infidell, be he Iew, Pagan, or Heretike, is already (if he die in his incredulity) by his owne profeſſion and ſentence condemned, and ſhall not come to judgement either particular or generall, to be diſcuſſed according to his workes of mercy done or omitted. In which ſenſe S. Paul ſaith that the obſtinate Heretike is condemned by his owne judgement, preventing in himſelfe, of his owne freewill, the ſentence both of Chriſt, and of the Church.

Gal.5,6.
Every infidel, and namely heretikes, are judged already.
Tit.3,11.

RHEM. 3 31 He that commeth from above.] As though he ſhould ſay, No marvell that men reſort to Chriſt ſo faſt,[1] and make leſſe account of me; for, his Baptiſme, and his Preaching, and his Perſon, are all from heaven immediatly. He bringeth all from the very boſome, mouth, and ſubſtance of God his Father; whatſoever is in me, is but a little drop of his grace. His Spirit and graces are above all meaſures or meet gifts; even according to his Manhood: and all power temporall and ſpirituall, the kingdome and the Prieſthood, and all ſoveraignty in heaven and earth, are beſtowed upon him as he is man alſo.

The excellencie of Chriſts power and graces.

FVLKE 3 The Doctrine and Baptiſme of Iohn was from heaven, though there was infinite difference betweene the miniſtery of Iohn, and the Majeſtie of Chriſt.

Iohns Baptiſme.

CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 Leaving Iewry becauſe of the Phariſees, in the way to Galilee he talketh with a Samaritane woman, telling her that he will give her water of everlaſting life, 16 ſhewing himſelfe to know mens ſecrets, 19 preferring the Iewes religion before the Samaritanes, but ours (the Chriſtian Catholike religion) before them both, 25 and uttering unto her that he is Chriſt, 28 which by her teſtimony and his preaching very many Samaritanes doe beleeve: he in the meane time foretelling his Diſciples, of the harveſt he will ſend them into. 45 The Galileans alſo receive him, where againe he worketh his ſecond miracle.

FVLKE 1 Popery is not the Catholike Chriſtian Religion which Chriſt preferreth, ſeeing it conſiſteth as much as the Iewiſh or Heatheniſh, in externall obſervation and ceremonies not inſtituted of God, but deviſed by men, to overſhadow the light of the Goſpel, therefore worſhippeth God in vaine, not according to his word, in ſpirit and truth, *Matth.*15.9. *Col.*2.22,23.

Popery is not Catholike Chriſtian Religion.

When IESVS therefore underſtood that the Phariſees heard that IESVS maketh moe Diſciples, and baptizeth, then Iohn,

2 (Howbeit ‡ IESVS did not baptize, but his Diſciples)

3 He left Iewry, and went againe into Galilee.

4 And he had of neceſſity to paſſe thorow Samaria.

The Goſpel upon Friday in the third week in Lent.

5 He commeth therefore into a city of Samaria which is called Sichar: * beſide the mannour that Iacob gave to Ioſeph his ſonne.

Gen.48,2.

6 And there was there the fountaine of Iacob. IESVS therefore wearied of his journey, ſate ſo upon the fountaine. It was about the ſixth houre.

7 There commeth ‡ a woman of Samaria to draw water, IESVS ſaith to her, Give me to drinke.

‡ This woman is a figure of the Church, not yet juſtified, but now to be juſtified, Aug. tract. 15. in Io.

8 For his Diſciples were gone into the city, to buy meats.

After that the Lord knew how the Phariſees had heard that Ieſus made and baptized moe Diſciples then Iohn,

2 (Though that Ieſus himſelfe baptized not, but his Diſciples:)

3 He left Iewry, and departed againe into Galilee.

4 For it was ſo that he muſt needs goe thorow Samaria.

*5 Then commeth hee to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, neere to the poſſeſſion * that Iacob gave to his ſonne Ioſeph.*

Gen.33.19.
& 48.22.
Ioſ.24.32.

6 And there was Iacobs well. Ieſus then being weary of his journey, ſate thus on the well: and it was about the ſixth houre.

7 And there commeth a woman of Samaria to draw water: Ieſus ſaith unto her, Give me drinke.

8 For his Diſciples were gone away unto the towne to buy meat.

9 Therefore that Samaritane woman ſaith to him, How doeſt thou being a Iew, aske of me to drinke, which am a Samaritane woman? For the Iewes ‡ doe not communicate with the Samaritanes.

‡ There were many other cauſes why the faithfull Iewes could not abide the Samaritanes, but their preciſe abſtaining from their company and converſation, was their ſchiſmaticall Temple and ſervice in mount Garizim.

10 Iesvs anſwered, and ſaid to her, If thou didſt know the gift of God, and who he is that ſaith unto thee, Give me to drinke: thou perhaps wouldeſt have asked of him, and he would have giving thee [c]living water.

[c] He ſpeaketh of his baptizing in the holy Ghoſt. See Io. c. 7, 39.

11 The woman ſaith to him, Sir, neither haſt thou wherein to draw, and the well is deepe: whence haſt thou the living water?

12 Art thou greater then our father Iacob, who gave us the well, and himſelfe drank of it, and his children, and his cattell?

13 Iesvs anſwered, and ſaid to her, Every one that drinketh of this water, ſhall thirſt againe: but he that ſhall drinke of the water that I will give him, ſhall not thirſt for ever, 14 But the water that I will give him, ſhall become in him a fountaine of water [b]ſpringing up unto life everlaſting.

15 The woman ſaith to him, Lord, give me this water, that I may not thirſt, nor come hither to draw.

16 Iesvs ſaith to her, Goe, call thy huſband, and come hither.

17 The woman anſwered, and ſaid, I have no husband. Iesvs ſaith to her, Thou haſt ſaid well, that I have no husband.

18 For thou haſt had five husbands: and he whom thou now haſt, is not thy husband, this thou haſt ſaid truly.

19 The woman ſaith to him, Lord, I perceive that thou art a Prophet.

Deut. 12, 6. Pſal. 121, 13.

20 ‖ Our fathers adored in this mountaine, and you ſay, * that at Hieruſalem is the place where men muſt adore.

21 Iesvs ſaith to her, Woman beleeve me, that the houre ſhall come, when you ſhall neither in this mountaine, nor in Hieruſalem adore the Father.

4 King. 17, 28. 36.

22 * You adore that you know not: we adore that we know, for ſalvation is of the Iewes.

23 But the houre commeth, and now it is, when the true adorers ſhall adore the Father ‖ in ſpirit and verity; for the Father alſo ſeeketh ſuch, to adore him.

24 God is a Spirit, and they that adore him, muſt adore in Spirit and verity.

25 The woman ſaith to him, I know that MESSIAS commeth, (which is called CHRIST:) therefore when he commeth, he will ſhew us all things.

26 Iesvs ſaith to her, I am he, that ſpeake with thee.

27 And incontinent his Diſciples came: and they marvelled that he talked with a woman. No man for all that ſaid, What ſeekeſt thou, or why talkeſt thou with her?

9 Then ſaith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou, being a Iew, askeſt drinke of me, which am a woman of Samaria? For the Iewes meddle not with the Samaritanes.

10 Ieſus anſwered, and ſaid unto her, If thou kneweſt the gift of God, and who it is that ſaith to thee, Give me drinke: thou wouldeſt have asked of him, and he would have given thee water of life.

11 The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, thou haſt nothing to draw with, and the well is deepe: from whence then haſt thou that water of life?

12 Art thou greater then our father Iacob, which gave us the well, and he himſelfe dranke thereof, and his children, and his cattell?

13 Ieſus anſwered, and ſaid unto her, Whoſoever drinketh of this water, ſhall thirſt againe:

14 But whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never be more athirſt: but the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up into everlaſting life.

15 The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, give me of that water, that I thirſt not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Ieſus ſaith unto her, Goe, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman anſwered, and ſaid unto him, I have no husband. Ieſus ſaid unto her, Thou haſt well ſaid, I have no husband.

18 For thou haſt had five husbands: and he whom thou now haſt, is not thy husband: In that ſaidſt thou truly.

19 The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a Prophet.

*20 Our fathers worſhipped in this mountaine, and ye ſay that * in Hieruſalem is the place where men ought to worſhip.* Deut. 12. 6.

21 Ieſus ſaith unto her, Woman, beleeve me, the houre commeth, when ye ſhall neither in this mountaine, nor yet at Hieruſalem worſhip the Father.

*22 * Ye worſhip ye wote not what, we know what we worſhip: for ſalvation commeth of the Iewes.* 4 King. 17. 29.

23 But the houre commeth, and now is, when the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit, and in truth: for ſuch the Father alſo requireth to worſhip him.

*24 * God is a Spirit, and they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in ſpirit, and in the truth.* 2 Cor. 3. 17.

25 The woman ſaith unto him, I wote that Meſſias commeth which is called Chriſt: When he is come, he will tell us all things.

26 Ieſus ſaith unto her, I that ſpeake unto thee, am he.

27 And immediatly came his Diſciples and marvelled that he talked with the woman: Yet no man ſaid, What ſeekeſt thou, or, Why talkeſt thou with her?

28 The woman therefore left her waterpot: and ſhe went into the city, and ſayth to thoſe men, 29 Come, and ſee a man that hath told me all things whatſoever I have done. Is not he CHRIST?

30 They went forth therefore out of the city, and came to him.

31 In the meane time the Diſciples deſired him, ſaying, Rabbi eate.

32 But he ſayd to them, I have meate to eate which you know not.

33 The Diſciples therefore ſayd one to another, Hath any man brought him for to eate?

34 Iesvs ſayth to them, My meate is to doe the will of him that ſent me, to perfit his worke.

35 Do not you ſay that yet there are foure moneths, and harveſt commeth? Behold I ſay to you, lift up your eyes, and ſee the countries, that they are white already to harveſt.

36 And he that reapeth, receiveth hire, and gathereth fruit unto life everlaſting: that both he that ſoweth, and he that reapeth, may rejoyce together.

37 For in this is the ſaying true: that it is one man that ſoweth, and it is another that reapeth.

38 I have ſent you to reape that which you laboured not: others have laboured, and you have entred into their labours.

39 And of that city many beleeved in him of the Samaritanes, for the word of the ‡ woman giving teſtimony, that he told me all things whatſoever I have done.

40 Therefore when the Samaritans were come to him, they deſired him that he would tary there. And he taried there two dayes.

41 And many moe beleeved for his owne word.

42 And they ſayd to the woman, That now not for thy ſaying doe we beleeve: for our ſelves have heard, and do know that this is the Saviour of the world indeed.

43 And after the two dayes he departed thence: and went into Galilee.

44 For Iesvs himſelfe gave teſtimony that a Prophet hath not honour in his owne country.

Matt. 4, 12. Mar. 1, 14. Luke 4. 14.

45 Therefore * when he was come into Galilee, the Galilæans received him, whereas they had ſeene all things that he had done at Hieruſalem in the feſtivall day: for themſelves alſo came to the feſtivall day.

The Goſpel upon the 20. Sunday after Pentecoſt. Iohn 2, 9.

46 He came againe therefore into Cana of Galilee, * Where he made water wine. And there was a certaine lord whoſe ſonne was ſicke at Capharnaum.

47 He having heard that Iesvs came from Iewry into Galilee, went to him, and deſired him that he would come downe and heale his ſonne; for he began to die.

28 The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city, and ſayeth to the men, 29 Come, ſee a man which told me all things that ever I did: is not he that Chriſt?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 In the meane while his Diſciples prayed him, ſaying, Maſter, eate.

32 He ſayd unto them, I have meate to eate that ye wot not of.

33 Therfore ſaid the diſciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eate?

34 Ieſus ſayth unto them, My meate is that I doe the will of him that ſent me, and finiſh his worke.

*35 Say not yee, There are yet foure moneths, and then commeth harveſt? Behold, I ſay unto you, Lift up your eyes, and looke on the regions: * for they are white already unto harveſt.* Matt. 9. 37. Luk. 10. 2.

36 And he that reapeth, receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternall: that both he that ſoweth, and he that reapeth, might rejoyce together.

37 And herein is the ſaying true, That one ſoweth, and another reapeth.

38 I ſent you to reape that whereon you beſtowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entred into their labours.

39 Many of the Samaritanes of that city beleeved on him, for the ſaying of the woman, which teſtified, That he tolde me all that ever I did.

40 So, when the Samaritanes were come unto him, they beſought him that he would tarry with them: and hee abode there two dayes.

41 And many moe beleeved, becauſe of his owne word:

42 And ſayd unto the woman, Now we beleeve, not becauſe of thy ſaying: for we have heard him our ſelves, and know that this is even that Chriſt, the Saviour of the world.

43 After two dayes he departed thence, and went away into Galilee;

*44 * For Ieſus himſelfe teſtified, that a Prophet hath none honour in his owne countrey.* Matt. 13. 58. marke 6. 4. luke 4. 24.

45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, when they had ſeene all the things that he did at Hieruſalem at the feaſt: For they went alſo unto the feaſt day.

*46 * So Ieſus came againe into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certaine ruler, whoſe ſonne was ſicke at Capernaum.* Iohn 2. 1.

47 When the ſame heard that Ieſus was come out of Iury into Galilee, he went unto him, and beſought him that he would come downe, and heale his ſonne: for he was even at the poynt of death.

48 IESVS therefore ſayd to him, Vnleſſe you ſee ſignes and wonders, you beleeve not.

49 The Lord ſayth to him, Lord, come downe before that my ſonne die.

50 IESVS ſaith to him, Goe, thy ſonne liveth. The man beleeved the word that IESVS ſayd to him, and went.

51 And as he was now going downe, his ſervants met him: and they brought word, ſaying, That his ſonne lived.

52 He asked therefore of them the houre, wherein he was amended. And they ſayd to him, That yeſterday at the ſeventh houre the fever left him.

53 The father therefore knew that it was in the ſame houre wherein IESVS ſayd to him, Thy ſonne liveth; and himſelfe beleeved and his whole houſe. ☞

Io. 2, 11. 54 This againe the * ſecond ſigne did IESVS, when he was come from Iewry into Galilee.

48 Then ſaid Ieſus unto him, Except ye ſee ſignes and wonders, ye will in no wiſe beleeve.

49 The ruler ſayth unto him, Sir, come downe or ever that my ſonne die.

50 Ieſus ſayth unto him, Goe thy way, thy ſonne liveth. And the man beleeved the word that Ieſus had ſpoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going downe, the ſervants met him, and told him, ſaying, Thy ſonne liveth.

52 Then inquired he of them the houre when he began to amend: and they ſayd unto him, Yeſterday at the ſeventh houre the fever left him.

53 So the father knew, that it was done the ſame houre, in the which Ieſus ſayd unto him, Thy ſonne liveth: and he beleeved, and all his houſhold.

54 This is againe the ſecond miracle that Ieſus did, when he was come out of Iewry into Galilee.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 2. 2 Ieſus did not baptize.] He did not baptize ordinarily; yet that he baptized his Apoſtles, S. Auguſtine thinketh it very probable, ep. 108.

FVLKE 2. S. Auguſtine thinketh the Apoſtles were baptized by Chriſt himſelfe, rather then by Iohn, but without authority of the Scripture, and contrary to this expreſſe text. And therefore we muſt rather admit that which he ſaith in the ſame Epiſtle, reconciling this text with that of Iohn 3.22. That he baptized with the preſence of his Majeſtie, but he baptized not with his owne hands. For the Sacrament of baptiſme was his, but the miniſtery of baptizing, pertained to his diſciples. Againe, he baptized not by himſelfe, but by his diſciples. And Tract. 15. in Ioan. he affirmeth, that Chriſt baptized in ſpirit, as he doth continually, not in body. Chryſoſt. alſo in Ioan. 3.22. hath theſe words: The Evangeliſt ſheweth afterward that Ieſus himſelfe baptized not, but his diſciples, whereupon it is manifeſt, that in this place alſo it is ſo to be underſtood. In Ioan. Hom. 28. and upon this text he ſayth: He himſelfe did not baptize, but the meſſengers did ſo report, when they would ſtirre up the hearers to hatred of him: Hom. 30. Cyrillus alſo upon the former text, ſayth: Chriſt baptized by his diſciples. In Io. lib. 2. cap. 57. Euthymius upon that place Io. 3.22. readeth in the plurall number: They baptized, and not he, for the Evangeliſt ſayth afterward, that Ieſus himſelfe baptized not, but his diſciples. Againe he ſayth, ſome copies have, He baptized, which is underſtood that he did not by himſelfe, but by his diſciples. Bede alſo following S. Auguſtine, ſaith upon this text: Ieſus did both baptize and not baptize. He himſelfe baptized becauſe he himſelfe cleanſed, he himſelfe baptized not, becauſe he did not himſelfe dip in water. Theophylact in Io. 3.22. ſayth: When thou heareſt that he baptized, thinke not that he baptized by himſelfe, but by his diſciples, for that worke of the diſciples, the Evangeliſt referreth to their maſter. Therefore the conſent of ſo many Fathers is to be preferred, before the bare conjecture of one Father, and that againſt the expreſſe words of the text.

Chriſt baptized not with water.

RHEM. 3 39 Woman giving.] This woman myſtically being the Church, it is here ſignified, that they which at the firſt beleeve becauſe the Church teacheth ſo, afterward be much confirmed, finding it in the Scripture alſo, and by other inſtructions.

FVLKE. 3 They which beleeve becauſe the Church teacheth ſo, muſt afterward much rather beleeve, when they heare Chriſt himſelfe, teach in the holy Scriptures.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 4 20 Our fathers adored.] By adoration is meant doing of ſacrifice; for other offices of Religion might be done in any place. The Samaritanes to defend their adoring in Garizim, pretended their worſhipping there to be more ancient then the Iewes in Hieruſalem, referring it to Iacob: whereas indeed that Patriarch adoring there before the Temple was appointed, or the Law given, made nothing for their Schiſme: which was begun by Manaſſes a fugitive Prieſt, only to hold his unlawfull wife thereby, and to obtaine ſuperioritie in Schiſme: which he could not doe in the unity of his brethren: long after the Temple of Hieruſalem, from which the revolt was made. Therefore Chriſt giveth ſentence for the Iewes and the Temple of Hieruſalem, affirming that they had a good ground therof, but the Samaritanes none at all.

The Schiſmaticall temple contendeth againſt the true Temple. Ioſeph. lib. antiq. 11. cap. 8.

Ioſephus alſo recordeth how the Samaritanes demanded of Alexander the Great, the like priviledges, and immunities as he had graunted to the high Prieſt and Temple of Hieruſalem, pretending their Temple to be as great and as worthy, and themſelves to be Iewes as the other, and to worſhip the ſame God, but their Schiſmaticall hypocriſie was eaſily ſpied and dimiſſed with nothing. Another time the Iewes and Samaritanes (as the ſame writer teſtifieth) made a great ſturre in Alexandria about the truth and antiquity of the Schiſmaticall temple and ſervice in Garizim and the other true Temple of Salomon: inſomuch that the matter was put to arbitrement by Ptolomæus the kings commandement, onely to try whether of the two was firſt. And the Schiſmatikes (as their cuſtome is) per ſaltum can make their Church or ſervice as old as they liſt, referring it to the Patriarches, as our Schiſmatikes doe now to Chriſt and the Apoſtles. But when the triall was made, onely they of Hieruſalem did invincibly prove by continuall ſucceſſion of their Prieſts, and by the juſt note of the time when the Schiſmatikes went out from them, that theirs was the lawful, and the other the falſe temple and falſe adoration; and ſo it was judged, and the Samaritanes put to ſilence. Afterward the ſayd Schiſmatikes (which is lightly the end of all Schiſmes) revolted quite from the Iewes religion, and dedicated their temple in Garizim to Iupiter Olympius, as Calvins ſupper and his bread and wine is like at length to come to the ſacrifice of Ceres and Bacchus.

The true Temple is proved by continuall ſucceſſion.

FVLKE 4 By adoration, is meant worſhipping of God generally as the word plainely ſignifieth, and not offring of ſacrifice

True worſhip of God.

[illegible] of Religi[illegible] place, by them [illegible] with [illegible] T[illegible] reſpect of [illegible] it had [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible], was directly contrary to the hol[illegible] Neither had the true T[illegible]ple at Hieruſalem [illegible] in the true worſhip of God, for it was divers times prophaned, and the worſhip of God cleane taken [illegible] it, as in the dayes of Achaz 2. Reg. 16. and in the time of Manaſſes 2. Reg. 21. Then was it layd waſte and deſtroyed, by the ſpace of 70. yeares, and was not after that fully builded in 46. yeares Ioan 3. After that reſtitution it was divers times prophaned and polluted with idolatry, as in the tyranny of Antiochus, when it was dedicated to Iupiter Olympius. 1. Mac. 6. and at other times. Therefore the authority of the Scripture, was the onely ſufficient warrant thereof, as it is of true religion at this day. The Lord revenge your blaſphemy againſt his holy Supper, which is celebrated by our Church, according to that we have received of the Lord himſelfe in the Goſpel, where[illegible] you c[illegible] ſhew no ground for your Popiſh Maſſe.

The authority of the Scripture. Slander.

RHEM. 5 23 In ſpirit and verity.] Our Saviour foretelleth her that the end and ceaſing of their ſacrifice and adoration in both the Temples ſhould ſhortly be, and even then was begun to be fulfilled: inſtructing her in three things concerning that point, 1. That the true ſacrifice ſhould be tied no more to that one place or nation, but that true adoration ſhould be throughout all Nations, according to the Prophecy of Malachy. 2. That the groſſe and carnall adoration by the fleſh and blood of beaſts and other externall [illegible] creatures, not having in them grace, ſpirit, and life, ſhould be taken away, and another ſacrifice ſuceed, which ſhould be in it ſelfe inviſible, celeſtiall, divine, ful of life, ſpirit and grace; and 3. That this adoration and ſacrifice ſhould be the verity it ſelfe, whereof all the former ſacrifices and hoſts were but ſhadowes and figures; and he calleth that heere ſpirit and truth, which in the firſt Chapter is called grace and truth. All which is no more but a prophecie and deſcription of the Sacrifice of the faithfull Gentiles in the body and blood of Chriſt: not that it is not by externall meanes given to us (for otherwiſe we being men conſiſting of fleſh and blood could not be capable thereof) but that it is ſpirit and life in it ſelfe, being the fleſh of the WORD of God. And if a man inlarge the word of Adoration, (which heere as is ſayd, ſignifieth properly the worſhip of God by ſacrifice) to all the Sacraments of the new Law, they all likewiſe be ſpirit and grace, the holy Ghoſt working inviſibly and internally upon our ſoules by every one of them: whereupon our Baptiſme, is water and the Holy Ghoſt: our Penance, the word of abſolution and the holy Ghoſt: our Confirmation, oyle and the holy Ghoſt by impoſition of hands: finally, all the adoration of the Catholike Church, is properly ſpirituall, though certaine externall creatures for our natures, ſtate and neceſſity, be joyned thereunto. Take heede therefore thou gather not of Chriſts words, that Chriſtian men ſhould have no uſe of externall office towards God: for that would take away all ſacrifice, Sacraments, Prayers, Churches and ſociety of men in his Service.

Mal. 1, 17.

Io. 1, 17.

Chriſtian adoration throughout all nations in every place, in ſpirit and verity: that is, in the Sacraments and ſervice of the new law, full of ſpirit and grace: in the verity of things before prefigured, ſpecially the true ſacrifice of Chriſts body and blood.

FVLKE 5. The ſpirituall ſacrifice propheſied by Malachie, is interpreted by all ancient writers that ſpeake of it, to be prayers and thankeſgiving, and not the oblation of the naturall body of Chriſt, but the ſacrifice of thankeſgiving, offered in the celebration thereof. Irenæus lib. 4. c. 35 Iuſtinus dial. cum Tryphon. Tertull. adver. Iudæos & contra Marc. lib. 3. Cypr. lib. 3. Cypr. lib. 1. adver. Iudæos, Num. 16. Chryſoſt. in Pſ. 93. & 95. Hier. in Zach lib. 2. c. 8. in Malach. c. 1. Cyril in Ioan. lib 2. cap. 91. Aug. adverſus Iudæos [illegible] 9. Theod. in Malach. 1. who alleageth this very text, and Paul 1. Tim. 8. for Prayer. S. Auguſtine alſo, applyeth it to ſpirituall and inward prayer. Tract. 15. Chryſoſtome to the ſpirituall ſacrifice of our ſelves, required of the Apoſtle, Rom. 12. In Ioan. Hom 32. Cyril underſtandeth by ſpirit, ſpirituall worſhip, and the rule of life according to the doctrine of the Goſpel, which is acceptable to God the Father. In Ioan. lib. 2. c. 93. Origen to the ſame effect underſtandeth worſhip proceeding from them, which having the earneſt of the ſpirit, walke according to the ſpirit. In Ioan. Tom. 14. Euthymius expoundeth it, for prayers, prayſes, and thankeſgiving, and the ſacrifice of righteouſneſſe. Theophylact, for worſhipping of God in mind & ſoule. So that the whole conſent of the ancient Fathers, beſide the evidence of the text, is contrary to this popiſh interpretation, whereby ſpirit and truth is referred to the groſſe counterfeit ſacrifice of the Maſſe. Finally, though ſome externall elements, as water, bread, and wine by the Scripture, are required unto the ſervice of God, in reſpect of our infirmity, yet the true worſhip of God even in the uſe of theſe, as of any other externall rite allowed by the Scripture, is in ſpirit and truth, not in body and ſhadow.

Sacrifice of the Maſſe.

CHAP. V.

Curing a bedrid man at the pond of miracle, becauſe he doth it on the Sabbath, the blind Iewes do perſecute him: 7 and againe becauſe he ſaith that God is his naturall father. 19 He thereupon continueth ſaying, the Fathers operation and his to be in every thing all one, and that he ſhall doe greater things then theſe miraculous cures, to wit, 21 quicken the dead in ſoule by ſin, as being appointed judge of all, 28 yea and quicken the dead in bodies alſo; incontinent judging all uprightly. 31 And that theſe are not brags of his owne, but his witneſſes to be, 33 Iohn Baptiſt, 36 his owne miraculous works, 37 his fathers voyce at his baptiſme, 39 the ſcriptures alſo namely of Moſes.

The Goſpel upon Friday in the firſt weeke of Lent.

AFter theſe things there was a feſtivall day of the Iewes, and IESVS went up to Hieruſalem.

2 And there is at Hieruſalem upon b Probatica a || pond which in Hebrew is ſurnamed † Bethſaida, having five porches.

3 In theſe lay a great multitude of ſicke perſons, of blind, lame, withered, expecting the ſtirring of the water.

4 And an Angel of our Lord deſcended at a certaine time into the pond: and the water was ſtirred. And he that had gone downe firſt into the pond, after the ſtirring of the water, was made whole of whatſoever infirmity he was holden.

5 And there was a certaine man there that had beene eight and thirty yeares in his infirmity.

b By our Latine text and the Greeke, this miraculous pond was in or upon Probatica, that is, a place where the ſheepe to be ſacrificed were kept. But by other latine copies, S. Hierom, and ſome Greeke fathers, Probatica is the very pond it ſelfe: ſo called, becauſe the ſheep of ſacrifice were there waſhed.

† Betheſda.

*AFter * this, there was a feaſt day of the Iewes, and Ieſus went up to Hieruſalem.*

2 And there is at Hieruſalem by the ſheepe † market, a poole, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Betheſda, having five porches:

3 In which lay a great multitude of ſicke folke, of blind, halt, and withered, waiting for the moving of the water.

4 For an Angel went downe at a certaine ſeaſon into the poole, and troubled the water: Whoſoever then firſt after the troubling of the water ſtepped in, was made whole of whatſoever diſeaſe he had.

5 And a certaine man was there, which had beene diſeaſed thirty and eight yeares.

Multum tem- haberet.

6 Him when IESVS had ſeene lying, and knew that ª he had now a long time, he ſayth to him, Wilt thou bee made whole?

7 The ſicke man anſwered him, Lord, I have no man when the water is troubled, to put me into the pond. For whiles I come, an other goeth downe before me.

8 IESVS ſaith to him, Ariſe, take up thy bed, and walke.

9 And forthwith he was made whole: and he tooke up his bed, and walked. And it was the Sabboth that day.

10 The Iewes therefore ſayd to him that was healed, It is the Sabboth, thou mayeſt not take up thy bed.

11 He anſwered them, He that made me whole, he ſayd to me, Take up thy bed, and walke?

12 They asked him therefore, What is that man that ſayd to thee, Take up thy bed, and walke?

13 But he that was made whole, knew not who it was. For IESVS ſhrunke aſide from the multitude ſtanding in the place.

14 Afterward IESVS findeth him in the Temple, and ſayd to him, Behold, thou art made whole: ‖ ſinne no more, leſt ſome worſe thing chance to thee.

15 That man went his way, and told the Iewes that it was IESVS that made him whole. ☞

16 Thereupon the Iewes perſecuted IESVS, becauſe he did theſe things on the Sabboth.

17 But IESVS anſwered them, My father worketh untill now: and I doe worke.

18 Thereupon therfore the Iewes ſought the more to kill him: becauſe he did not only breake the Sabboth, but alſo he ſayd God was his father, making himſelfe equall to God.

19 IESVS therefore anſwered, and ſaid to them, Amen, Amen I ſay to you, The Sonne cannot doe any thing of himſelfe, but that which he ſeeth the Father doing. For what things ſoever he doth, theſe the Sonne alſo doth in like maner.

20 For the Father loveth the Sonne, and ſheweth him all things that himſelfe doeth, and greater workes then theſe will he ſhew him, that you may marvell.

21 For as the Father doth raiſe the dead and quickeneth: ſo the Sonne alſo quickeneth whom he will.

22 For neither doth the Father judge any man: but all judgement he hath given to the Sonne, 23 That all may honour the Sonne, as they doe honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Sonne, doth not honour the Father, who ſent him.

24 Amen,

6 When Ieſus ſaw him lye, and knew that he now long time had beene diſeaſed, he ſayth unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

7 The ſicke man anſwered him, Sir, I have no man when the water is troubled, to put mee into the poole: but in the meane time, while I am about to come, another ſteppeth downe before mee.

8 Ieſus ſaith unto him, Riſe, take up thy bed, and walke.

9 And immediatly the man was made whole, and tooke up his bed and walked. And on the ſame day was the Sabbath.

*10 The Iewes therefore ſaid unto him that was made whole, It is the Sabbath day, * it is not lawfull for thee to carry thy bed.* Iere.17.21.

11 He anſwered them, He that made me whole, ſayd unto me, Take up thy bed, and walke.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which ſayd unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walke?

13 And he that was healed, wiſt not who it was: for Ieſus had gotten himſelfe away, becauſe that there was preaſe of people in that place.

14 Afterward Ieſus findeth him in the Temple, and ſayd unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: ſinne no more, leſt a worſe thing come unto thee.

15 The man departed, and told the Iewes that it was Ieſus which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Iewes perſecute Ieſus, and ſought the meanes to ſlay him, becauſe he had done theſe things on the Sabbath day.

17 Ieſus anſwered them, My father worketh hitherto, and I worke.

18 Therefore the Iewes ſought the more to kill him, not only becauſe he had broken the Sabbath, but ſaid alſo that God was his father, and making himſelfe equall with God.

19 Then anſwered Ieſus and ſayd unto them, Verely, verely I ſay unto you, The ſonne can doe nothing of himſelfe, but that he ſeeth the father doe: for whatſoever he doth, that alſo doth the ſonne likewiſe.

20 For the Father loveth the ſonne, and ſheweth him all things that he himſelfe doth: and he will ſhew him greater workes then theſe, becauſe ye ſhould marvell.

21 For likewiſe as the Father raiſeth up the dead, and quickeneth them: even ſo the Sonne quickeneth whom he will.

22 Neyther judged the Father any man: but hath committed all judgement unto the Sonne, 23 Becauſe that all men ſhould honour the Sonne, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Sonne, the ſame honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him.

Secondly, that* [illegible] were ſanctified: for this pond [illegible] ally which be by uſe and occupying in ſacred functions [illegible] were firſt waſhed, [illegible] the carcaſſe of ſheepe (therefore called Probatica) and other beaſts to be ſacrificed, [illegible] waters [illegible] S. How much more may we acknowledge ſuch workes of God [illegible] Sacrifice or Sacraments of the New Teſtament, which faithleſſe men [illegible] Thirdly, that this operation was [illegible] at one time then at another [illegible] (for this was the feaſt of Paſche or of Pentecoſt) [illegible] then other vulgar times [illegible] which ſheweth that we ſhould not [illegible] to ſee dayes more ſanctified and when the people made greater concourſe [illegible] great miracles done at the Memories and feaſts of Martyrs or other great Feſtivities, more then at other places and times. Yea ſixtly, we may conſider that in ſuch caſes to make the matter more marvelous, and more earneſtly to be ſought for, and to ſignifie to us that God hath all ſuch extraordinary operations in his owne will and commandement, without all rules of our reaſons and queſtioning, none could be healed but that perſon who firſt could get into the pond after the Angell came and ſtirred the ſame. Seventhly, that theſe graces of corporall cures given to this water, [illegible] prefigure the like force of the Sacrament of Baptiſme for the cure of ſoules, [illegible] we neede not ſeeke the correſpondence thereof to the figure in every point. Laſtly, Chriſt by his power of excellency and prerogative would and did heale this poore man that could get no body to helpe him into the water, becauſe he earneſtly and long deſired the remedy by God appointed, but was excluded by neceſſity: [illegible] Lord ſaveth all ſuch [illegible] Baptiſme, if they in their owne perſons earneſtly [illegible] deſired, and ſought for the ſame.

FVLKE 4 All miracles that God did from the beginning, are not recorded in the Scripture, but ſo many as are neceſſary for the confirmation of the Church in faith to attaine eternall life. And now concerning your obſervations, I ſay it is not prooved by this place, that God giveth vertue of miracles [illegible] for then it ſhould have beene alike medicinable at all times. Secondly, the text calleth not the pond probatica, but ſaith, that at or neere probatica, which was the ſheepe gate, there was a pond called Betheſda, Neh. 3. [illegible] And albeit the ſheepe appointed for ſacrifice were waſhed therein for commendation of the ſacrifice, (which is not prooved) yet [illegible] that therefore miracles are wrought about the Sacraments of the new Teſtament, otherwiſe then we reade in the Scripture of the gifts of the holy [illegible] of the word of Chriſt, and [illegible] to be confirmed baptized. For [illegible] that this miracle [illegible] when we ſee them, [illegible] it pleaſed God. As for the miracles done [illegible] and — Miracles needleſſe about the Sacraments. — Miracles.

[illegible] they are to be condemned with the workers of them. [illegible] knowne to be [illegible] muſt [illegible] God [illegible] Se[illegible] we [illegible] on [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] grace of Chriſt to pertaine to infants, which are excluded [illegible] without any [illegible] of [illegible] to Gods election. — Neceſſity of Baptiſme.

RHEM. 5. 14 [illegible] no more.] We may [illegible] that this man [illegible] infirmity was for puniſhment of [illegible] and that men often attribute their [illegible] defects, and ſeeke for remedies of the world [illegible] the ſame for which it was ſent, [illegible] ted of: and therefore that in all [illegible] men ſhould firſt turne to God and goe to their ghoſtly father, and then call for the worldly Phyſicians afterward. — Sinne the cauſe of ſickeneſſe [illegible] firmities.

FVLK. 5. God is our Ghoſtly Father, to whom wee muſt go by repentance for releaſe of his fatherly correction, and not to any Popiſh prieſt.

RHEM. 6. 34 I receive not.] Our Maſter meaneth that mans teſtimonie is not neceſſarie to him, nor that the truth of his Divinitie dependeth on worldly witneſſes or mens commendations: though to us ſuch teſtimonies be agreeable and neceſſarie; and ſo for our inſtruction he vouchſafed to take the teſtimonies of Iohn the Baptiſt and Moſes and the Prophets: and departing out of this world, to ſend forth all his Apoſtles, and in them all Biſhops and lawefull Paſtors to be his witneſſes from Hieruſalem to the ends of the world.

FVLK. 6. The teſtimonies of Iohn, Moſes, and the Prophets, are not the teſtimonies of men, but of God, ſpeaking by men. So of his Apoſtles, Biſhops, and Paſtors, teſtifying of him out of the Scriptures, which are the word of God, and not of man.

RHEM. 7. 39 Search the Scriptures.] He reprehendeth the Iewes, that reading daylie the Scriptures, and acknowledging that in them they ſhould finde life and ſalvation, they yet looked over them ſo ſuperficially that they could not finde therein him to be CHRIST their king, Lord, life, and Saviour. For the ſpeciall maſters and Scribes of the Iewes then, were like unto our Hereticks now, who be ever talking and turning and ſhuffling the Scriptures, but are of all men moſt ignorant in the deepe knowledge thereof. And therefore our Maſter referreth them not to the reading onely or learning them without booke, or having the ſentences thereof glorioùſly painted or written in their Temple, houſes, or coates: but to the deepe ſearch of the meaning and myſteries of the Scriptures; which are not ſo eaſily to be ſeene in the letter. — Neither Iewes nor Hereticks find the truth, becauſe they ſearch not the Scriptures deepely but read ſuperficially.

FVLK. 7. We confeſſe, that the Scriptures are not onely to be read, written, or painted on walles, but diligently to be ſearched, and deeply to be ſtudied, in which we know æternall life is to be found, without all addition of Popiſh doctrine which is not to be found in holy Scriptures. Chryſoſtome upon this text ſaith, Hom. 39. in Ioan. Chriſt ſendeth us to the teſtimony of the Scriptures. By this example let us take from them armour againſt Hereticks. The whole Scripture inſpired of God is profitable to teach, to reprove, to correct, to inſtruct in juſtice, that the man of God may be perfect, furniſhed to every good worke. Not that he may abound in ſome things, and in other things be wanting, for ſuch an one is not perfect. — The ſufficiency of the Scriptures

CHAP. VI.

Having with five loaves fed five thouſand, 16 (walking alſo the night after upon the ſea) 22 to the morrow the people thereupon reſorting unto him, 27 he preacheth unto them of the bread which he will give, telling them that he is come from heaven, and therefore able to give ſuch bread as can quicken the world, even his owne fleſh: and that all his elect ſhall beleeve as much. 60 Many notwithſtanding doe murmure at this doctrine, yea and become Apoſtataes, though he tell them that they ſhall ſee by his aſcenſion into heaven, that he is deſcended from heaven, but the Twelve ſticke unto him, beleeving that he is God omnipotent, as he ſaid. Among whom alſo (that no man be ſcandalized) he ſignifieth that he foreknoweth which will become a traitor: as among the foreſaid, which would become Apoſtataes.

The 3. part. HIS ACTES In Galilee and in Iewrie about the third Paſche and after.

The GOSPEL upon Midlent Sunday. Mat. 14, 13. Marke. 6, 32. Lu. 9, 10.

AFter theſe things IESVS went beyond the ſea of Galilee which is of Tiberias:

2 And a great multitude followed him becauſe they ſaw the ſignes which he did upon thoſe that were ſicke.

3 IESVS therfore went up into the mountaine, and there he ſate with his Diſciples.

4 And the Paſche was at hand, the feſtivall day of the Iewes.

5 When IESVS therefore had lifted up his eyes, and ſaw that a very great multitude commeth to him, he ſaith to Philip, Whence ſhall we buy bread: that theſe may eate?

6 And this he ſaid, tempting him; for himſelfe knew what he would doe.

7 Philip anſwered him, Two hundred penny-worth of bread is not ſufficient for them, that every man may take a litle peice.

8 One of his Diſciples, Andrew the brother of Simon Peter, ſayth to him,

9 There

AFter theſe things, Ieſus went his way over the ſea of Galilee, which is the ſea of Tiberias:

2 And a great multitude followed him, becauſe they ſaw his miracles which he did on them that were diſeaſed.

3 And Ieſus went up into a mountaine and there he ſate with his Diſciples.

*4 And the Paſſeover, a feaſt of the Iewes, was nigh. — Levit. 23. 2. Deut. 16. 1.

*5 When Ieſus then lift up his eyes, and ſaw a great company come unto him, he ſaith unto Philip, Whence ſhal we buy bread, that theſe may eat? — Mat. 14. 1[illegible] Mar. 6. 38. Luke. 9. 13.

6 (This he ſaid to prove him: for he himſelfe knew what he would doe.)

7 Philip anſwered him, Two hundred peny worth of bread are not ſufficient for them, that everie man may take a litle.

8 One of his Diſciples, Andrew, Simon Peters brother, ſaith unto him,

9 There is a boy here that hath five barley loaves and two fiſhes: but what are theſe among ſo many?

10 Iesvs therefore ſaith, Make the men to ſit downe. And there was much graſſe in the place. The men therefore ſate downe, in number about five thouſand.

11 Iesvs therefore tooke the loaves: and when he had given thankes, he diſtributed to them that ſate; in like maner alſo of the fiſhes as much as they would.

12 And after they were filled, he ſaid to his Diſciples, Gather the fragments that are remaining, leſt they be loſt.

13 They gathered therefore, and filled twelve baskets with fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained to them that had eaten.

14 Thoſe men therefore when they had ſeene what a ſigne Iesvs had done, ſaid, That this is the Prophet indeed that is to come into the world.

15 Iesvs therefore when hee knew that they would come to take him, and make him King, * he fled again into the mountaine himſelfe alone.

Mat. 14,23. Mar. 6,47.

16 And when even was come, his Diſciples went downe to the ſea.

17 And when they were gone up into the ſhip, they came beyond the ſea into Capharnaum; and now it was darke, and Iesvs was not come unto them.

18 And the ſea aroſe, by reaſon of a great winde that blew.

19 When they had rowed therefore about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they ſee Iesvs walking upon the ſea, and to draw nigh to the ſhip, and they feared.

20 But he ſayth unto them, It is I, feare not.

21 They would therefore have taken him into the ſhip: and forthwith the ſhip was at the land to which they went.

22 The next day, the multitude that ſtood beyond the ſea, ſaw that there was noe other boat there but one, and that Iesvs had not entred into the boat with his Diſciples, but that his Diſciples onely were departed:

23 But other boats came in from Tiberias beſide the place where they had eaten the bread, our Lord ‡ giving thanks.

‡ Theſe words do plainly import, that the giving thankes was an effectuall bleſſing of the bread and working the multiplication thereof.

24 When therefore the multitude ſaw that Iesvs was not there, nor his Diſciples, they went up into the boates, and came to Capharnaum ſeeking Iesvs.

25 And when they had found him beyond the ſea, they ſaid to him, Rabbi, when cameſt thou hither?

26 Iesvs anſwered them, & ſaid, Amen, amen I ſay unto you, you ſeek me not becauſe you have ſeene ſignes, but becauſe you did eate of the loaves, and were filled.

9 There is a little lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two fiſhes: but what are they among ſo many?

10 And Ieſus ſaid, Make the people ſit downe. There was much graſſe in the place. So the men ſate downe, in number about five thouſand.

11 And Ieſus tooke the bread, and when he had given thankes, he diſtributed to the diſciples, and the diſciples to them that were ſet downe, & likewiſe of the fiſhes, as much as they would.

12 When they were filled, he ſaid unto his Diſciples, Gather up the broken meate that remaineth that nothing be loſt.

13 And they gathered it together, and filled twelve baskets with the broken meat of the five barley loaves, which broken meat remained unto them that had eaten.

14 Then thoſe men, when they had ſeen the miracles that Ieſus did, ſaid, This is of a truth the ſame Prophet that ſhould come into the world.

15 When Ieſus therefore perceived that they would come and take him up by force, to make him king, he departed againe into a mountaine himſelfe alone.

*16 * And when even was now come, his Diſciples went downe unto the ſea,*

Mat. 14.23. mar. 6.47.

17 And gate up into a ſhip, and went over the ſea towards Capernaum: and it was now darke, and Ieſus was not come to them.

18 And the ſea aroſe with a great winde that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they ſaw Ieſus walking on the ſea, and drawing nigh unto the ſhip: and they were afraid.

20 But he ſaith unto them, It is I, be not afraid.

21 And they would have received him into the ſhip, and immediately the ſhip was at the land whither they went.

22 The day following, when the people which ſtood on the other ſide of the ſea, ſaw that there was none other ſhip there, ſave that one whereinto his Diſciples were entred, and that Ieſus went not in with his Diſciples into the ſhip, but that his Diſciples were gone away alone:

23 Howbeit, there came other ſhips from Tiberias, nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks.

24 When the people therefore ſaw that Ieſus was not there, neither his Diſciples, they alſo tooke ſhipping, and came to Capernaum, ſeeking for Ieſus.

25 And when they had found him on the other ſide of the ſea, they ſaid unto him, Rabbi, when cameſt thou hither?

26 Ieſus anſwered them, and ſaid, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Ye ſeeke me, not becauſe ye ſaw the miracles, but becauſe ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 || Worke not the meate that periſheth, but that endureth unto life everlaſting, which the Sonne of man will give you. For him the Father, God, hath ſigned.

28 They ſaid therefore unto him, What ſhall we doe that we may worke the works of God?

29 Iesvs anſwered, and ſaid to them, This is the worke of God, that you beleeve in him whom he hath ſent.

30 They ſaid therefore to him, What ſigne therefore doeſt thou, that we may ſee, and may beleeve thee? what workeſt thou?

62 What *and if ye ſhall ſee the Sonne of man aſcend * up thither where he was before?*

63 It is the ſpirit that quickneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing: The words that I ſpeake vnto you, are ſpirit and life.

64 But there are ſome of you that believe not: For Ieſus knew from the beginning, which they were that beleeued not, and who ſhould betraye him, 65 And he ſaid, Therefore ſayd I vnto you, that no man can come vnto me, except it were giuen vnto him of my Father.

66 From that time many of his Diſciples went backe, and walked no more with him.

67 Then ſayd Ieſus vnto the Twelue, Will yee alſo goe away?

68 Then Simon Peter anſwered him, Lord to 69 And we haue beleeued, and haue knowen that thou art Chriſt the Sonne of God.

70 IESVS anſwered them, Haue not I choſen you the Twelue: and one of you is a deuil?

71 And he meant Iudas Iſcariote, Simons ſonne: for this ſame was to betray him, whereas he was one of the Twelue.

27 Worke not the meat.] By their greedy ſeeking after him for meat of the body, he taketh occaſion to draw them to the deſire of a more excellent food, which he had to giue them, and ſo by little to open vnto them the great ſecret and myſterie of the bleſſed Sacrament: which (as he proueth) doth not onely farre paſſe their ordinary bread, or his marueilous multiplied loaues, but Manna it ſelfe, which they thought came from heauen, and ſo much wondered at.

FVLK. 1

Wicked men receiue not the body and blood of Chriſt.

The Sacrament (ſaith S. Auguſtine) is of ſome receiued vnto deſtruction: but the matter it ſelfe, whereof it is a Sacrament, is to euery man to life, of no man to deſtruction, whoſoeuer ſhall be partaker of it, In Ioan. Tract. 26. Therefore the [illegible] Chriſt, are not of the Sacrament, but of the matter of the Sacrament, which is his fleſh and bloud, which is eaten ſpiritually by faith, whereof alſo S. Auguſtine ſaith: Why prepareſt thou thy teeth and bellie? Beleeue, and thou haſt eaten it, Tract. 25.

Gen.49,11.

What ſignifieth, The true bread.

Luke 24,35. Act.2,42. 20,7. 1 Cor.10.

The bleſſed Sacrament called bread.

32 The true bread.] *Though the perſon of Chriſt incarnate, euen out of the Sacrament alſo, be meate vnder the Metaphors of bread and drinke from heauen: and our beleefe in him, be ſignified by eating and feeding: yet the cauſe why they ſhould be recommended vnto vs in ſuch termes, were, that he was to be eaten and drunken indeed in the formes of bread and wine: for the which cauſe his body on the Croſſe is called * his bread: and his blood ſhed on the Croſſe, * the blood of the grape: no doubt becauſe the ſame body and blood were in the holy Sacrament to be eaten and drunken. In which ſpeeches, either of Chriſts perſon generally, or peculiarly of the ſame as in the bleſſed Sacrament, the terme bread is not taken properly and ſpecially for that ſubſtance which is of corne, and called with vs bread: but generally for food or meat, and therefore it hath ioyned with it lightly a terme ſignifying a more excellent ſort of ſuſtinance: as, the true bread, the bread of heauen, the bread of life, ſuperſubſtantiall bread, in which ſort the holy Sacrament, which is Chriſts body, is both here, and in S. Luke and S. Paul alſo, often called bread, euen after Conſecration: not onely for that it was made of bread, but becauſe it is bread more truly, and by more excellent propertie and calling, then that which ordinarily is named bread.*

Tranſubſtantiation.

The true bread here ſignifieth, the true food of eternall life. But thereof it followeth not, that the Sacramentall bread, is called bread in the Scripture in the ſame ſenſe, as though it were not materiall bread made of corne after conſecration, but onely ſpirituall food. For ſeeing it was materiall bread, before conſecration, there is no word of Scripture, to proue, that it is not ſo ſtill. But contrariwiſe, the cup is called the fruit of the vine, after conſecration, which is wine, ſaith Chryſ. in Mat. hom. 83. Therefore, the bread is likewiſe bread made of cornes, and ſo S. Cyprian ſaith it is, Lib. 1. Ep. 6. Magno. As for the doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, was not heard of in the Church, for more then ſix hundred yeeres after Chriſt. See Annot. in Mat. 26 Sect. 8. The places of Ier. 11. and Gen. 49. though of ſome ancient writers, they be referred to Chriſt, yet if they be rightly conſidered, pertaine not vnto him. The former is, of the aduerſaries of Ieremie, who conſpired to famiſh him in priſon, and ſaid, Let vs deſtroy him with wood in ſtead of bread. The other place is, of the abundance of wine, that ſhould grow in the land of the tribe of Iuda. But if we follow the old writers expoſition, they make nothing for Tranſubſtantiation.

God draweth vs without forcewill. Aug. cont. duas Ep. Pel. lib. 1. c. 19. & Ser. 2. de verb. Ap. cap. 2.

44 Draw him.] The Father draweth vs and teacheth vs to come to his Sonne, and to beleeue theſe high and hard myſteries of his incarnation and of feeding vs with his owne ſubſtance in the Sacrament: not compelling or violently forcing any againſt their will or without any reſpect of their conſent, as Heretikes pretend: but by the ſweet internall motions and perſwaſions of his grace and Spirit he wholly maketh vs of our owne will and liking to conſent to the ſame.

[illegible] Free-will.

Without force or violence, of vnwilling he maketh us willing, by changing our will to embrace Chriſt gladly, and otherwiſe we neuer taught. Yet our will by corruption of nature, is bond to ſinne, and not free, before it be altered by Gods Spirit. The words of Auguſtine, In cont. 2. Ep. Pel. lib. 1. cap. 19. be theſe, How many enemies of Chriſt euery day, by the ſecret grace of God are ſuddenly drawne to Chriſt? Which words if I had taken out of the Goſpel, how many things would this Pelagian Heretike haue ſaid of me for it, when euen now he wreſtleth not againſt me, but againſt him which crieth, No man can come vnto me, except the Father which ſent me ſhall draw him. For he doth not ſay, ſhall leade him, that we might by any meanes thinke that his will doth goe before. Who is drawne if hee were willing before? and yet no man commeth except he be willing. Therefore he is drawne by marueilous meanes, that he may be willing by him which knoweth to worke within, euen in the hearts of men, Not that men, (which cannot be) ſhould beleeue againſt their will, but that of vnwilling, they may be made willing. In the other place he ſaith, That he might teach vs that euen to beleeue is of gift, not of merit, As I ſaid vnto you, ſaith he, no man commeth to me, but he to whom it is giuen of my Father. And where our Lord ſaid this, if we remember the Goſpel before, we ſhall finde that he ſaid alſo: No man commeth to me, except the Father which ſent me ſhall draw him. He ſaid not, ſhall leade him, but, ſhall draw him. This violence is done to the heart, not to the fleſh. Why then doeſt thou maruell? Beleeue, and thou commeſt: Loue, and thou art drawne. Thinke not that this is a ſharpe and grieuous violence, it is ſweet, it is pleaſant, Sweetneſſe it ſelfe doth draw thee. Theſe ſayings we allow better then you, which maintaine Free-will in part, with the Pelagians.

The manifold preeminences of the bleſſed Sacrament aboue Manna.

49 Manna, and died.] The Heretikes holding the Fathers of the old Teſtament to haue eaten of the ſame meat, and to haue had as good Sacraments as we, be here refuted: Chriſt putting a plaine difference in the very ſubſtance thereof, and in the graces and effects much more at large. Manna was onely a figure of the bleſſed Sacrament, though a very excellent figure thereof for many cauſes. It came in a ſort from heauen, our Sacrament more: it was made by God miraculouſly, our Sacrament more: it was to be eaten for the time of their peregrination, our Sacrament more: it was to euery man what he liked beſt, our Sacrament more: a little thereof ſerued and ſufficed, as well as much, our Sacrament more: it was reſerued for ſuch dayes as it could not be gathered, and our Sacrament much more: it was kept for a memoriall in the Arke of the Teſtament, our Sacrament much more: the diſcontented and incredulous murmured and gaine-ſaid it, ſo our Sacrament much more: it ſuſtained their bodies in the deſert, our Sacrament both body and ſoule much more.

They that [illegible] and faith, as they that eat the [illegible] spiritually, [illegible] Christ, 1 Cor. 10. 4. [illegible] the A[illegible] the same spirituall meat, that we doe, [illegible] which was Christ, as we doe. So doth S. Augustine understand the F[illegible] place, saying, [illegible] in Manna, [illegible] whosoever understood Christ in Manna, did eat the same spirituall meat [illegible] their bellies of Manna, which were the fathers of the unfaithfull they have eaten and are dead. So also the same drinke. For the rocke was Christ. They dranke therefore the same drinke that we doe, but spirituall drinke, that is, which was received by faith, not which was drunke in with the body, De utilitate pœnitent. cap. 1. Christ therefore putteth no difference betweene the spirituall substance of Manna, and his flesh and blood: but betweene the corporall food, which being received into the bellie, and not into the heart by faith, had no power of eternall life in it. And Manna was not a figure of the Sacrament, but of the body and blood of Christ, which is the heavenly or spirituall matter of the Sacrament. For all that receive the Sacrament, doe die naturally, as all they that did eat Manna, and as many as receive it unworthily, deserve also to die spiritually, as they did that received Manna unworthily. The comparison you make, because it speaketh confusely of the Sacrament, and of the matter of the Sacrament, and hath also many obscure applications, had need to be more plainely set downe, before we can admit it, or wholly reject it. Specially, you must declare, how the Sacrament is to every man, what he liketh best. Item whether the Arke in which it is reserved, for a perpetuall memoriall, be the Pix. Item whether there be any dayes, in which it cannot be received, as of the Sabbath day, and such like.

The Fathers of the old Testament did eat the body of Christ as we doe spiritually

Rhem. 5

52 How can this man?]. It came not in their minde that nothing was impossible to God, that wickedly said, How can this man give us his flesh? but we may make great profit of their sinne, beleeving the mysteries, and taking a lesson, never to say or once thinke, How? for it is a Iewish word and worthy all punishment; so saith S. Cyrill. lib. 4. c. 13. in Io. Neverthelesse if one asked onely for desire to learne in humility, as our Lady did touching her having a childe in her virginity, then he must take the Angels answere to her, That it is of the holy Ghost; so saith S. Damasc. l. 4. c. 14.

In the blessed Sacrament, How, is a Iewish word.

Fulke. 5

The Iewish (how) was not of enquiring the manner, as the Virgin Maries (how) but of denying, and not beleeving the matter. Therefore saith Cyrillus in the next chap. lib. 4. cap. 14. in Ioan. Oportebat igitur fidei primum, &c. It had beene meet therefore, first, that they had set the roots of faith in their minde, and then to have enquired those things, which are to be enquired. But they before they beleeved, enquired out of season. For this cause our Lord did not expound, how that thing might be brought to passe, but exhorteth that it be sought by faith. So to his Disciples which beleeved, he gave pieces of bread, saying, Take ye, and eat ye, this is my body. Likewise he gave the cup about and said: drinke ye all of this, This is the cup of my blood, which shall be shed for many, unto remission of sinnes. Thou seest plainely, that to them which enquire without faith, he hath not expounded the manner of the mysterie: but to them which beleeved, although they enquired not, he hath set it forth. By this place it is evident, that beleeving Christs words to be true, we may enquire in what sense they are true, and after what manner, spiritually, or corporally, the flesh of Christ is to be eaten, and his blood drunken. Also, in that Christ gave pieces of bread, we are taught, that it is not by transubstantiation, but after a spirituall manner, that the flesh of Christ is to be received: namely by faith, through the mighty working of the holy Ghost, not onely in the Sacrament, but also without it.

Faith. Transubstantiation.

Rhem. 6

53 Vnlesse you eat.] Christ commending the Sacrament of the faithfull unto us, said, Except you eat, &c. you cannot have life in you. So the life saith of life, and to him that thinketh the life to be a lier, this meat shall be death and not life to him, August. Ser. 2. de verb. Ap. c. 1. And S. Leo thus, Because our Lord saith, except you eat, &c. let us so communicate that we nothing doubt of the truth of Christs body and blood: for that is received with mouth, which is beleeved in heart: and they answere Amen in vaine, that dispute against that which they receive.

Ser. 6. de ieiun. 7. mens.
The real presence

Fulke. 6

This place proveth invincibly, that the flesh of Christ is truly eaten without the Sacrament, therefore spiritually, as well without it, as in it. For else all that die without participation of the Sacrament, should be void of eternall life. Concerning the place of Augustine: he declareth in the same Sermon, the manner of the eating of Christs flesh, and drinking his blood to be spirituall. Tunc autem, &c. Then shall this be, that is, the body and blood of Christ shall be life to every one, if that which is taken in the Sacrament visibly be eaten spiritually in the truth it selfe. The words of Leo be against the Eutychian heretikes, which did not beleeve the truth of the body of Christ, and therefore could not rightly receive the Sacrament of his body and blood, when they did not beleeve, that he had a very true body and blood.

The flesh of Christ is eaten spiritually, not corporally.

Rhem. 7

53 And drinke.] This the Protestants alledge for the necessity of receiving in both kindes: but in respect of themselves (who lightly hold all this chapter to pertaine nothing to the Sacramentall receiving, but to spirituall feeding on Christ by faith onely) it can make nothing for one kinde or other. And in respect of us Catholikes, who beleeve Christs whole person both humanity and Divinity, both flesh and blood to be in either forme, and to be wholly received no lesse in the first, then in the second or in both, this place commandeth nothing for both the kindes.

Receiving in both kindes not necessary.

Fulke 7

Although these words are not proper of the Sacrament, but of the matter of the Sacrament, yet the argument is good to prove the necessity of drinking, as well as of eating, seeing Christ hath given the visible Sacrament of both. And it is strong against the Papists, who understand it onely of the Sacrament. For although by their fond conceit of concomitance, they hold the blood to be in the body, yet they doe not drinke it according as Christ requireth, who addeth not that word superfluously, but to expresse that his flesh and blood is a perfect nourishment, which consisteth (as Iustinus saith) as well of dry as of moist nourishment, to be eaten and drunken.

53 You shall not have life.] Though the Catholikes teach these words to be spoken of the Sacrament, yet they meant not (no more then our Saviour here doth) to exclude all from salvation, that receive not actually and Sacramentally under one or both kindes. For then children that die after they be baptized, and never received Sacramentally, should perish: which to hold, were hereticall. Neither did S. Augustine meane, applying these words to infants also, that they could not be saved without receiving sacramentally, as not onely the Heretikes, but Erasmus [illegible] mistake him: but his sense is that they were by the right of their Baptisme joyned to Christs body mysticall, and thereby spiritually partakers of the other Sacrament also of Christs body and blood. As all Catholike men that be in prison, joyning with the Church of God in heart, and desire to receive and be partakers with the Church of this Sacrament, and these specially that devoutly heare Masse and adore in presence the body and blood of Christ, joyning in heart with the Priest, all these receive life and fruit of the Sacrament, though at every time they receive not sacramentally in one or both kindes. And although in the Primative Church the holy Sacrament in the second kinde were often given, even to infants to sanctifie them, yet (as the holy Councell hath declared) it was never [illegible]

Fulke 8

This is [illegible] to [illegible] in the Chapter of Trent, that have invented a new [illegible], [illegible] his words, but is directly contrary to the same. T[illegible] these: Dominum audiamus (inquam) [illegible] mensæ suæ, quo nemo ritè nisi baptizatus [illegible] I say, let us heare our Lord, speaking this of the Sacrament of Baptisme, [illegible] but he that is baptized. Except you shall [illegible] you shall have no life in you. What seeke we any further? What can they answer to [illegible] striving for [illegible] the constancy of truth? Or is there any body that [illegible] this sentence pertaineth not to little children, and that they may have life in them without the participation of this body and blood; because he saith not, he that shall not eate, as of Baptisme, he that shall [illegible] againe, but saith, If you shall not eate, as it were speaking to them which could heare and understand, which [illegible] little children cannot doe? But he that saith this doth not marke, that except this sentence doe [illegible] all men, that they cannot have life without the body and blood of the Sonne of man, the elder age also in vaine taketh care for it. What can be more plaine, then that S. Augustine meaneth heere, as he speaketh, of the Sacrament and sacramentall receiving at the holy Table, and that this Sacrament of the Lords body (in his opinion) was as necessary for infants, as the other of Baptisme: neither is there any one word, to infirmate your pretended sense, in all that Chapter, or in any other place, where he speaketh to the same effect, as in the foure and twentieth Chapter of the same booke. Optimè Punici Christiani, &c. The Christians of Africa doe very well call Baptisme it selfe, nothing else but salvation, and the Sacrament of the body of Christ, nothing else but life. Whereupon? but (as I thinke) of an antient and Apostolike Tradition, which they hold, as a thing ingraffed into the Church of Christ, that no man without Baptisme and participation of the Lords Table, can come, not onely to the kingdome of God, but neither to salvation nor eternall life. And a little after: What other thing also doe they, which call the Sacrament of the Lords Table, life, but that which is said, I am the bread of life, which came downe from heaven, and the bread which I will give, is my flesh, for the life of the world, and except you eate the flesh of the Sonne of man, and drinke his blood, you shall not have life in you. If then so many, and so great divine testimonies, doe agree neither salvation nor life eternall is to be hoped for to any man, without Baptisme and the body and blood of our Lord, in vaine it is promised to little children without these. Moreover, if nothing but sinnes doe separate a man from salvation and eternall life, nothing is loosed in little children by these Sacraments, but the guiltinesse of sinne.

Innocentius Bishop of Rome, was of the same opinion, as is manifest in his Epistle to the Bishops of Numidia, cited by S. Augustine cont. duas ep. Pel. lib. 2. cap. 4. & lib. 4. cap. 4. cont. Iul. lib. 1. cap. 2. Ep. 106. Bonifacio cont. Pelag. Hypognost. lib. 5. Ep. 23. Bonif. where he writeth of the Sacrament given to an infant: which custome you confesse, yet was it erronious, because this Sacrament ought not to be received, but of them that examine themselves, which infants cannot doe. 1 Cor. 11. 28. And therefore your Popish Chapter of Trent, although it were true, that the Fathers held not opinion of the necessity of this Sacrament for infants, (as the contrary is manifest) yet cannot excuse the Church and Fathers of that time, from a grosse errour, if they only thought it was lawfull to give the Communion to infants.

54 I will raise him.] As the Sonne liveth by the Father, even so doe we live by his flesh, saith Saint Hilary. lib. 8. de Trin. And Saint Cyrill againe thus, Though by nature of our flesh we be corruptible, yet by participation of life we are reformed to the property of life. For not only our soules were to be lifted up by the holy Ghost to life everlasting, but this rude grosse terrestrial body of ours is to be reduced to immortality, by touching, tasting, and eating this agreeable foode of Christs body. And when Christ sayth, I will raise him up, he meaneth that this body which he eateth, shall raise him. Our flesh (sayth Tertullian) eateth the body and blood of Christ, that the soule may be fatted, therefore they shall both have one reward at the resurrection. And S. Irenæus, How doe they affirme that our bodies be not capable of life everlasting, which is nourished by the body and blood of our Lord? Either let them change their opinion, or else cease to offer the Eucharist. Saint Gregory Nyssen also sayth, That lively body entring into our body, changeth it and maketh it like an immortall.

By participation of the flesh and blood of Christ, which is the matter of the Sacrament, we are made partakers of eternall life both of body and soule, whereof the Sacrament is a lively seale, and certaine assurance. But without the Sacrament also, we may eate the body and drinke the blood of Christ spiritually by faith, the holy Ghost in unspeakable maner feeding us therewith, as he doth infants, which are not to be received to the Lords table. And this is the true sense of all the Doctors words alledged in this section, which we acknowledge, except where they thought the Sacrament to be necessary for infants also.

55 Meat in deed.] Manna, was not the true meat: nor the water of the rocke, the drinke in deed: for they did but drive away death or famine for a time and for this life. But the holy body of Christ is the true food nourishing to life everlasting, and his blood the true drinke that driveth death away utterly, for they be not the body and blood of a meere man, but of him that being joyned to life is made life: and therefore are we the body and members of Christ, because by this benediction of the mystery we receive the Sonne of God himselfe. So saith S. Cyrill lib. 4. c. 16. in Io.

The Blessed Sacrament is the true Manna and water of the rock

This saying of Cyrill, is true of Manna and the water taken for corporall food onely: but as they were the Sacraments of the body and blood of Christ, they were the same spirituall meat and drinke that we receive, as testifieth Augustine cited before, sect. 4.

58 He that eateth this bread.] *By this place the holy Councell prooveth that for the grace and effect of the Sacrament, which is the life of the soule, there is no difference whether a man receive both kindes or not; because our Saviour who before attributed life to the eating and drinking of his body and blood, doth heere also affirme the same effect, which is life everlasting, to come of eating onely under one forme. Therefore the Heretikes be seditious calumniators that would make the people beleeve, the Catholike Church and Priests to have defrauded them of the grace and benefit of one of the kindes in the Sacrament. Fulk. 11. Contrary to the expreſſe commaundement of Chriſt in the inſtitution of the Supper, The Chapter of Trent vainely goeth about to prooue out of this place, which ſpeaketh not of the Sacrament, but of the matter of the Sacrament, that the one halfe of the Sacrament is not neceſſary. Albeit, ſeeing that eating and drinking is ſo often ioyned in this Chapter, they might well know, that drinking is heere to be underſtood, though it be not expreſſed, and that by eating of this bread, is meant a full participation of Chriſt, which is both meat and drinke unto us. And that Chriſt by this bread, meaneth not the Sacrament in forme of bread (as they call it) is manifeſt by this argument. Whoſoeuer eateth this bread, ſhall liue for euer, but whoſoeuer eateth the Sacrament ſhall not liue for euer: therefore whoſoeuer eateth this Sacrament, eateth not [illegible] bread. Ag[illegible], the words are generall both of Prieſts and People, whereupon you may aſwell conclude, that the Prieſt [illegible] conſecrate, but in one kinde of bread, [illegible] that the receiuing in one kinde is [illegible]ficient. Neither doth S. [illegible] ſay, that the Church hath authority to alter Chriſts inſtitution, but to [illegible] of circumſtances which are [illegible] of time, place, and ſuch like, which pertaine not to the ſubſtance of Chriſts [illegible]. Now for [illegible] kinds, he tooke as good order as could be, both inſtituting the Sacrament in both kinds, [illegible] commandement, that all ſhould drinke of it. But thou art not aſhamed to ſay, that both Chriſt and [illegible] beſide the Ancient Fathers of the Primitiue Church, left you example of receiuing under one kind. For Chriſts example you quote Luk. 24. 35. But in expounding the ſame text, you dare not affirme it to be the Sacrament, and if it were, you might thereof proue, that Chriſt did conſecrate in one kind alſo, which you hold to be an [illegible]. Secondly, if it were the Sacrament, (as ſome of the Fathers hold) Chryſoſtome telleth you, that he [illegible] at the ſame table, in Math. Hom. 83. upon his promiſe to drinke the fruit of the Vine anew in the kingdome of God. For his Apoſtles, you note Act. 2. 42. where either you muſt grant the figure Synecdoche, that is, that the part is named for the whole, or elſe you muſt ſay, that the Apoſtles who brake the bread to them, did alſo [illegible] bread onely: for it is not ſayd, They continued in receiuing of bread, but in breaking. But it is moſt [illegible], that the Euangeliſt meaneth, of their mutuall feaſts of loue, which more at large is expreſſed verſ. 46. which after the Hebrew or Syrian language, were by Synecdoche, called breaking of bread. That the Primitiue Church gaue the blood onely to children, you quote Cyprian de Lapſis ſer. 10. where mention is of the cup giuen to [illegible] word to prooue, that the cup onely was giuen, except you will ſay that the blood onely was [illegible] to [illegible] aſwell as to children. For the words are, Vbi vero, &c. But when the [illegible] to offer the cup to them that were preſent, and the reſt receiuing it, [illegible] reſeruing the body onely. lib. 2. ad uxorem: where mention is made of a ſuperſtitious [illegible] to reſerue the Sacrament, and receiue it ſecretly before other meate: but nothing to prooue, that they reſerued not the one kinde aſwell as the other. The like, I ſay, to the place of Cyprian, where a woman kept the [illegible] in her cheſt, which he calleth, Sanctum Domini, The holy Sacrament of the Lord. Why ſhould we [illegible] both kinds aſwell as one? although if a ſuperſtitious cuſtome of one kinde onely were prooued, [illegible] practiſe can be prooued? the reſeruation was unlawfull, and if it were [illegible] kinde, it was more unl[illegible]. That the ſicke perſon was houſelled in one kind, it is contrary to th[illegible] hath, if [illegible] ſtand it. The Prieſt being ſicke, ſo that he could not come to Serapion [illegible] for [illegible], gaue [illegible] meſſenger, a little of the Euchariſt, and teaching him how to uſe it for [illegible] that was ready to dye, bade him wet it, and drop it into the old mans mouth: whereby it appe[illegible] of both kinds, and ſo the child did, [illegible]. The boy did moyſten [illegible] and after he had ſwallowed a little, he gaue up the ghoſt: but if he had giuen him onely of the cup, [illegible] theſe two Verbes to expreſſe the deliuery thereof. In that fragment of the [illegible] of [illegible] to Cyprian Patriarch [illegible] there is no word to prooue that the Brethren receiued the Communion in [illegible] one [illegible] onely. The cauſes of your practiſe proceed of Antichriſtian pride, in that you will ſeeme wiſer then Chriſt, who inſtituted the Sacrament in both kindes, then the Apoſtles and Paſtors of the Primitiue Church, who [illegible] in both kindes, and yet knew what belonged to the reuerent uſe of the Sacrament, better then you. [illegible] the ſame cauſe that you ſay, the Prieſt muſt conſecrate in both kindes, the people alſo ought to receiue [illegible]. For they in eating and drinking, ought to ſhew the Lords death, and the ſeparation of his blood [illegible] his body, or his blood ſhedding, untill he come. 1 Cor. 11. 26. But it is [illegible] S. Pauls words, 1 Cor. 10. 18. They that eate of the ſacrifices, are partakers of the altar [illegible] enough to eate onely of one kinde, to be partakers of the whole. Which is proued* [illegible] of this time, [illegible] reaſon [illegible] Chriſts preſence in the Sacrament, [illegible] that he is [illegible]: yea, who are ſo bold as to expound the ſame ſentence for themſelues thus, It is not this body [illegible] you, for that I will carry with me to heauen. Whereby, if they meane onely that the condition and [illegible] of the body in heauen, ſhould be other then in the Sacrament, it were tolerable: for S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh [illegible] in that ſenſe, but to deny the ſubſtance of the body to be the ſame, that is wicked.

Chriſt [illegible] his [illegible] is aſcended.

Fulk. 12. This information, is your owne imagination, without ground of the text, or teſtimony of ancient Fathers. Chriſt by theſe words doth remoove the offence, which they tooke of his baſe condition in the fleſh, and therefore could not ſee his diuine power, [illegible] able to giue his fleſh and blood to be eaten, and drunken, which his diuine power was manifeſted in his glorious aſcenſion. And yet the aſcenſion of his body from the earth, and placing thereof in heauen, is a [illegible] to proove, that he giueth not his fleſh and blood to be receiued after a bodily [illegible] forme ſoeuer diſguiſed, but after an heauenly, diuine, and ſpirituall manner, by the [illegible] of the holy Ghoſt. Which uniteth his naturall body and blood to us, though diſtant as farre [illegible] us in place, as heauen is from earth: ſo that we are truely made fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bone and liuely members of his myſticall body: not only in this Sacrament, but alſo in Baptiſme, and by [illegible] through faith, by which Chriſt dwelleth in our hearts. Galat. 3. 27. Epheſ. 3. 17. And S. [illegible] uſe the argument of Chriſts aſcenſion, to proove that Chriſt giueth not his body, as [illegible] in the [illegible], but to be receiued ſpiritually by faith. Auguſt. in Io. Tract. 27. 30. 31. and [illegible] Tract. 50. he ſaith of his naturall body: Aſcendit in cœlum, & non eſt hic. He aſcended into heauen, and he is not here, with much more to that effect. Againe, De verbis Apoſt. Ser. 2. upon this text he ſayth: What if you ſhall ſee the Sonne of man aſcend where he was before? What meaneth it, doth this offend? Thought you that I would make parts of this body which you ſee, cut my members in peeces and giue them to you? What then if you ſhall ſee the Sonne of man aſcend where he was before? Verily, he that could aſcend whole, could not be conſumed. Therefore he hath giuen us an wholeſome refection of his body and blood, and hath briefly ſolued ſo great a queſtion of his integrity. Let them therefore eate which eat, and drinke which drinke: let them hunger and thirſt: let them eate life, let them drinke life. That to eat is to be fed; but ſo to be fed, that it faileth not whereof thou art fed. That to drinke, what is it but to liue? Eate life, drinke life, thou ſhalt haue life; and life is ſtill whole. For then this thing ſhall be, that is the body and blood of Chriſt ſhall be life to euery one, if that which is taken viſibly in the Sacrament be ſpiritually eaten, and ſpiritually drunken in the truth it ſelfe. See Math. 26. Sect. 4.

Rhem. 13 63 The fleſh profiteth nothing.] If this ſpeech were ſpoken in the ſenſe of the ſacramentaries, it would take away Chriſts incarnation, manhood, and death, no leſſe then his corporall preſence in the Sacrament; for if his fleſh were not profitable, [illegible] things were vaine. Therefore Chriſt denieth not his owne fleſh to be profitable, but that their groſſe and carnall conceiuing of his words, of his fleſh, and of the manner of eating the ſame was unprofitable. Which is plaine by the ſentence following, where he warneth them, that his words be ſpirit and life, of high myſticall meaning, and not vulgarly and groſly to be taken as they tooke them. And it is the uſe of the Scripture to call mans naturall ſenſe, reaſon, and carnall reſiſting or not reaching ſupernaturall truethes, fleſh or blood, as Fleſh and blood reuealed not this to thee, &c. Math. 16.

This carnality then of theirs, ſtood in two points ſpecially: firſt, that they imagined that he would kill himſelfe, and cut and mangle his fleſh into parts, and ſo giue it them raw, or roſt to be eaten among them. Which could not be meant, ſaith S. Auguſtine: for that had conteined an heinous and barbarous fact, and therefore they might, and ſhould haue beene aſſured, that he would command no ſuch thing: but ſome other ſweet ſenſe to be of his hard, myſticall, or figuratiue words, and to be fulfilled in a Sacrament, myſterie, and a maruellous diuine ſort, otherwiſe then they could comprehend. Secondly, they did erre touching his fleſh, in that they tooke it to be the fleſh of a meere man, and of a dead man alſo, when it ſhould come to be eaten: of which kind of fleſh Chriſt heere pronounceth, that it profiteth nothing. Whereupon S. Cyrill ſayth, This body is not of Peter or Paul, or any other like, but of Chriſt Iesvs who is the life it ſelfe: and therefore this body giueth life, the very fulneſſe of the Diuinity dwelling in it. And the holy Councell of Epheſus in the 11. Anathematiſme expounded alſo by the ſaid S. Cyrill: The Euchariſt is not the body of any common perſon (for the fleſh of a common man could not quicken) but of the Word it ſelfe. But the heretike Neſtorius diſſolueth the vertue of this myſterie, holding mans fleſh only to be in the Euchariſt. Thus there. And S. Ignatius cited of Theodoret, and many other Fathers haue the like. Whereby we may ſee that it commeth of the Diuinity and Spirit (without which Chriſts fleſh cannot be) that this Sacrament giueth life.

The Capernaites groſſe underſtanding of Chriſts fleſh to be giuen or eaten. And how his fleſh doth profit, and not profit. Auguſt. De Doct. Chr. lib. 3. cap. 16.

Chriſts fleſh giueth life, becauſe it is the fleſh of God and man. Lib. 4. c. 23. in Io. ver. 64. Ignatius apud Theod. dial. 3.

Fulke 13 The fleſh of Chriſt ſeparated from his Diuine and quickning ſpirit, whereof it hath power of life (as the Capernaits did imagine it) profiteth nothing. But being united to his diuine Spirit, according to the ſayings of Hilary, Cyrill, and the reſt that are heere cited, it is not onely profitable, but alſo neceſſary for our ſaluation, in his Incarnation, ſacrifice, and feeding of us therewith, either in the Sacrament or without it. Neither doe we teach otherwiſe. But the Papiſts hold this error of the Capernaites, of his fleſh ſeparated from the quickning vertue and power that it hath of the word united to it, when they teach that the body and blood of Chriſt, may be verely and truely, and not only, ſacramentally eaten and drunken of the wicked, to whom it giueth no life, contrary to the expreſſe words of Chriſt, ſo often repeated in this Chapter, and the conſent of the ancient Fathers. Hic eſt ergo manducare, &c. This is therefore (ſaith S. Auguſtine) to eate that meat, and to drinke that drinke, for a man to abide in Chriſt, and to haue Chriſt abiding in him. And by this he that abideth not in Chriſt, and in whom Chriſt abideth not, out of doubt he neither eateth his fleſh, nor drinketh his blood ſpiritually, though carnally and viſibly, he preſſe with his teeth, the Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt: but rather he eateth and drinketh the Sacrament of ſo great a thing to his condemnation. Tract. 26. in Ioan. Againe, of wicked men, he ſayth, It is not to be ſayd that they eat the body of Chriſt, becauſe they are not to be counted among the members of Chriſt. And that I ſpeake not of other things, they cannot be both the members of Chriſt, and the members of an harlot. Finally, he himſelfe ſaying, he that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, abideth in me, and I in him, ſheweth what it is, not onely in the Sacrament or ſacramentally, but in very deed, to eate the body of Chriſt, and to drinke his blood. De Ciuit. lib. 21. cap. 25. In declaring in what points the carnality of the Capernaites conſiſted, you confeſſe with S. Auguſtine De Doct. Chriſt. l. 3. c. 16. that theſe words of Chriſt, Except you eat the fleſh of the Sonne of man, &c. be figuratiue. Wherein then ſtandeth the figure? in the words, Fleſh and blood, or in the words Eating and drinking? Verely our Sauiour Chriſt doth ſo plainely affirme, The bread which he will giue to be his fleſh, which he will giue for the life of the world, that we muſt needes underſtand his body crucified, and his blood ſhed for us, or his humanity ſacrificed for us: then it remaineth, that the figure be in eating and drinking.

Bold preſ[illegible]

Slander.

The wicked doe not eat and drinke the body and blood of Chriſt.

The very body and blood of Chriſt are eaten ſpiritually.

drinking, and ſo the whole queſtion is of the manner of eating and drinking which is [illegible] figure, (as Papiſts take it) receiving into the mouth and body, or elſe ſpirituall and [illegible] there teacheth) by communicating with the paſſion of Chriſt, and by ſweet and profitable recording, that [illegible] was [illegible] and wounded for us. Which communication by faith and the working of Gods ſpirit, is the eating and [illegible] of his very body and blood, either in the Sacrament, or without it, and which giveth eternall life to all that receive the body and blood of Chriſt either in the Sacrament or without it.

RHEM. 14. 64 That beleeve not.] It is lacke of faith, you ſee heere, that cauſeth men to ſpurne againſt this high truth of the Sacrament: as alſo it may be learned heere, that it is the great and mercifull gift of God that men doe againſt their ſenſes and carnall reaſons, beleeve and ſubmit themſelves to the [illegible] *acknowledging of this myſtery: laſtly, that it may well * by Chriſts inſinuation of Iudas, be gathered, that he ſpecially* [illegible] againſt our Maſters ſpeeches of the holy Sacrament.

Iudas the chiefe of them that beleeve not the reall preſence.
* Verſe 64.

Papiſts infidelity.

FVLK. 14. It is want of faith in the Papiſts, that they thinke our Saviour Chriſt can ot give us his fleſh and blood, to be eaten and drunken of us, except it be received with the mouth into the body, and to beleeve that which they beleeve contrary to the word of God (though it be never ſo contrary to ſenſe) it is no true faith, but a falſe perſwaſion of lies. Finally, though Iudas did not beleeve the doctrine of Chriſt, yet it is not like that he ſhewed any outward token of unbeliefe, ſeeing it is ſayd, that the twelue continued with him.

RHEM. 15. 66 Went backe.] It can be no marvell to us now that ſo many revolt from the Church, by offence or ſcandall unjuſtly taken at Chriſts body and blood in the Sacrament, ſeeing many of his Diſciples that ſaw his wonderfull life, doctrine, and miracles, forſooke Chriſt himſelfe, upon the ſpeech and promiſe of the ſame Sacrament; for the myſtery of it is ſo ſupernaturall and divine in it ſelfe, and withall ſo low and baſe for our ſakes, by the ſhew of the formes of theſe terrene elements under which it is, and we eate it: that the unfaithfull and infirme doe ſo ſtumble at Chriſt in the Sacrament as the Iewes and Gentiles did at Chriſt in his humanity. For, the cauſes of contradictions of the Incarnation & Tranſubſtantiation be like. And it may be verily deemed, that whoſoever now cannot beleeve the Sacrament to be Chriſt, becauſe it is under the formes of bread and wine, and is eaten and drunken, would not then have beleeved that Chriſt had beene God, becauſe he was in ſhape of man, and crucified. To conclude, it was not a figure nor a myſtery of bare bread and wine, nor any Metaphoricall or Allegoricall ſpeech, that could make ſuch a troupe of his Diſciples revolt at once. When he ſaid he was a Doore, a Vine, a Way, a Paſtor and ſuch like (unto which kinde of ſpeeches the Proteſtants ridiculouſly reſemble the words of the holy Sacrament) who was ſo mad to miſtake him, or to forſake him for the ſame? For the Apoſtles at the leaſt would have plucked them by the ſleeves, and ſaid, Give not away my maſters, he ſpeaketh parables. The cauſe therefore was their incredulity, and the height of the myſtery, for that they neither knew the meanes, how it might be preſent, nor would beleeve that he was able to give his fleſh to be eaten in many places. And even ſuch is the unbeliefe of the heretikes about this matter at this day.

Heretikes beleeve not the reall preſence, becauſe they ſee bread and wine: as the Iewes beleeved not his Godhead becauſe of the ſhape of a poore man.

The diſciples revolting at Chriſts words, prove that he ſpake not metaphorically, as at other times.

The words of Chriſt figurative.

FVLK. 15. In the 13. ſection, you confeſſe the words of Chriſt to be figurative: now forgetting your ſelfe you ſay, the Diſciples revolting, prooveth that he ſpake not metaphorically, upon a fond imagination, that his Apoſtles would have plucked them by the ſleeves, &c. which we never reade that they did at any time. But indeed, the cauſe of their revolt, was for that they underſtood literally, that which he ſpake of eating and drinking figuratively. Which is one cauſe alſo, that the Papiſts long ſince have revolted from the Church of Chriſt, and the faith of the ancient Fathers, who underſtood the words of the inſtitution of the Supper, as theſe alſo of the ſpirituall or heavenly matter of the Supper, to be figurative. For if Chriſt had ſpoken heere of eating and drinking literally, (as the elements are received in the Sacrament) how was it poſſible that they could have underſtood him, before the Sacrament was inſtituted? for their infidelity had then beene excuſable. But when he had ſaid verſ. 47. He that beleeveth in me, hath eternall life, they might (if they had not bin obſtinate) have underſtood, that the maner of eating and drinking of his fleſh and blood to have eternall life, was by faith and beleeving in him: and not after any groſſe maner, as they imagined, and the Papiſts likewiſe: whereby they deſtroy the truth of his naturall body, in taking from it the eſſentiall properties of a body, as quantity, place, ſhape, and ſuch like.

RHEM. 16. 68 Peter anſwered.] Peter anſwereth for the Twelve; not knowing that Iudas *in heart was already naught, and beleeved not Chriſts former words touching the Bleſſed Sacrament, but was to revolt afterward as well as the other. * Wherein* Peter beareth the perſon of the Church and all Catholike men, that for no difficulty of his words, nor for any revolt (be it never ſo generall) of ſchiſmatikes, heretikes, or apoſtates, either for this Sacrament, or any other Article, will ever forſake Chriſt. And when company draweth us to revolt, let us ſay thus, Lord whither or to whom ſhall we goe, when we have forſaken thee? to Calvin, Luther, or ſuch: and forſake thee and thy Church with the unfaithfull multitude? No, thou haſt the words of life, and we beleeve thee, and thy Church will not, nor cannot beguile us. Thou haſt (ſaith S. Auguſtine) life everlaſting in the miniſtration of thy body and blood. And a little after, Thou art life everlaſting it ſelfe, and thou giveſt not in thy fleſh and blood but that which thy ſelfe art.

As Iudas of all unbeleeving heretikes, ſo Peter beareth the perſon of all beleeving Catholikes: namely in the Bleſſed Sacrament.

Tract. 27. in Evang. Io.

The wicked eat not the body of Chriſt, nor drinke his blood.

FVLK. 16. Peter worthily beareth the perſon of all true members of the Church, when for no cauſe he will revolt from Chriſt, who onely hath the words of eternall life, from which if Calvin, Luther, or an Angel from heaven would draw us, we muſt hold him accurſed. To the ſaying of Auguſtine, Tr. 27. in Ioan. we muſt adde that which he ſayth in the ſame place, as the concluſion of the whole matter. Hoc ergo totum ad hoc, &c. Let all this (we beloved) availe thus much unto us, that we eate not the fleſh of Chriſt, and drinke the blood of Chriſt onely in Sacrament, which many evill men doe, but let us eate and drinke unto the participation of the ſpirit, that we may abide in the Lords body as members, that we may be quickened by his ſpirit, and not be offended, although many doe eate and drinke the Sacraments temporally, which in the ende ſhall have eternall torments.

29 But I know him, for I am of him, and he hath ſent me.

30 Then they ſought to take him: but noe man laid hands on him, becauſe his houre was not yet come.

10 And IESVS lifting up himſelfe, ſaid to her, Woman, where are they that accuſed thee? hath no man condemned thee?

[b] The Goſpel upon Saturday the fourth weeke in Lent.

13 The Phariſees therefore ſaid to him, Thou giveſt teſtimonie of thy ſelfe: thy teſtimonie is not true.

14 IESVS anſwered, and ſaid to them, Although I do give teſtimonie of my ſelfe, my teſtimony is true: becauſe I know whence I came, and whither I go: but you know not whence I come, or whether I go.

15 You judge according to the fleſh: I do not judge any man.

21 Againe therefore IESVS ſaid to them, I go, and you ſhall ſeeke me, and ſhall die in your ſinne. Whither I goe, you cannot come.

22 The Iewes therefore ſaid, Why, will he kill himſelfe, becauſe he ſaith, Whither I go, you cannot come?

23 And he ſaid to them, You are from beneath, I am from above; you are of this world, I am not of this world.

24 Therefore I ſaid to you that you ſhall die in your ſinnes; for if you beleeve not that I am he, you ſhall die in your ſinne.

25 They ſaid therefore to him, who art thou? IESVS ſaid to them, ‡ The beginning who alſo ſpeake to you.

8 And again, he ſtooped down, & wrote on the ground.

9 And when they heard this, being accuſed of their owne conſciences, they went out one by one, beginning at the eldeſt, even unto the laſt: and Ieſus was left alone, and the woman ſtanding in the midſt.

10 When Ieſus had lift up himſelfe, and ſaw no man but the woman, he ſaid unto her, Woman, where are thoſe thine accuſers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She ſaid, No man, Lord. And Ieſus ſaid, Neither doe I condemne thee: Goe and ſinne no more.

20 Theſe words ſpake Ieſus in the treaſurie, as hee taught in the temple: and no man laid hands on him, for his houre was not yet come.

4 I muſt worke the workes of him that ſent me, whiles it is day. The night commeth, ‡ when no man can worke.

5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

6 When he had ſaid theſe things, he ſpit on the ground, and ‖ made clay of the ſpettle, and ſpred the clay upon his eyes,

7 And ſaid to him, Goe, [c] waſh in the poole of Siloe, which is interpreted, Sent. He went therefore, and waſhed: and he came ſeeing.

8 Therefore the neighbours, and they which had ſeene him before, that he was a begger, ſaid, Is not this he that ſate, and begged? Others ſaid, That this is he.

9 But others, No, not ſo, but he is like him. But he ſaid, That I am he.

10 They ſaid therefore to him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He anſwered, That man that is called Iesvs, made clay: and anointed mine eyes, and ſaid to me, Goe to the poole of Siloe, and waſh. And I went, and waſhed, and ſaw.

12 And they ſaid to him, Where is he? He ſaith, I know not.

13 They bring him that had beene blinde to the Phariſees.

14 And it was the Sabbath when Iesvs made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Againe therefore the Phariſees asked him, how he ſaw. But he ſaid to them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I waſhed: and I ſee.

16 Certaine therefore of the Phariſees ſaid, This man is not of God, that keepeth not the Sabbath. But others ſaid, How can a man that is a ſinner doe theſe ſignes? And there was a ſchiſme among them.

17 They ſay therefore to the blind againe, Thou, What ſayeſt thou of him that opened thine eyes? And he ſaid, That he is a Prophet.

18 The Iewes therefore did not beleeve of him, that he had beene blinde and ſaw: untill they called the parents of him that ſaw,

19 And asked them, ſaying, Is this your ſonne,

‡ Though many infirmities fall for ſinne; yet not all; ſome comming for probation, and ſome ſent that God by the cure therof may be glorified.

[c] This was a figure of Baptiſme, to which all men borne in ſinne and blindneſſe are ſent for health and ſight, Amb. l. 3. c. 2. de Sacramentis.

And as Ieſus paſſed by, he ſaw a man which was blinde from his birth.

2 And his Diſciples asked him, ſaying, Maſter, who did ſin, this man, or his parents, that he was borne blinde?

3 Ieſus anſwered, Neither hath this man ſinned, nor yet his parents: but that the workes of God ſhould be made manifeſt in him.

4 I muſt worke the works of him that ſent me, while it is day: The night commeth, when no man can worke.

*5 As long as I am in the world, * I am the light of the world.* Ioh. 1. 9. and 8. 12. and 12. 35.

6 When he had thus ſpoken, he ſpat on the ground, and made clay of the ſpettle, and he anointed the clay upon the eyes of the blinde,

7 And ſaid unto him, Goe waſh thee in the poole of Siloe (which by interpretation is as much to ſay, as Sent.) He went his way therefore, and waſhed, and came againe ſeeing.

8 The neighbours therefore, and they that had ſeene him before when he was blind, ſaid, Is not this he that ſate and begged?

9 Some ſaid, This is he: Others ſaid, He is like him. He himſelfe ſaid, I am even he.

10 Therefore ſaid they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He anſwered, & ſaid, the man that is called Ieſus, made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and ſaid unto me, Go to the poole Siloe, and waſh: and when I went and waſhed, I received my ſight.

12 Then ſaid they unto him, Where is he? He ſaid, I cannot tell.

13 They brought to the Phariſees him that a little before was blinde.

14 And it was the Sabbath day when Ieſus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Phariſees alſo asked him how he had received his ſight. He ſaid unto the, He put clay upon mine eies, & I waſhed, & do ſee.

16 Therfore ſaid ſome of the Phariſees, This man is not of God, becauſe he keepeth not the Sabbath day. Others ſaid, How can a man that is a ſinner doe ſuch miracles? and there was a † ſtrife among them. † Schiſme.

17 They ſay unto the blinde man againe, What ſayeſt thou of him, becauſe he hath opened thine eyes? He ſaid, He is a Prophet.

18 But the Iewes did not beleeve the man how that he had beene blinde, and received his ſight, untill they called the parents of him that had received his ſight.

19 And they asked them ſaying, Is this your ſonne, whom you ſay that he was borne blind : how then doth he now ſee?

20 His parents anſwered them, and ſayd, We know that this is our ſonne, and that he was borne blind :

21 But how he now ſeeth, we know not, or who hath opened his eyes, we know not, aske himſelfe : he is of age, let himſelfe ſpeak of himſelfe.

22 Theſe things his parents ſayd, becauſe they feared the Iewes ; for the Iewes had now conſpired, that if any man ſhould confeſſe him to be CHRIST, he ſhould be || put out of the Synagogue.

23 Therefore did his parents ſay, That he is of age, aske himſelfe.

24 They therefore againe called the man that had beene blind, and ſayd to him, ‡ Give glorie to God ; we know that this man is a ſinner.

25 He therefore ſaid to them, whether he be a ſinner, I know not : one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I ſee.

26 They ſayd therefore to him, What did he to thee? how did he open thine eyes?

27 He anſwered them, I have now told you, and you have heard : why will you heare it againe? will you alſo become his Diſciples?

28 They reviled him therefore and ſaid, Be thou his Diſciple : but we are the diſciples of Moſes.

29 We know that to Moſes God did ſpeake : but this man, we know not whence he is.

30 The man anſwered and ſaid to them, For in this it is marvelous that you know not whence he is, and he hath opened mine eyes.

31 And we know that ſinners God doth not heare ; but if a man be a ſerver of God, and doe the will of him, him he heareth.

32 From the beginning of the world it hath not beene heard that any man hath opened the eyes of one borne blinde.

33 Vnles this man were of God, he could not doe any thing.

34 They anſwered, & ſaid to him, Thou waſt wholly borne in ſinnes, and doeſt thou teach us? And they did caſt him forth.

35 IESVS heard that they caſt him forth: and when he had found him, he ſaid to him, Doeſt thou beleeve in the ſonne of God?

36 He anſwered, and ſaid, Who is he Lord, that I may beleeve in him?

37 And IESVS ſaid to him, Both thou haſt ſeene him : & he that talketh with thee, he it is.

38 But he ſaid, I beleeve Lord : And falling downe he adored him.

39 And IESVS ſaid to him, For judgement came I into this world : ‡ that they that ſee not, may ſee : and they that ſee, may become blinde.

‡ By this we ſee that this miracle was not only marvellous and beneficiall to the blinde, but alſo ſignificative of taking away ſpirituall blindneſſe.

40 And

ſonne, whom ye ſay that he was borne blind? how then doth he now ſee?

20 His parents anſwered them, and ſayd, We know that this is our ſonne, and that he was borne blinde, 21 But by what meanes he now ſeeth, we cannot tell, or who hath opened his eyes, cannot we tell, he is of age, aske him, he ſhall ſpeake for himſelfe.

22 Such words ſpake his parents, becauſe they feared the Iewes: for the Iewes had agreed already, that if any man did confeſſe that he was Chriſt, he ſhould be excommunicate out of the Synagogue, 23 Therefore ſayd his parents, He is of age, aske him.

24 Then againe called they the man that was blind, and ſaid unto him Give God the praiſe, we know that this man is a ſinner:

25 He anſwered, and ſaid, Whether he be a ſinner or no, I cannot tell: one thing I am ſure of, that whereas I was blinde, now I ſee.

26 Then ſaid they to him againe, What did he to thee? How opened he thine eyes?

27 He anſwered them, I told you yerwhile, and ye did not heare: wherefore would you heare it againe? Will ye alſo be his Diſciples?

28 Then rated they him, and ſaid, Thou art his Diſciple: we are Moſes diſciples.

29 We are ſure that God ſpake unto Moſes: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is.

30 The man anſwered, and ſaid unto them, This is a marvellous thing, that ye wote not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.

31 For we be ſure that God heareth not ſinners: but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him heareth he.

32 Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was borne blinde:

33 If this man were not of God, he could doe nothing.

34 They anſwered, and ſaid unto him, Thou art altogether borne in ſinne, and doeſt thou teach us? And they caſt him out.

35 Ieſus heard that they had excommunicated him: and when he had found him, he ſaid unto him, doeſt thou beleeve on the ſonne of God?

36 He anſwered and ſaid, Who is he, Lord, that I might beleeve on him?

37 And Ieſus ſaid unto him, Thou haſt both ſeene him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38 And he ſayd, Lord, I beleeve: and he worſhipped him.

*39 And Ieſus ſaid unto him, * I am come unto judgement in this world, that they which ſee not, might ſee: and that they which ſee, might be made blinde.*

Iohn 3.17. and 12.47.

40 And

40 And certaine of the Phariſees that were with him, heard, and they ſayd to him, Why, are we alſo blinde?

41 Ieſus ſaid to them, If you were blind, you ſhould not have ſinne : but now you ſay, That we ſee. Your ſinne remaineth.

40 And ſome of the Phariſees which were with him, heard theſe words, and ſaid unto him, Are wee blind alſo?

41 Ieſus ſaid unto them, If ye were blind, ye ſhould have no ſinne, but now ye ſay, we ſee; therefore your ſinne remaineth.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1 4 When no man.] The time of working, and meriting, is in this life: after death we can deſerve no more by our deedes, but muſt onely receive good or ill, according to the difference of workes here.

FVLKE 1 The text ſpeaketh of working: meriting and deſerving are a fond gloſſe beſide the text.

RHEM. 2 24 Give glory.] So ſay the Heretikes when they derogate from miracles done by Saints or their relikes, hypocritically pretending the glory of God. As though it were not Gods glory, when his Saints doe it by his power and vertue: yea his greater glory, that doth ſuch things by his ſervants, and by the meaneſt things belonging to them, as Peters ſhadow Acts 5. and Pauls napkin. Acts 9.

FVLKE 2. We grant not your Popiſh miracles, (as you would inſinuate,) but ſay of them, as S. Auguſtine ſaid of miracles of the Donatiſts, Removeantur iſta vel figmenta mendacium hominum, vel portenta fallacium ſpirituum, &c. Away with theſe miracles, which are either fables of lying men, or wonders of deceiving ſpirits, for either theſe things are not true, which are reported, or if Heretikes have any miracles, we are the rather to take heed of them. But true miracles that God worketh by his Saints, to confirme the truth taught in the Scriptures, we confeſſe and acknowledge to the glory of God.

Miracles.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 3 6 Made clay.] Chriſt that could have cured this man by his onely will or word, yet uſed certaine creatures as his inſtruments in working, and divers circumſtances and ceremonies, clay, water, anointing, waſhing, &c. Why marvell then that he and his Church uſe ſuch divers ſorts of Sacraments and ceremonies externall in curing our ſoules.

Externall ceremonies.

FVLKE. 3 We marveile not, that Chriſt and his Church uſeth ſuch Sacraments, and externall ceremonies in curing our ſoules, as be of Chriſts inſtitution. But we marveile how any man dare make medicines for curing of ſoules, that they never learned of the heavenly Phyſician.

Superſtitious preſumption.

RHEM. 4 22 Put out of the Synagogue.] The Heretikes wittingly tranſlate here (& v. 35.) Excommunicate: to make the ſimple conceive the Churches Excommunication to be no other, or no better, or no more rightly uſed againſt them, then this caſting out of the Synagogue of ſuch as confeſſed our Saviour. They might as well have tranſlated for Synagogue, Church: for the Old Teſtament, the New: for Law, grace: for fleſh, ſpirit: for Moſes, Chriſt. For no leſſe difference is there betweene caſting out of the Synagogue, and Excommunication. Beſides that, not every one which was out of the Iewes Synagogue, was therefore out of the communion of the Faithfull, many true beleevers being in other parts of the world not ſubject to the Iewes Synagogue, Law, nor Sacraments. And therefore it was not all one to be out of the Synagogue, and to be excommunicated; as now, whoſoever is out of the Churches communion, either by his owne will or for his juſt deſerts thruſt out of it by the ſpirituall Magiſtrate, he is quite abandoned out of all the ſociety of Saints in heaven and earth, ſo long as he ſo continueth.

As for the cauſe of thruſting this poore man and ſuch other out of the Synagogue, and excommunicating Heretikes, there is as great oddes as betwixt heaven and hell: he being uſed ſo for following Chriſt and his Church, theſe for forſaking Chriſt and his Church. Some more agreement there is betweene that corrupt ſentence of the Iewes againſt the followers of Chriſt, and the pretended excommunication executed againſt Catholike men by our Heretikes; although in truth there is no great reſemblance. For, the Iewes though they abuſed their power ſometimes, yet had they authority indeed by Gods Law ſo to puniſh contemners of their Law, and therefore it was feared and reſpected even of good men. But the excommunication uſed by Heretikes againſt Catholikes or any offenders, is not to be reſpected at all: being no more but a ridiculous uſurpation of the Churches right and faſhion of the ſame; for, out of their Synagogues all faithfull men ought to flee, and not tarry to be thruſt out: according to the warning given againſt Core and Dathan. Be ye ſeparated from their tabernacles, leſt you be wrapped in their ſinnes.

Hereticall tranſlation.
Caſting out of the Synagogue.
The Churches excommunication.
See in the Annot. Matt. 18, 17.

The Heretikes ridiculous excommunication.

FVLKE 4 Many words to little purpoſe. Our tranſlation hath not ſimply excommunicate, but adding, out of the Synagogue. And the Iewes before Chriſt, had the ſame diſcipline that the Church now hath, of caſting them out of the fellowſhip of the faithfull, that for their diſobedience deſerved it. The true Church only hath true excommunication, the hereticall aſſemblies, ſuch as the Popiſh Church is, counterfeit cenſures: Whoſe bleſſings God curſeth, and bleſſeth their curſings. As for the ſtate of England which the Pope hath curſed, God hath ever ſince wonderfully bleſſed. And the Spaniſh Navie being the power of all Papiſtry, which the Pope bleſſed, had the curſe of God following it untill it was almoſt deſtroyed.

CHAP. X.

He continueth his talke to the Phariſees, ſhewing that they and all other that will not enter in by him, are Wolves: and that they which heare them, are not the true ſheepe. 11 But that himſelfe is the good Paſtor, and therefore to ſave the ſheepe from theſe wolves, he will yeeld his life: which otherwiſe no might of theirs could take from him: foretelling alſo his Reſurrection, and vocation of the Gentiles. 22 Againe another time, he telleth theſe Iewes openly, that they are not of his ſheepe, and that no might of theirs ſhall take from him his true ſheepe, becauſe he is God, even as his Father is God. 31 Which by his miracles and by Scripture he ſheweth to be no blaſphemy: and they in vaine ſeeking to ſtone and to apprehend him, 40 he goeth out to the place where Iohn Baptiſt had given open witneſſe of him.

FVLKE 2 Chriſt being in the Temple in the feaſt of the Dedication, which was inſtituted by the Church in the time of Iudas Machabeus, did not thereby allow whatſoever Machabeus did in his life without the warrant of Gods Law. Thankeſgiving to God, for reſtitution of the Temple, after the horrible prophanation thereof, is a thing approoved by Gods Law: but a memoriall thereof, is an indifferent ceremony, which was not inſtituted by Ezechias, after the prophanation of the Temple by Achaz and Vrias, nor by Ioſias, after the ſame was moſt horribly polluted by Manaſſes and Amon, nor by Zorobabel and Ieſus, Eſdras or Nehemias, after it was reedified, when it had beene utterly deſtroyed by the Chaldees. As for your Popiſh hallowing of Churches hath nothing like unto it but the name, the vaine ſhadow whereof pleaſeth you ſo much, that contrary to your cuſtome and profeſſion, you are bold to tranſlate the Greeke Encenia (which your vulgar Latine text reteineth) Dedication, and durſt not tranſlate Scenopegia, cap. 7. the feaſt of Tabernacles.

FVLKE 3 Though divers of the Latine Fathers, did reade ſo, yet the originall text is otherwiſe, neither can any of the Greeke Fathers be brought to avouch this reading, although Cyrill be ridiculouſly named, whereas that 7. booke is not of Cyrillus, but of Clictoveus making. Therefore the Laterane Councell, did not rightly alleage this text againſt Abbas Ioachim, whoſe error by manifeſt texts of Scripture uncorrupted, might eaſily have beene confuted. As for the ſlander of Autotheiſme, is anſwered before, cap. 1. Gregory Nazianzene, calleth the holy Ghoſt αὐτόζωον and αὐτόφως, which is all one, as if he had called him αὐτόθεον, and yet he denied not his proceeding from the Father and the Sonne. Marius Victorinus Afer lib. 3. contr. Arrianos, doubteth not to ſay that Chriſt is αὐτόγονος [illegible] in reſpect of the ſubſtance of his deity. This quarrell ſheweth ſome want of learning, but more abundance of malice.

CHAP. XI.

He commeth once againe into Iewry boldly (the time that he would be killed of them, being not yet come) and raiſeth Lazarus foure dayes buried. 47 At which miracle the blinde malice of the rulers ſo increaſeth, that in Councell they conclude to make him away; howbeit the high Prieſt propheciеth unawares of the ſalvation of the world by his death. 54 He thereupon goeth againe out of the way.

The Goſpel, upon Friday in the 4. weeke of Lent.

* Luk. 7, 37. Matt. 26, 7. Mar. 14, 3. John 12, 3.

AND there was a certaine ſicke man, Lazarus of Bethania, of the towne of Mary and Martha her ſiſter.

2 (And Mary was ſhe * that anointed our Lord with oyntment, and wiped his feete with her hayre: whoſe brother Lazarus was ſicke.)

3 His ſiſters therfore ſent to him, ſaying, Lord, behold, he whom thou loveſt, is ſicke.

4 And IESVS hearing, ſaid to them, This ſickeneſſe is not to death, but for the glory of God: that the Sonne of God may be glorified by it.

5 And IESVS loved Martha, and her ſiſter Mary, and Lazarus.

6 As he heard therfore that he was ſicke, then

A Certaine man was ſicke named Lazarus, of Bethany, the towne of Mary and her ſiſter Martha.

2 (It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with oyntment, and wiped his feete with her haire, whoſe brother Lazarus was ſicke.)

3 Therefore his ſiſter ſent unto him, ſaying, Lord, behold, he whom thou loveſt is ſicke.

4 When Ieſus heard that, he ſaid, This infirmity is not unto death, but for the glory of God: that the Sonne of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Ieſus loved Martha and her ſiſter, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was ſicke, then he tarried in the ſame place two dayes.

7 Then after this he ſaith to his Diſciples, Let vs goe into Iewrie againe.

8 The Diſciples ſay to him, Rabbi, now the Iewes ſought to ſtone thee: and goeſt thou thither againe?

9 IESVS anſwered, Are there not twelve houres of the day? If a man walke in the day, he ſtumbleth not: becauſe he ſeeth the light of this world:

10 But if he walke in the night he ſtumbleth, becauſe the light is not in him.

11 Theſe things he ſaid: and after this he ſaith to them, Lazarus our frend ſleepeth: but I goe that I may raiſe him from ſleepe.

12 His Diſciples therfore ſaid, Lord, if he ſleepe, he ſhall be ſafe.

13 But IESVS ſpake of his death: & they thought that he ſpake [c] of the ſleeping of ſleepe.

14 Then therefore IESVS ſaid to them plainelie, Lazarus is dead:

15 And I am glad for your ſake, that you may beleeve, becauſe I was not there; but let vs goe to him.

16 Thomas therefore, who is called Didymus ſaid to his condiſciples, Let vs alſo goe, to die with him.

17 IESVS therefore came, and found him now having beene foure dayes in the grave.

18 (And Bethania was nigh to Hieruſalem about fifteene furlongs.)

19 And many of the Iewes were come to Martha and Marie, to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Martha therefore when ſhe heard that IESVS was come, went to meete him: but Marie ſate at home.

The Goſpel in a Maſſe for the dead upon the day of the buriall or depoſition.

21 Martha therefore ſaid to IESVS Lord if thou hadſt beene heere, my brother had not died.

22 But now alſo I know that what things ſoever thou ſhalt aske of God, God will give thee.

23 IESVS ſaith to her; Thy brother ſhall riſe againe.

24 Martha ſaith to him, I know that hee ſhall riſe againe in the reſurrection, in the laſt daye.

25 IESVS ſaid to her, I am the reſurrection and the life: he that beleeveth in mee, although he be dead ſhall live.

26 And every one that liveth and beleeveth in me, ſhall not die for ever, Beleeveſt thou this?

27 She ſaith to him, Yea Lord, I have beleeved that thou art CHRIST the Sonne of God that art come into this world. ☞

28 And when ſhee had ſaid theſe things, ſhee went, & called Marie her ſiſter ſecretly, ſaying, The Maſter is come, and calleth thee.

29 She

[illegible], he abode two dayes ſtill in the ſame place where he was.

7 Then after that ſaith he to his diſciples, Let us goe into Iewrie againe.

8 His Diſciples ſay unto him, Maſter, the Iewes lately ſought to ſtone thee, and goeſt thou thither againe?

9 Ieſus anſwered, Are there not twelve houres in the day? If any man walke in the day, hee ſtumbleth not, becauſe hee ſeeth the light of this world.

10 But if a man walke in the night, he ſtumbleth, becauſe there is no light in him.

11 Theſe things ſayd hee, And after that hee ſayeth unto them, Our friend Lazarus ſleepeth, but I goe, that I may awake him out of ſleepe.

12 Then ſayd his Diſciples, Lord, if hee ſleepe, he ſhall doe well ynough.

13 Howbeit, Ieſus ſpake of his death: but they thought that he had ſpoken of taking of reſt in ſleepe.

14 Then ſaid Ieſus unto them plainely, Lazarus is dead:

15 And I am glad for your ſakes that I was not there (becauſe ye may beleeve:) Neverthelesse, let us goe unto him.

16 Then ſayd Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellowdiſciples, Let us alſo goe, that we may die with him.

17 Then when Ieſus came, he found that he had lien in his grave foure dayes alreadie.

18 (Bethanie was nigh unto Hieruſalem, about fifteene furlongs off:)

19 And manie of the Iewes came to Martha and Marie to comfort them over their brother.

20 Martha as ſoone as ſhe heard that Ieſus was comming, went and met him: but Mary ſate ſtill in the houſe.

21 Then ſaid Martha unto Ieſus, Lord, if thou haddeſt beene heere, my brother had not dyed.

22 But even nowe I knowe, that whatſoever thou wilt aske of God, God will give it thee.

23 Ieſus ſayeth unto her, Thy brother ſhall riſe againe.

*24 Martha ſayeth unto him, I knowe that he ſhall riſe againe in the * reſurrection at the laſt day.*

* Iohn 5. 29. Luke 14. 14.

*25 Ieſus ſayd unto her, I am the reſurrection, and the * life: he that beleeveth on me, yea, though he were dead, yet ſhall he live.*

* Iohn 6. 35.

26 And whoſoever liveth, and beleeveth on me, ſhall never die. Beleeveſt thou this?

27 She ſaith unto him, Yea Lord, I beleeve that thou art Chriſt the ſonne of God, which ſhould come into the world.

28 And when ſhee had ſo ſaid ſhee went her way, and called Marie her ſiſter ſecretlie, ſaying, The Maſter is come, and calleth for thee.

29 As

29 She, when ſhe heard, riſeth quickly, and commeth to him.

30 For IESVS was not yet come into the towne: but he was yet in that place where Martha had met him.

31 The Iewes therefore that were with her in the houſe and did comfort her, when they ſaw Marie that ſhe roſe quickly & went forth, followed her, ſaying, That ſhe goeth to the grave to weepe there.

32 Mary therefore when ſhe was come where IESVS was, ſeeing him, fell at his feete and ſaith to him, Lord, if thou hadſt beene here, my brother had not died.

33 IESVS therefore when he ſaw her weeping, and the Iewes that were come with her, weeping, he groaned in ſpirit, and troubled himſelfe, 34 And ſaid, Where have you laid him? They ſay to him, Lord, come and ſee.

35 And IESVS wept.

36 The Iewes therefore ſaid, Behold how he loved him.

37 But certaine of them ſaid, Could not he that * opened the eyes of the blind man, make that this man ſhould not die? John 9,6.

38 IESVS therefore againe groaning in himſelfe, commeth to the grave; and it was a cave: and a ſtone was laid over it.

39 IESVS ſaith, Take away the ſtone. Martha the ſiſter of him that was dead, ſaith to him Lord now he ſtinketh, for he is now of foure dayes.

40 IESVS ſaith to her, Did not I ſaye to thee that if thou beleeve, thou ſhalt ſee the glorie of God?

41 They tooke therefore the ſtone away; And IESVS lifting his eyes upward, ſayd, Father, I give thee thankes that thou haſt heard me.

42 And I did knowe that thou doeſt alwayes heare me, but for the people that ſtandeth about, have I ſayd it, that they may beleeve that thou haſt ſent me.

43 When he had ſaid theſe things, hee cried, with a lowde voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44 And forthwith hee came forth that had beene dead, bound feete and hands with winding bands, and his face was tyed with a napkin. IESVS ſaid to them, ‡ Looſe him, and let him goe.

45 Many therefore of the Iewes that were come to Marie and Martha, and had ſeene the things that IESVS did, beleeved in him.

46 And certaine of them went to the Phariſes, and told them the things that IESVS did.

40 Ieſus ſayth unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldſt beleeve, thou ſhouldſt ſee the glory of God?

41 Then they tooke away the ſtone from the place where the dead was laid. And Ieſus lift up his eyes, and ſaid, Father, I thanke thee that thou haſt heard me.

42 Howbeit, I knowe that thou heareſt mee alwayes: but becauſe of the people which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that they may beleeve that thou haſt ſent me.

43 And when he thus had ſpoken, he cryed with a lowd voice, Lazarus come forth.

44 And he that was dead, came forth, bound hand and foote with grave-clothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Ieſus ſayeth unto them, Looſe him, and let him goe.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XVI.

Rhem. 1 2 Caſt you.] The Heretikes tranſlate, Excommunicate you. See what corruption this is, and the reaſon thereof, Annot. c. 9. 22.

Fulk. 1 The tranſlation of Geneva which ſo tranſlateth, hath in the margent, or put you out of the Synagogues. The one in effect is as much as the other.

Rhem. 2 13 He ſhall teach.] If he ſhall teach all truth, and that for ever (as before c. 14, 16.) how is it poſſible, that the Church can erre, or hath erred at any time, or in any point?

Fulke 2 The Church can never erre in any point neceſſary to ſalvation, nor any true member thereof, to continue therein. For this promiſe is to every one of the Apoſtles, and ſo to every Chriſtian man and woman, to their comfort, unto eternall ſalvation. Yet were the Apoſtles deceived for a time in ſome things, as in the calling of the Gentiles: and true Chriſtian men may erre, but not finally to their damnation. Therefore the full accompliſhment of this promiſe, S. Auguſtine referreth unto the life to come: I thinke (ſaith he) that this cannot be fulfilled in any mans minde in this life, for who living in this body, which is corrupted and weigheth downe the ſoule, can know all truth, When the Apoſtle ſaith, We know but in part, Tract. 96. in Ioan. How the Church and true Chriſtians may erre.

Rhem. 3 23 In my Name.] Vpon this the Church concludeth all her prayers, Per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum, even thoſe alſo that be made to Saints.

Fulk. 3 To aſke of Saints in the name of Chriſt, is to make Chriſt a mediatour betweene us and the Saints: But Chriſt ſaith, Whatſoever you aſke the Father in my Name, he will give it you, not whatſoever you aſke of Saints in my Name, the Father or the Saints will give you. We may ſee upon what ground the Popiſh faith is builded. And yet you ſay untruly of all your prayers to Saints, for many in your Portiſe conclude not, with Per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum: By Chriſt our Lord. For example among a great number, take a few. In that Office which you call Servitium beatæ Mariæ, There be three Leſſons which be all prayers to the Virgine Mary, which begin, Sancta Maria virgo virginum, &c. Sancta Maria piorum piiſſima, &c. Sancta Dei genetrix, &c. In which this concluſion is not. And yet no leſſe is aſked of her, then eternall life. And becauſe they be very blaſphemous, it ſhall not be amiſſe, for the ignorant in the Latine tongue to tranſlate them. The firſt is, Holy Mary Virgine of virgins, mother & daughter of the king of all kings: beſtow thy comfort upon us, that by thee, we may deſerve to have the reward of eternall life, & to raign with the elect of God for ever. The ſecond, Holy Mary, of all godly women moſt godly, make interceſſion for us, of all godly women the moſt godly, that by thee oh virgin, he may receive our praiers, which being borne Invocation of Saints.

Holy Weber. borne for us of thee, [illegible], that by his love our [illegible]. The third, Holy mother of God, [illegible] by thy godly interceſſion [illegible], that being [illegible] by thee, we may [illegible] where thou reigneſt with thy Sonne without end of time. And what call you this but a prayer? By the blood of Thomas [illegible] he did ſpend, make us Chriſt to climbe, whether Thomas did aſcend. The Popiſh Poet forgat per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum, or elſe it needed not, when the blood of Thomas was added to the blood of Chriſt. Againe, Per te Thoma poſt læva munera amplexetur nos Dei dextera. By thee Thomas after the gifts of the left hand, let the right hand of God embrace us, leſt the enemy, the world, or the workes of the fleſh doe carry us away captive to hell. Againe, Open nobis, &c. O Thomas reach thy helpe unto us, rule them that ſtand, lift up them that lie, correct our manners, acts, and life, and direct us into the way of peace. Moreover in a prayer to S. Oſmund: Confeſſor Domini, &c. Thou Confeſſor of our Lord, helpe the people with thy prayers, that being void of vices they may be acceptable unto thee, and whom thou ſeeſt frequenting thy ſolemnities, thou Teacher of people, cauſe that they may accompany thee. To S. Anne: Thou that waſt happy, being conceived with ſuch a Virgin, make us in the laſt houre to die without ſinne. Againe, Anne, thou healthfull mother make us to live to Chriſt. To S. Katherine. Haile virgine worthy of God, haile ſweet and gentle Virgine, obtaine for us the joyes, which thou doſt poſſeſſe with glory. By theſe few, among a ſhamefull rabble of Popiſh prayers, you may ſee how true it is, that their Church concludeth all her prayers, Per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum, even thoſe alſo that be made to Saints.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XVI.

Rhem. 4 12 Yet many things.] This place convinceth that the Apoſtles and the faithfull be taught many things, which Chriſt omitted to teach them for their weakneſſe: and that it was the providence of God that Chriſt in preſence ſhould not teach and order all things, that we might be no leſſe aſſured of the things that the Church teacheth by the holy Ghoſt, then of the things that himſelfe delivered. Chriſt left many things to be taught by the Church.

Fulk. 4 Though the infirmity of the Apoſtles, could not yet beare, that he had to ſay to them, it followeth not that thoſe things are not contained in the holy Scriptures. S. Auguſtine upon this place ſaith: Quum ipſe tacuerit, &c. When he himſelfe hath not uttered thoſe things, which of us can ſay, theſe and theſe they are? Or if he dare be bold to ſay, how doth he prove it? Yea he proceedeth further and ſaith: If we had read any of theſe things in the Bookes eſtabliſhed by Canonicall authority, which were written after the Aſcenſion of our Lord, it were not ſufficient to have read it there except it were alſo read there, that the ſame is one of theſe things, which our Lord would not then tell his Diſciples, becauſe they could not beare them. By this ſaying of S. Auguſtine you come ſhort to tell us of any thing, that is not contained in the Scriptures, that it is in the number of thoſe things, which Chriſt would not tell his Diſciples. Leo comparing 15. Ioan. 15. with this verſ. Ser. 2. de Pentecoſt. ſaith: Non itaque alia erat inſinuanda veritas, nec alia prædicanda doctrina: ſed oportebat capacitatem eorum qui docebantur augeri, & multiplicari conſtantiam illius charitatis, quæ omnem formidinem foras mitteret & furorem perſequentium non timeret. The ſufficiencie of the Scriptures.

Rhem. 5 13 The Spirit of truth.] Ever note that the holy Ghoſt in that he is promiſed to the Church, is called the Spirit of truth; which holy Spirit for many other cauſes is given to divers private men, and to all good men, to ſanctification: but to teach all truth and preſerve in truth and from errour, he is promiſed and performed onely to the Church and the chiefe Governour and generall Councels thereof. The Spirit of truth.

Fulk. 5 The Spirit of truth is promiſed to all the Church, and to every member thereof, for whom our Saviour Chriſt prayeth, ſaying, Sanctifie them in thy truth thy word is the truth, Ioan. 17. 17. and is not reſtrained to any one Governour (which is not ordained by Chriſt) nor yet to generall Councels, which if they erre from the word of truth, are not led by the Spirit of truth. And yet are generall Councels, a good meane, in matters of queſtion, where the miniſters of the Church, which have the ſpeciall gifts of knowledge and underſtanding in the Scriptures, may by mutuall conference of the word of God, finde out the certaine truth, as in the Councell of the Apoſtles, Act. 15. Councels may erre.

CHAP. XVII.

After his Sermon of farewell, he prayeth to his Father that ſeeing he hath now finiſhed his worke, he will give him his appointed glory, for the converſion of all nations, 6 and preſerve his Apoſtles, and his Church after them, in unity and verity (that is, from Schiſme, and Hereſie:) finally alſo glorifie them with him in heaven.

The Goſpel upon the Aſcenſion eve. ‡ The Father glorifieth the Sonne by raiſing him from death, exalting him up to his right hand, making all creatures to bow downe at his Name, and giving him all power and judgement. The Sonne againe glorifieth the Father, by making his honour, which only in a manner was in Iewry before, now knowne to all Nations.

These things ſpake Iesvs and lifting up his eyes into heaven, he ſaid, Father, the houre is come, ‡ glorifie thy Sonne, that thy Sonne may glorifie thee.

2 As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that all which thou haſt given him, to them he may give life everlaſting.

3 And this is ‖ life everlaſting that they know thee, the onely true God, and whom thou haſt ſent Iesvs Christ.

4 I have glorified thee upon the earth: I have conſummated the worke which thou gaveſt me to doe:

5 And now glorifie thou me, O Father, with thy ſelfe, with the glory which I had, before the world was, with thee.

6 I have manifeſted thy Name to the men whom thou gaveſt mee out of the world. Thine they were, and to me thou gaveſt them: and they have kept thy word.

7 Now they have knowne that all things which thou gaveſt me, are from thee:

These words ſpake Ieſus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and ſaid, Father, the houre is come, glorifie thy Son, that thy Sonne alſo may glorifie thee:

*2 * As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternall life to as many as thou haſt given him.* Math. 28, 18.

3 This is the life eternall, that they might know thee the onely true God, and Ieſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent.

4 I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finiſhed the worke which thou gaveſt mee to doe.

5 And now glorifie thou me, O father, with thine owne ſelfe, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

6 I have declared thy Name unto the men which thou gaveſt me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me, and they have kept thy word.

*7 * Now they have knowne that all things whatſoever thou haſt given me, are of thee:* Iohn 16. 27.

8 Becauſe the words which thou gaueſt me, I have given them: and they have received, and knowne in very deed that I came forth from thee, and have beleeved that thou didſt ſend me.

9 For them doe I pray: Not for the world doe I pray, but for them whom thou haſt given me:

10 Becauſe they be thine: and all my things be thine, and thine be mine: and I am glorified in them. And now I am not in the world, and theſe are in the world, and I come to thee.☞

The Goſpel in a votive Maſſe againſt Schiſme.
‡His petition is ſpecially to keepe the Apoſtles and his Church in unity and from Schiſmes.
Io.18,9.
Pſal.40,10. 108,8.

11 Holy Father ‡ keepe them in thy name, whom thou haſt given me; that they may be one, as alſo we.

12 When I was with them, I kept them in thy name. Thoſe * whom thou gaveſt me, have I kept: and none of them periſhed, but the ſonne of perdition, that the Scripture may be fulfilled.

13 And now I come to thee: and theſe things I ſpeake in the world, that they may have my joy filled in themſelves.

14 I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, becauſe they are not of the world: as I alſo am not of the world.

15 I pray not that thou take them away out of the world, but that thou preſerve them from evill.

16 Of the world they are not: as I alſo am not of the world.

17 ‖Sanctifie them in truth. Thy word is truth.

18 As thou didſt ſend me into the world, I alſo have ſent them into the world.

19 And for them I doe ‡ ſanctifie my ſelfe: that they alſo may be ſanctified in truth.

20 And not for them onely doe I pray, ‖ but for them alſo that by their word ſhall beleeve in me:

21 That they all may be one, as thou (Father) in me, and I in thee, that they alſo in us may be one: that the world may beleeve that thou haſt ſent me.

22 And the glory that thou haſt given me, have I given to them: that they may be one, as we alſo are one.

23 I in them, and thou in me: that they may bee conſummate in one: ☞ and the world may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them, as me alſo thou haſt loved.

24 Father, whom thou haſt given me, I will, that where I am, they alſo may be with me: that they may ſee my glory which thou haſt given me, becauſe thou haſt loved me before the creation of the world.

25 Iuſt father, the world hath not knowen thee; but I have knowne thee: and theſe have knowne, that thou didſt ſend me.

26 And

8 For I have given unto them the words which thou gaveſt me, and they have received them, and have knowne ſurely that I came out from thee, and they have beleeved that thou didſt ſend me.

9 I pray for them, I pray not for the world: but for them which thou haſt given me, for they are thine.

10 And all mine, are thine; and thine, are mine: and I am glorified in them.

11 And now am I not in the world, and they are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy father, keepe through thine owne name them, which thou haſt given me, that they may alſo be one, as we are.

*12 While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name: thoſe that thou gaveſt me, have I kept, and none of them is loſt, but that loſt child: * that the Scripture might be fulfilled.*

Pſal.109.8.

13 Now come I to thee, and theſe words ſpeake I in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themſelves.

14 I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, becauſe they are not of the world, even as I alſo am not of the world.

15 I Pray not that thou ſhouldeſt take them out of the world, but that thou ſhouldeſt keepe them from the evill.

16 They are not of the world, as I alſo am not of the world.

17 Sanctifie them through thy truth: thy word is the truth.

18 As thou didſt ſend me into the world: even ſo have I ſent them into the world.

19 And for their ſakes ſanctifie I my ſelfe, that they alſo might be ſanctified through the truth.

20 Neverthelesse, I pray not for them alone: but for them alſo which ſhall beleeve on me through their preaching:

21 That they all may be one, as thou father art in me, and I in thee, and that they alſo may be one in us: that the world may beleeve that thou haſt ſent me.

22 And the glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them: that they alſo may be one, as we alſo are one.

23 I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the world may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me.

Iohn.12.26.

*24 * Father, I will that they which thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may ſee my glory which thou haſt given me: for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the world.*

25 O righteous father, the world alſo hath not knowne thee: but I have knowne thee, and theſe have knowne that thou haſt ſent me.

16 And Holy Weeke.

26 And I have notified thy name to them, and will notifie it: that the love wherewith thou haſt loved me may be in them, and I in them.

26 And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou haſt loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XVII.

Rhem. 1 19 Sanctifie my ſelfe.] To ſanctifie himſelfe, is to ſacrifice himſelfe, by dedicating his holy body and blood to his Father, both upon the Croſſe, and in the holy Sacrament.

Fulke 1 Chriſt offered not his body and blood in the Sacrament to his Father, but to his Diſciples in remembrance of his onely once oblation thereof to his Father, by which he perfected for ever his Saints, Heb.10.14.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XVII.

True knowledge of God.

Rhem. 1 3 Life everlaſting.] Both the life of glory in heaven, and of grace here in the Church, conſiſteth in the knowledge of God: that, in perfect viſion: this, in faith working by charity; for, knowledge of God without keeping his Commandements, is not true knowledge, that is to ſay, it is an unprofitable knowledge, 1 Io.2.

The Church cannot erre.

Rhem. 2 17 Sanctifie them.] Chriſt prayeth that the Apoſtles, their ſucceſſours, and all that ſhall be of their beleefe, may be ſanctified in truth; which is as much to ſay, as to deſire that the Church may ever have the Spirit of truth, and be free from errour; which prayer of Chriſt had not beene heard if the Church might erre.

Fulk. 2 The Church cannot erre, nor any faithfull man finally, in matters neceſſary to perpetuall ſalvation. But if the Church or any man depart from the word of truth, they muſt needs erre. Though in matters neceſſary to ſalvation, the true Church, and every true Chriſtian, be preſerved from erring finally. S. Auguſtine interpreteth, ſanctifying in the truth, to be ſanctified in Chriſt, which is the word and the truth, Tract 108. in Ioan. Whereof it followeth, that neither the true Church, nor any Chriſtian man, can fall finally from Chriſt.

The Canon of the Maſſe.

Rhem. 3 20 But for them.] He expreſſeth (and it is a great comfort) that he prayeth not onely for the Apoſtles, but for the whole Church after them, that is, for all beleevers. And all this profound and divine prayer is reſembled in the holy Canon of the Maſſe before the Conſecration, as here it was made before his viſible ſacrifice on the Croſſe.

Fulk. 3 The Canon of the Maſſe, is too baſe to be matched with this divine prayer of our Saviour Chriſt, which yet followed his Supper, and not went before it, as the Popiſh Canon beginneth before Conſecration.

CHAP. XVIII.

Being gone to the place that Iudas the Traitour did know, 4 he offereth himſelfe to the band of his enemies, ſheweth his Divine might in overthrowing them all with a word, and in ſaving his Apoſtles from them alſo with a word: 10 rebuketh Peter that would defend him from them: 12 and ſo being apprehended, is brought bound to Annas and Caiphas, where he is ſtriken by a ſervant, and thrice denied of Peter. 28 Againe in the morning he is by them brought to Pilate. 29 Who demanding their accuſation, whereas they would oppreſſe him with their authoritie, 33 and examining the point of his kingdome, pronounceth him innocent: yet they cry rather to have a theeves life ſaved.

16 But Peter ſtood at the doore without. The other Diſciple therfore, that was known to the high Prieſt, went forth, and ſpake to the Portreſſe, and brought in Peter.

17 The wench therefore that was Portreſſe ſayth to Peter, Art not thou alſo of this mans Diſciples? He ſaith to her, ‡ I am not.

‡ It is all one for a man to deny Chriſt, and that he is a diſciple of Chriſt or a Catholike, or a Chriſtian man, when he is demanded. Aug. tract. 113 in Io. for ſo Peter here denieth Chriſt, in denying himſelfe to be his Diſciple.

18 And the ſervants and miniſters ſtood at a fire of coles, becauſe it was cold, & warmed themſelves: And with them was Peter alſo ſtanding, and warming himſelfe.

19 The high Prieſt therefore asked IESVS of his Diſciples, and of his doctrine.

20 IESVS anſwered him, I have openly ſpoken to the world: I have alwayes taught in the ſynagogue, and in the Temple whither all the Iewes reſort together: and in ſecret I have ſpoken nothing.

21 Why askeſt thou me? aske them that have heard what I have ſpoken unto them: behold they know what things I have ſaid.

22 When he had ſaid theſe things, one of the miniſters ſtanding by, gave IESVS a blow ſaying, Anſwereſt thou the high Prieſt ſo?

23 IESVS anſwered him, If I have ſpoken ill, give teſtimony of evill; but if well, why ſtrikeſt thou me?

24 And Annas ſent him bound to Caiphas the high Prieſt.

25 And Simon Peter was ſtanding, and warming himſelfe. They ſaid therefore to him, Art not thou alſo of his Diſciples? He denied and ſaid: I am not.

26 One of the ſervants of the high Prieſt ſaith to him, his couſin, whoſe eare Peter did cut off, Did not I ſee thee in the garden with him?

CHAP. XIX.

The Iewes are not ſatisfied with his ſcourging and irriſion. 8 Pilate hearing them ſay that he made himſelfe the ſonne of God, is more afraid, 12 Yet, they urging him with his loyalty towards Ceſar, and profeſſing that themſelves will no king but Ceſar, he yeeldeth unto them. 17 And ſo Chriſt carying his owne croſſe is crucified betweene two theeves, 19 Pilate writing notoriouſly the onely cauſe of his death to be, for that he is their king or Chriſt. 23 His garments be ſo uſed, even as the Scriptures foretold. 25 He hath ſpeciall care of his mother to the end. 28 He fulfilleth all that was written of his Paſſion, to be fulfilled, and ſo yeelded up his Ghoſt. 32 Then by the Iewes meanes alſo other ſcriptures about his legs and ſide, are fulfilled. 38 And finally he is honourably buried.

Matt. 27,29. Mar. 15,16.

THen therefore Pilate tooke IESVS, and ſcourged him.

2 And the ſouldiers platting a crown of thornes, put it upon his head: and they put about him a purple garment.

2 And

THen Pilate tooke Ieſus therefore, & ſcourged him.

Matt. 27.29. mar 15.17.

*2 * And the ſouldiers, when they had wound a crowne of thornes, they did put it on his head, and they did caſt about him a purple garment.*

3 And they came to him, and ſayd, Haile king of the Iewes, and they gave him blowes.

4 Pilate went forth againe, and ſaith to them, Behold, I bring him forth unto you, that you may know that I finde no cauſe in him.

5 IESVS therefore went forth, carying the crowne of thornes, and the purple veſtiment: And he ſaith to them, Loe the man.

6 When the chiefe Prieſts therefore and the miniſters had ſeene him, they cryed, ſaying, Crucifie, crucifie him. Pilate ſaith to them, Take him you, and crucifie him; for I finde no cauſe in him.

7 The Iewes anſwered him, We have a Law: and according to the law he ought to die, becauſe he hath made himſelfe the ſonne of God.

8 When Pilate therefore had heard this ſaying, he feared more.

9 And he entred into the palace againe: and he ſaith to IESVS, Whence art thou? But IESVS gave him no anſwer.

10 Pilate therefore ſaith to him, Speakeſt thou not to me? knoweſt thou not that I have power to crucifie thee, and I have power to releaſe thee?

11 IESVS anſwered, Thou ſhouldeſt not have any power againſt me, unleſſe it were given thee from above. Therefore he that hath betrayed me to thee, hath the greater ſinne.

12 From thenceforth Pilate ſought to releaſe him: But the Iewes cryed, ſaying, If thou releaſe this man, thou art not Cæſars friend, every one that maketh himſelfe a king ſpeaketh againſt Cæſar.

13 But Pilate when he had heard theſe words, brought forth IESVS: and he ſate in the judgement ſeate, in the place that is called Lythoſtrotos, and in Hebrewe Gabbatha.

14 And it was the Paraſceue of Paſche, about the ‡ ſixt houre, and he ſayth to the Iewes, Loe your king.

‡ He meaneth midday, counting from ſun riſing, for ſo doth the Scripture count the houres of the day. *Mat.*20. *Mar.*15. *Luc.*23. *Io.*4. *Act.*3. & 10.

15 But they cryed, Away, away with him, crucifie him. Pilate ſaith to them, Shall I crucifie your king? The chiefe Prieſts anſwered: We have no King, but Cæſar.

16 Then therefore he delivered him unto them for to be crucified: And they tooke IESVS and led him forth.

Matt.27,33. Mar.15,20. Luke 23,33.

17 * And bearing his owne || croſſe he went forth into that which is called the place of Calverie, in Hebrew Golgotha.

18 Where they crucified him, and with him two others, on the one ſide and on the other, and in the mids IESVS.

19 And Pilate wrote a title alſo: and he put it upon the croſſe. And it was written, IESVS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE IEWES.

20 This

3 And ſayd, Haile king of the Iewes: and ſtrooke him with rods.

4 Pilate went forth againe, and ſaid unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that I finde no fault in him.

5 Then came Ieſus forth, wearing the crowne of thornes, and the robe of purple. and Pilate ſaith unto them, Behold the man.

6 When the high Prieſts therefore and Officers ſaw him, they cryed, ſaying, Crucifie him, crucifie him. Pilate ſayth unto them, Take ye him, and crucifie him: for I finde no fault in him.

7 The Iewes anſwered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to dye: becauſe he made himſelfe the ſonne of God.

8 When Pilate heard that ſaying, he was the more afrayd,

9 And went againe into the judgment hall, and ſayth unto Ieſus, Whence art thou? But Ieſus gave him no anſwer.

10 Then ſaith Pilate unto him, Speakeſt thou not unto me? knoweſt thou not that I have power to crucifie thee, and have power to looſe thee?

11 Ieſus anſwered, thou couldeſt have no power at all againſt me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered me unto thee, hath the more ſinne.

12 And from thenceforth ſought Pilate meanes to looſe him: but the Iewes cryed, ſaying, If thou let him goe, thou art not Caſars friend: For whoſoever maketh himſelfe a king, ſpeaketh againſt Caſar.

13 When Pilate heard that ſaying, he brought Ieſus forth, and he ſate downe in the judgement ſeate, in a place that is called the pavement, but in the Hebrew tongue, Gabbatha.

14 It was the preparing of the Paſſeover, and about the ſixth houre: and he ſayth unto the Iewes, Behold your King.

15 They cryed, Away with him, away with him, crucifie him. Pilate ſayth unto them, Shall I crucifie your King? The high Prieſts anſwered, We have noe King but Caſar.

*16 * Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified: and they tooke Ieſus, and led him away.*

Mat.27.31. Mar.15,21. Luke 23.20.

17 And he bearing his croſſe, went forth into a place which is called the place of a ſkull, but in the Hebrew, Golgotha:

18 Where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either ſide one, and Ieſus in the middeſt.

19 And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the croſſe. The writing was, IESVS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE IEWES.

21 The chiefe Prieſts therefore of the Iewes ſaid to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Iewes: but that he ſaid, I am King of the Iewes.

22 Pilate anſwered, That which I have written, I have written.

Mat.27,35. Mar.15,24. Luke 23,34.

23 The * ſouldiers therefore when they had crucified him, tooke his garments (and they made foure parts, to every ſouldier a part) and his coate. And his ‡ coate was without ſeame, wrought from the toppe throughout.

‡ This coate without ſeame is a figure of the vnity of the Church. Cypr. de vnit. ec. And Euthymius and other write that our Lady made it.

24 They ſayd therefore one to another, Let us not cut it, but let us caſt lots for it whoſe it ſhall be. That the Scripture might be fulfilled, ſaying, They have parted my garments among them: and upon my veſture they have caſt lots. And the ſouldiers did theſe things.

Pſal.68,22.

29 A veſſell therefore ſtood there full of vinegar. And they putting a ſpunge full of vinegar about hiſope, offered it to his mouth.

30 IESVS therfore when he had taken the vinegar, ſaid, It is conſummate. And bowing his head, he gave up the Ghoſt.

31 The Iewes therefore (becauſe it was the Paraſceue) that the bodies might not remaine upon the croſſe on the Sabboth (for that was a great Sabbath day) they deſired Pilate that their leggs might be broken, and they might be taken away.

32 The ſouldiers therefore came: and of the firſt indeed they brake the leggs, and of the other that was crucified with him.

33 But after they were come to IESVS, when they ſaw that he was dead, they did not breake his leggs.

34 But one of the ſouldiers with a ſpeare opened his ſide, and incontinent there came forth || bloud and water.

35 And he that ſaw it hath given teſtimony: and his teſtimonie is true. ☞ And he knoweth that he ſayth true, that you alſo may beleeve.

20 This title read many of the Iewes: for the place where Ieſus was crucified was nigh to the citie: and it was written in Hebrue, and Greeke and Latine.

21 Then ſaid the high Prieſts of the Iews, to Pilate, Write not the king of the Iews: but that he ſaid, I am the king of the Iewes.

22 Pilate anſwered, What I have written, that have I written.

*23 * Then the ſouldiers, when they had crucified Ieſus, took his garments, (and made foure parts to every ſouldier a part) and alſo his coat: the coate was without ſeame, woven from the top throughout.*

Matth marke luke 23.

*24 They ſayd therefore among themſelves, Let us not divide it, but caſt lots for it, whoſe it ſhall be: that the Scripture might be fulfilled, ſaying, * They parted my rayment among them, and for my coate did they caſt lots. And the ſouldiers did ſuch things indeed.*

Pſal.22.18.

25 There ſtood by the croſſe of Ieſus, his mother, and his mothers ſiſter, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Ieſus therefore ſaw his mother and the Diſciple ſtanding by, whom he loved, he ſaith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy ſonne.

27 Then ſaith he to the Diſciple, Behold thy mother. And from that houre the Diſciple tooke her unto his owne houſe.

*28 After theſe things, Ieſus knowing that all things were now performed, * that the Scripture might be fulfilled, he ſaith, I thirſt.*

Pſal.69.22.

29 So there ſtood a veſſell by, full of vinegar. Therefore when they had filled a ſpunge with vinegar, and put it upon hyſope, they offered it to his mouth.

30 When Ieſus therefore had received the vinegar, he ſaid, It is finiſhed, and when he had bowed his head he gave up the ghoſt.

31 The Iewes therefore, becauſe it was the preparing of the Sabbath, that the bodies ſhould not remaine upon the croſſe on the Sabbath day (for that Sabbath day was an high day) beſought Pilate, that their leggs might be broken, and that they might be taken downe.

32 Then came the ſouldiers, and brake the leggs of the firſt, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Ieſus, and ſaw that he was dead already, they brake not his leggs.

34 But one of the ſouldiers with a ſpeare thruſt him into the ſide, and forthwith came there out blood and water.

35 And he that ſaw it, bare record, and his record is true, and he knoweth that he ſaith true, that ye might beleeve alſo.

36 For theſe things were done, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, You ſhall not breake a bone of him.

37 And againe another Scripture ſayth, They ſhall looke on him whom they pearſed.

38 And after theſe things * Ioſeph of Arimathea (becauſe he was a diſciple of IESVS, but ſecret for feare of the Iewes) deſired Pilate that he might take away the body of IESVS. And Pilate permitted. He came therefore and tooke away the body of IESVS.

39 * Nicodemus alſo came, he that at the firſt came to IESVS by night, bringing a mixture of myrrhe and aloes, about an hundred pounds.

40 They tooke therefore the body of IESVS, and bound it in linnen clothes with the ſpices, as the maner is with the Iewes to bury.

41 And there was in the place where he was crucified, a garden: and in the garden a new monument, wherein no man yet had beene layd.

42 There therefore becauſe of the Paraſceve of the Iewes, they laid IESVS becauſe the monument was hard by.

*Scripture ſhould be fulfilled: * A bone of him ſhall not be broken.*

Numb.9.12. Exod.12.46.

*37 And againe another Scripture ſayth, * They ſhall looke on him whom they pearced.*

Zach.12.10.

*38 * After this, Ioſeph of Arimathæa (being a diſciple of Ieſus, but ſecret for feare of the Iewes,) beſought Pilate that he might take downe the body of Ieſus, and Pilate gave him licence: he came therefore, and tooke the body of Ieſus.*

Matt.27.57. marke 15.42. luke 23.50.

39 And there came alſo Nicodemus, which at the beginning came to Ieſus by night; and brought of myrrhe and aloes mingled together, about an hundred pound waight:

40 Then tooke they the body of Ieſus, and wound it in linnen clothes, with the odours, as the maner of the Iewes is to bury.

41 And in the place where he was crucified there was a garden, and in the garden a new ſepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

42 There layd they Ieſus therefore, becauſe of the preparing of the Sabbath of the Iewes, for the ſepulchre was nigh at hand.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XIX.

RHEM. 1 20 Hebrew, in Greeke, and in Latine.] Theſe three tongues being for other cauſes moſt famous before in all the world, are now alſo dedicated to God in the triumphant title of the Croſſe of Chriſt, and in them the holy Scriptures are more conveniently written, taught, and preſerved.

FVLKE. 1 The tongues of all nations are ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt, to utter the great and magnificall things of God. Act 2.11. The writing of Pilate, to the deriſion of Chriſt, is a vaine reaſon of the ſanctifying of theſe three tongues. For by Hebrew it is moſt like the Evangeliſt meaneth the Syrian language, which then was the vulgar tongue of the Iewes: and in Latine was no part of the holy Scripture firſt written.

All tongues are ſanctified.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIX.

The HOLY CROSSE.

RHEM. 2 15 His owne croſſe.] This croſſe, for that it was the inſtrument of our redemption, and as it were the altar of the ſupreme ſacrifice, highly ſanctified by the touching, bearing, and oblation of the ſacred body and blood of our Lord, is truely called the HOLY CROSSE: *and hath beene endued with vertue of Miracles, both the whole and every little piece thereof. For the which cauſes, and ſpecially for the moſt neere memoriall of Chriſts Paſſion, it hath beene viſited in Pilgrimages, honoured by feſtivall daies and otherwiſe, reſerved and reverenced of the ancient Fathers, with all devotion: as contrariwiſe it hath beene abuſed of Pagans, Apoſtates, and Heretikes, ſeeking in vaine to deface and deſtroy it. The Croſſe of Chriſt.

FVLKE 2. The Scripture never calleth the Croſſe whereon Chriſt died, holy, but rather curſed. For S. Paul prooveth that Chriſt became accurſed for us, by that he ſuffered on the Croſſe, according to the Scripture: *Curſed is every one that hangeth on a tree. Gal.*3.13. And for many hundred yeeres after Chriſt, there was no mention or regard what became of it. But when ſuperſtition began to grow, it was ſaid to be found in Conſtantines time by Helena his mother, which it is not like that Euſebius would have omitted in the life of Conſtantine, writing of Helena, matters of leſſe importance then that invention, if it had beene ſo in deed. But howſoever it was, it was credited in the latter times, and much eſteemed, not without ſome ſpot of ſuperſtition. For if there had belonged any religious care of it to the Church of Chriſt, the Apoſtles would have procured the keeping of it, and not ſuffered the Church to have been three hundred yeres without it. For it had been an eaſier ſuite for Ioſeph and Nicodemus to obtaine of Pilate, then the body of Ieſus himſelfe. But in the latter times, as ſuperſtition did more and more increaſe, and miracles were fained unto it, the Croſſe alſo was multiplied in number, and the pieces were made thereof ſo many as would lade a ſhip if they were laid together, as Eraſmus ſaith. Which alſo is defended to bee poſſible by the counterfeit authority of Paulinus B. of Nola ep. 11. where he ſaith: Crux illa, &c. That Croſſe holding a living force in matter void of ſenſe, doth ſince the time it was found, ſo lend the wood of it to the innumerable deſires of men almoſt daily, that it ſuſteineth no diminiſhing, and continueth as if it had never been touched, men daily taking part of it, and yet worſhipping it ſtill whole. But this incorruptible vertue and ſoliditie that cannot be conſumed, it did drinke in truely of the blood of that fleſh, which having ſuffered death ſaw no corruption. But this is ſo groſſe a fable, that the Cenſors appointed according to the Councell of Trent in the low Countries, for ſhame have commanded in their ind. expurg. to be put out of the booke of Iohannes Sartorius, who alleageth it to juſtifie the hyperbolicall ſaying of Eraſmus. But let us ſee what is alleaged out of the ancient Writers concerning it. Firſt, Cyrill ſpeaketh of the ſigne of the croſſe, which doth put men in remembrance of many good things againſt Iulian, which ſlandered the Chriſtians, that they worſhipped the wood of the Croſſe, by painting the Image of it in their forhead and before their houſes. S. Hierom being in Iewry, writeth in the perſon of Paula & Euſtochium to Marcella of the memories of Chriſts birth, life, death, and buriall, that were in thoſe places, among which he reckoneth, Crucis lambere lignū, to licke or kiſſe the wood of the croſſe, whereby it ſeemeth they were perſwaded that the croſſe was there, and yet it may be the words be allegorical, as many other in that Epiſtle: Viſere eſt Laza-

[illegible] may be [illegible] Chriſt on [illegible] by [illegible]: but [illegible] the [illegible] your [illegible]. Hom.8. died [illegible] in time of the paſſion of Chriſt. [illegible] patience, he brought into all kind- [illegible] of his worke, he confirmed all his [illegible] the very [illegible] and followeth me, is not worthy of me. In which ſaying, except you [illegible] taketh not up his croſſe [illegible] the ſigne of ſalvation to be had in reverence or honoured, is nothing [illegible] the words, Signum ſalutis [illegible] ſuperſtition. Although in the words following, Leo expoundeth his meaning, how it is to be honoured, by [illegible] men of their [illegible] Chriſts death and paſſion. Evagrius a writer in a more [illegible] time, telleth a miracle of Chriſt, that was ſhewed when Thomas Biſhop of Apamea, cauſed the croſſe whereon Chriſt died, about the Church to be worſhipped of men which earneſtly deſired to ſee it, at ſuch time as he uſed not to ſhew it, becauſe Choſroes having lately deſtroyed Antioche, they thought it ſhould be the laſt time that they ſhould ſee it. For they were next in danger, which they eſcaped for that preſent time, and an Image of that miracle was hanged up in the Church, which ſoone after, with all the city was conſumed with fire by the Perſians. In which ſtory (if it be true) it is to be noted, that the croſſe was ſuppoſed then to be at Apamea, where ſoone after, by all likelihood, it was burned with the Church in which it was kept. Paulus Diaconus a late writer alſo telleth how Tiberius Conſtantinus found a great treaſure hidden in the earth under a marble croſſe, which he cauſed to be taken up: ſaying, Doe we tread under our feete our Lords croſſe wherewith we ought to defend our forehead and breaſt? In which ſtory, the judgement of Tiberius Conſtantinus which would not tread upon it, is no more to be eſteemed, then the judgement of many Emperours before him, which had ſeene it in their palace and ſuffered it to lie, or of him (whomſoever he was) that did hide the treaſure under it. Now come we to the epiſtle of Paulin. and the ſtory of Ruffinus in which, mention is made of the invention of the croſſe. And firſt, concerning the credit of that epiſtle lately brought to light, the reader muſt be admoniſhed, that the ſtile rather ſavoureth ſome Monkiſh character, then that Paulinus, whoſe epiſtles unto Auguſtine have long beene read and knowne, and the popiſh cenſors (as we have ſhewed before) are aſhamed of it. But admitting it to be authenticall, let us ſee what credit it deſerveth. Firſt he ſendeth to Severus a part of a little peece of the wood of the divine croſſe, and that his relique might be the better eſteemed, he telleth the whole ſtory of the invention of the croſſe by Helena. In which ſtory it is worthy to be conſidered, how well the writers thereof agree, that we may verely thinke it was forged. Seeing Euſebius, who writeth the life of Conſtantine, and in the ſame rehearſeth the acts and buildings of Helena in Iewry, maketh no mention of any ſuch matter. Therefore that briefe note in the Chronicle, bearing the name of Euſebius, is doubtleſſe an adjection of ſome later writer. S. Ambroſe then is the moſt ancient writer, that maketh mention of that invention. De obitu Theodoſ. and he ſayth plainely, that three croſſes being found, the croſſe of Chriſt was knowne by the title that Pilate faſtened unto it. Titulo patuit crux ſalutaris. The healthfull croſſe was knowne by the title. Ruffinus ſayth, the title could not bewray the croſſe of Chriſt, Sozomenus and Nicephorus ſay, the letters were worne out. Soz. lib.2. cap.1. Niceph. lib.8. cap.29. Paulinus ſayth: The way to diſcerne it, was revealed chiefly to Helena her ſelfe. Ruffinus aſcribeth the deviſe to Macarius Biſhop of Ieruſalem: ſo doth Sozomenus, Theodoret, and Socrates. Paulinus ſayth it was knowne by raiſing up a dead man to life. Ruffinus ſayth it was diſcerned by reſtoring a ſicke woman to health, with whom agree Socrates lib.1. cap.17. Theodoret lib.1. cap.18. Sozomen addeth, that it was reported alſo of a dead man to be reſtored to life. Paulinus ſayth, the croſſe remaineth whole at Ieruſalem, but yet ſo, that albeit innumerable peeces be dayly cut off at the requeſt of men, it is nothing diminiſhed, but remaineth as though it had never beene touched. Ruffinus ſayth that Helena left part of it at Ieruſalem, the reſt ſhe ſent to Conſtantinople, which as all the inhabitants of Conſtantinople affirmed, Conſtantius incloſed in his owne image, and there it was in the time of Socrates. How it came to Apamea, let Evagrius tell. Sir Iohn Mandevill ſayth, it was whole at Conſtantinople in his time, although the Monkes of a certaine Abbey in Cypres, affirmed that they had a part of it, to get an offering. Paulinus ſayth, that the Biſhop of Ieruſalem yeerely at Eaſter, bringeth it fourth to be adored, himſelfe being the principall of the worſhippers. Saint Ambroſe ſayth, that to worſhip it, it is an heatheniſh error and vanity of ungodly men. For theſe are his words: Invenit ergo titulum, regem adoravit, non lignum utique; quia hic gentilis eſt error, & vanitas impiorum. Sed adoravit illum qui pependit in ligno, ſcriptus in titulo. Shee found the title, ſhe adored the king, not the tree verily, for that is an heatheniſh error, and vanity of the ungodly. But ſhe adored him that had hanged upon the tree, which was written in the title. Therefore if the invention of the croſſe were not a forged matter, as by the diverſity of reports, it ſeemeth to be, yet by the judgement of S. Ambroſe agreeable to the holy Scripture, the croſſe cannot be worſhipped without heatheniſh error, and vaine impiety. Finally, the placing of Mary and Iohn (for ſo you call thoſe blocks) by the Roode in the Popiſh Church, hath no more warrant in the word of God then the Roode it ſelfe; for any thing we can ſee in this Chapter.

The Roode with Mary and Iohn.

RHEM. 26. To his mother.] The marvellous reſpect that Chriſt had to his mother, vouchſafing to ſpeake to her, and to take order for her, even from the croſſe, in the middes of his infinite anguiſhes and myſteries a working for mankinde.

By this you ſee why in Catholike Churches Mary and Iohn ſtande by the Roode.

27 To the Diſciple.] A great honour to Iohn and charge, to have that bleſſed jewell in keeping: and an unſpeakable comfort, that from that day forward the one was to the other mother and ſonne, Virginem, virgini commendavit, ſaith S. Hierom, He commended the virgin to a virgin.

Li.1. adv. Iovin.

RHEM. 3 34 Blood and water.] This pearſing of Chriſts ſide, though on the ſouldiers part it was done blindly and inſolently, yet by Gods ordinance it conteined great myſteries, and was prefigured by Moſes ſtriking the rocke with his rod: as this ſtreame of blood and water drawne miraculouſly out of his dead body, running in the Sacraments of the Church after the people of God, was ſignified by the water of the ſame rocke following the Iſraelites in the deſert. Out of this ſide (ſayth S. Auguſtine) iſſued the Sacraments. Hence (ſayth S. Chryſoſtome) the great myſteries have their beginning. *Who warneth us, that when we come to drinke of the holy Chalice, we ſhould ſo approch, as though we drew the blood out of Chriſts ſide. And both blood and water apart did flow foorth, to ſhew us the fountaine of two principall Sacraments, and their ſeverall matters, Baptiſme and the Euchariſt, bringing to life everlaſting in the Church. The fathers alſo ſay that the Church who is Chriſts ſpouſe and his coadiutrice in applying the blood and water to the benefit of the Faithfull, was here formed, builded, and taken out of this holy ſide of Chriſt ſleeping on the Croſſe, as * Eve was of Adams ſide, when he was caſt aſleepe in Paradiſe.*

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XX.

19 The doores were shut.] Such [illegible] as say Christs body [illegible] that he is in heaven, and cannot be in two places at once, nor [illegible] agreeable to the condition of his humanity, is invincibly refuted by Christs comming [illegible] shut: and by that that his true naturall body, whole and [illegible] and divers from the substance and corpulence of the wood, [illegible] and passed thorow the same: as he also came out of his mot[illegible] the stone, out of his Sepulchre. By all which the Heretikes [illegible] the plaine Scriptures, or so fondly shift themselves from the [illegible] cially to be marked in this point.

Some say, that he came in at the window: some, that the doore opened of it selfe to let him [illegible] the doores being shut, signifieth no more, but that he came in late in the evening, at what [illegible] doores: and such other slights to defend falshood, against expresse Scriptures, and against the [illegible] therefore tooke him to be a Spirit, because they saw him stand suddenly in the mids of them, [illegible] shut. And the Fathers all confesse, that he went in, the doores being shut. See S. Ambrose l. 10. [illegible] 24. [illegible] S. Augustine ep. 3. ad Volusian. & l. 22. de civit. c. 8. [illegible] S. Cyril in Io. l. 12. c. 53. and S. H[illegible] c. 21. We know it is the naturall course of Gods Ordinance, that every body should have but one and his owne proper place fitted to the lineaments, quantity, termes and limits of the same: without which, [illegible] the bodies were no where, and consequently not at all, as S. August. saith ad Dardanum; but that God supernaturally and miraculously cannot by his omnipotencie dispose otherwise of his owne body, then the naturall forme or quantity or quality [illegible] of require, that is great incredulity; seeing we must beleeve that he can do so with any other body of meere men or other creatures, the Scripture being plaine that he can make a camell passe thorow a needles eye, continuing in his naturall figure and quantity still: and S. Augustin telleth of a woman whose ring fell from her girdle, both being fast and whole: and Rupertus of a religious man, whose girdle fast buckled fell downe before him from his body, De off. Eccl. Therefore it is too much unfaithfulnesse, by rules of place to embarre Christ of his will or wisdome to be in the Sacrament how himselfe list, and on as many altars or places as he liketh; we detest for all that the wicked heresie of certaine protestants, holding quite contrary to the Zuinglians, that Christ according to his humanity is in every place where the Divinity is: which is both against faith, and the common rules of nature and divinity.

FVLK. 2 It can never be proved, that Christs body came either thorow the wood of the doores, thorow the stone of the Sepulchre, or thorow the clausure of his mothers wombe. And concerning the last, the Scripture is evident to the contrary, where it is said, that our Saviour Christ was presented to the Lord, according as it is written: Every male that first openeth the matrix, &c. Luke 2. 23. The same affirmeth [illegible] Hierom. cont. Pelag. l. 2. saying, Clausam portam vulvae virginalis aperuit, He opened the gates of the Virgins wombe, that were shut. For the immaculate virginity of Mary consisted not, in that the clausure was not stirred, but in that, she was free from the company of man. What he writeth against Helvidius of such things as doe accompany a naturall birth, which he acknowledgeth to have beene in the birth of Christ, and rightly saith not to be more shamefull then the Crosse of Christ, I had rather that they should reade in Latine, then I expresse in English: Solus est masculus adaperiens vulvam, qui in veritate sanctus vocaretur. Vulvam quippe matris ejus non concupiscentia mariti concubentis, sed omnipotentia filij nascentis aperuit, Ful. de incar. & gra. f. c. 13. Againe, I cannot see how it can stand with the Article of his nativity, that he came out of his mothers wombe the clausures not stirred, when such a comming cannot properly be called a birth: whereas the Scripture speaking of his nativity, [illegible] the termes that are commonly spoken in the birth of all men, Mat. 1. 21. & 25. Luke 2. 6. & 7. & 11, &c. Whether all parts after his birth remained as close as before (as divers ancient Fathers thinke) I will not contend. It is sufficient to know so much as the Scripture teacheth, that Christ was truly borne of a Virgine. Leo saith, It was an errour of the Manichees to deny that he was borne corporally of the Virgin Mary, in Nat. Ser. 4. Therefore we must so acknowledge that he was borne of a Virgine, that we doe not deny that he was borne corporally. [illegible] is it said, that Christ came thorow the doores being shut, but after the doores were shut, which yet at his entry were opened miraculously, as to the Apostles the prison doores, Act. 5. 19. & 12. 10. So I say of the stone, if he rose before the Angel removed the same, Mat. 28. You say, that some say, he came in at the window, yet are you able to name none of us, that so saith or thinketh. But where we say, the doore opened unto him miraculously, or that he came in late, after the doores were shut, you say they be slights to defend falshood against expresse Scriptures: but we may well say, you have nothing but brazen faces to oppose against the manifest truth. For where have you any expresse Scriptures, that he came thorow the wood of the doores being shut, the expresse words of the Evangelist are, after the dores were shut. But you adde, that our exposition is against the Apostles testimony, who therefore tooke him to be a Spirit, because they saw him stand suddenly in the midst of them, all the house being close shut. Which is a weake testimony, that he came thorow the wood and iron of the doores. They thought him to be a Spirit when he walked on the waters, Mat. 14. 26. Yea it is no certaine testimony, that he came in miraculously, for it might be, the doore was opened unto him by some of the house unknowing to them. But admitting that he came in miraculously, your grosse imagination is contrary to the testimony and argument of Christ himselfe, who to remove that false suspicion out of their mindes, he saith, handle and see me, for a Spirit hath not flesh and bones as you see me have, Luk. 24. Which argument, had beene altogether insufficient, to prove the truth of his bodily presence, and resurrection in body, if they had beene perswaded that (after your fantasie) he came thorow the boards of the doore; or that their senses, concerning his body, could have beene so greatly deceived, that delivering them bread to the judgement of all their senses, he had delivered in the same compasse and shape of bread, not bread, but his naturall body sitting still in their sight. If therefore the Apostles had understood the words of the Supper, as Papists doe, they could not have beene perswaded by the arguments of their senses, which Christ offereth, of the truth and certainty of the resurrection of his body from death to life. But all the Fathers (you say) confesse, that he went in, the doores being shut. That he came in miraculously, the most doe thinke, and so doe we, but not that his body came thorow the wood of the doores. S. Ambrose saith, Thomas had cause to wonder, when he saw, that after all bodies were shut, the joynts not hurt, his body gotten in thorow places unclosed, where no way was. [illegible] it is marvell, how the bodily [illegible] an impenetrable body did passe, his comming [illegible] presence visible, he being easie to be touched, hard to be discerned. This he speaketh of the [illegible] errour: but his resolution

The body of Christ.

[illegible] of his body [illegible] mortality, he [illegible] nature, Ep. 57. & Civ. 22. c. 8. [illegible] from the [illegible] both fast and whole, he saith: They [illegible] which be- [illegible] that our Lord Jesus Christ was borne of the Virgins wombe of his Mother being whole, and entred in to his Disciples after the doores were shut, [illegible] they [illegible] to be true, let them beleeve the same. Admitting this miracle of the ring to be true (as Augustine was perswaded it was) upon the report of the noble woman, [illegible] it followeth not, that the substance of the ring went thorow the substance of the girdle, but that the one substance, giving place for the time, returned againe when the other was passed. Some [illegible] Jew, seeing that the eare of Malchus was so soone healed, would not beleeve, that Peters sword went betweene it and his head, as we are sure it did. So we say of the birth of Christ, and of his entry, the doores being shut, the place thorow which his body passed, might be whole and shut before and after he passed, but not in the instant of his passing, because that is contrary to the nature of a true body, such as his was. Cyrillus saith, Our Lord entred unto his Disciples suddenly by his omnipotencie, after the doores were shut, overcomming the nature of things, with some words to the same effect, arguing nothing, but that he came in after a wonderful maner, which we doe acknowledge: yet not altering the nature of his body, but subduing the nature of other things to himselfe, as he shewed, in his walking upon the water. Which Hierome also alledgeth, to prove the miraculous entring of Christ. But though he entred after the doores were shut, which the nature of humane bodies doth not suffer, therefore we shall deny both Peter and our Lord, to have had true bodies, because they walked upon the waters, which is against nature. By this it appeareth, he meaneth a marvellous maner of entring, but yet such, as taketh not away the truth of Christs body, from which, if you take distance of space (as S. Augustine saith) you take the body cleane away: Or if you take the bodies from the qualities of bodies (he meaneth essentiall qualities) there shall be no place where they may be, and if they be no where, they be not at all. This saith S. Augustine of the nature of Christs body, agreeable to the nature of all true bodies. Ep. 57. Leo saith, Ideo & clausis ad Discipulos ostijs introibat, & flatu suo dabat Spiritum sanctum, & dato intelligentiae lumine sanctarum Scripturarum occulta pandebat, & rursus idem vulnus lateris, fixuras clavorum & omnia recentissimae passionis signa monstrabat, dicens, Videte manus meas & pedes quia ego sum. Palpate & videte quia spiritus carnem & ossa non habet, sicut me videtis habere; ut agnosceretur in eo proprietas divinae humanaeque naturae individua permanere, & ita sciremus verbum non hoc esse, quod carnem, & unum Dei filium & verbum confiteremur & carnem. Now, what God is able to doe if he will, we doubt not: but when we know his will by his word, concerning the truth of our Saviour Christs humane body, wherein he was made like unto us in al things, Heb. 2. 17. &c. we cannot admit such miracles, as be contrary to his wil revealed in his word, upon pretence of his Almighty power. And if you detest the heresie of the Ubiquetaries, as contrary to faith, and the common rules of nature and divinity, for the same reasons you should leave your heresie, of the body of Christ being in many places at once, and yet without the due space of place, whereby according to S. Augustines rule, it is made to be in no place, and consequently, to be no body at all.

RHEM. 3 21 As my Father.] As when he gave them commission to preach and baptize thorow the world, he made mention of his owne power therein: so here, before he institute the Sacrament of Penance, and give them authority to remit sinnes, lest the wicked should aske afterward, by what right they doe such great functions, he sheweth his Fathers commission given to himselfe, and then in plaine termes most amply imparteth the same to his Apostles; That whosoever deny the Apostles and their Successors, the Priests of Gods Church, to have right to remit sinnes, should deny consequently Christ as man to have authority to doe the same.

Christ sheweth his commission, and so giveth the Apostles power to remit sinnes.

FVLK. 3 In the words of Christ, is no institution of any Sacrament, because there is no visible element, whereunto the word may be added to make a Sacrament. But he reneweth the commission granted before to his Apostles, and to their Successors, by declaring the pleasure of God, to pronounce sentence of forgivenesse of sinnes to all that are truly penitent, and of the retaining of them to the obstinate and impenitent. And this is the Authority that the Apostles, & all Ministers of the Word and Sacraments their Successors have, to forgive and retaine sins. Tunc vera est absolutio Praesidentis, &c. saith Gregorie Bishop of Rome. Then the absolution of the President or Overseer is true, when it followeth the pleasure of the eternall Judge, Hom. 26. in Evang.

No Sacrament of penance [illegible] by Christ.

RHEM. 4 22 He breathed.] He giveth the holy Ghost in and by an externall signe to his Apostles, not visibly, and to all such purposes, as afterward at Whitsuntide, but for the grace of the Sacrament of Orders, as S. Augustine saith, and that none make doubt of the Priests right in remission of sinnes, seeing the holy Ghost is purposely given them to doe this same. In which case if any be yet contentious, he must deny the holy Ghost to be God, and not to have power to remit sins. It is not absurd (saith S. Cyril*)* that they forgive sinnes, which have the holy Ghost. For when they remit or retaine, the holy Ghost remitteth or retaineth in them, and that they doe two wayes, first in Baptisme, and then in Penance. As S. Ambrose also (l. 1. c. 7. de Poenit.) refelling the Novatians (a Sect of old heretikes, which pretending Gods glory, as our new Sectaries doe, denied that Priests could remit sinnes in the Sacrament of Penance) asketh, why it should be more dishonour to God, or more impossible or inconvenient for men to forgive sinnes by Penance then by Baptisme, seeing it is the holy Ghost that doth it, by the Priests office and ministery, in both.

The holy Ghost is here purposely given to the Apostles, to remit sinnes. Aug. q. 93. No. Test. q. 93. cont. ep. Parm. l. 2. c. 11. Cyril. l. 12. c. 56. in Io.

FVLK. 4 He giveth the holy Ghost by a visible signe, to assure them of the authority which he gave them, which was, by preaching the Gospel to remit and retaine sinnes, for which purpose he opened their minde, that they might understand the Scriptures, Luke 24. 45. &c. That you adde, he did it for the grace of the Sacrament of Orders, as S. Augustine saith, it is an impudent untruth: for neither that counterfeit Augustine, whom you quote first, nor the true Augustine, Cont. ep. Parm. lib. 2. cap. 11. doth once name the Sacrament of Orders. For of the power or grace that is given to them that are ordained Ministers of the Church, the question is not now: but whether there be any Sacrament of Orders; and whether this power be absolute; or following the judgement of God; to be executed by preaching and declaring the will of God out of his word, or by ceremony onely. Concerning which matter, S. Augustine saith in the place by you alledged, that Christ by giving the holy Ghost, when he gave power of remission of sinnes, Satis ostendit, &c. doth shew sufficiently, that they doe it not, but the holy Ghost verily by them, as it is said in another place. For it is not you [illegible], but the holy Ghost which is in you. [illegible] holy Ghost is [illegible] the Governour or Minister [illegible] Church, [illegible] if [illegible] Ghost [illegible], but to [illegible] which [illegible] other [illegible] of the Church [illegible] of [illegible] Baptisme when they preach the Gospel. [illegible] is of [illegible] us. Et terte [illegible]. And certainly [illegible] true [illegible] be able to [illegible] other person is it lawfull to forgive the transgressions of the Law [illegible] but in the Aut[illegible] For so we see it to be done in mens affaires. [illegible] man without [illegible] refuseth the Lawes [illegible] Kings themselves, in whom the crime of transgression hath no place. For it is wisely said, that he [illegible] will [illegible] a King, thou doest unjustly. How then hath our Saviour given to his Disciples the [illegible] divine [illegible]? Certainly, because it is not against reason, that sinnes can be [illegible] by them that [illegible] in them. For when they remit or retaine, the Spirit which dwelleth in them remitteth or retaineth. And that shall be by them as I thinke by two meanes, by Baptisme, and by repentance. [illegible] men that beleeve and are approved for holinesse of life, unto Baptisme, and diligently keep the [illegible] by from it [illegible] the children of the Church offend, they rebuke them, and pardon them when they repent. As Paul sometime [illegible] among the Corinthians, unto the destruction of the flesh, that his spirit might be saved, and re[illegible] he should not be overwhelmed with greater sorrow. S. Ambrose hath none other meaning, nor one word of the [illegible] of Penance: but reasoneth against the Novatians, which denied that sinnes could be forgiven after Baptisme by the ministery of men, wherein you doe impudently belie us, to match us with them. His words are these: Quid interest &c. What skilleth it whether the Priests do challenge this authority given unto them, by repentance, or by Baptisme? there is one ministery in both. But thou wilt say, that in Baptisme the grace of the mysteries doth worke: what? in repentance doth not the Name of God worke? By these words it appeareth, that S. Ambrose acknowledgeth no Sacrament of Penance or Repentance. For then he would have said: Doth not the same grace of the mysteries worke in Penance? Are they not both Sacraments alike? But he saith, Doth not the Name of God worke? meaning, that the grace of remission of sinnes, which is granted in the Name of God to the penitent, is as effectuall without a Sacrament, as in a Sacrament.

23 Whose sinnes.] *Power to offer Sacrifice, which is the principall function and act of priesthood, was given them at the institution of the blessed Sacrament: the second and next speciall faculty of Priesthood, consisting in remitting sinnes, is here bestowed on them. And withall, the holy Sacrament of Penance, implying Contrition, Confession, and Satisfaction in the penitent, and Absolution on the Priests part, is instituted; for in that, that expresse power and commission is given to Priests to remit or retaine all sinnes: and in that, that Christ promiseth, whose sinnes soever they forgive, they be of God forgiven also: and whose sinnes they retaine, they be retained before God: it followeth necessarily, that we be bound to submit our selves to their judgement for release of our sinnes. For this wonderfull power were given them in vaine, if none were bound to seek for absolution at their hands. Neither can any rightly seeke for absolution of them, unlesse they confesse particularly at least all their mortall offences, whether they be committed in minde, heart, will, and * cogitation onely, or in word and worke; for Gods priests being in this Sacrament of Penance constituted in Christs stead as judges in causes of our conscience, cannot rightly rule our causes, without full and exact cognition and knowledge of all our sinnes, and the necessary circumstances and * differences of the same. Which cannot otherwise be had of them, being mortall men, then by our simple, sincere, and distinct utterance to them of our sinnes, with humble contrite heart, ready to take and to doe penance according to their injunction. For that authority to retaine sinnes, consisteth specially in enjoyning satisfaction and penitentiall workes of praying, fasting, almes, and such like. All which Gods ordinance, whosoever condemneth or contemneth, as Heretikes doe, or neglecteth, as some carelesse Catholikes may perhaps doe, let them be assured they cannot be saved. Neither must any such Christian man pretend to looke to have his sinnes, after Baptisme, remitted by God only, without this Sacrament (which was the old Heresie of the Novatians,* Ambr. lib. 1. de Poenit. c. 2. Socrat. lib. 7. Eccl. hist. c. 25.) more then any may hope to be saved, or have his originall or other sinnes, before Baptisme, forgiven by God without the same Sacrament. Let no man deceive himselfe, this is the second table or board after shipwracke, as S. Hierome calleth it. Whosoever take not hold of it, shall perish without all doubt, because they contemne Gods counsell and order for their salvation. And therefore S. Augustine (ep. 180.) joyning both together, saith it is a pitifull case, when by the absence of Gods Priests men depart this life, Aut non regenerati, aut ligati: that is, either not regenerated by Baptisme, or fast bound, and not absolved by the Sacrament of Penance and reconciliation; because they shall be excluded from eternall life, and destruction followeth them. And S. Victor (lib. 2. de persecut. Vandalica) telleth the miserable lamentation of the people, when their Priests were banished by the Arrian Heretikes, Who (say they) shall baptize these infants? Who shall minister Penance unto us, and loose us from the bands of sinnes? &c. And therefore S. Cyprian very often (namely, ep. 54.) calleth it great cruelty, and such as Priests shall answer for at the latter day, to suffer any man that is penitent of his sinnes, to depart this life without this reconciliation and absolution: because (saith he) the Law-maker himselfe (Christ) hath granted, that things bound in earth, should also be bound in heaven; and that those things might there be loosed, which were loosed before here in the Church. And it is a world to see, how the heretikes wrestle with this so plaine a commission of remitting sinnes, referring it to preaching, to denouncing Gods threats upon sinners, and to we cannot tell what else; though to our English Protestants this authority seemeth so cleare, that in their order of visiting the sicke, their Ministers acknowledge and challenge the same, using a formall absolution according to the Churches order, after the speciall confession of the party. But to conclude the matter, let every one that list to see the true meaning of Christs words, and the priests great power and dignity given them by the same words and other, marke well these words of S. Chrysostome. For (saith he) they that dwell on the earth, and converse in it, to them is commission given to dispense those things that are in heaven, to them it is given to have the power which God would not to be given neither to Angels nor Archangels; for neither to them was it said, Whatsoever you shall binde in earth, shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever you shall loose in earth, shall be loosed in heaven. The earthly Princes indeed have also power to binde, but the bodies onely: but that bond of Priests which I speake of, toucheth the very soule it selfe, and reacheth even to the heavens: insomuch, that whatsoever the Priests shall doe beneath, the selfe-same God doth ratifie above, and the sentence of the servants of the Lord doth confirme; for indeed what else is this, then that the power of all heavenly things is granted them of God? Whose sinnes soever (saith he) you shall retaine, they are retained. What power (I beseech you) can be greater then this one? The Father gave all power to the Sonne: but I see the same power altogether delivered by the Sonne unto them. And as this concerneth the priests high authority to absolve, so thereupon concerning confession also to be made unto them, the ancient Fathers speake in this sort. S. Cyprian de Lapsis nu. 11. They (saith he) that have greater faith and feare of God, though they did not fall in persecution, yet because they did onely thinke it in their minde, this very cogitation they confesse to Gods Priests sorrowfully and plainly, opening their conscience, uttering & discharging the burden of their mind, & seeking wholesome medicine for their wounds though but small and

Fulk. 5

At the [illegible] of the holy Sacrament of our Lords Supper, there was no word of sacrifice or power of sacrificing given to Priests. But where you say, the second faculty of Priesthood, consisting in power to remit sins, is here bestowed: you confesse they were made but halfe Priests before. But how I pray you could they baptize or minister the Lords Supper, without power of remission of sinnes unto the penitent? Therefore here is no Sacrament of penance instituted, but the authority of their Apostleship, confirmed and renewed unto them and their successors, ministers of the Church. Moreover, you shall never be able to prove, that the power of remission of sinnes doth imply confession to a Priest, or satisfaction of workes: neither is there any word in the holy Scriptures, to declare these two parts necessary to repentance. Neither doth it follow of any necessity, that men are bound to submit themselves to the judgement of Priests, if they have authority to forgive sinnes. Neither were their power given in vaine, if none were bound to seeke absolution at their hands: for they are bound to offer it to all true penitent sinners, although they seeke it not at their hands, yea to exhort and to desire men to be reconciled unto God by their ministery, 2. Cor. 5. 20. Luke. 24. 47. Againe, men may seeke absolution at their hands, though they be not bound to submit themselves to their judgements, nor yet to confesse all, or any of their particular mortall sinnes unto them. And where you quote Cyprian de Lapsis, he speaketh not one word of the necessity of confession of all sinnes to a Priest, but of them that had openly fallen to idolatry, who were bound openly to acknowledge their sinne, before they could be received into the communion of the faithfull: commending them also, which although they had not openly fallen, yet having but onely thought to yeeld to idolatry, being pricked in conscience confessed the same to the Priest, and sought comfort and wholesome medicine, though it were but for small wounds, in comparison of them that had yeelded in act. S. Hierome saith, That as in the Law the Priest maketh the leper cleane or uncleane, so here also the Bishop or Priest bindeth or looseth, not them that are innocent or guilty, but according to his office; when he heareth the diversities of sinners, he knoweth who is to be bound and who to be loosed. Here is no word of the necessity of confession, but onely he sheweth that the Bishop or Priest hath none other power of binding and loosing, then the Priest of the Law had in making clean or uncleane, which he did none otherwise but by declaring and pronouncing who was cleane, and who was uncleane: so the minister of the Church, hearing that there be sinners penitent and unpenitent, knoweth to binde the one, and loose the other.

The Popish Sacrament of penance.

Moreover, where you say the authority to retaine sinnes, consisteth specially in enjoyning satisfaction, &c. It is altogether without the testimony of the holy Scriptures, yea contrary to the same, which teach that all penitent sinners are by the ministery of the Church, to be assured of remission of their sinnes freely through the redemption of Christ, Rom. 3. 24, 25. 1 Ioh. 2. 1. and 2, &c. For by the death of Christ, is made a full satisfaction to the justice of God for our sinnes, and not by any workes of ours. Christian men therefore looke to have remission of their sinnes in the Church, and by the ministery thereof after Baptisme, contrary to the heresie of the Novatians, but not by any Sacrament of penance. For neither Ambrose, Socrates, or Hierome, doe once name the Sacrament of penance in the places noted: but shew that the ministers of the Church have authority as well to loose as to binde, to forgive sinnes as to retaine: whereas the Novatians granted the one, and denied the other. S. Augustine joyning reconciliation of them that are bound to Baptisme, doth not thereby acknowledge a Sacrament of the one, as well as of the other. The like is to be said of the lamentation described by Victor Vticensis: and the complaint of Cyprian, Ep. 54. for the necessity of reconciliation by the ministery of the Church, of those that are bound by the same, doth not prove a Sacrament of penance, which is the matter we stand upon. That the power here given, is exercised by preaching and denouncing the promises or threats of God, either publikely or privately, you know not what it meaneth: but even the Fathers whom you have cited, doe testifie the same, as appeareth by their sayings before remembred. That confession may be made profitably, when a mans conscience cannot be otherwise satisfied, we deny not: but that it is alwayes necessary for obtaining remission of sinnes, we utterly deny. The saying of Chrysostome we acknowledge, understanding this power to be given to the ministers of the Church, as Embassadors of Christ, whose sentence being uttered in earth according to their commission, is ratified in heaven. But how this power is exercised, Chrysostome also sheweth cap. 6. of the same booke, ου τῷ διδάσκειν μόνον, &c. not onely by teaching and admonishing, but also by prayer. And concerning the necessity of confession to the Priest, what Cyprian saith in his booke de Lapsis, I have shewed before. The former place is a commendation of them which confessed, even their purpose of defiling themselves with idolatry, though they did not accomplish it in act, in comparison of other that would be restored to the fellowship of the Church, without any confession when they had actually and openly fallen: which doth not argue any necessity of confession in the same or in any such. In the second place he urgeth open confession and satisfaction to the Church which by their fall was offended, of them that had openly fallen into idolatry. So the place nothing proveth the necessity of confession of all sinnes, nor satisfaction to the justice of God. Cyril also, or Origen, in Levit. lib. 2. speaketh of hard discipline and open penance for open and hainous sinnes: the words are these: Est adhuc & septima, &c. There is yet a seventh way of remission of sinnes, although hard and laborious, remission of sinnes by repentance, when the sinner washeth his bed with teares, and his teares are made his bread day and night, when he is not ashamed to declare his sinne to the Lords priest, and to seeke medicine, according to him which saith, I said I will confesse mine unrighteousnesse against my selfe, and thou hast remitted the impiety of my heart. You must remember there are six other wayes of remission of claration of any of them, whether he be Priest or no, that is able to minister [illegible] by it may rightly be gathered, that in vaine men make their confession to many Popish Priests, which be altogether unlearned and unskilfull. Basil speaketh for the instruction of them that lived in Monasteries in his time, among whom many were learned and able to give good counsell that were no Priests. But Leo you say nameth Priests, Ep. 80. he doth so indeed, and secret confession as sufficient against them, that required open confession as necessary: yet saith he not, that confession to the Priest of all sinnes, is alwayes necessary. For that it is expedient in some cases, for men to confesse their sinnes to their Pastor; we deny not, but you have not yet proved that it is alwayes necessary. The words of Hierom be as I have declared before. Cum peccatorum audierit varietates, when he hath heard the diversities or divers kinds of sins, he knoweth who is to be bound, or who is to be loosed: namely, the penitent to be loosed, the impenitent to be bound. Which he cannot doe, by hearing the variety of sinnes:

for all sinnes are to be pardoned to them that repent, and no sinne is to be remitted to the impenitent. That Ambrose heard sometimes secret confessions, and kept them secret, we give credit to Paulinus: but that confession of all sinnes to a Priest, is necessary to obtaine remission of sinnes, neither Ambrose nor Paulinus, nor any ancient godly Father doth tell us. S. August. hom. 49. speaketh of open penance for them that had openly committed adultery, as it appeareth by the example of Theodosius the Emperour, which he bringeth to perswade them, saying, God would have the Emperour Theodosius to doe open penance in the sight of the people, specially because his sinne could not be kept close; and is the Senator ashamed of that the Emperour was not ashamed? I have answered before to S. Ambrose, and S. Cyprian, that neither of them speaketh a word for the necessity of the confession of all sinnes to a Priest. The Author of the booke, De vera & falsa poenitentia, writeth against S. Au- Chap. 10.
gustine by name, and by the stile sheweth himselfe to be a late writer in comparison of S. Augustine. Yet he thinketh not confession to a Priest to be so necessary, but that if a Priest be wanting, a man may confesse to his neighbour, and shall have pardon, as the lepers that went to shew their faces to the Priests, were healed before they came to them. But that confession of secret sinne is not necessary to be made to any man, but only to God, Chrysostome sheweth, Hom. de poenitent. & confessione: It is not necessary to confesse in the presence of witnesses, let examination of thine offences be made in thought, let this judgement be without a witnesse, let God only see thee making thy confession: God which casteth not thy sinnes in thy teeth, but looseth thy sinnes for thy shame. Againe, in *Ep.
ad Heb. Hom.* 31. I say not to thee that thou oughtest to bewray thy selfe abroad, nor that thou shouldest accuse thy selfe before other men. But I will have thee obey the Prophet, saying, Reveale thy way to the Lord, confesse thy sinnes therefore before God. The like saying he hath in Psal. 50. hom. 2. and in many other places of his workes. For more full triall of this case, I referre the Reader to my Confutation of D. Allens bookes, written specially to 17 He saith to him the third time, Simon of Iohn, lovest thou me? Peter was stroken sad, because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said to him, Lord, thou knowest all things: thou knowest that I love thee. Hee saith to him, ‖ FEED MY SHEEPE.

FVLK. 2. S. Auguſtine in that allegory, doth not in one word ſignifie the preferment of Peter before the reſt of the Apoſtles. If Gregory himſelfe a Biſhop of Rome, and ſo neere the open manifeſtation of Antichriſt in that See, that he prophecied of the forerunner, gather ſome thing for Peters primacy, it is no marvell: yet is it little that he ſayth in this Hom. 24. for the Popes ſupremacy. His words are theſe: Iam credo, &c. I thinke your charity doth already conſider what it is that Peter draweth the net to the land. For to him the holy Church was committed, to him it is ſaid ſpecially, Simon Iohannis; loueſt thou me? Feed my ſheepe. That which is afterward opened in voice is now ſignified in worke. Therefore, becauſe a Preacher of the Church doth ſeparate vs from the wayes of this world, ſurely it is neceſſary that Peter draw to land the net full of fiſhes. For he draweth the fiſhes to the ſtedfaſtneſſe of the ſhore becauſe by the voyce of holy preaching he ſheweth to the faithfull the ſtedfaſtneſſe of their eternall countrey. This he did by words, this he did by epiſtles, this he doth daily by ſignes of miracles. So often as by him we are converted to the loue of eternall reſt: ſo often as we are ſeparated from the tumults of earthly things: what are we elſe, but ſent into the net of faith, as fiſhes, and drawen to the ſhore? In theſe words, there is no more granted to Peter, then was true of all the Apoſtles, yea, then is true of every Preacher of the Goſpel. Bernard is ſo late a writer, that in theſe caſes, we deferre nothing to his authority.

And that Chriſt maketh a difference betwixt Peter and the reſt, and giveth him farre greater preeminence and regiment then the reſt, it is plaine by that he is asked whether he loue our Lord more then the other Apoſtles doe: Where, for equall charge no difference of loue had beene required.* To Peter (ſayth Saint Cyprian) our Lord after his Reſurrection ſaid, Feed my ſheepe, and builded his Church vpon him alone, and to him he giveth the charge of feeding his ſheepe. For although after his Reſurrection he gaue his power alike to all, ſaying, As my Father ſent me, ſo I ſend you, take the holy Ghoſt, if you remit any their ſinnes, they ſhall be remitted, &c. Yet to manifeſt vnity, he conſtituted one Chayre, and ſo diſpoſed by his authority that vnity ſhould haue origine of one. The reſt of the Apoſtles were that Peter was, indued with equall fellowſhip of honour and power, but the beginning commeth of vnity: the primacy is giuen to Peter, that the Church of Chriſt may be ſhewed to be one, and one Chayre. Saint Chryſoſtome alſo ſayth thus: Why did our Lord ſhed his blood? truely to redeeme thoſe ſheepe, the cure of which he committed both to Peter, and alſo to his ſucceſſors. And a little after, Chriſt would haue Peter indued with ſuch authority, and to be farre aboue

And becauſe the Proteſtants would make the vnlearned thinke, that S. Gregory deemed the Popes ſupremacy to be wholly vnlawfull and Antichriſtian, for that he condemneth Iohn of Conſtantinople for vſurping the name of vniverſall Biſhop, reſembling his inſolence therein to the pride of Antichriſt: note well the wordes of this holy Father in the very ſame place and Epiſtle againſt the Biſhop of Conſtantinople, by which you ſhall eaſily ſee that to deny him to be vniverſall Biſhop, is not to deny Peter or the Pope to be head of the Church, or ſupreme governour of the ſame, as our adverſaries fraudulently pretend. It is plaine to all men, ſaith he, that ever read the Goſpel, that by our Lords mouth the charge of the whole Church was committed to S. Peter Prince of the Apoſtles; for to him it was ſaid, Feed my ſheepe: for him was the prayer made that his faith ſhould not faile: to him were the keyes of heauen giuen, and authority to binde and looſe: to him the care of the Church and principality was delivered: and yet he was not called the vniverſall Apoſtle. This title indeed was offered for the honour of S. Peter Prince of the Apoſtles, to the Pope of Rome by the holy Councell of Chalcedon: but none of that See did ever vſe it or conſent to take it. Thus much S. Gregory. * Who though he both practiſed juriſdiction throughout all Chriſtendome, as other of that See haue ever done, and alſo acknowledged the principality and ſoveraignty to be in Peter and his ſucceſſors: yet would he not for juſt cauſes vſe that title ſubject to vanity and miſconſtruction. But both he and all the Popes ſince haue rather called themſelues, Servos ſervorum Dei, the ſervants of Gods ſervants: though the word, Vniverſall Biſhop, in that ſenſe wherein the holy Councell of Chalcedon offered it to the See of Rome, was true and lawfull. For that Councell would not haue giuen any Antichriſtian or vnjuſt title to any man. Onely in the Biſhop of Conſtantinople and other, which in no ſenſe had any right to it, and who vſurped it in a very falſe and tyrannicall meaning, it was inſolent, vnjuſt, and antichriſtian. See alſo the Epiſtles of S. Leo the Great concerning his practiſe of vniverſall juriſdiction, though he refuſed the title of vniverſall Biſhop. And S. Bernard (that you may better perceiue that the generall charge of Chriſts ſheepe was not onely giuen to Peters perſon, but alſo to his ſucceſſors the Popes of Rome, as S. Chryſoſtome alſo before alledged doth teſtifie) writeth thus to Eugenius; Thou art he to whom the keyes of heauen are delivered, and to whom the ſheepe are committed, there be other Porters of heauen, and other Paſtors of flockes: but thou haſt inherited in more glorious and different ſort. For they haue every one their particular flocke, but to thee all vniverſally, as one flocke to one man, are credited: being not onely the Paſtour of the ſheepe, but the one Paſtour of all the Paſtours themſelues; but thou wilt aske me how I prooue that? even by our Lords word; for to whom of all, I ſay not onely Biſhops, but Apoſtles, were the ſheepe ſo abſolutely and without limitation committed? If thou loue me Peter, feed my ſheepe. He ſaith not the people of this Kingdome or that City, but, my ſheepe, without all diſtinction. So S. Bernard. And hereunto may be added that the ſecond, feed, is in Greeke a word that ſignifieth withall to governe and rule, as Pſal. 2. Mich. 5. Mat. 2. Apoc. 2. and therefore it is ſpoken of David *alſo, and other temporall governours (as the Hebrew word anſwering thereunto) in the * Scriptures very often, and the Greeke in profane writers alſo.*

FVLK. 4 As Mat. 16. the Church was promiſed to be builded none otherwiſe vpon Peter, then vpon all the Apoſtles, and that the keyes of heauen ſhould be giuen to him, no more then to all the Apoſtles: ſo Peter here is made no more generall Paſtour and governour of Chriſts flocke, then all and every one of the Apoſtles is. Nor all the Logicke in the world can otherwiſe conclude out of the words of the text. Neither doe the Proteſtantes to vphold their Archbiſhop againſt the Puritans (as you cal them) avouch or prooue any ſuch preeminence of Peter aboue the reſt of the Apoſtles, that he ſhould be their head, and they to depend of him, nor acknowledge any primacy of Peter, but a primacy of order (as the ancient Fathers doe) not of authority. The Archbiſhops authority for externall governement of the Church, hath better arguments to vphold it, then the fained ſupremacy of Peter. Your onely reaſon to prooue a difference of preeminence betwixt Peter and the reſt, is, that Chriſt asked Peter whether he loved him more then the reſt. Where for equall charge, no difference of loue had bin required. This is nothing but a fooliſh ſophiſme, where that is taken for the cauſe, which is not the cauſe indeed. For the cauſe why Peter was bound to loue Chriſt more than the reſt, was, for that Chriſt had forgiuen him more then to the reſt, according to the Parable, Luke 7. For having thriſe denied him, he cauſeth him thriſe to confeſſe that he loved him, and willeth him to declare his greater loue, by more diligent and painefull feeding of his flocke. Wherefore Peters greater loue proveth not any greater authority giuen vnto him, but that he is bound to greater duety and ſervice in the Church of Chriſt, And this is the vniforme conſent of the moſt ancient writers vpon this text. S. Auguſtine finding no ſupremacy of Peter in this Scripture, proveth thereby the duety of all ſhepheards to feed the flocke of Chriſt, for the loue of Chriſt. Sed prius Dominus &c. Our Lord doth firſt aske that which he knew, and that not once, but twiſe and thriſe: Whether Peter doth loue him: neither doth he heare any thing of Peter ſo many times, but that he loveth him: neither doth he commend any thing to Peter ſo many times, but that his ſheepe ſhould be fed. There is rendred to a threefold denying a threefold confeſſion, leſt his tongue ſhould be leſſe ſerviceable to loue, then it was to feare, and leſt death approching ſhould ſeeme to haue expreſſed more of his voice, then life preſent: Let the duty of loue be to feed the Lords flocke, if it were a token of feare to deny the ſhepheard. They which feed the ſheepe of Chriſt with this mind, that they would haue them to be their ſheepe and not Chriſts, are convinced to loue themſelues and not Chriſt, of deſire of glorying, or ruling, or gaining, not of loue of obeying, of helping and pleaſing God. Againſt theſe men therefore doeth the voyce of Chriſt watch, ſo often repeated, whom the Apoſtle lamenteth, to ſeeke their owne, and not the things of Chriſt. Tract. 123. in Ioan.

S. Cyril finding as little for Peters ſupremacy, hath theſe words, Nam quoniam &c. For ſeeing Peter which with the reſt was adorned by Chriſt himſelfe with the name of Apoſtleſhip, denied him thriſe in the time of his Paſſion, there is now of right required of him a triple confeſſion of loue that thriſe denying might be recompenſed with an equall number of confeſſing. So that which was committed in words, is cured with words. Now he asked of him if he loved more then the reſt: For he that had experience of the greater mercy of our Lord toward him, ought of right to be affected with greater loue. For though all the Diſciples generally were ſtricken with great feare when our Lord was betrayed, yet Peters offence was greater, who in a very ſhort time denied Chriſt thriſe. Forſomuch therefore as by the mercy of our Saviour he obtained forgiueneſſe of a greater ſinne, there is juſtly demanded of him greater loue. For to whom more is remitted, he ought to loue more, as he ſayth elſewhere. Hereof the Church receiveth a rule of asking them thriſe, which come to baptiſme, that by thriſe confeſſing of Chriſt, they may be numbred among the faithfull. The teachers of the Church alſo doe learne, that they cannot otherwiſe be joyned to Chriſt, except they ſtudy with all care and diligence, that the reaſonable ſheepe may be well fed, and be in good health. And a little after. Therefore by thriſe confeſſion of Peter, the crime of thriſe denying is avoided. And he ſaith, Feed my Lambes, reſtoring vnto him the dignity [illegible] Firſt I ſay the place of S. Auguſtine. Now to the places which you cite out of the ancient Fathers: [illegible] yet remaine [illegible] falſified by Pamelius, contrary to the ancient edition in print and many written copies [illegible] contrary to the citation thereof by Gratian in the Decrees [illegible] Loquitur, in which [illegible] mentioned [illegible] of the primacy of Peter, and the very argument of the place is directly contrary unto it. The very words of Cyprian [illegible] theſe: Et eidem poſt reſurrectionem ſuam dicit: Paſce oves meas. [illegible] ſuam, parem poteſtatem tribuat ac dicat: Sicut miſit me pater, & ego mitto vos: accipite Spiritum ſanctum, [illegible] Si cui remiſeritis peccata, remittentur illi, Si cui tenueritis, tenebuntur: [illegible] eiuſdem originem, ab uno incipientem, ſua authoritate diſpoſuit. Hoc erant utique & caeteri Apoſtoli, quod fuit Petrus, pari conſortio praediti, & honoris & poteſtatis, ſed exordium ab unitate proficiſcitur, ut eccleſia [illegible] And although after his reſurrection he giveth [illegible] To the ſame Peter he ſaith after his reſurrection, Feed my ſheepe. [illegible] equall power to all his Apoſtles, and ſaith: As my Father ſent me, I alſo ſend you, receive the holy Ghoſt: whoſe ſinnes you ſhall remit, they ſhall be remitted unto him, whoſe you ſhall retaine, they ſhall be retained: yet that he might [illegible] be diſpoſed by his authority, the originall of the ſame unity beginning of one. Verely the reſt of the Apoſtles were the ſame thing that Peter was, endued with equall fellowſhip, both of honour and power, but the beginning proceedeth from one, that the Church may be declared to be one. By this true allegation of Cyprian, which maketh altogether againſt Peters ſupremacy, you may ſee what is ſhamefully foiſted in by the Papiſts, which now a dayes have none other ſhift to keepe their credit with their ſottiſh ſcholars, but to corrupt and falſifie the writings of the ancient Fathers and others, as appeareth by their Index expurgatorius lately printed to their ſhame perpetually, which they determined to have beene kept in ſecret. And that Cyprians meaning is, that all Biſhops have equall authority, theſe words in the ſame booke doe plainely convince: Epiſcopatus unus eſt, cuius a ſingulis in ſolidum pars tenetur. The Biſhops office is but one, a part whereof is holden in whole of every ſeverall Biſhop. So that every one hath the whole authority for his part. Rabanus Maurus de inſtitut. Cler. lib.1. c.4. Caeteri Apoſtoli cum Petro pari conſortio honoris & poteſtatis effecti ſunt.

But that the vile practiſe of the Papiſts may be layed open, not onely in falſifying the writings of the Authors, but alſo in wilfull perverting their meaning againſt their owne knowledge and conſcience, it ſhall not be amiſſe to ſet downe their owne words, namely the judgement of the Univerſity of Doway, approved by the cenſors according to the decree of the Councell of Trent, concerning the booke of Bertram. The title, Ex libro Bertrami, &c. How the booke of Bertram Prieſt of the body and bloud of our Lord being amended may be tolerated.

Although we make no great account of this booke, and therefore would not greatly care if either it were not at all extant or utterly loſt: yet ſeeing it hath beene already often times reprinted, and hath bin read of moſt men, and being prohibited by name, hath bin made knowne to all men: ſeeing alſo the heretikes doe know of the prohibition thereof by divers Catalogues, and that he was a Catholike Prieſt and a Monke of the Abbey of Corbel, and was well beloved and reverenced not ſo much of Carolus Magnus, but of Carolus Calvus, and doth helpe the ſtory of that age: and ſeeing that in other Catholike ancient writers, we beare very many errours, and extenuate them, excuſe them, and very often times by deviſing ſome pretty ſhift we deny them, and doe faine ſome commodious ſenſe unto them when they are oppoſed againſt us in diſputations or in conflicts with the adverſaries: we doe not ſee, why Bertram doth not deſerve the ſame equity and diligent recognition, leſt the heretikes ſhould jangle againſt us, that we burne up and prohibit antiquity which maketh for them, and therefore it is no marvell that ſo few things ſeeme to make for them, when we Catholikes doe ſo unreverently hiſſe out and deſtroy antiquity, which but in ſhew diſſenteth from us. Moreover, we feare leſt this booke not only by heretikes, but alſo by unruly Catholikes (by meanes of the prohibition thereof) may be read more greedily, alledged more odiouſly, and doe more hurt being inhibited, then if it were permitted.

Upon theſe conſiderations they take order, and ſhew how this booke at the next printing ſhall be falſified; by adding, putting out, changing of the words and ſentences, and by perverting the whole ſcope and meaning of the author. Out upon you Antichriſtian Heretikes void of all truth and honeſtie, as your owne words and deedes declare.

The ſayings of Chryſoſtome be ſhamefully wreſted to maintaine the Popes ſupremacy, which he uttered to ſhew the dignity of every Prieſt, or Miniſter in the Church. For they are ſpoken to comfort Baſile, whom he ſet forward to be Prieſt, when he avoided it himſelfe. Wherefore Baſile in the beginning of this booke, complaineth that he was deceived by him, and asketh what he ſhould gaine by this office that he might be perſwaded that he was not deceived. Chryſoſtome anſwereth, What greater gaine can there be, then when it is ſeene you doe thoſe things which Chriſt himſelfe ſaid to be arguments of love towards himſelfe? For ſpeaking to the chiefe of the Apoſtles, he ſaid, Peter doeſt thou love me, &c. And ſo proceedeth in all the diſcourſe, ſhewing out of this text, the great dignity of the Church Miniſters, to whom Chriſt hath committed the charge of that he loved beſt, and in exercising of which charge, he would have our love towards him ſpecially to appeare. So in the former place by you cited, he meaneth not by Peters ſucceſſors onely the [illegible] of Rome, but all good Miniſters of the Church. His wordes are, [illegible] &c. He committed his ſheepe to [illegible] and to them that come after him. For it had perteyned nothing to Baſile, if he had ſ[illegible] of the dignity [illegible] at the proper to the Biſhops of Rome. In the ſecond place he ſaith, [illegible] &c. W[illegible] quarrell [illegible] that thou haſt not bin well deceived, when thou ſhalt be made ruler over all the ſubſtance of [illegible] when [illegible] the ſame things, which when Peter did, he would have him to be of power, & to excell [illegible] the Apoſtles: for he ſaith, Peter doeſt thou [illegible] them

The most ancient Creeds which lacke this clause of his descending shew that it is included in the Article of his suffering death or buriall, or else they be imperfect Creeds.

Now concerning the Hebrew words, after which the Greeke are used, that they be not proper for soule and hell, as you doe more boldly, then wisely affirme, I referre the Reader to my Defence of our English Translations, against G. Martin, where he shall finde the matter of Christs descending into hell, thorowly discussed. First, in answere to the Preface, Sect. 46, 47. Then Cap. 1. Sect. 32. and 33. and cap. 7. thorowout every Section. In which it will appeare, that Beza opposeth not himselfe against the Scriptures at all, nor against the ancient Fathers, neither doth translate falsly of purpose, but truly, against Purgatory, and Limbus Patrum. See also the note upon Luc. 16. Sect. 7.

RHEM. 12 44 All things common.] This living in common is not a rule or a precept to all Christian men, as the Anabaptists falsly pretend: but a life of perfection and counsell, followed of our religious in the Catholike Church. See S. Aug. in Ps. 132. in principio, & ep. 109.

Living in common.

FVLK. 12 This living in common was neither Anabaptisticall communitie, nor Papisticall Monkerie. But such as ought alwayes to be among all Christians. That no man account that to be his owne, which the necessity of his brother requireth, to be bestowed on him. For that the Christians then had property in their goods, and might so hold it, it is manifest by the words of Peter to Ananias, cap. 5. 4. Chrysostome saith, the Christians were then so affected, as the people were in his time, when God shaked the city with an earthquake, where there was no community, but in charitable affection. They that lived in Monasteries, in S. Augustines time, were both in religion, and conversation, farre differing from Popish Monkes and Nunnes, who labour not with their hands, as those did, but live idlie of the sweat of other mens brows, and devoure that which should releeve them that be in necessity. Against which Sect budding up in his time, Augustine wrote his booke De opere Monachorum. But of the true solitary persons, he writeth De morib. Eccl. Cath. lib. 1. cap. 31. such saith Erasmus, as I would were now in the world, signifying that the Popish cloisterers are nothing like them. Cæsar. Arelat. Hom. 20. saith, Hæc est quæ eximios nutrit Monachos, & præstantissimos per omnes provincias erogat Sacerdotes, Hom. 25. Quamdiu hic consistimus in arbitrio est cum velis ad seculum declinari.

Monkish community.

RHEM. 13 47 Increased.] Moe and moe were added to the Church (as the Greeke word plainly expresseth) that we may see the visible propagation and increase of the same; from which time a diligent man may deduce the very same visible society of men joyned in Christ, thorow the whole booke, and afterward by the Ecclesiasticall story, downe till our dayes, against the pretenced invisible Church of the Heretikes.

A miracle, and a Sermon of Peters to the people, shewing that IESVS is Christ, and exhorting them to faith in him and penance for their sinnes, and so they shall have by him (in Baptisme) the benediction which was promised to Abraham.

The Epistle upon S. Peter and S. Pauls eve, Iun. 28.

RHEM. 2 16 Faith of his name.] This faith was not the faith of the lame man (for he looked onely for almes) nor a ſpeciall faith of the Apoſtles owne ſalvation: but the whole beleefe of Chriſtian Religion.

FULK. 2 This faith might be the mans faith in Chriſt, whom he heard them name: or the faith of miracles in the Apoſtles, apprehending onely the power of Chriſt, by which this man was healed. Which although in the Apoſtles it was joyned with the whole beleefe of Chriſti in Religion, yet in ſome it was without that beleefe, which wrought no leſſe miracles in the name of Chriſt then this, *Mat.*7.22. Faith of miracles.

RHEM. 3 21 Heaven truly.] Some Heretikes fowly corrupt this place, thus; Who muſt be contained in heaven, of purpoſe (as they proteſt) to hold Chriſt in heaven, from the bleſſed Sacrament, Beza. As though his preſence there, drew him out of heaven. Neither can they pretend the Greeke, which is word for word as in the vulgar Latine, and as we tranſlate.

FULK. 3 S. Gregorie Nazianzene was ſuch an Heretike, which ſo citeth this place in Greeke, as it cannot otherwiſe be underſtood, but that Chriſt muſt be contained in heaven, Orat. περὶ υἱοῦ: and howſoever it be tranſlated, this ſenſe muſt needs be concluded out of the words. For if heaven muſt containe Chriſt, Chriſt muſt be contained of heaven, or as you tranſlate it: heaven muſt receive Chriſt, ergo Chriſt muſt be received of heaven. And if this preſence in the Sacrament draw him not from heaven, then is his preſence in the Sacrament not corporall. The reall preſence of Chriſts body.

RHEM. 4 6 That which I have.] This power of working miracles was in Peter, and Peter did properly give this man his health, though he received that force and vertue of God, and in and by him executed the ſame. Therefore he ſaith, That which I have, I give to thee; and the Heretickes are ridiculous that note here, a miracle done by Chriſt by the hands of the Apoſtles, to make the ſimple beleeve that they had no more to doe then a dead inſtrument in the workemans hand. Saints doe miracles and the like, but by the power of God.

RHEM. 5 12 By our power.] When the Apoſtles remit ſinnes, or doe any other miracles, they doe it not by any humane, proper, or naturall power in themſelves: but of ſupernaturall force given them from above, to prove that the faith of Chriſt is true, and that he is God whom the Iewes crucified in whoſe name and faith they work, and not in their own.

FULK. 4.5. Theſe notes doe one of them fight againſt the other: for in the former you ſay this power was in Peter properly, in the latter you ſay, the Apoſtles in ſuch workes, doe it not by any proper power in them. You cavill againſt that we ſay: this was a miracle done by Chriſt by the hands of the Apoſtles, as though they had no more to doe then a dead inſtrument. But who is ſo ſimple, or rather ſenſleſſe, to thinke that the Apoſtles wrought miracles as dead inſtruments? when Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, it is not you that ſpeake, but the Spirit of your Father, which is in you, *Matth.*10.20. Doth he meane that the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh in them as in dead inſtruments? or rather is the authour and ſuggeſtour of that wiſedome, according to which they make anſwere. So when the Scripture ſaith, that God *onely doth worke great miracles, Pſal.*136.4. 5 And it came to paſſe on the morrow, that their Princes, and Ancients, and Scribes were gathered into Hieruſalem.

6 And Annas the high Prieſt, and Caiphas, and Iohn, and Alexander, and as many as were of the Prieſts ſtocke:

7 And ſetting them in the middes, they asked: in what power or in what name have you done this?

8 Then Peter repleniſhed with the holy Ghoſt, ſaid to them, Ye Princes of the people and Ancients:

9 If we this day be examined for a good deede upon an impotent man, in what hee hath beene made whole,

10 Be it knowne to all you and to all the people of Iſrael, that in the name of IESUS CHRIST of Nazareth, whom you did crucifie, whom God hath raiſed from the dead, in this ſame this man ſtandeth before you whole. The name of IESUS. See Annot. Philip. 2,10.

12 And there is not ſalvation in any other; for neither is there any other name under heaven given to men, wherein we muſt bee ſaved.

13 And ſeeing Peters conſtancie and Iohns, underſtanding that they were men unlettered, and of the vulgar ſort, they marveiled, and they knew them that they had beene with IESUS. The Apoſtles conſtancie, learning and wiſdome after the comming of the holy Ghoſt, being but ideots, that is, ſimple unlettered men and timerous before.

14 Seeing the man alſo that had beene cured, ſtanding with them, they could ſay nothing to the contrary.

15 But they commanded them to goe aſide forth out of the councell: and they conferred together, 16 Saying, What ſhal we do to theſe men? for a notorious ſigne indeed hath beene done by them, to all the inhabitants of Hieruſalem; it is manifeſt, and we cannot denie it.

17 But that it be no farther ſpread abroad among the people, let us threaten them, that they ſpeake no more in this name to any man.

18 And calling them, they charged them that they ſhould not ſpeake at all, nor teach in the name of IESUS.

19 But Peter and Iohn anſwering, ſaid to them, ‡ if it be juſt in the ſight of God, to heare you rather then God, judge yee.

20 For we cannot but ſpeake the things which we have ſeene and heard.

21 But they threatning, diſmiſſed them: not finding how they might puniſh them, for the people, becauſe all glorified that which had

14 And beholding alſo the man which was healed, ſtanding with them, they could not ſay againſt it.

15 But when they had commanded them to goe aſide out of the councell, they conſulted among themſelves,

16 Saying, What ſhall we doe to theſe men? for a manifeſt ſigne is done by them, and is openly knowne to all them that dwell in Hieruſalem, and we cannot denie it.

17 But that it be noyſed no farther among the people, let us threaten, and charge them that they ſpeake henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them, that in no wiſe they ſhould ſpeake nor teach in the name of Ieſus.

19 But Peter and Iohn anſwered, and ſaid unto them, Whether it be right in the ſight of God, to hearken unto you more then to God, judge ye.

20 For we cannot but ſpeake that, which we have ſeene and heard.

21 So when they had more ſharply threatned them, they let them goe, finding nothing how to puniſh them becauſe of the people: for all men

31 And when they had prayed, the place was moved wherein they were gathered: and they were all repleniſhed with the holy Ghoſt, and they ſpake the word of God with confidence.

32 And the multitude of beleevers had one heart and one ſoule: neither did any one ſay that ought was his owne of thoſe things which he poſſeſſed, but all things were common unto them.

Luke alwaies expreſſeth, and gave them not into their hands. The Sunamite fell downe and embraced Eliſeus feet. Many that asked benefits of Chriſt (as the woman ſicke of the bloudy fluxe) fell downe at his feete; and Mary kiſſed his feete. Such are ſignes of due reverence done both to Chriſt and to other ſacred perſons, either Prophets, Apoſtles, Popes, or others, repreſenting his perſon in earth. See in Saint* Hierom of Epiphanius Biſhop in Cypres, how the people of Hieruſalem of all ſorts flocked together unto him, offering their children (to take his bleſſing) kiſſing his feet, plucking the hemme of his garment, ſo that he could not moove for the throng. *Ep. 61. c. 4. cont. erro. FULK. 3 The reſt alſo brought the price, and laid it at the Apoſtles feete: but of kiſſing their holy feete, is heere no mention. And although Mary kiſſed the feete of Chriſt, it is no warrant for the Pope to offer his feet to be kiſſed, even of Kings and Emperours. When Cornelius fell downe at Peters feet, Peter would not ſuffer him, Acts 10,25. The people of the Eaſt countrey were full of ceremoniall reverence, in falling downe, kiſſing, and ſuch other externall rites of humiliation, and the rather to Epiphanius, becauſe he was an adverſary to Hereſies, and oppoſed himſelfe againſt the proud Biſhop of Hieruſalem, which favoured ſome Hereſies. But the duty of all men is evill gathered of that immoderate zeale of the people, which Epiphanius himſelfe did not allow. For he was forced by the throng to ſuffer ſuch things, & did not willingly, & of purpoſe ſtay in one place, to receive ſuch honour of the people, as that envious Biſhop of Hieruſalem did falſly object unto him, as it followeth immediatly in S. Hierome. But if ſuch kiſſing of feete be commendable, how commeth it to paſſe, that the Pope onely hath holy feet to be kiſſed, and not other Biſhops and Clergie men as well as he?

Kiſſing the Popes feet.

CHAP. V.

RHEM. 1 Ananias and his wife Saphira, for their ſacriledge, at Peters word fall downe dead, to the great terrour of the reſt. 12 By the Apoſtles miracles, not onely the number, but alſo their faith ſo increaſeth, that they ſeeke in the ſtreetes to the very ſhadow of Peter, the towne alſo about bringing their diſeaſed to Hieruſalem. 17 The Rulers againe oppoſe themſelves, but in vaine. 19 For out of priſon an Angel delivereth them, bidding them preach openly to all. 27 and in their Councell, Peter is nothing afraid of their big words: 34 Yea, Gamaliel being one of themſelves caſteth a doubt among them leſt the matter be of God, and therefore impoſſible to be diſſolved. 40 Finally, the Apoſtles being ſcourged by them count it an honour, and ceaſe no day from preaching.

FULK. 1 The text ſaith, they were puniſhed ſo ſeverely, for lying to the holy Ghoſt in defrauding of the price, and tempting the ſpirit of God.

BUt a certaine man named Ananias, with Saphira his wife ſold a piece of land;

2 And ‖ defrauded of the price of the land, his wife being privy thereto: and bringing a certaine portion, laid it at the feet of the Apoſtles.

3 And ‖ Peter ſaid, Ananias, why hath Satan tempted thy heart, that thou ſhouldeſt lie to the holy Ghoſt, and defraud of the price of the land?

4 Remaining, did it not remaine to thee: and being ſolde, was it not ‖ in thy power? Why haſt thou put this thing in thy heart? Thou haſt not lyed ‖ to men, but to God.

5 And Ananias hearing theſe words, fell downe, and gave up the ghoſt. And there came great feare upon all that heard it.

6 And young men riſing up, remooved him, and bearing him forth buried him.

7 And it was the ſpace as it were of three houres, and his wife, not knowing what was chanced, came in.

8 And Peter anſwered her, tell me woman, whether did you ſell the land for ſo much? But ſhe ſaid, Yea, for ſo much.

9 And Peter unto her, Why have you agreed

BUt a certaine man named Ananias, with Saphira his wife, ſold a poſſeſſion,

2 And kept away part of the price, his wife alſo being of counſell, and brought a certaine part, and laid it downe at the Apoſtles feet.

3 But Peter ſaid, Ananias, how is it that Satan hath filled thine heart, to lie unto the holy Ghoſt, and keepe away part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine owne? and after it was ſold, was it not in thine owne power? why haſt thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou haſt not lyed unto men, but unto God.

5 Ananias hearing theſe words, fell downe, and gave up the ghoſt: and great feare came on all them that heard theſe things.

6 And the young men roſe up, and put him apart, and caried him out, and buried him.

7 And it came to paſſe, that as it were about the ſpace of three houres after, his wife came in, not knowing that which was done.

8 And Peter ſaid unto her, Tell me, ſolde ye not the land for ſo much? And ſhe ſaid, Yea, for ſo much.

9 Then Peter ſaid unto her, Why have ye agreed agreed together to tempt the Spirit of our Lord? Behold, their feete that have buried thy huſband, at the doore, and they ſhall beare thee forth.

10 Forthwith ſhe fell before his feete, and gave up the Ghoſt. And the young men going in, found her dead: and carryed her forth, and buried her by her huſband.

11 And there fell great ‡feare in the whole Church, and upon al that heard theſe things.

The Epiſtle on Imber Wedneſday in Whitſon week. And within the octave, and in a votive of SS. Peter and Paul.

12 And by the hands of the Apoſtles were many ſignes and wonders done among the people. And they were all with one accord in Salomons porch.

13 But of the reſt none durſt joyne themſelves unto them: but the people magnified them.

14 And the multitude of men and women that beleeved in our Lord, was more increaſed:

Peters ſhadow.

15 So that they did bring forth the ſicke into the ſtreets, and laid them in beds and couches, that when Peter came, ‖his ſhadow at the leaſt might overſhadow any of them, and they all might be delivered from their infirmities.

16 And there ranne together unto Hieruſalem the multitude alſo of the cities adjoyning, bringing ſicke perſons and ſuch as were vexed of uncleane ſpirits: who were all cured.

17 And the high Prieſt riſing up, and all that were with him, which is the hereſie of the Sadduces, were repleniſhed with zeale:

18 Laid hands upon the Apoſtles, and put them in the common priſon.

An Angel leadeth them out of priſon.

19 But an Angel of our Lord by night opening the gates of the priſon, and leading them forth, ſaid, 20 Goe: and ſtanding, ſpeake in the temple to the people all the words of this life.

21 Who having heard this, early in the morning entred into the temple, and taught. And the high Prieſt comming, and they that were with him, called together the Councell and all the ancients of the children of Iſrael: and they ſent to the priſon that they might be brought.

22 But when the miniſters were come, and opening the priſon found them not: returning they told,

23 Saying, The priſon truely we found ſhut with all diligence, and the keepers ſtanding before the gates: but opening it, wee found no man within.

24 And as ſoone as the magiſtrate of the temple, and the chiefe prieſts heard theſe words, they were in doubt of them, what would befall.

25 And there came a certaine man and told them, that the men, loe, which you did put in priſon, are in the temple ſtanding, and teaching the people.

26 Then agreed together, to tempt the ſpirit of the Lord? Behold, the feete of them which have buried thy huſband, are at the doore, and ſhall carry thee out.

10 Then fell ſhe downe ſtraightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghoſt: And the young men came in, and found her dead, and carryed her out, and buried her by her huſband.

11 And great feare came upon all the Church, and upon as many as heard theſe things.

12 And by the hands of the Apoſtles, were many ſignes and wonders ſhewed among the people: (And they were all together with one accord in Salomons porch.

13 And of other durſt no man joyne himſelfe to them: neuertheleſſe, the people magnified them.

24 The number of them that beleeued in the Lord, both of men and women, grew more and more.)

15 Inſomuch that they brought the ſicke into the ſtreets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the leaſt way the ſhadow of Peter when he came by, might ſhadow ſome of them.

16 There came alſo a multitude of the cities round about unto Hieruſalem, bringing ſicke folkes, and them which were vexed with uncleane ſpirits: and they were healed every one.

17 Then the chiefe Prieſt roſe up, and all they that were with him (which is the ſect of the Sadduces) and were full of indignation, 18 And laid hands on the Apoſtles, and put them into the common priſon.

19 But the Angel of the Lord by night opened the priſon doores, and brought them forth, and ſaid, 20 Goe, and ſtand and ſpeake in the Temple to the people all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that, they entred into the Temple early in the morning, and taught: but the chiefe Prieſt came, and they that were with him, and called a councell together, and all the elders of the children of Iſrael, and ſent to the priſon to fetch them.

22 But when the Officers came, and found them not in the priſon, they returned, and told,

23 Saying, The priſon truely found we ſhut with all diligence, and the keepers ſtanding without before the doores, but when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Then when the chiefe Prieſt, and the captaine of the Temple, and the high Prieſts heard theſe things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then came one and ſhewed them, ſaying, Behold, the men that ye put in priſon, are ſtanding in the Temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then

25 Then went the magiſtrate with the miniſters, and brought them without force, for they feared the people leſt they ſhould be ſtoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they ſet them in the councell. And the high Prieſt asked them, Acts 4,18.

28 Saying, *commanding we commanded you that you ſhould not teach in this name: and behold, you have filled Hieruſalem with your doctrine, and you will bring upon us the bloud of this man.

29 But Peter anſwering and the Apoſtles, ſaid, God muſt be obeyed, rather then men.

30 The God of our Fathers hath raiſed up IESVS, whom you did kill, hanging him upon a tree.

31 This Prince and Saviour God hath exalted with his right hand, to give *repentance to Iſrael, and remiſſion of ſinnes.

* FVLKE. Heere they tranſlate the latine word pœnitentia, repentance, which elſewhere commonly they call penance.

32 And we are witneſſes of theſe words, and the holy Ghoſt, whom God hath giuen to all that obey him.

33 When they had heard theſe things, it cut them to the heart, and they conſulted to kill them.

34 But one in the councell riſing up a Phariſee named Gamaliel, a doctor of law honorable to all the people, commanded the men to be put forth a while.

35 And he ſaid to them. Ye men of Iſrael take heed to your ſelves touching theſe men what you meane to doe.

Theudas.

36 For before theſe daies there roſe Theodas, ſaying, he was ſome body, to whom conſented a number of men about foure hundred, who was ſlaine: and all that beleeved him, were diſperſed and brought to nothing.

37 After this fellow there roſe Iudas of Galilee in the daies of the Enrolling, & drew away the people after him, and he periſhed: and as many as ever conſented to him, were diſperſed.

38 And now therefore I ſay to you, depart from theſe men and let them alone: for if this counſell or worke be of men, it will be diſſolved:

‡ is.

39 But if it be ‡ of God, you are not able to diſſolve † them, leſt perhaps you be found to reſiſt God alſo. And they cõſented to him.

40 And calling in the Apoſtles, after they had ſcourged them, they charged them that they ſhould not ſpeake in the name of IESVS, and diſmiſſed them.

41 And they went from the ſight of the councell rejoycing, becauſe they were accounted worthy to ſuffer reproach for the name of IESVS.

42 And every day they ceaſed not in the temple and from houſe to houſe to teach and evangelize Chriſt IESVS.

26 Then went the captaine of the Temple with the officers, and brought them without violence: (For they feared the people, leſt they ſhould have beene ſtoned.)

27 And when they had brought them, they ſet them before the councell, and the chiefe Prieſt asked them.

*28 Saying, Did not we ſtraitly command you that ye ſhould not teach in his name? And behold, you have filled Hieruſalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this mans bloud upon us.

Acts 4.

29 Then Peter and the other Apoſtles anſwered, and ſaid, We ought more to obey God then men.

30 The God of our fathers raiſed up Ieſus, whom ye ſlew, and hanged on a tree.

31 Him hath God lifted up with his right hand, to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Iſrael, and forgiueneſſe of ſinnes.

32 And we are records of theſe things which we ſay, and ſo is alſo the holy Ghoſt, whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 When they heard that, they clave aſunder, and ſought meanes to ſlay them.

34 Then ſtood there up one in the councell, a Phariſee named Gamaliel, a doctour of Law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the Apoſtles forth a little ſpace, 35 And ſaid unto them, Ye men of Iſrael, take heed to your ſelves, what ye intend to doe touching theſe men.

36 For before theſe days roſe up one Theudas, reporting himſelfe to be ſome great man, to whom a number of men, about foure hundred, joyned themſelues: which was ſlaine, and they all, which † beleeued him were ſcattered abroad, and brought to nought.

† Or, agreed unto.

37 After this man roſe up one Iudas of Galilee, in the daies of tribute, and drew away much people after him: he alſo periſhed, and all, even as many as obeyed him, were ſcattred abroad.

38 And now I ſay unto you, refraine your ſelves from theſe men, and let them alone: for if this counſell or this worke be of men, it will come to naught:

39 But and if it be of God yee cannot deſtroy it, leſt haply ye be found to ſtrive againſt God.

40 And to him they agreed: and when they had called the Apoſtles, and beaten them, they commanded that they ſhould not ſpeake in the name of Ieſus, and let them goe.

41 And they departed from the face of the councell, rejoycing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer ſhame for his name.

42 And daylie in the temple, and in every houſe, they ceaſed not to teach and preach Ieſus Chriſt.

RHEM. 4 2 Defrauded.] In that (saith S. Augustine*) he withdrew any part of that which he promised; he was guilty at once, both of sacriledge, and of fraud; of sacriledge, because he robbed God of that which was his promise: of fraud, in that he withheld of the whole gift, a peece. Let now the heretikes come, and say, it was for lying or hypocrisie onely that this fault was condemned: because they be loth to have sacrilege counted any such sin, who have taught men not onely to take away from God some peece of that or all that themselves gave, but plainely to spoyle and apply to themselves all that other men gave.*

Aug. Ser. 9. in append. de diversis tom. 10. Sacriledge.

FVLK. 4. S. Augustine is cited out of new found Sermons, which yet have not obteined credit of Antiquity. The text is plaine, for what sinne they were punished. Neither can it be prooved that they promised the whole, but that they affirmed they brought the whole, when they withdrew part. Sacriledge is condemned by many other places of Scripture, although it be not by this. And if it be also by this (as some fathers of better credite then you cite doe suppose,) yet the principall cause is manifest by the words of the Apostle, to be lying and hypocrisie. Now what heretikes they be, that teach men to commit sacrilege, you must name more particularly. The Popish clergie in King Henry the 8. time, consented to the suppressing of Monasteries: and some Papists at this day without conscience of sacrilege, doe enjoy their lands, and dwell in their houses, peradventure you meane them. If you meane us, as we do utterly detest sacrilege, so we thinke it not only lawfull, but necessary, to put down Idolatry, and to apply to good and godly purposes, things dedicated to maintaine false worship, superstition and Idolatry. Hesych. lib.2. cap.10. in Levit. Dominus dicit, omne peccatum hominibus dimittitur, blasphemia autem contra Spiritum non relinquetur. Hoc Petrus ipso opere ostendit, quia enim Ananias & Saphira spiritui sancto mentiti sunt, ait ad eos, Quare cæcavit Satanas cor vestrum mentiri Spiritui sancto?

Slander.

RHEM. 5 Peter said.] S. Peter (as you see here) without mans relation knew this fraude and the cogitations of Ananias, and as head of the College and of the whole Church against which this robbery was committed, executed this heavy sentence of excommunication both against him, and his wife consenting to the Sacriledge; for it was Excommunication by S. Augustines judgement, (li.5.cont.ep.Parm.c.1.tom.7.) and had this corporall miraculous death joyned withall, as the Excommunication that S. Paul gave out against the incestuous and others, had the corporall vexation of Satan incident unto it.

Excommunication joyned with corporall paines. 1 Cor. 5.

FVLK. 5 Every thing that Peter said or did, with you argueth his Popedome: but either you must bring better arguments, or else children will laugh you to scorne. The punishment laid upon these hypocrites, was greater then Excommunication, the end whereof is intended to be the repentance and amendment of the excommunicate, which was not in this case. Hesych li.2.in cap.10.Levit. Tempus pœnitentiæ eis non dedit, sciens quòd cor cæcatum in transgressione & blasphemia Spiritus habentes pœnitere non paterentur. Neither doth S. Augustine judge (as you say) that it was excommunication, but saith, that Paul in delivering the incestuous Corinthian to Satan, sought by destruction of the flesh, to provide for his spirituall salvation, that neither by some punishment, or corporall death; as Ananias and his wife fell downe at the Apostle Peters feete: or else by repentance, for he was delivered to Satan, that he might slay in himselfe the wicked concupiscence of the flesh. These words (as all men may see) proove not that Ananias and his wife were excommunicated, but that Peter of charitable affection used this severity, wishing (if it were Gods will) the salvation of their soules. That the excommunication of S. Paul, 1 Cor. 5. had the corporall vexation of Satan incident unto it, cannot be prooved by the text. For every one that is cast out of the Church of Christ, is delivered into the power of Satan, although he suffer no bodily vexation by Satan.

Peters Popedome.

Excommunication.

RHEM. 6. 4 In thy power.] It displeased God (saith S. Augustine) to withdraw of the money which they had vowed to God, how is he angry when chastity is vowed and is not performed? for to such may be said that which S. Peter said of the money: Thy virginity remaining did it not remaine to thee, and before thou didst vow, was it not in thine owne power? for, whosoever have vowed such things and have not paied them, let them not thinke to be condemned to corporall death, but to everlasting fire. August. Ser.10. de diversis. And S. Gregory to the same purpose writeth thus, Ananias had vowed money to God, which afterward overcome with divelish perswasion he withdrew: but with what death he was punished, thou knowest. If then he were worthy of that death, who tooke away the money that he had given to God, consider what great perill in Gods judgement thou shalt be worthy of, which hast withdrawne, not money, but thy selfe from almighty God, to whom thou hadst vowed thy selfe under the habite or weede of a Monke.

Vow of Chastity, and the breach thereof.

Greg. lib. 1. ep. 33.

FVLK. 6 They that have as great power to keepe their vow of virginity advisedly made, as Ananias had to deliver the whole price of his land, sinne damnably if they breake it. But if they have rashly vowed that, which they are not able to performe, they have sinned in making such an unadvised vow, but it were better for them to marry, then to live incontinently out of mariage. Hier. ad. Demetri. ad Epiphan. Hær. 61.

The office of Deacons. | [illegible] | [illegible] 3. [illegible]

FVLK. 1 The miniſtery, whereunto the Deacons were aſſigned was an holy miniſtery, and the tables whereunto they were appointed to ſerue were holy tables, neither was their office exerciſed in prophane things. For the Apoſtles, although they diſtinguiſh the preaching of the word from ſerving tables, yet doe they not thereby condemne that ſervice of tables which they themſelves did exerciſe before, of prophaneneſſe. For the proviſion for the poore members of Chriſt, is an holy ſervice, and no prophane thing. S. Paul appointeth the collection for the poore, to be on the Lords day, which he would not have done if it were a prophane matter 1 Cor. 16. 1. 2. And yet it is not denied, but their miniſtery was vſed alſo, to other holy purpoſes, as teaching, baptizing, and aſſiſting the Apoſtles and other principall Paſtors in their ſpirituall charge and miniſtery. But that they were occupied about the Altar, as the Popiſh Deacons are, or had any office like unto theirs, neither any of the places which you quote or cite doth ſhew, nor any teſtimony of Antiquity doth avow. The Epiſtles of Ignatius, and Polycarpus, that now goe under their names, though they have nothing for the Popiſh Deaconſhip, yet are they not authentike, but gathered out of the Apocryphall conſtitutions of that counterfect Clemens Dionyſius though not of that antiquity, which is pretended, yet doth not he name the Deacons (in the place by you quoted) which bring forth the bread and the cup, for the miniſtration of the Sacrament, but certaine principall miniſters. Although it is no inconvenience, to underſtand the Deacons, ſeeing it is certaine by Iuſtinus, that they were vſed for the diſtribution of the Lords Supper. Finally, we acknowledge that the Deacons office is holy, according to the teſtimony of moſt ancient Fathers, and therefore it is not that prophane and ridiculous order of Popiſh Deaconrie.

Steven being permitted to anſwer, beginning at Abraham, ſheweth that God was with their fathers both in other places, and alſo long before the Temple, 48 and that after it was built, it could not be (as they groſſely imagined) a houſe for God to dwell in, 51 then he inveigheth againſt their ſtiffeneckedneſſe, and telleth them boldly of their traiterous murthering of Chriſt, as their fathers had done his Prophets afore him. 54 Whereat they being mad, he ſeeth heaven open, and IESVS there in his divine Maieſtie. 57 Whereat they become more mad, ſo that they ſtone him to death (Saul conſenting) he commending his ſoule to IESVS, and humbly praying for them.

18 Till another King aroſe, which knew not of Ioſeph.

19 The ſame dealt ſubtilly with our kinred, and evill intreated our fathers, and made them caſt out their yong children, that they ſhould not remaine alive.

*20 * The ſame time was Moſes borne, and was acceptable unto God, and nouriſhed up in his fathers houſe three moneths:* Exod. 2. 1. heb. 11. 2[illegible]

21 And when he was expoſed, Pharao's daughter tooke him up, and nouriſhed him for her owne ſonne.

22 And Moſes was inſtructed in all the wiſedome of the Ægyptians: and hee was mighty in his words and workes.

23 And * when he was fully of the age of fourty yeeres, it came to his minde to viſit his brethren the children of Iſrael.

24 And when hee had ſeene one ſuffer wrong, hee defended him: and ſtriking the Ægyptian, he revenged his quarrell that ſuſtained the wrong.

25 And he thought that his brethren did underſtand that God by his hand would ſave them: but they underſtood it not.

Exod.2,13. 26 And the day following * he appeared to them being at ſtrife: and hee reconciled them unto peace, ſaying, Men, yee are brethren, wherefore hurt you one another?

27 But he that did the injury to his neighbour, repelled him, ſaying, Who hath appointed thee prince and judge over us?

28 What, wilt thou kill me, as thou didſt yeſterday kill the Ægyptian?

29 And Moſes fled upon this word: and he became a ſojourner in the land of Madian, where he begat two ſonnes, Exod.3,2. 30 And after forty yeeres were expired, there * appeared to him in the deſert of mount Sina an Angel in the fire of the flame of a buſh.

32 I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Iſaac, and the God of Iacob. And Moſes being made to tremble, durſt not view it.

33 And our Lord ſaid to him, Looſe off the ſhoe of thy feet: for the place wherein thou ſtandeſt, is || holy ground.

34 Seeing I have ſeene the affliction of my people which is in Ægypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am deſcended to deliver them. And now come, and I will ſend thee into Ægypt.

21 And when he was caſt out, Pharao's daughter tooke him up, and nouriſhed him for her owne ſonne.

22 And Moſes was learned in all maner of wiſedome of the Egyptians, and was mightie in deeds and in words.

23 And when he was full fourty yeeres old, it came into his heart to viſit his brethren the children of Iſrael,

*24 * And when hee ſaw one of them ſuffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged his quarell that had the harme done to him, and ſmote the Egyptian:* Exod.2.11.

25 For he ſuppoſed his brethren would have underſtood, how that God by his hand ſhould deliver them: but they underſtood not.

*26 * And the next day he ſhewed himſelfe unto them as they ſtrove, & would have ſet them at one againe, ſaying, Sirs, ye are brethren, why doe ye wrong one to another?* Exod.2.13.

27 But hee that did his neighbour wrong, thruſt him away ſaying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didſt the Egyptian yeſterday?

29 Then fled Moſes at that ſaying, and was a ſtranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two ſonnes.

*30 * And when fourty yeeres were expired, there appeared to him in the wildernes of mount Sina, an Angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bramble buſh.* Exod.3.2.

31 When Moſes ſaw it, he wondered at the ſight: and as he drew neere to behold, the voyce of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſahac, and the God of Iacob. Then Moſes trembled, and durſt not behold.

33 Then ſaid the Lord to him, Put off thy ſhoes from thy feet: for the place where thou ſtandeſt, is holy ground.

34 I have ſeene, I have ſeene the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come downe to deliver them: And now come, and I will ſend thee into Egypt.

35 This Moſes whom they forſooke ſaying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the ſame did God ſend to be a ruler and a deliverer, by the hands of the Angel which appeared to him in the bramble buſh.

*36 * Hee brought them out, after that hee had ſhewed wonders and ſignes in Egypt, and in the red Sea, * and in the wilderneſſe fourtie yeeres.* Exod.7.9. Exod.16.1.

*37 This is that Moſes, which ſaid unto the children of Iſrael, * A Prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your brethren, like unto me: him ſhall ye heare.* Deut.18.15.

RHEM. 2 35 Redeemer.] Chriſt is our Redeemer, and yet Moſes is here called redeemer; ſo Chriſt is our Mediatour and Advocate, and yet we may have Saints our inferiour mediatours and advocates alſo. See Annot. 1 Io.2,1.

FVLK. 2 Chriſt is our onely Redeemer from ſpirituall bondage, who only payed the price for us. Moſes was a miniſter of their bodily deliverance from Egypt. But neither Moſes nor any Saint, can be inferiour mediatours and advocates unto God for us, except they can alſo be inferiour chriſts and ſaviours. For there is but one Mediatour, Ieſus Chriſt, who is our Advocate with the Father, 1 *Tim.*2,5. 1 *Io.*2.1. Saviour, Redeemer, Mediatour, and Advocate, be the proper offices of Chriſt, and therefore are not communicated to his ſervants.

And yet the Authour of that Homily meaneth none other worſhippers, nor any other worſhip, then he deſcribeth in the beginning therof, namely ſuch as did celebrate the praiſes of the Martyrs to the glory of God, and to ſtirre up men to the imitation of them. That the Saints in heaven pray for us, if it be granted, yet it followeth not that we muſt pray to them.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. VII.

RHEM. 4 33 Holy ground.] If that apparition of God himſelfe or an Angel, could make the place and ground holy, and to be uſed of Moſes with all ſignes of reverence and feare: how much more the corporall birth, abode, and wonders of the Sonne of God in Iewry, and his perſonall preſence in the bleſſed Sacrament, may make that countrey and all Chriſtian Churches and Altars holy? And it is the greateſt blindneſſe that can be, to thinke it ſuperſtition to reverence any things or places in reſpect of Gods preſence or wonderous operation in the ſame. See S. Hieron. ep. 17,18,27. of the holy land.

The holy land.

Holy places.

FVLK. 4 The ground was holy by the preſence of God in his miniſter the Angel, according to his pleaſure: But that holineſſe continued not after the departure of the Angel. So all places were holy, which it pleaſed our Saviour Chriſt to ſanctifie with his preſence, but not all places or perſons which he touched; for then Iudas and the ſouldiers that crucified him, ſhould have beene exceeding holy.

Holy places.

The perſonall preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, muſt firſt be proved before any ſanctification of places in that reſpect can be concluded. And then it muſt alſo be proved how farre he will have this holineſſe to proceed. For that preſence in the mouthes and ſtomackes of the wicked, doth not ſanctifie them by your owne doctrine, nor I thinke in the belly of a mouſe or other beaſt that happeneth to eat your conſecrated Hoaſt. To reverence any place in reſpect of Gods preſence, where he hath appointed the ſame, is no ſuperſtition, but to eſteeme the land of Iewry to be holy, becauſe Chriſt hath ſometime troden upon it, from whence he hath withdrawne his preſence, is groſſe ſuperſtition. S. Hierom in the places noted, aſcribeth no holineſſe to the ground, but in reſpect of the lively remembrance, that men may have by ſight of thoſe places, in which Chriſt was converſant, and wherein he wrought his miracles: otherwiſe, It is no commendation (ſaith Hierome) to have beene at Hieruſalem, but to have lived well at Hieruſalem. There is as ready a way to the court of heaven from England, as from Hieruſalem, Ep.13. ad Paulinum.

RHEM. 5 48 Not in houſes.] The vulgar heretikes alledge this place againſt the corporall being of Chriſt in the bleſſed Sacrament and in Churches: by which reaſon they might have driven him out of all houſes, Churches and corporall places, when he was viſible in earth. But it is meant of the Divinity only, and ſpoken to correct the carnall Iewes: who thought God either ſo to be contained, compaſſed, and limited to their Temple, that he could be no where elſe, or at leaſt that he would not heare or receive mens prayers and ſacrifices in the Churches of the Gentiles, or elſewhere out of the ſaid Temple. And ſo as it maketh nothing for the Sacramentaries, no more doth it ſerve for ſuch as eſteeme Churches and places of publicke prayer no more convenient, nor more holy then any other profane houſes or chambers. For though his perſon or vertue be not limited to any place, yet it pleaſeth him condeſcending to our neceſſity and profit, to worke his wonders and to be worſhipped of us in holy places rather then profane.

God is not contained in place, yet he will be worſhipped in one place more then in another.

This

FVLK. 5 This argument as lightly as you eſteeme it, beareth hard againſt your fantaſie of Concomitance, ſeeing by your corporall being of Chriſt in the Sacrament, you draw the preſence of his Godhead to the ſame place with the Sacrament, not as God is in all places, filling them with his Majeſtie, but as the [illegible] of the Godhead dwelleth in Chriſt by union of perſon. For although the Godhead dwelleth in the body of Chriſt, as in a temple not made with hands, yet he dwelled not in the temple of Hieruſalem, when Chriſt was preſent in it, nor in any other houſe or place into which his body came. For it is one thing to ſay, the Godhead filleth all places, another thing to ſay he dwelleth here or there. For publike prayer, places appointed are moſt convenient, yet all places are conſecrated unto God for prayer, 1 Tim.2. 8. and Churches are not more convenient for publike prayers in reſpect of their holineſſe, but for order and comelineſſe ſake.

RHEM. 6 58 They ſtoned him.] Reade a marvellous narration in S. Auguſtine of one ſtone that hitting the Martyr on the elbow, rebounded backe to a faithfull man that ſtood neere; who keeping and carrying it with him, was by revelation warned to leave it at Ancona in Italie: whereupon a Church or Memory of S. Steven was there erected, and many miracles done after the ſaid Martyrs body was found out, and not before, Aug. tom. 10. Ser. 38. de diverſis in edit. Pariſ.

FVLK. 6 Such narrations we may reade good ſtore in the Legenda aurea, Sermones diſcipuli, the feſtivall, and ſuch other Popiſh books ſtuffed with fables and bobles, like to the counterfeit Auguſt. the Author of theſe Sermons. There was too much counterfeit ſtuffe, printed before under the name of Auguſtine. You needed not to have added more from Paris, but that you hate the truth, and delight in lies, fables, and forgeries.

CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 1 So farre is perſecution from prevailing againſt the Church, that by it the Church groweth from Hieruſalem into all Iewrie and Samaria: 5 The ſecond of the Deacons, Philip converteth with his miracles the city it ſelfe of Samaria, and baptizeth them, even Simon Magus alſo himſelfe among the reſt. 14 But the Apoſtles Peter and Iohn are the Miniſters to give them the holy Ghoſt. 18 Which Miniſtery Simon Magus would buy of them. 26 The ſame Philip being ſent of an Angel to a great man of Aethiopia, who came a pilgrimage to Hieruſalem, firſt catechizeth him: 36 and then (he profeſſing his faith, and deſiring Baptiſme) doth alſo baptize him.

The third part. The propagation of the Church from Hieruſalem into all Iewry and to Samaria.

FVLK. 1 The Eunuch came not on Popiſh pilgrimage, but to worſhip God at Hieruſalem.

AND the ſame day there was made a great perſecution in the Church which was at Hieruſalem, and all were diſperſed thorow the countreys of Iewry and Samaria, ſaving the Apoſtles.

2 And || devout men tooke order for Stevens funerall, and made great mourning upon him.

c συνεκόμισαν: [illegible]

3 But Saul *waſted the Church: entring in from houſe to houſe, and drawing men and women, delivered them into priſon.

Act 22,4.

4 They therefore that were diſperſed, paſſed thorow, ‡ evangelizing the word.

5 * And Philip deſcending into the citie of Samaria, preached CHRIST unto them.

‡ This perſecutió wrought much good, being an occaſion that the diſperſed preached Chriſt in divers countreys where they came.

* The Epiſtle upon Thurſday in Whitſunweeke.

6 And the multitudes were attent to thoſe things which were ſaid of Philip, with one accord, hearing and ſeeing the ſignes that he did.

7 For many of them that had uncleane ſpirits, crying with a loud voyce, went out. And many ſicke of the palſey and lame were cured.

8 There was made therefore great joy in that city.

9 And a certaine man named Simon, who before had beene in that city a Magician, ſeducing the nation of Samaria, ſaying himſelfe to be ſome great one:

10 Vnto whom all hearkened, from the leaſt to the greateſt, ſaying, This man is the power of God, that is called great.

11 And they were attent upon him, becauſe a long time he had bewitched them with his magicall practiſes.

12 But when they had believed Philip evangelizing of the kingdome of God, and of the name of IESVS CHRIST, they were baptized, men and women.

13 Then

AND Saul was conſenting unto his death: and at that time there was a great perſecution againſt the Church which was at Hieruſalem, and they were all ſcattered abroad thorow out the regions of Iewry, and Samaria, except the Apoſtles.

2 And devout men carried Steven together to his buriall, and made great lamentation over him.

3 As for Saul, he made havocke of the Church, entring into every houſe, and drawing out both men and women, did put them into priſon.

4 Therefore they that were ſcattered abroad, went every where preaching the word of God.

5 Then came Philip into the city of Samaria, and preached Chriſt unto them.

6 And the people gave heed unto thoſe things which Philip ſpake, with one accord, hearing and ſeeing the miracles which he did.

7 For uncleane ſpirits, crying with loude voice, came out of many that were poſſeſſed with them: and many taken with palſeys, and many that halted, were healed.

8 And there was great joy in that city.

9 But there was a certaine man called Simon, which before time in the ſame city uſed witchcraft, and bewitched the people of Samaria, ſaying, that he was a man that could doe great things.

10 To whom they all gave heed, from the leaſt to the greateſt, ſaying, This man is the great power of God.

11 And him they ſet much by, becauſe that of long time he had bewitched them with ſorceries.

12 But when they beleeved Philips preaching of the kingdome of God, and of the Name of Ieſus Chriſt, they were baptized, both men and women.

13 Then Simon alſo himſelfe beleeved: and being baptized, he cleaved to Philip; Seeing alſo ſignes and very great miracles to be done, he was aſtonied with admiration.

14 And when the Apoſtles who were in Hieruſalem, had heard that Samaria had receiued the word of God: they || ſent unto them ‡ Peter and Iohn.

15 Who when they were come, prayed for them, that they might receiue the holy Ghoſt.

16 For he was not yet come upon any of them, but they were onely baptized in the Name of our Lord IESVS.

17 Then did || they impoſe their hands upon them, and they || received the holy Ghoſt. ☞

18 And when Simon had ſeene that by the impoſition of the hand of the Apoſtles, the holy Ghoſt was given, he || offered them money, 19 Saying, Give me alſo this power, that on whomſoever I impoſe my hands, he may receive the holy Ghoſt.

20 But Peter ſaid to him, Thy money be with thee unto perdition: becauſe thou haſt thought that the gift of God is purchaſed with money.

21 Thou haſt no part, nor lot in his word. For thy heart is not right before God.

μετανόησον ἀπὸ. See Apo. 9, 21.

22 || Doe penance therefore from this thy wickedneſſe: and pray to God, || if perhaps this cogitation of thy heart may be remitted thee.

23 For I ſee thou art in the gall of bitterneſſe, and the obligation of iniquity.

24 And Simon anſwering ſaid, || Pray you for me to our Lord, that nothing come upon me of theſe things which you have ſaid.

25 And they indeed having teſtified and ſpoken the word of our Lord, returned to Hieruſalem, and evangelized to many countreys of the Samaritans.

The Epiſtle upon Thurſday in Eaſter week.

26 And an Angel of our Lord ſpake to Philip, ſaying: Ariſe, and goe toward the South, to the way that goeth downe from Hieruſalem into Gaza: || this is deſert.

27 And ariſing he went. And behold, a man of Æthiopia, an Eunuch, of great authority under Candace the Queene of the Æthiopians, who was over all her treaſures, was come to Hieruſalem to ‡ adore:

28 And he was returning and ſitting upon his charet, and reading Eſay the Prophet.

29 And the Spirit ſaid to Philip, Go neere, and joyne thy ſelfe to this ſame charet.

30 And Philip running thereunto, heard him reading Eſay the Prophet, and he ſaid: Troweſt thou that thou underſtandeſt the things which thou readeſt.

31 Who ſaid, And ‡ how can I, unleſſe ſome man ſhew me? and he deſired Philip that he would come up and ſit with him.

32 And

13 Then Simon himſelfe beleeued alſo: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondred, beholding the miracles and ſignes which were done.

14 When the Apoſtles which were at Hieruſalem, heard ſay that Samaria had receiued the word of God, they ſent unto them, Peter and Iohn.

15 Which when they were come downe, prayed for them that they might receiue the holy Ghoſt.

16 (For as yet he was come downe upon none of them; but they were baptized only in the name of Chriſt Ieſus.)

17 Then laid they their hands on them, and they receiued the holy Ghoſt.

18 And when Simon ſaw that through laying on of the Apoſtles hands, the holy Ghoſt was given, he offered them money, 19 Saying, Giue me alſo this power, that on whomſoeuer I put the hands, he may receiue the holy Ghoſt.

20 But Peter ſaid unto him, Thy money periſh with thee, becauſe thou haſt thought that the gift of God may bee obtained with money.

21 Thou haſt neither part nor fellowſhip in this buſineſſe: for thy heart is not right in the ſight of God.

22 Repent therefore of this thy wickedneſſe, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiuen thee.

23 For I perceiue that thou art in the gall of bitterneſſe, and in the bond of iniquity.

24 Then anſwered Simon, and ſaid, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of theſe things which ye haue ſpoken, fall on me.

25 And they, when they had teſtified and preached the word of the Lord, returned toward Hieruſalem, and preached the Goſpel in many villages of the Samaritanes.

26 And the Angel of the Lord ſpake unto Philip, ſaying, Ariſe, and goe toward the South, unto the way that goeth downe from Hieruſalem unto Gaza, which is deſert.

27 And he aroſe, and went on: and behold, a man of Ethiopia, an Eunuch, and of great authoritie with Candace, Queene of the Ethiopians, and had the rule of all her treaſure, which came to Hieruſalem for to worſhip.

28 And as hee returned home againe, ſitting in his charet, he read Eſaias the Prophet.

29 Then the Spirit ſaid unto Philip, Come, neere, and ioyne thy ſelfe to this charet.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him reade the Prophet Eſaias, and ſaid, Underſtandeſt thou what thou readeſt?

31 And he ſaid, How can I, except ſome man ſhould guide me? And he deſired Philip that he would come up, and ſit with him.

32 The

32 And the place of the Scripture which he did reade, was this: As a ſheepe to ſlaughter was he led: and as a Lambe before his ſhearer, without voice, ſo did he not open his mouth.

Eſay 53, 7.

33 In humility his judgement was taken away. His generation who ſhall declare, for from the earth ſhall his life be taken?

34 And the Eunuch anſwering Philip, ſaid, I beſeech thee, of whom doth the Prophet ſpeake this? of himſelfe, or of ſome other?

35 And Philip opening his mouth, and beginning from this Scripture, evangelized unto him IESVS.

36 And as they went by the way, they came to a certaine water: and the Eunuch ſaid, Lo water, || who doth let me to be baptized?

|| What.

37 And Philip ſaid, If thou beleeue with all thy heart, thou mayeſt. And he anſwering ſaid, I beleeue that IESVS CHRIST is the ſon of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to ſtay: and both went downe into the water, Philip and the Eunuch, and || he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of our Lord tooke away Philip, and the Eunuch ſaw him no more. And he went on his way rejoycing.

40 But Philip was found in Azotus, and paſſing through, he evangelized to all the cities, till he came to Cæſarea. ☞

*32 The tenor of the Scripture which he read, was this, * He was led as a ſheepe to the ſlaughter, and like a lambe dumbe before the ſhearer: ſo opened not he his mouth.*

33 In his humilitie, his iudgement is exalted: but who ſhall declare his generation? For his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the Eunuch anſwered Philip, and ſaid, I pray thee, of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this? of himſelfe, or of ſome other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth and began at the ſame Scripture, and preached unto him Ieſus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certaine water: and the Eunuch ſaid, See, here is water, what doth let me to be baptized?

37 Philip ſaid unto him, If thou beleeueſt with all thine heart, thou mayeſt. And he anſwered, and ſaid, I beleeue that Ieſus Chriſt is the Sonne of God.

38 And he commanded the charet to ſtand ſtill: and they went downe both into the water, both Philip, and alſo the Eunuch; and he baptized him.

39 And as ſoone as they were come out of the water, the ſpirit of the Lord caught away Philip that the Eunuch ſaw him no more: and he went on his way rejoycing.

40 But Philip was found at Azotus: and he walked throwout the countrey, preaching in all the cities, till he came to Cæſarea.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 2 27 To adore.] Note that this Æthiopian came to Hieruſalem to adore, that is, in Pilgrimage. Whereby we may learne that it is an acceptable acte of religion, to goe from home to places of greater deuotion and ſanctification.

FVLK. 2 He came as a proſelyte, to worſhip God in the Temple at Ieruſalem, according to the Law, not on pilgrimage to worſhip Popiſh idols. But now the time is, and then was, that the true worſhippers ſhould worſhip God neither in Ieruſalem, nor in any other place of greater devotion and ſanctification, but in ſpirit and truth. Iohn 4.21. The Temple and the comming up to Ieruſalem to worſhip, had the expreſſe word to warrant them: Popiſh places of devotion and the pilgrimage to them are ſuperſtitious and idolatrous, having no warrant of Gods word for their holineſſe, but manifeſt prohibition in Gods law, Exod. 20.

RHEM. 3 31 How can I.] The Scriptures are ſo written that they cannot be underſtood without an interpreter, as eaſie as our Proteſtants make them. See S. Hierome Ep. ad Paulinum de omnibus diuinæ hiſtoriæ libris, ſet in the beginning of Latine Bibles.

FVLK. 3 All parts of the Scripture are not ſo written, that an interpreter is neceſſary. *The holy Ghoſt hath bountifully and healthfully ſo moderated the holy Scriptures, that by open or plaine places, he might prouide againſt famine, and that by darke places he might wipe away lothſomeneſſe. For nothing almoſt is found out of theſe obſcurities, which may not be found in other places, to be uttered moſt plainely, De doct. RHEM. 5 14 Sent Peter.] Some Proteſtants uſe this place to proue S. Peter not to be head of the Apoſtles, becauſe he and S. Iohn were ſent by the Twelue, by which reaſon they might as well conclude that he was not equall to the reſt; for commonly the Maſter ſendeth the man, and the Superiour the inferiour, when the word of Sending is exactly uſed. But it is not alwayes ſo taken in the Scriptures, for then could not the Sonne be ſent by the Father, nor the holy Ghoſt from the Father and the Sonne: nor otherwiſe in common uſe of the world, ſeeing the inferiour or equall many intreate his friend or ſuperiour to doe his buſineſſe for him; and ſpecially a body Politike or a Corporation may by election or otherwiſe chooſe their Head and ſend him, ſo may the Citizens ſend their Major to the Prince or Parliament though he be the head of the Citie, becauſe he may be more fit to doe their buſineſſe; alſo the ſuperiour or equall may be ſent by his owne conſent or deſire. Laſtly, the Colledge of the Apoſtles comprising Peter with the reſt (as euery ſuch body implieth both the head and the members) was greater then Peter their head alone; as the Prince and Parliament is greater then the prince alone. And ſo Peter might be ſent as by authority of the whole Colledge, notwithſtanding he were the head of the ſame.

That Peter was ſent, is no reaſon againſt his Primacie.

This

Popes ſupremacy

This ſending of Peter, is a good argument to prooue that Peter was not their ſuperior, as Chriſts vicar. For then he might haue ſent any of them, or gone of his owne accord without ſending. Peter was therefore inferior to the reſt, and vnder the authority of the whole College of Apoſtles, though he were equall to euery one, and in primacy of order, firſt of all. Whereas if Peter had beene ſuperiour as Chriſts vicar, they could no more haue ſent Peter then they could haue ſent Chriſt himſelfe. That the word of ſending, is not alwaies vſually vſed in the Scriptures, you haue no example to bring, but of the ſending of the Sonne and the holy Ghoſt. Whereas all men of meane iudgement know, that the myſterie of the holy Trinity being ineffable, the words are almoſt all borrowed, that are vſed to ſhew the diſtinct working, and effects of the perſons thereof. But heere, in proper phraſe of ſpeaking, the Apoſtles ſent Peter and Iohn: Peter and Iohn therefore were ſubiect to the Apoſtles. But you adde, that the word of ſending, is not alwaies ſo taken in the common vſe of the world, ſeeing the inferiour or equall, may intreat his friend to doe his buſineſſe for him. I grant that to be true, but the inferiour or equall, that hath intreated his friend, cannot truely ſay, he hath ſent his ſuperiour or equall. Neither can a Corporation, that is vnder a ſoveraigne head (ſuch as you would haue Peter to be) ſend their head, or chuſe him to be their foot, to goe for them. Neither can the Citizens ſend their Major, which is the Princes Lieutenant, more then they can ſend the Prince himſelfe. He may goe indeed by his owne conſent or deſire, but he cannot be ſent, except he yeeld vnto the authority of the ſenders. Laſtly, you ſay (belike, for the vttermoſt refuge) that the College of the Apoſtles, comprising Peter, was greater then Peter their head alone. This granted, Peters headſhip was not the ſoveraigne authority of Chriſt, neither was Peter head of the Apoſtles, as Chriſts Vicar. For the whole Church, comprising Chriſt the head thereof, is not of greater authority then Chriſt himſelfe. Neither may Chriſt be ſent by authority of the whole Church. No more might Peter haue beene ſent by authority of the whole College, if he had had the whole authority and government ouer the Apoſtles, as Chriſt had, and alwayes hath. Neither is this place vſed onely of Proteſtants (as you ſay) but alſo of ſome Papiſts, to prooue that the Pope ought to be ſubiect to the generall Councell, repreſenting the whole Church. Epiſt. Syn. Con. Baſil. ad inuectiuam ſub nomine Eugenij Pape. cont. ſyn. Baſil.

The Sacrament of Confirmation miniſtred by Biſhops onely.

RHEM. 6 17 Did they impoſe.] If this Philip had beene an Apoſtle (ſaith Bede) he might haue impoſed his hands, that they might haue receiued the holy Ghoſt; but this none can doe ſauing Biſhops. For though Prieſts may baptize, and anoint the baptized alſo with Chriſme conſecrated by a Biſhop: yet he cannot ſigne his forehead with the ſame holy oyle, becauſe that belongeth onely to Biſhops, when they giue the holy Ghoſt to the baptized. So ſaith he touching the Sacrament of Confirmation in 8. Act. This impoſition therefore of hands, together with the prayers here ſpecified (which no doubt were the very ſame that the Church yet vſeth to that purpoſe) was the miniſtration of the Sacrament of Confirmation. Whereof S. Cyprian ſaith thus; They that in Samaria were baptized of Philip, becauſe they had lawfull and Eccleſiaſticall Baptiſme, ought not to be baptized any more; but onely that which wanted, was done by Peter and Iohn, *to wit, that by prayer made for them and impoſition of hands, the holy Ghoſt might be powred vpon them. Which now alſo is done with vs, that they which in the Church are baptized, be by the Rulers of the Church offered, and by our prayer and impoſition of hands receiue the holy Ghoſt, and be ſigned with our Lords ſeale. Popiſh Confirmation.

FVLK. 6 Heere you will inforce a ſacrament of Confirmation with oyle, which neither in this place, nor in any other place of the Scripture, hath either word of inſtitution, or outward element of Chriſts appointment, which two things muſt needs concurre in any Sacrament. The Apoſtles here praied, that the Samaritans, for further confirmation of their faith, might receiue the viſible miraculous graces of the holy Ghoſt, as the gifts of tongues, of propheſie, of healing, and ſuch like; out of which it is impoſſible to conclude any ordinary or perpetuall ſacrament of Confirmation of all that are baptized, and that with oyle, whereof there is no mention in all the Scriptures that it was either appointed or vſed for ſuch purpoſe. Now that you are forſaken of the word of God, let us ſee what teſtimony you gather out of men. Firſt you bring Bede who liued 700. yeeres after Chriſt, and ſpeaketh of the ceremony of anoynting with oyle by the Biſhop, as it was vſed in his time. Yet doth he not call it a ſacrament, nor ſay that the Apoſtles vſed that Ceremony, but that it belonged to them to giue the holy Ghoſt and not to Philip, as in his time Biſhops vſed to anoint with oyle and not the Prieſts, by which vnction they were perſwaded the holy Ghoſt was giuen. Notwithſtanding you are bold to conclude, that this impoſition ſition of hands with prayers, was the miniſtration of the Sacrament of Confirmation: which with the [illegible] you haue gathered [illegible] out of the text, nor out of Bedes words: although they [illegible] inſerted out of [illegible]. But you are yet more bold to affirme (for you may ſay what you will [illegible]) that the prayers here ſpecified, were no doubt the very ſame that the Popiſh [illegible]. The text [illegible] what theſe prayers were, that they might receiue the holy Ghoſt, which Oecumenius out of [illegible] the Greeke Fathers doth expound, the power of working miracles, in Act. cap. 10. The words that your Popiſh Biſhops vſe in their Confirmation with oyle, are Conſigno te, &c. I marke thee with the ſigne of the Croſſe, and confirme thee with the Chriſme of ſaluation, in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, Amen be to thee. What affinity haue theſe words with the prayers of the Apoſtles? But if Bede be too young, Cyprian is an ancient writer, who belike is a patrone of Popiſh confirmation with the Chriſme of ſaluation. But that you confeſſe is left out both by the Euangeliſt, and by S. Cyprian.

Cyprian indeed ſheweth, that thoſe that were baptized in the Church, were offered to the gouernors of the Church, and by their prayer and impoſition of hands, obtained the holy Ghoſt, and were ſigned & conſummated with the Lords ſigne (ſo he calleth the ſigne of the Croſſe) we ſee heere prayer and impoſition of hands, according to the example of the Apoſtles to obtaine the holy Ghoſt, but we lacke ſtill yet the chiefeſt matter to make vp a Sacrament, the Chriſme of ſaluation. To ſupply that want, you ſay many things were done and ſaid in the adminiſtration of this and other ſacraments inſtituted by Chriſt, which are not particularly written by the Euangeliſts, or in any other Scripture. To admit that all things done and ſaid, be not particularly expreſſed in the Scriptures, ſhall we therefore admit for Sacraments ſuch things as haue neither their inſtitution, nor the word, nor the element ſet forth in the Scriptures? Some circumſtances not materiall are omitted, but the Chriſme of ſaluation, if it had beene of Chriſts inſtitution, and the Apoſtles practiſe, ſhould neuer haue beene wholly omitted being a matter of ſo great importance, as the very name you giue vnto it doth pretend.

But all antiquity (you ſay) and moſt generall practiſe of the Church, doth evidently proue, that this Sacrament was inſtituted by Chriſt, and yet not written of in the Scriptures. To omit that the teſtimony of all the world, without the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt, is too weake a ground for vs to build our faith vpon: It is vtterly falſe that you ſay; for neither doth all antiquity teſtifie of it, neither was it euer generally practiſed of the Church as a Sacrament. For in the Greeke Church, this ſacrament of Confirmation was neuer receiued to this day.

But to examine your witneſſes of antiquity ſeuerally. Firſt Dionyſius is not of ſuch antiquity as you pretend, for if he had been, his writings could not haue bin vnknowen to Euſebius, S. Hierom, and Gennadius, who continued the catalogue of principall writers of the Church for fiue hundred yeeres after Chriſt. But we muſt take him in ſuch order as you offer him. This Dionyſe ſpeaketh of an vnction vſed to them that were baptized, after which they were admitted to the Eucharist, as he doth of many other ceremonies of vnction, not vſed in the Popiſh Church, all which yet he comprehendeth vnder the Sacrament or myſterie of vnction.

Tertullian ſpeaketh alſo of the ceremony of vnction, which was vſed in Baptiſme, to ſignifie that the baptized was conſecrated as a Champion of Chriſt, to fight againſt the deuill, the world, and the fleſh, which in baptiſme he hath renounced and defied. Which he declareth plainely in his booke De baptiſmo, ſaying: As ſoone as we come out of the Lauer, we are anointed with the bleſſed vnction, of an ancient diſcipline, by which they were wont to be anointed with oile out of the horne in the Prieſthood: whereof Aaron was anointed by Moſes: whereof Chriſt is called a Chriſmate, which is vnction, &c. Deinde Afterward the hand is laid on, by bleſſing, calling vpon, and inuiting the holy Ghoſt, &c. All which declare, and the whole diſcourſe of the booke; that he ſpeaketh of ceremonies vſed about baptiſme, not of the Popiſh ſacrament of Confirmation. Alſo that vnction was a ceremonie diſtinct from impoſition of hands. The ſame thing alſo doth Cyprian teach, ep. 70. ſaying, Hee that is Baptized muſt needs be anointed, that hauing receiued the Chriſme, that is vnction, he may be the anointed of God, and haue in him the grace of Chriſt. And afterward he ſpeaketh of prayer for him that is baptized, to receiue the holy Ghoſt with impoſition of hands. Likewiſe ep. 72. where he calleth not vnction, but that which is repreſented by impoſition of hand, a Sacrament. For in the Epiſtle he certifieth Stephanus Biſhop of Rome, that they haue concluded in Africa, that they which come from heretikes, muſt be baptized. Eo quod parum ſit eis, &c. Becauſe it is little worth to them to lay the hand vpon them, that they may receiue the holy Ghoſt, except they receiue alſo the Baptiſme of the Church. For then at the length they may be ſanctified perfectly, and be the ſonnes of God, if they be borne of both the Sacraments, ſeeing it is written, Except a man be borne of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God. You ſee plainely, he ſpeaketh of the ſpirituall birth of water and the ſpirit, which is teſtified in baptiſme, whereof the element of water and the laying on of hands, were ſignes, not of a ſeuerall ſacrament of vnction. The decretall epiſtle of Melchiades (as all the reſt of that rable) is a meere counterfeit, in which the author doth not only in barbarous Latine tell the difference of this Popiſh ſacrament from baptiſme, but alſo ſheweth how much more worthy it is then baptiſme. S. Auguſt. cont. lit. pet. lib. 2. cap. 104. ſaith, that Petilian the Heretike in the ſpirituall ointment ſpoken of by Pſal. 132. Will interpret the ſacrament of Chriſme, which truely in the kind of viſible ſignes is holy, as baptiſme it ſelfe, but it may be in the worſt men, in them that ſpend their life in the workes of the fleſh, and ſhall not poſſeſſe the kingdome of heauen, and therefore pertaine neither to the beard of Aaron, nor to the edge of his garment, &c. How largely S. Auguſtine vſeth the name of Sacrament, I haue elſewhere declared Matth. 2. ſect. 2. although in this place he ſheweth rather how it was accompted among the Donatiſts, then among the Catholikes. For the Donatiſts accompted all them to be holy brethren, that were baptized and anointed among them: whereby alſo it appeareth, that this vnction was a ceremony pertaining to baptiſme. For of impoſition of hands to receiue the holy Ghoſt, he ſheweth that it was onely a prayer: and therefore might be repeated, whereas baptiſme, that is a ſacrament, miniſtred euen by heretikes, may not be repeated. Manus autem impoſitio, &c. Impoſition of hands, is not as baptiſme, that cannot be repeated. For what is impoſition of hands, but prayer ouer a man? Wherefore you doe fondly, and contrary to the teſtimony of antiquity, to ioyne theſe two ceremonies of Vnction and impoſition of hands vnto one Sacrament. Cyril Myſtagog. 3. ſpeaketh of vnction immediatly after Baptiſme, in the forehead, eares, and breſt, without which, he denieth that men were worthy to be called Chriſtians: or their regeneration perfect, therefore as he attributeth too much to that ceremony; ſo he ſheweth it was differing from the Popiſh ſacrament of confirmation. S. Ambroſe lib. 3. cap. 2. De Sacrament. hath neuer a word either of Chriſme, or of impoſition of hands, but only of prayer for the ſeuenfold grace of the holy Ghoſt, to be powred vpon the baptized; and no more he hath De iis qui myſt. init. cap. 7. onely he putteth the baptized in mind, that they haue receiued the diuers gifts of the holy Ghoſt. But cap. 6. he maketh mention of vnction, the ceremony vſed at Baptiſme. The epiſtle of Leo doth alſo plainely diſtinguiſh the ceremony of impoſition of hands from vnction, ſaying, that one is per impoſitiones, &c. by impoſition of hands vpon the faithfull to be baptized, or that are conuerted from hereſie, to deliuer the holy Ghoſt. Of the other he addeth, vt Chriſma, &c. to make Chriſme, and with Chriſme to anoint the foreheads of them that are baptized: which thing with many other, he maketh vnlawfull for Chorepiſcopi, which he ſayth were but Prieſts, yet doth he not call either the one ceremony or the other a ſacrament, as Baptiſme and the Lords Supper are Sacraments. The Councell of Laodicea willeth them that are Baptized, to be anointed with Chriſme: the Councell of Carthage forbiddeth the Prieſt to make the Chriſme. The Arauſican Councell ſpeaketh expreſly of that anointing which was done by euery one that baptized, and is not to be repeated, therefore cannot ſpeake of the Popiſh Sacrament, which is giuen onely by the Biſhop, after Baptiſme. The words are theſe: None of the miniſters that hath receiued the office of baptizing, ought to goe abroad any whither without Chriſme, becauſe it is agreed amongſt vs that Chriſme be occupied but once in baptiſme. But concerning him which in Baptiſme, by any neceſſity hath not beene anointed, the Prieſt ſhall be admoniſhed thereof in the Confirmation. For among vs the bleſſing of the Chriſme is but one, we ſay not this in preiudice of any, but that the anointing may be counted neceſſary. But contrary to this Canon, the Papiſts hold, that the childe muſt be twiſe annointed, in Baptiſme and in Confirmation. Now for the author of the ceremony (for ſacrament it is none) you alleage Dionyſe and Baſil, referring it to tradition of the Apoſtles. Whereunto if we muſt giue credit, we muſt acknowledge many of the Apoſtolike traditions to be aboliſhed, as it is certaine of many ceremonies deſcribed by that Dionyſe, by Tertullian and Baſil. Wherefore either we muſt ſay it was not ordeined of the Apoſtles, or elſe it was ordeined as a remooueable Ceremony, as other ceremonies likewiſe fathered vpon the Apoſtles, are long ſince worne out of vſe. The conſtitutions of Clement be meere forgeries, full of manifeſt lies, as I haue ſhewed elſewhere. The decretall epiſtles of Fabian, be euen as good ſtuffe as the reſt of that ſort. But you doe faſly affirme, that the author of the treatiſe, De unctione Chriſmatis apud Cyprianum, doth ſay that Chriſt did inſtruct his Apoſtles at that time of the inſtitution of the Bleſſed Sacrament, to conſecrate this Chriſme. For he ſaith not ſo, nor any thing to that effect; though he extoll the ceremony of making this Chriſme, greatly. And if it muſt be made of balſome (as he and your Canon law alſo ſaith) you haue long deceiued the common people with a ſtrong confection, like falſe Apothecaries, for true Balſome is a precious oyntment, very hardly or not at all to be gotten in theſe parts. As for impoſition of hands with prayer, which was the old and pure ceremony of Confirmation, we do not ſpeake againſt it. We acknowledge that the vnction of Chriſme, alſo in the ancient Church, was a tolerable Ceremony for the ſignification thereof, if it were not too highly eſteemed, as of ſome it was, but not to be matched and preferred before the holy Sacrament of Chriſts inſtitution, as is by you.

To conclude, you ſay none but knowne heretikes did euer deny or contemne this ſacrament of Confirmation or holy Chriſme. But as yet you haue not prooued any ſuch ſacrament, acknowledged by the ancient Catholikes, though of olde time, there was a ceremonie of annointing, which was omitted in Nouatus, becauſe he was Baptized in his bed being very ſicke, and like to die. Whereupon alſo his followers neglected that ceremony alſo, as might ſeeme by Theodoret.

Yet doth not Cornelius ſay, that he fell into hereſie, becauſe he had not receiued the holy Ghoſt, by conſignation of a Biſhop, but onely ſheweth what maner a man he was, and how that being baptiſed in his bed, after he recouered, he regarded not the reſt of the ceremonies, of which he ſhould haue beene partaker, according to the rule of the Church, not ſo much as to be ſealed or confirmed by the Biſhop, which hauing not obtained (ſaith he) how could he obtaine the holy Ghoſt? By theſe words, it is not prooued, that vnction was the ceremony of Confirmation, but rather one of the ceremonies of Baptiſme, that were omitted, becauſe he was at the poynt of death. And in ſuch caſe as his was, Confirmation was requiſite, becauſe it might be doubted, whether after his recouery, he would ratifie that which he promiſed in Baptiſme, which he receiued, being in feare of death. For it appeareth afterward, that it was againſt the diſcipline of the Church, that ſuch ſhould be admitted into the Miniſtery, as receiued Baptiſme vpon ſuch neceſſity. And the Biſhop was faine to intreat the Clergy and the people for him, that he might neuertheleſſe be ordained. That which Optatus writeth of the Donatiſts, was not a ſpeciall outrage againſt the holy oyle, but generally againſt any thing that belonged to the Catholikes. For the Donatiſts alſo, had their holy oyle, and did attribute more vnto it, then the Catholikes did to their vnction, as is ſhewed before out of S. Auguſtine, Cont. lit. Petil. lib. 2. cap. 104.

Where you complaine of the ſauage diſorder of the Caluiniſts, in contemning your Popiſh ceremonies, we might make anſwer of your deuilliſh diſorder, in burning and defacing the holy Scriptures, yea the bodies of all them that profeſſe the Goſpel of Chriſt. But of all ſauage parts, that euer were practiſed ſince the creation of the world, (all circumſtances conſidered) there is none comparable to the Bartholmew Faire of the French Papiſts at Paris, and other places in France.

RHEM. 7. 17 And they receiued the holy Ghoſt.] The Proteſtants charge the Catholikes, * that by approuing and commending ſo much the Sacrament of Confirmation, and by attributing to it ſpecially the gift of the holy Ghoſt, they diminiſh the force of Baptiſme, challenging alſo boldly the ancient Fathers for the ſame. As though any Catholike or Doctor euer ſaid more then the expreſſe words of Scripture heere and elſewhere plainely giue them warrant for. If they diminiſh the vertue of Baptiſme, then did Chriſt ſo, appointing his Apoſtles and all the Faithfull euen after their Baptiſme to expect the holy Ghoſt and vertue from aboue; then did the Apoſtles iniurie to Baptiſme, in that they impoſed hands on the baptiſed, and gaue them the holy Ghoſt. And this is the heretikes blindneſſe in this caſe, that they cannot, or will not ſee that the holy Ghoſt is giuen in Baptiſme to remiſſion of ſinnes, life, and ſanctification: and in Confirmation, for force, ſtrength, and corroboration to fight againſt all our ſpirituall enemies, and to ſtand conſtantly in confeſſion of our faith, euen to death, in times of perſecution either of the heathen or of the heretikes, with great increaſe of grace. And let the good Reader note here our Aduerſaries great peruerſity and corruption of the plaine ſenſe of the Scriptures in this poynt: ſome of them affirming the holy Ghoſt heere to be no other but the gift of wiſedome in the Apoſtles and a few moe to the gouernment of the Church, when it is plaine that not onely the gouernours but all that were baptized, receiued this grace, both men and women. Some, that it was no internall grace, but onely the gift of diuers languages: Which is very falſe, the gift of tongues being but a ſequell and an accident to the grace, and an externall token of the inward gift of the holy Ghoſt, and our Sauiour calleth it vertue from aboue. Some ſay, that whatſoeuer it was, it was but a miraculous thing, and dured no longer then the gift of the tongues ioyned thereunto: by which euaſion they deny alſo the Sacrament of extreme Vnction, and the force of Excommunication, becauſe the corporall puniſhments which were annexed oftentimes in the Primitiue Church vnto it, ceaſeth; and ſo may they take away (as they meane to doe) all Chriſts faith or religion, becauſe it hath not the like operation of miracles as in the beginning. But S. Auguſtine toucheth this poynt fully. Is there any man (ſaith he) of ſo peruerſe an heart, to deny theſe Children on whom we now impoſed hands, to haue receiued the holy Ghoſt, becauſe they ſpeake not with Tongues? &c. Laſtly, ſome of them make no more of Confirmation or the Apoſtles fact, but as of a doctrine, inſtruction, or exhortation to continue in the faith receiued. Whereupon they haue turned this holy Sacrament * into a Catechiſme, * There are alſo that put the baptized comming to yeeres of diſcretion, to their owne choiſe whether they will continue Chriſtians or no. To ſuch deuiſes and diuers inuentions they fall, that will not obey Gods Church nor the expreſſe Scriptures, which tell vs of prayer, of impoſition of hands, of the holy Ghoſt, of grace and vertue from aboue, and not of inſtruction, which might and may be done as well before Baptiſme, and by others, as by Prieſts and Biſhops; to whom only this holy function perteineth, in ſo much that in our countrey it is called Biſhopping.

FVLK. 7. The ancient ceremony of impoſition of hands, which is nothing elſe, as S. Auguſtine ſaith, but prayer ouer a man, to be ſtrengthened and confirmed by the Holy Ghoſt, or to receiue increaſe of the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, as S. Auguſtine ſaith, we doe not in any wiſe miſlike, but vſe it our ſelues. Neither doe we charge the Papiſts, for diminiſhing the force of Baptiſme, in ſaying that men may receiue the gifts of the holy Ghoſt by faithfull prayers with impoſition of hands: but for making their vnction a Sacrament, whereof, neither the word nor the element is of Chriſts inſtitution: and for affirming Baptiſme to be vnperfect without it, for it is to be vſed, ſay they, Vt pleni Chriſtiani inueniantur, that they may be found perfect Chriſtians, De Con. diſt. 5. cap. omnes. Whereof it is inferred, that Baptiſm maketh not perfect Chriſtians. Againe, quod nunquam erit Chriſtianus, niſi in confirmatione Epiſcopali fuerit chriſmatus. And that he ſhal neuer be a Chriſtian, which is not anointed with Chriſme in the Biſhops confirmation. De Conſecrat. diſt. 5. cap. Vt ieiuni, Whereof it followeth, that Baptiſme maketh not a Chriſtian. And in that counterfeit epiſtle of Melchiades, Confirmatio ad baptiſmi perfectionem pertinet. Confirmation perteineth to the perfection of Baptiſme: Whereof it is inferred that Baptiſme is imperfect without Confirmation. Thirdly, we charge them becauſe they ſay that this their ſacrament is maiore veneratione venerandum. To be reuerenced with greater reuerence then Baptiſme, becauſe it can be miniſtred by none but by a Biſhop. De Conſecrat. Diſt. 5. cap. De his vero. To theſe matters of charge, taken out of your Canon Law, you anſwer nothing, but cauill of the gifts of the holy Ghoſt obtained by prayer and impoſition of hands of the Apoſtles, which we deny not, impudently accuſing vs of great peruerſity, and corruption of the plaine ſenſe of the Scriptures in this point: Firſt, becauſe ſome of vs doe affirme, the holy Ghoſt to be none other, but the gift of wiſedome in the Apoſtles, and a few other for gouernment. But this is a ſlander, for none of vs doe ſo affirme. Further, you charge ſome of vs, to affirme that it was no internall grace, but onely the gift of diuers languages. But this alſo is a ſlander: for we neither deny the internall grace, in all, nor reſtraine the outward grace onely to the gift of tongues. But we affirme, that the holy Ghoſt, in this place is taken principally, for the viſible graces of the holy Spirit, as is manifeſt by that ſaying: The holy Ghoſt was not yet come vpon any one of them. What (ſaith Oecumenius) did not they that were baptized by Philip, receiue the holy Ghoſt? yes they receiued the holy Ghoſt vnto remiſſion of ſinnes, but they receiued him not to the working of miracles. Againe, Simon Magus ſaw, that by impoſition of hands, the holy Ghoſt was giuen, but he could not ſee the internall grace, therefore it was the grace of working miracles, as of tongues, healing, propheſying, caſting out of deuils, and ſuch like: and this was vertue from aboue, in ſome alſo that were voide of internall grace, Matth. 7.22. So ſaith Oecumenius. We may vnderſtand that in the giuing of the holy Ghoſt, there was ſome wonderfull thing that was ſenſible, for otherwiſe Simon would not haue made this requeſt, except he had ſeene it. We ſay indeede, that this kind of impoſition of hands to this purpoſe, endured no longer then the miraculous gifts, as the vnction with oyle to recouer bodily health, named by S. Iames. But there is another kind of impoſition of hands, mentioned, Heb. 6.2. whereof there may be a perpetuall vſe in the Church, which is the ſame, which S. Auguſtine calleth, nothing elſe, but prayer ouer a man, and whereof he ſpeaketh Tract. 6 in Ep. 1. Ioan. But where you ſay, we may deny the force of excommunication, becauſe corporall puniſhment, which was annexed vnto it in the Primitiue Church ceaſeth, it is vtterly falſe. For we haue a plaine commandement for the vſe of excommunication Matth. 18. without any mention of corporall puniſhment, which was not alwaies ioyned with excommunication in the Primitiue Church, albeit it might be ſometimes. Your other ſlander, (that we meane to take away all Chriſtian religion, becauſe it hath not the like operation of miracles, as in the beginning) becauſe it is without colour, I omit as vnworthy of any anſwere, onely bewraying the intollerable malice of your lying ſpirit. Let God be Iudge in this caſe betwixt you and vs. Laſt of all, you charge ſome of vs, to make no more of Confirmation, or the Apoſtles fact, but as of a doctrine, inſtruction, or exhortation, to continue in the faith receiued. But this is alſo falſe. For we acknowledge impoſition of hands with prayer, that they which were ſo taught, inſtructed, and exhorted, might receiue ſtrength of Gods Spirit ſo to continue. And yet againe, where you ſay, there are among vs, which put the baptized comming to yeeres of diſcretion, to their owne choyce, whether they will continue Chriſtians or no: it is as falſe, as the reſt. For when they are required to make confeſſion themſelues, of that faith which other men profeſſed in their name at their baptiſme, they are not put to their choyce, but put in minde, that they muſt performe themſelues, that by other was promiſed in their name, or elſe their baptiſme will not auaile them to eternall ſaluation. Finally, that which the Scripture telleth vs of prayer, impoſition of hands, of the holy Ghoſt, of grace and vertue from aboue, we acknowledge as well as inſtruction: but oyle and balſome, and the reſt of the Popiſh doctrine, of this counterfeit Sacrament, becauſe it is not found in the holy Scriptures, we renounce it.

He taught, onely faith in him, without good life and workes, to be enough to ſaluation; he gaue the onſet to purchaſe with his money a ſpirituall function, that is to be made a Biſhop; for, to haue power to giue the holy Ghoſt by impoſition of hands, is to bee a Biſhop: as to buy the power to remit ſinnes, or to conſecrate Chriſts body, is to buy to be a Prieſt, or to buy Prieſthood; and to buy the authority to miniſter Sacraments, to preach or to haue care of ſoules, is to buy a benefice; and likewiſe in all other ſpirituall things, whereof eyther to make ſale or purchaſe for money or money worth, is a great horrible ſinne called Simony: and in ſuch as thinke it lawfull (as heere* Simon iudged it) it is named Simoniacall Hereſie, of this deteſtable man who firſt attempted to buy a ſpirituall function or office. D. 22 But Saule waxed mighty much more, and confounded the Iewes that dwelt at Damaſcus, affirming that this is CHRIST.

23 And when many daies were paſſed, the Iewes conſulted that they might kill him.

24 But their conſpiracie came to Sauls knowledge. And * they kept the gates alſo day and night, that they might kill him.

25 But the Diſciples taking him in the night, conveyed him away by the wal, letting him downe in a basket.

26 And when he was come into Hieruſalem, he aſſaied to ioine himſelfe to the diſciples, and all feared him, not beleeving that he was a diſciple.

27 But Barnabas tooke him and brought him to the Apoſtles, and told them how in the way he had ſeene our Lord, and that he ſpake unto him, and how in Damaſcus he dealt confidently in the name of IESVS.

28 And he was with them going in and going out in Hieruſalem, and dealing confidently in the name of our Lord.

29 He ſpake alſo to the Gentiles, and diſputed with the Greekes: but they ſought to kill him.

30 Which when the brethren had knowen, they brought him downe to Cæſarea, and ſent him away to Tarſus.

31 The ‡ CHVRCH truely through all Iewrie and Galilee and Samaria had peace, and was edified, walking in the feare of our Lord, and was repleniſhed with the conſolation of the holy Ghoſt.

32 And it came to paſſe, that Peter as he paſſed through all, came to the Saints that dwelt at Lydda.

33 And he found there a certaine man named Æneas, lying in his bed from eight yeares before, who had the palſey.

34 And Peter ſaid to him, Æneas, our Lord IESVS CHRIST ‖ heale thee: ariſe, and make thy bed. And incontinent he aroſe.

35 And all that dwelt at Lydda and Sarona, ſaw him: who converted to our Lord.

36 And in Ioppe there was a certaine diſciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas. This woman was full of ‡ good workes and almes-deedes which ſhe did.

37 And it came to paſſe in thoſe daies, that ſhe was ſicke and died. Whom when they had waſhed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

38 And whereas Lydda was nigh to Ioppe, the diſciples hearing that Peter was in it, they ſent two men unto him, deſiring him, Be not loth to come ſo farre as to us.

39 And Peter riſing up came with them. And when he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widowes ſtood about him weeping, ‡ and ſhewing him the coats and garments which Dorcas made them.

40 And all being put forth, Peter falling on his knees prayed, and turning to the body, he ſaid: Tabitha, Ariſe. And ſhe opened her eyes: and ſeeing Peter, ſhe ſate up.

41 And giving her his hand, he lifted her up. And when he had called the Saints and the widowes, he preſented her alive.

42 And it was made knowne thorowout all Ioppe: and many beleeved in our Lord.

43 And it came to paſſe that he abode many dayes in Ioppe, with one Simon a Tanner.

23 And after that many dayes were fulfilled, the Iewes tooke counſell together to kill him.

*24 But their laying await was knowen of Saule: * and they watched the gate, day and night to kill him.*

25 Then the Diſciples tooke him by night, and put him downe by the wall, and let him downe in a basket.

26 And when Saule was come to Hieruſalem, he aſſayed to couple himſelf to the diſciples, but they were all afraid of him, and beleeved not that he was a diſciple.

27 But Barnabas tooke him, and brought him to the Apoſtles, and declared unto them how he had ſeene the Lord in the way, and that he had ſpoken to him, and how he had preached boldly at Damaſcus in the Name of Ieſus.

28 And he was with them comming in, and going out at Hieruſalem,

MARGINALL NOTES CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1 4 Saul, Saul why perſecuteſt.] The Heretikes that conclude Chriſt ſo in heaven, that he can be no where elſe till the day of judgement, ſhall hardly reſolve a man that would know where Chriſt was when he appeared here in the way, and ſpake theſe words to Saul.

FVLK. 1 We conclude not Chriſt in heaven, otherwiſe then of his owne will he hath appointed to remaine there. But your queſtion is eaſily anſwered out of the text, that Chriſt ſpake from heaven, from whence the glorious light ſhined, paſſing the light of the Sunne. Oecumenius ſaith; They that accompaned Saul heard not the voyce that came from above.

RHEM. 2 36 Good workes.] Behold good workes and almes-deeds, and the force thereof reaching even to the next life.

FVLK. 2 The force of good workes reacheth to the next life, to be rewarded of Gods mercy, and not of mans merit.

Merit.

RHEM. 3 39 And ſhewing him.] The prayers of our Almes-folke and Beads-men may doe us great good even after our departure. For if they procured her temporall life, much more may they helpe us to Gods mercy, and to releaſe of puniſhment in Purgatory.

FVLK. 3 The text ſaith not, that her Almes-folke prayed to God for reſtitution of her life, and if they did, yet the argument followeth not, that they ought to have prayed for releaſe of her puniſhment in Purgatory. Becauſe the Scripture teacheth no ſuch place of puniſhment after this life, nor preſcribeth any forme of prayer, to obtaine mercie for them that are departed, and have received their judgement: for immediatly after death, followeth every mans particular judgement, Heb.9.27.

Purgatory.

CHAP. X.

RHEM. 1 Becauſe the Iewes ſo much abhorred the Gentiles, for the better warrant of their Chriſtening, an Angel appeareth to Cornelius the devout Italian: 9 and a viſion is ſhewed to Peter himſelfe (the chiefe and Paſtor of all), 19 and the Spirit ſpeaketh to him, 34 yea and as he is catechizing them about Ieſus, 44 the holy Ghoſt commeth viſibly upon them: and therefore not fearing any longer the offence of the Iewes, he commandeth to baptize them.

FVLK. 1 There is no word in the text, nor in all the Scriptures, to prove that Peter was Paſtor of all, otherwiſe then every one of the Apoſtles.

The fourth part,

The propagation of the Church to the Gentiles alſo.

AND there was a certaine man in Cæſarea, named Cornelius, Centurion of that which is called the Italian band.

2 Religious, and fearing God with all his houſe, ‖ doing many almes-deeds to the people, And alwayes praying to God,

3 He ſaw in a viſion manifeſtly, about the ninth houre of the day, an Angel of God comming in unto him, and ſaying to him, Cornelius.

4 But he beholding him, taken with feare, ſaid, Who art thou Lord? and he ſaid to him, Thy prayers and thy almes-deeds are aſcended into remembrance in the ſight of God.

5 And now ſend men into Ioppe, and call hither one Simon that is ſurnamed Peter.

6 He lodgeth with one Simon a Tanner, whoſe houſe is by the ſea ſide; he will tell thee what thou muſt doe.

7 And when the Angel was departed that ſpake to him, he called two of his houſehold, and a ſouldier that feared our Lord, of them that were under him.

THere was a certain man in Ceſarea, called Cornelius, a captaine of the band, called the Italian band;

2 A devout man, and one that feared God with all his houſhold, which gave much almes to the people, and prayed God alway.

3 The ſame ſaw by a viſion evidently, about the ninth houre of the day, an Angel of God comming in to him, and ſaying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and ſaid, What is it Lord? And he ſaid unto him, Thy prayers and thine almes are come up into remembrance before God.

5 And now ſend men to Ioppa, and call for one Simon, whoſe ſirname is Peter.

6 He lodgeth with one Simon a Tanner, whoſe houſe is by the ſea ſide: He ſhall tell thee what thou oughteſt to doe.

7 And when the Angel which ſpake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his houſhold ſervants, and a devout ſouldier of them that waited on him.

8 To whom when he had told all, he ſent them unto Ioppe.

9 And the next day whiles they were going on their journey, and drawing nigh to the citie, Peter went up into the higher parts, ‖ to pray about the ſixt houre.

10 And being hungry, he was deſirous to take ſomewhat. And as they were preparing, there fell upon him an exceſſe of mind:

11 And he ſaw the heaven opened, and a certaine veſſell deſcending, as it were a great linnen ſheete with foure corners let downe from heaven to the earth,

12 Wherein were all foure-footed beaſts, and that creepe on the earth, and foules of the aire.

13 And there came a voice to him, Ariſe Peter: kill, and eate.

14 But Peter ſaid, God forbid, Lord: for I did never eate any common and uncleane thing.

15 And ‡ a voice came to him againe the ſecond time, That which God hath purified, doe not thou call common.

16 And this was done thrice; and forthwith the veſſell was taken up againe into heaven.

17 And whiles Peter doubted within himſelfe, what the viſion ſhould be that he had ſeene, behold the men that were ſent from Cornelius, inquiring for Simons houſe, ſtood at the gate.

18 And when they had called, they asked, if Simon that is ſirnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 And as Peter was thinking of the viſion, the Spirit ſaid to him, Behold three men doe ſeeke thee.

20 Ariſe therefore, and get thee downe, and goe with them, doubting nothing: for I have ſent them.

21 And Peter going downe to the men, ſaid, behold I am he whom you ſeeke: what is the cauſe, for the which you are come?

22 Who ſaid, Cornelius the Centurion, a juſt man and that feareth God, and having teſtimony of all the nation of the Iewes, received an anſwer of an holy Angel to ſend for thee into his houſe, and to heare words of thee.

23 Therefore bringing them in, he lodged them, And the day following he aroſe and went with them: and certaine of the brethren of Ioppe accompanied him.

24 And on the morrow he entred into Cæſarea. And Cornelius expected them, having called together his kinne, and ſpeciall friends.

25 And it came to paſſe, When Peter was come in, Cornelius came to meete him, and falling at his feete ‖ adored.

26 But Peter lifted him up ſaying, Ariſe, my ſelfe alſo am a man.

8 And told them all the matter, and ſent them to Ioppa.

9 On the morrow as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, Peter went up into the higheſt part of the houſe to pray, about the ſixth houre.

10 And when he waxed hungry, he would have eaten: but while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 And he ſeeth heaven opened, and a certaine veſſell come downe unto him, as it had bin a great ſheet, knit at the foure corners, and let downe to the earth:

12 Wherein were all manner of foure footed beaſts of the earth, and wilde beaſts, and ſuch as creepe, and foules of the ayre.

13 And there came a voyce to him, Riſe, Peter: kill, and eate.

14 But Peter ſaid, not ſo, Lord: for I have never eaten any thing that is common or uncleane.

15 And the voice ſpake unto him againe the ſecond time, What God hath cleanſed, that † call not thou common.

† Or, doe not thou pollute.

16 This was done thriſe: and the veſſell was received up againe into heaven.

17 Now while Peter doubted in himſelfe what this viſion which hee had ſeene ſhould meane: behold, the men which were ſent from Cornelius, had made enquirance for Simons houſe, and ſtood before the doore, 18 And called; and asked whether Simon, which was ſirnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 While Peter thought on the viſion, the ſpirit ſaid unto him, Behold, three men ſeeke thee.

20 Ariſe therefore, and get thee downe, and goe with them, doubting nothing: for I have ſent them.

21 Then Peter went downe to the men which were ſent unto him from Cornelius, and ſaid, Behold, I am he whom ye ſeeke: what is the cauſe wherefore ye are come?

22 And they ſayd, Cornelius the Captaine, a juſt man, and one that feareth God, and of good report among all the people of the Iewes, was warned by an holy Angel, to ſend for thee into his houſe, and to heare wordes of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them: And on the morow Peter went away with them, and certaine brethren from Ioppa accompanied him.

24 And the third day after, entred they into Cæſarea: and Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinſmen and ſpeciall friends.

25 And it came to paſſe as Peter came in, Cornelius met him, and fell downe at his feete, and worſhipped him.

26 But Peter tooke him up, ſaying, Stand up, I my ſelfe alſo am a man.

27 [illegible] found many that were come together.

28 And he ſaid to them, You know how [illegible] it is for a man that is a Iewe, to joine, or to approach unto a ſtranger: but God hath ſhewed to me, to call no man common or uncleane.

29 For the which cauſe, making no doubt, I came when I was ſent for, I demand therefore, for what cauſe you have ſent for me?

30 And Cornelius ſaid, Foure daies ſince, untill this houre, I was [c] praying the ninth houre in mine houſe, & behold ‡ a man ſtood before me in white apparell.

c At the time of prayer ſpecially God ſendeth men comfortable viſitations.
c In the Greek faſting and praying.

31 And ſaid: Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thy almes-deedes are in memorie in the ſight of God.

32 Send therefore to Ioppe, and call hither Simon that is ſirnamed Peter: he lodgeth in the houſe of Simon a tanner by the ſea ſide.

33 Immediatelie therefore I ſent to thee: and thou haſt done well in comming. Now therefore all we are preſent in thy ſight, to heare all things whatſoever are commanded thee of the Lord.

34 And Peter opening his mouth, ſaid, In verie deed I perceive, that God is not an accepter of perſons.

44 As Peter was yet ſpeaking theſe words, the holy Ghoſt fell upon all that heard the word.

27 [illegible]

28 [illegible] that it is an unlawfull thing for a man that is a Iew, to companie or come unto one of another nation: but God hath ſhewed me, that I ſhould not call any man common or uncleane.

29 Therefore came I unto you without delay, as ſoone as I was ſent for. I aske therefore for what intent ye have ſent for me?

30 And Cornelius ſaid, Foure daies agoe untill this houre I was faſting, and at the ninth houre I prayed in my houſe, and behold, a man ſtood before me in bright clothing, Rhem. 2 15. Fvlk. 2 Before this time God uttered as much to Paule, namely at the time of his conversion, as he testifieth, Acts 26, 17. and 18.

Rhem. 3 30. A man stood.] Note these apparitions and visions to S. Peter, Cornelius, and others, in the Scriptures very often, against the incredulity of our heretikes, that will beleeve neither vision nor miracle, not expressed in Scripture: these being beleeved of Christian men even before they were written.

Fvlk. 3 Peter was not bound to beleeve the report of the vision of Cornelius, before he was admonished by vision and revelation himselfe. But the doctrine revealed in the Scriptures concerning the calling of the Gentiles, he should have acknowledged before his vision. If we see any miracle or heare it reported by men of as good credite as Peter was, we will beleeve it, though it be not written: but if it tend to maintaine another Gospel then that which is set forth in the Scriptures, we will not be moved by Peter nor Paule, nor any Angel, to leave the truth knowne for any miracles, Gal. 1.

Fvlk. 4 Such as beleeve onely (as Simon Magus did) and doe not feare God, nor worke righteousnesse, are nothing acceptable to God. But such as feare God and worke righteousnesse, are accepted of God, not for their works, but for their faith onely, Rom. 3. 28. Ephes. 2. 8.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. X.

Rhem. 5 2 Doing many almes deeds.] He knew God creator of all, but that his omnipotent Sonne was incarnate he knew not: and in that faith he made prayers and gave almes which pleased God, and by well doing he deserved to know God perfectly, to beleeve the mysterie of the Incarnation, and to come to the Sacrament of Baptisme. So saith venerable Bede out of S. Gregorie. And S. Augustin thus, li. 1. de Bapt. c. 8. Because whatsoever goodnesse he had in prayers and almes, the same could not profit him unlesse he were by the hand of Christian Societie and peace, incorporated to the Church, he is bidden to send unto Peter, that by him he may learne Christ, by him he may be baptized, &c. *Whereby it appeareth that such workes as are done before justification, though they suffice not to salvation, yet be acceptable preparatives to the grace of justification, and such as moove God to mercy; as it might appeare also by Gods like provident mercifulnesse * to the Eunuch; though all such workes preparative come of grace also: otherwise they could never deserve at Gods hand of congruity, or any otherwise toward justification.*

Bed. in hunc locum. Good workes before faith, are preparatives to the same, not properly meritorious. Acts 8.

Fvlk. 5 Whatsoever is not of faith, is sinne, Without which it is impossible to please God, Rom. 14. 23. Hebr. 11. 6. Therefore it is certain, that Cornelius had faith, as a true Proselyte in the Messias to come, although he knew not that he was come, and so saith Beda. Therefore this place prooveth not that good workes before faith are preparatives to it; for no workes are good, but such as are done in faith. And seeing you affirme, that workes before faith, are not meritorious, you falsifie Beda, and slander Gregory, by translating the Verbe promeruit, he deserved, which is commonly used of the Fathers, to obtaine without respect of merite or desert. But that the Reader may see how impudently you cite this place, to proove that good workes are preparatives to faith, I will set downe his whole discourse upon this text. Non virtutibus ad fidem, sed fide pertingitur ad virtutes, ut beatus Gregorius exponit, &c. Men attaine not to faith by vertues, but to vertues by faith, as S. Gregory expoundeth it. For Cornelius (saith he) whose almes before baptisme, as the Angel witnesseth, are praised, came not by workes to faith, but by faith to workes. For if he had not beleeved the true God before baptisme, unto whom did he pray? or how did Almighty God heare him, if he prayed not to be perfected in good things by him? Therefore he knew God the creator of all things, but that his Almighty Sonne was incarnate, he knew not. He had faith, whose prayers and almes could please God. And by good action he obtained to know God perfectly, and to beleeve the mysterie of the Incarnation of his onely begotten Sonne, that he might come to the Sacrament of Baptisme. By faith therefore he came to works, but by works he was made strong in faith. S. Augustine also affirmeth, that he had faith before he beleeved in Christ, saying, He did not give almes and prayed without some faith. For how did he call upon him in whom he beleeved not. De praed. sanct. li. 1. c. 7. The same is to be said of the Eunuch. And how are you not ashamed to say, That good workes before faith, are preparatives to the same, When S. Augustine sayth, Faith goeth before, that good workes may follow, neither are there any good workes, but those that follow faith going before. In Psa. 67. Where also he saith, that the ungodly man is justified by faith without the merites of good workes.

No good workes but of faith.

Rhem. 6 9 To pray about the Sixt houre.] The houre is specified, for that there were certaine appointed times of prayer used in the Law, which devout persons, according to the publike service in the Temple, observed also privatly: and which the Apostles and holy Church afterward both kept and increased. Whereof thus writeth S. Cyprian very notably. In celebrating their prayers, we find that the three children with Daniel observed the third, sixt, and ninth houre, as in Sacrament (or mysterie) of the holy Trinity, &c. And a little after, Which spaces of houres the worshippers of God spiritually (or mystically) determining long since, observed set times to pray: and afterward the thing became came manifest, that it was for Sacrament (or mysterie) that the [illegible] prayed. For at the third houre the holy Ghost descended upon the Apostles, fulfilling the grace of our Lords promise, and at the sixt houre Peter going up [illegible] be [illegible] at the [illegible] with his bloud. But to us (deerely beloved) besides the seasons observed of old, [illegible]; for we must pray in the morning early, that the Resurrection of our Lord may be celebrated by Morning prayer: as of old the holy Ghost designed in the Psalmes, saying, In the morning early will I stand up to thee, early in the morning thou shalt heare my voice. Toward the Evening also when the Sunne departeth, and the day endeth, we must of necessity pray againe.

S. Hierom also writing of Daniels praying three times in a day, saith: There are three times, wherein we must bow our knees to God. The third, the sixt, and the ninth houre the Ecclesiasticall tradition doth well understand. Moreover, at the third houre the holy Ghost descended upon the Apostles? at the sixt Peter went up into a higher chamber to pray; at the ninth, * Peter and Iohn went to the Temple. Againe, writing to Eustochium a virgine and Nunne, epist. 22. c. 16. Though the Apostle bid us pray alwaies, and to holy persons their very sleepe is prayer: yet we must have distinct houres of prayer, that if perhaps we be otherwise occupied, the very time may admonish us of our office or dutie. The third, sixt, ninth houre, morning early, and the evening, no man can be ignorant of. And to Demetrias ep. 8. c. 8. that in the Psalmes and prayer she must keepe alwaies the third, sixt, ninth houre, evening, midnight, and morning. He hath the like ep. 7. c. 5. And ep. 27. c. 10.) he telleth how Paula the holy abbesse with her religious Nunnes sang the Psalter in order, in the morning, at the third, sixt, ninth houre, evening, midnight; by midnight meaning the time of Mattins (therefore called Nocturnes) agreeable to Saint Cyprian de Orat. Do. num. 15. and by the morning, the first houre called Prime: all correspondent to the times and houres of Christs Passion, as in S. Matthew is noted c. 26. 27. By all which we see, how agreeable the use of the Churches service is even at this time to the Scriptures and Primitive Church: and how wicked the Puritan Calvinists be, that count all such order and set seasons of prayer, superstition: and lastly, how insufficient and unlike the new pretended Church-service of England is to the primitive use, which hath no such houres of night or day, saving a little imitation of the old Mattins and Evensong, and that in schisme and heresie, and therefore not only unprofitable, but also damnable.

Dan. 6. Acts 3.

Fvlk. 6 No man denieth but set times of prayers, both publike and private, and set formes also are very convenient. But the Popish service, hath nothing but the names of these houres, and not the times themselves observed in their prayers, which are all finished in the forenoone, when they are said or sung (for they are not used but at certaine solemne times) whereas the sixt houre is the time of high noone, the ninth houre, is the third houre before the Sunne set.

Canonicall houres.

Our Church Service, having but two times appointed for publike prayers, is not to be misliked for that, seeing there is no necessity of more times prescribed in the Scriptures. Yet privately all godly persons do observe more times of prayers, as the morning at their rising up, at noone when they take their repast, likewise at night at their repast, and when they goe to their rest. And these prayers both publike and private, are made in the true faith of Iesus Christ, and in the unity of his Catholike Church.

Rhem. 7. 25. Adored.] S. Chrysostome, ho. 21. in Acts, thinketh Peter *refused this adoration of humility onely; because every falling downe to the ground for worship sake, is not divine worship or due onely to God, * the word of Adoration and prostration being commonly used in the Scriptures toward men. But* S. Hierom adu. Vigil. cap. 3. to. 2. rather thinketh that Cornelius by error of Gentility, and of Peters person, did goe about to adore him with divine honour, and therefore was lifted up by the Apostle, adding that he was but a man.

* προσκυνεῖν. Adoration of creatures.

Fvlk. 7 The Pope refuseth not, but requireth greater adoration of the greatest Princes, so well he followeth Peters steps. Chrysostome saith, Hoc faciens, &c. This doing he shewed his humility, and taught other, and giveth God thankes, and declareth that although he was commanded, yet he was very ready of himselfe. What then saith Peter, Arise, for I also am a man. Thou seest how above other men he teacheth them to thinke no great matter of him, or to have no great opinion of him. The first words are of Cornelius shewing humility, the latter of Peter, teaching that men may not thinke too highly of him: Peter said, I am a man. The Pope can admit other to say to him, Nec Deus es nec homo, quasi neuter es inter utrumque. Thou art neither God nor man, but as it were a neuter betweene both. But Chrysostomes opinion pleaseth you not so well, as Hieroms adu. Vigilan. Where either you understand not Hierom aright, or else Hierom doth injury to Cornelius, to charge him with errour of Gentility, and such grosse ignorance, that he thought Peter was God. Of whom what he was, he was instructed by God in a vision. But his errour was, that he thought religious honour to be due to Peter, which Peter acknowledgeth to be due onely to God, and to no man. For civill adoration could not be prohibited by this reason, that Peter was a man, for it is due to men, and in some measure was due to Peter. Therefore it was religious worship, such as Papists attribute to Saints, that Peter refused. Athan. cont. Arr. lib. 2. Si Christus ut gloria excellens adoraretur, quicunque praestarent & excellerent, ab inferioribus essent adorandi. Hoc autem non fit. Nec res ulla creata rem creatam adorat, sed servus Dominum, & quae creata sunt adorant Deum. Petrus quidem Apostolus, Cornelium volentem se adorare prohibet, ego, inquiens, homo sum. Euthym. panopl. par. tit. 11. S. Basil citeth this text to proove that no Christian man must admit immoderate honour, but reproove them that give it. ascet. cap. 18.

The Popes pride. Religious and civill honour.

Rhem. 8. 40 Gave him.] Christ did not utter his Resurrection and other mysteries to all at once, and immediatly to the vulgar: but to a few chosen men that should be the governours of the rest; instructing us thereby to take our faith and all necessary things of salvation, at the hands of our Superiours.

Fvlk. 8. Christ teacheth us to receive instruction unto faith, and unto all things necessary to salvation at the hands of his chosen Ministers, but not to take faith it selfe at mens hand, nor to take any instruction of our Superiours without examining the same by the word of God, but to search the Scriptures, as the Berrhoeans did. Acts 17. 11.

The authority of Gods Word.

Rhem. 9. 47 Baptized, which have received.] Such may be the grace of God sometimes toward men, and their charity and contrition so great, that they may have remission, justification, and sanctification before the externall Sacrament of Baptisme Confirmation, or Penance be received, as we see in this example, where at Peters Preaching they all receive the holy Ghost before any Sacrament; but in the same we learne one necessary lesson, that such notwithstanding must needs receive the Sacraments appointed by Christ, which whosoever contemneth, can never be justified. Aug. super Levit. q. 84. tom. 4.

They that are justified before, must not omit the Sacraments.

Fvlk. 9. The seale is not unprofitable which is of Gods appointment, but the Sacraments of Popish confirmation and penance are not of Christs institution, nor mentioned in S. Augustine in the place which you cite. And if confirmation be a Sacrament of necessity, (as now a dayes you teach) why did not Peter aswell confirme them, as he commanded them to be baptized?

The Christians [illegible] 4 [illegible] 27 with [illegible]

1 The Christians acknowledged not Peter to be Pope: for no man may [illegible] him, if he carrie innumerable soules to hell with him, by his owne Canon. Distinct. 40. cap. Si Papa. [illegible]

AND the Apostles and brethren that were in Iewrie, heard that the Gentiles alſo received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Hieruſalem, they that were of the Circumciſion reaſoned againſt him, ſaying, 3 Why didſt thou enter in to men uncircumciſed, and didſt eat with them?

4 But Peter beganne and declared to them the order, ſaying:

Act. 10, 9. 5 * I was in the citie of Ioppe praying, and I ſaw in an exceſſe of minde a viſion, a certaine veſſell deſcending as it were a great ſheete with foure corners let downe from heaven, and it came even unto me.

6 Into which I looking conſidered, and ſaw foure footed beaſts of the earth, and cattell, and ſuch as creepe, and foules of the ayre.

7 And I heard alſo a voice ſaying to me, Ariſe Peter, kill and eate, 8 And I ſaid, Not ſo Lord: for common or uncleane thing never entred into my mouth.

9 And a voice anſwered the ſecond time from heaven: That which God made cleane, doe not thou call common.

10 And this was done thrice: and all were taken up againe into heaven.

11 And behold, three men immediately were come to the houſe wherein I was, ſent to me from Cæſarea.

12 And the ſpirit ſaid to me, that I ſhould goe with them, doubting nothing. And there came with me theſe ſixe brethren alſo: and we went into the mans houſe.

13 And he told us, how he had ſeene an Angel in his houſe, ſtanding, and ſaying to him, ſend to Ioppe, and call hither Simon that is ſirnamed Peter, 14 Who ſhal ſpeake to thee words wherein thou ſhalt be ſaved and all thy houſe.

15 And when I had begun to ſpeake, the holy Ghoſt fell upon them, as upon us alſo in the beginning.

Acts 1. 5. 16 And I remembred the word of our Lord, according as he ſaid, Iohn indeed baptized with water, but you ſhall be baptized with the holy Ghoſt.

17 If therefore God hath given them the ſame grace, as to us alſo that beleeved in our Lord IESVS CHRIST: who was I that might prohibit God?

18 Having heard theſe things, they ‖held their peace: and glorified God, ſaying, God then to the Gentiles alſo hath given * repentance unto life.

*Their Latine is Pœnitentia.

Acts 8, 1. 19 And they truely that had beene diſperſed by the tribulation that was made under Steven, walked throughout unto Phœnice and Cipres and Antioch, ſpeaking the word to none, but to the Iewes onely.

20 But certaine of them were men of Cypres and Cyrene, who when they were entred into Antioch, ſpake to the Greekes, preaching our Lord IESVS.

The Epiſtle upon S. Barnabees day. Iun. 11.

21 And the hand of our Lord was with them, and a great number of beleevers was converted to our Lord.

Acts 4, 36. 22 And the report came to the eares of the Church that was at Hieruſalem, touching theſe things: and they ſent *Barnabas as farre as Antioch.

23 Who when he was come, and ſaw the grace of God, rejoiced: and he exhorted all with purpoſe of heart to continue in our Lord:

24 Becauſe he was a good man, and full of the holy Ghoſt, and faith. And a great ‖multitude was added to our Lord.

Acts 9, 30. 25 And he went forth to *Tarſus, to ſeeke Saule:

26 Whom when he had found, hee brought him to Antioch. And they converſed there in the Church a whole yeare: and they taught a great multitude, ſo that the Diſciples were at Antioch firſt named ‖CHRISTIANS.

The name of CHRISTIANS.

27 And in theſe daies there came Prophets from Hieruſalem to Antioch, 28 And one of them riſing, named Agabus, did by the Spirit ſignifie a great famine that ſhould be in the whole world, which fell under Claudius.

29 And the Diſciples according as each man had, purpoſed every one to ſend, for to ſerve the brethren that dwelt in Iurie:

30 Which alſo they did, ſending to the Ancients by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

AND the Apoſtles and brethren that were in Iurie, heard that the heathen had alſo received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Hieruſalem, they that were of the circumciſion contended againſt him,

3 Saying, thou wenteſt in to men uncircumciſed, and diddeſt eat with them.

4 But Peter rehearſed the matter from the beginning and expounded it by order unto them ſaying,

5 I was in the citie of Ioppa praying, and in a trance I ſaw a viſion, a certaine veſſell deſcend, as it had beene a great ſheete, let downe, from heaven by foure corners, and it came even unto me.

6 Upon the which when I had faſtened mine eies, I conſidered, and ſaw foure footed beaſts of the earth, and wild beaſts, and ſuch as creepe, and foules of the aire.

7 And I heard a voice ſaying unto me, Ariſe Peter, ſlay, and eat.

8 But I ſaid, Not ſo, Lord: for nothing common or uncleane hath at any time entred into my mouth.

9 But the voice anſwered me againe from heaven, Doe not thou make them common which God hath cleanſed.

10 And this was done three times: and all were taken up againe into heaven.

11 And behold immediately there were three men already come unto the houſe where I was, ſent from Cæſarea unto me.

12 And the ſpirit ſaid unto me, that I ſhould goe with them, nothing doubting: Moreover, theſe ſixe brethren accompanied me, and we entred into the mans houſe:

13 And he ſhewed us how he had ſeene an Angel in his houſe, which ſtood and ſaid unto him, ſend men to Ioppa, and call for Simon, whoſe ſirname is Peter:

14 He ſhall tell thee words whereby both thou, and all thy houſe ſhall be ſaved.

*15 And as I beganne to ſpeake the holy Ghoſt fell on them, * as he did on us at the beginning.* Acts 2. 4.

*16 Then remembred I the word of the Lord, how that he ſaid, * Iohn baptized with water: but ye ſhall be baptiſed with the holy Ghoſt.* Iohn 1. 17. acts 1. 5.

17 For aſmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us when we beleeved on the Lord Ieſus Chriſt: what was I that I ſhould have withſtood God?

18 When they heard theſe things, they held their peace, & glorified God, ſaying, Then hath God alſo to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life,

*19 * They alſo which were ſcattered abroad through the affliction that aroſe about Steven, walked throughout unto Phœnice, and Cypres, and Antioch, preaching the word to no man, but unto the Iewes onely,*

20 And ſome of them were men of Cypres and Cyrene, which when they were come to Antioch, ſpake unto the Greekes, and preached the Lord Ieſus.

21 And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number beleeved, and turned unto the Lord.

22 Then tidings of theſe things came unto the eares of the Church which was in Hieruſalem: and they ſent forth Barnabas that he ſhould goe unto Antioch.

23 Which when he came, and had ſeene the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all that with purpoſe of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and full of the holy Ghoſt, and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then departed Barnabas to Tarſus, for to ſeeke Saule.

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to paſſe, that a whole year they had their converſation with the Church there, and taught much people: inſomuch that the diſciples of Antioch were the firſt that were called Chriſtians.

27 And in thoſe daies came Prophets from Hieruſalem unto Antioch.

28 And there ſtood up one of them, named Agabus, and ſignified by the Spirit, that there ſhould be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to paſſe in the days of Claudius Cæſar.

29 Then the diſciples, every man according to his ability, purpoſed to ſend ſuccour unto the brethren which dwelt in Iurie.

30 Which thing they alſo did, and ſent it to the Elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XI.

RHEM. 3 24 Multitude added.] As before (c. 10.) a few, ſo now great numbers of Gentiles are adjoined alſo to the viſible Church, conſiſting before onely of Iewes. Which Church hath beene ever ſince Chriſts aſcenſion, notoriouſly ſeene and knowne: their preaching open, their Sacraments viſible, their diſcipline viſible, their heads and Governours viſible, the proviſion for their maintenance viſible, the perſecution viſible, their diſperſion viſible: the heretikes that went out from them, viſible: the joyning either of men or nations unto them, viſible: their peace and reſt after perſecutions viſible: their governours in priſon, viſible: the Church prayeth for them viſibly, their Councells viſible, their gifts and graces viſible, their name (Chriſtians) knowne to all the world, of the Proteſtants inviſible Church we heare not one word.

The Church viſible.

FVLK. 3 Underſtanding Viſible, for that which may be ſeene, there is no doubt, but all Chriſtians were alwayes viſible. But if you underſtand Viſible, for that which is ſeene and knowne to all the world, as you ſay the name of Chriſtians hath beene ever ſince Chriſts aſcenſion, it is not true, that the Church was alwayes viſible. For perſecutions have beene ſo great, that the world ſaw none of thoſe things. And therefore Diocleſian and Maximian wickedly boaſted, that they had utterly aboliſhed the ſuperſtition of Chriſt and name of Chriſtians. Inſcriptio in ſcriptio Salmantica in [illegible] Bartholomei. The like deviliſh boaſting made Nero in his time: Inſcriptio in [illegible]

The Church not alwayes viſible.

[illegible], a place in Spaine. But the Catholike Church of Christ, whereof we [illegible] members, is Ierusalem the heavenly, which is the mother of us all, and being an article of our faith, is [illegible]sible. Heb 11.1. Gal.4.26.

4 26 Christians.] This name Christian, ought to be common to all the faithfull, and other new names of Schismatikes and Sectaries must be abhorred. If thou heare (saith S. Hierome) any where, such as be said to be of Christ, not to have their names of our Lord IESVS CHRIST, but to be called after some other certaine name, as Marcionites, Valentinians, (as now also the Lutherans, Calvinists, Protestants) know thou that they belong not to the Church of Christ, but to the Synagogue of Antichrist. Lactantius also (lib. 7 Divin. instit. c.30,) saith thus, When Phrygians, or Novatians, or Valentinians, or Marcionites, or Anthropomorphites, or Arians, or any other be named, they cease to be Christians, who having lost the name of Christ, have done on the names of men. Neither can our new sectaries discharge themselves, for that they take not to themselves these names, but are forced to beare them as given by their adversaries. For, so were the names of Arrians, and the rest of old, imposed by others, and not chosen commonly of themselves: Which notwithstanding were callings that proved them to be Heretikes. And as for the name of Protestants, our men hold them well content therewith. But concerning the Heretikes turning of the argument against the peculiar callings of our Religious, as Dominicans, Franciscans, Iesuits, Thomists, or such like, it is nothing, except they could prove, that the Orders and persons so named, were of divers faithe and sects, or differed in any necessary point of religion, or were not all of one Christian name and communion: and it is as ridiculous, as if it were objected, that some be Ciceronians, some Plinians, some good Augustine *men, some Hieronymians, some Oxford men, some Cambridge men, and (which is most like) some * Rechabites, some * Nazarites.*

Hieron. cont. Lucif. c.7. in fine.

Names of Schismes & heresies.

Protestants. Divers religious orders are not divers sects.

Ierem. 35. Num. 6.

Neither doth their objection, that we be called Papists, helpe or excuse them in their new names: for, besides that it is by them scornefully invented (as the name Homousians was of the Arrians) this name is not of any one man B. of Rome, or elsewhere, knowne to be the author of any schisme or sect, as their callings be: but it is of a whole state and order of Governours, and that of the chiefe Governours, to whom we are bound to cleave in religion, and to obey in all things. So to be a Papist, is to be a Christian man, a child of the Church, and subject to Christs Vicar. And therfore against such impudent Sectaries as compare the faithfull for following the Pope, to the diversity of Heretikes bearing the names of new Masters, let us ever have in readinesse this saying of S. Hierom to Pope Damasus, Vitalis I know not, Meletius I refuse, I know not Paulinus, Whosoever gathereth not with thee, scattereth: that is to say, Whosoever is not Christs, is Antichrists. And againe, If any man joyne with Peters chaire, he is mine.

Papists, Catholikes, and true Christians, all one.

Not to be with the Pope, is to be with Antichrist.

To. 2. ep. 57. & ep. 58. ad Damasum.

We must here further observe that this name, Christian, given to all beleevers and to the whole Church, was specially taken to distinguish them from the Iewes and Heathens which beleeved not at all in Christ: and the same now severeth and maketh knowne all Christian men from Turkes and others that hold not of Christ at all. But when Heretikes began to rise from among the Christians, who professed Christs name, and sundry Articles of faith as true beleevers doe, the name Christian was too common to sever the Heretikes from true faithfull men: and thereupon the Apostles by the holy Ghost imposed this name Catholike upon the beleevers which in all points were obedient to the Churches doctrine. When heresies were risen (saith S Pacianus ep. ad Symphorianum) and endevored by divers names to teare the dove of God and Queene, and to rent her in pieces, the Apostolicall people required their surname, whereby the incorrupt people might be distinguished, &c. and so those that before were called Christians, are now surnamed also Catholikes. Christian is my name, saith he, Catholike my surname. And this word, Catholike, is the proper note whereby the holy Apostles in their Creed taught us to discerne the true Church from the false hereticall congregation of what sort soever. And not onely the meaning of the word, which signifieth universality of times, places, and persons, but the very name and word it selfe, by Gods providence alwayes, and onely appropriated to the true beleevers, and (though sometimes at the beginning of sects challenged) yet never obtained by heretikes, giveth so plaine a marke and evidence, that S. Augustine said, In the lap of the Church the very name of Catholike keepeth me, cont. ep. fund. c.4. And againe, tract. 32. in Io. We receive the holy Ghost if we love the Church, if we be joyned together by charity, if we rejoyce in the Catholike name and faith. And againe, de ver. rel. c.7. to 1. We must hold the communion of that Church which is named Catholike, not only of her owne, but also of all her enemies; for, will they nill they, the Heretikes also and Schismatikes themselves, when they speake not with their owne fellowes but with strangers, call the Catholike Church nothing else but the Catholike Church: for they could not be understood, unlesse they discerne it by this name, wherewith she is called of all the world. The Heretikes when they see themselves prevented of this name Catholike, then they plainely reject it, and deride the name, as the Donatists did, calling it an humane forgerie or fiction, which S. Augustine calleth words of blasphemy, li. 1. c. 33. cont. Gaudent. And some Heretikes of this time call them scornefully, cartholikes, and cacolikes. Another calleth it, the most vaine terme Catholike. Beza in praef. no. Test. an. 1565. Another calleth the Catholike religion, a Catholike Apostasie or defection, *Humfrey in vit. Iuel. pag. 213. Yea, and some have taken the word out of the Creed, * putting* Christian for it. But against these good fellowes let us follow that which S. Augustine de util. Cred. c. 8. to. 6. giveth as a rule to direct a man the right and sure way from the diversity and doubtfulnesse of all errour, saying, If after these troubles of minde thou seeme to thy selfe sufficiently tossed and vexed, and wilt have an end of these molestations, follow the way of Catholike discipline, which from Christ himselfe by the Apostles hath proceeded even unto us, and shall proceed from hence to the posterity. See the Annot. 1 Tim. 3. c. 15.

In the Catechisme of the Lutherans.

FVLK. 4. We acknowledge no names but of Christian Catholikes. The names of Calvinists, and Lutherans, &c. are but slanders by you invented, as the names of Athanasians, Alexandrians, Homousians, were by the Arrian Heretikes. Neither doe we hold our selves content with the name of Protestants, though it be not so odious, as to be called of any man, when we are the people of God and Christ. Neither did the onely calling of the old heretikes proove them to be heretikes, but their pernicious opinions contrary to the holy Scriptures. For Athanasians Homousians, &c. were true Catholikes, though they were nicknamed by heretikes. The names of Dominicans, Franciscans, Iesuites, and such like, prooveth them to be sectaries, because they be of their owne chusing, though they all maintaine one grand heresie of Popery: having also there divers opinions among them, and ech sect envying other, and swelling against the other. The name of Papists you doe not greatly mislike, because it is not the name of any one man. We might answere you the like of the name of Protestants. But divers heretikes, have the name of their heresie, not of their author, as Patripassians, Collyridians, Apostolici, Cathari, &c. But the name of Papists, is taken both of the authour of your heresie, and of the heresie it selfe. In the saying of Hierome, you omit that which is principall, Ego nullum primum nisi Christum sequens, &c. I following none chiefe, or first, but Christ, am joyned in communion with thy blessednesse, that is with Peters chayre. While the Bishop of Rome therefore joyned with Christ, (as then he did in the matter whereof Hierome speaketh, and in all doctrine necessary to salvation) whosoever gathered not with the Bishop of Rome scattered with Antichrist. But when Liberius Bishop of Rome, did by subscription openly professe Arrianisme, as the same Hierome testifieth in Catal. in Fortunatian. Would Hierome thinke you, or ought any Christian man to

AND at the same time Herod the king set his hands to afflict certaine of the Church.

2 And he killed Iames the brother of Iohn with the sword.

3 And seeing that it pleased the Iewes, he added to apprehend Peter also. And it was the daies of the Azymes.

4 Whom when he had apprehended, he cast into prison, delivering him to [illegible] to be kept, [illegible] to bring him forth to the people.

AT the same time Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vexe certaine of the Church.

3 And because he saw it pleased the Iews, he proceeded further, and took Peter also. (Then were the daies of Sweet bread.)

4 And when he had caught him, he put him in prison also, and delivered him to foure quaternions of souldiers to be kept, intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

5 And Peter was kept in prison, but prayer was made without ceasing of the Church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth unto the people, the same night Peter was sleeping betweene two souldiers bound with two chaines, and the keepers before the doore kept the prison.

RHEM. 7 7 Chose that by my mouth.] Though Paul were called and appointed [speci]ally to be the A[postle of] the Gentiles, yet that was S. Peters speciall priviledge by Gods owne choice, t[hat] the [illegible] Gentiles [should] be ca[lled by] his mouth, and that he first should utter to the Church that truth of the admiss[ion] of the G[entiles] [illegible] Vicar, being not wit[illegible] as his Master was) Minister Circumcisionis, [that] is, [illegible] ting all preeminence unto [illegible] in that point also.

FVLK. 7 The text saith not, that the first Gentiles were called by S. Peters mouth: and [illegible] is evident to the [illegible] S. Paul was sent to the Gentiles, even at his conversion, Act. 26. 17. Neither did he slacke the time, [illegible] preached in Arabia, and saw not Peter untill three yeeres after. All which time, it is not like [illegible] neglected his calling. Beside your owne vulgar translation saith expresly, that he spake to the G[enti]les, and disputed with the Greekes, Cap. 9. 29. before Peter was sent to Cornelius. Therefore [illegible] the Adverbe πρῶτον, in the speech of S. James, is not referred to the time of the conversion of [illegible] to the order of S. Peters speech, which was first of Gods visitation of the Gentiles in calling them to [illegible] which S. James confirmeth by authority of Scripture, and then concludeth as Peter did. Therefore you can prove no preeminence in this point granted to Peter.

RHEM. 8 13 James.] S. James because he was an Apostle and also a Bishop of Hierusalem gave his sentence next; for [illegible] speech interposed of S.Paul and S.Barnabas, was but for their better information in the decision of the matter, and for confirmation of S. Peters sentence, though they being Apostles and Bishops, had voyces in the Councell also: as many moe had, though their sentences be not here reported. And where S. James in his speech saith, I judge, it is not meant that he gave the principall definitive sentence: for he (as all the rest) followed and allowed the sentence of S. Peter, as it is plaine in the text, the whole assembly for reverence of his person, and approbation of his sentence, holding their peace. All the multitude (saith S.Hierome) held their peace, and into his sentence James the Apostle and all the Priests did passe together. For [though] S. James did particularise certaine points incident to the question debated, as of eating strangled meats, &c. yet the proper controversie for which the Councell assembled, was, Whether the Gentiles converted were bound to observe the Law of Moses; and it was concluded, that they were not bound, nor ought not to be charged with Moses Law or the Sacraments and Ceremonies of the same; this is the substance and principall purpose of this Councels decree, which doth binde for ever: and Peter (saith S.Hierome in the same place) was Prince or Author of this decree; the matter of fornication and Idolathytes being but incident to the question or resolution, and the forbidding of eating strangled and blood, but a temporall prohibition, which by the consent of the Church or otherwise afterward was abrogated, the Church of God having the true sense of difference of times, places, and persons, when and how farre such things are to be observed, and when not. And in such things as these, and in other like which according to their circumstances require alteration, it is, that S. Augustine saith, l.2.de bapt.c.3.tom.7. The former generall or plenary Councels may be amended by the latter.

FVLK. 8 Your whole drift in this place, is to deny the primacie of order unto James, whom all antiquity except Hierome, allowed to be principall person in this Councell, as he was at this time, the Bishop or chiefe Overseer of the Church at Hierusalem, and therefore is named before Peter by Paul, Gal. 2.9. Clements Dispositions lib. 6 cited by Eusebius, translatione Ruffini, saith, that James was constituted Bishop of the Apostles. Chrys. upon this place saith, Et vide post Petrum Paulus loquitur, &c. And see that after Peter Paul doth speake, and no man stoppeth his mouth, James heareth it, and doth not goe backe, to him was the principality or chiefe place committed. Againe he saith of James, Ab initio quidem, &c. At the beginning truly, Peter spake more vehemently, but this man more mildly. So they must alwayes do that are in great authority, that permit things burdenous to other men, and they themselves deale more gently, in Act.hom. 33. Thus you see he ascribeth plainely the chiefe place and power to James. Hierome indeed defending S. Peters simulation against S. Paul, endeavoureth to prove out of this place, that Peter was not ignorant of the truth, whereof he had beene a principall setter forth in the Councell. But the matter is so evident by the circumstances of the text, and the judgement of ancient writers, that the Author Opusculi tripartiti cont. 10. 2. c. 9. saith, that when James gave sentence, it was not yet fully ordained concerning the preeminence of Peter above the rest of the Apostles, and of the fulnesse of his power above all Churches. Finally, where S. Augustine saith, that the former generall Councels may be amended or corrected by the latter, he speaketh not of alteration in matters of indifferencie, for then he would not have used the word amending or correcting, but some other word, that signifieth altering or changing: for amending and correcting, is of errours, and so the words going before and after, doe make manifest that he meaneth. For before he saith, that onely the Canonicall Scriptures have soveraigne authority, so that it is not lawfull to doubt, whether any thing written in them be true or right, but that all latter writings of Bishops may be lawfully reprehended, either by other learned writings, or by Councels, if they have erred from truth, and that provinciall Councels must give place to generall Councels, and that the former generall Councels may be corrected by the latter, Cum aliquo experimento, &c. When by any triall of matters, that is opened which before was shut, and that is knowne which before was hidden: so that he speaketh manifestly of correction of errours, not alteration of things indifferent, writing against the Donatists, that maintained the authority of the Councell of Carthage, holden by S. Cyprian against the truth.

RHEM. 9 10 Fornication.] Fornication and contamination with idols, are of themselves mortall sinnes, and therefore can never be lawfull: yet because the Gentiles by custome were prone to both; and of fornication made very small account, count, it pleased the holy Ghost to forbid both specially. Concerning the other points of abstaining from blood and stifled meats, they were things of their owne nature indifferent, in which for a time the Iewes were to be [illegible], and the Gentiles to be a little time exercised to obedience. By which we may see the great authority of Gods Church and Councels which may command for ever, or for a time, such things as be fit for the state of times and nations, without any expresse Scriptures at all, and so by commaundement make things necessary that were before indifferent.

The Churches authority in making decrees.

9 The Church hath no authority to command any thing necessary to salvation, but that which may be proved undoubtedly out of the holy Scripture: otherwise in matters of indifferencie, we yeeld to your observation. To abstaine from blood and strangled, was not necessary to salvation, but for charity to beare with the weaknesse of the Iewes for a season.

The authority of the Church and of the Scriptures.

24 Going forth from us.] A proper description or note of heretickes, schismatikes, and seditious teachers, to goe out from their spirituall Pastors and Governours, and to teach without their commission and approbation, to disquiet the Catholike people with multitude of words and sweet speeches, and finally to overthrow their soules.

Going out, a mark of heretikes.

10 28 To the holy Ghost and to us.] By this, first we note, that it is not such a fault as the heretikes would make it in the sight of the simple, or any incongruity at all, to ioyne God and his creatures, as the principall cause and the secondary, in one speech, and to attribute that to both, which though diversly, yet proceedeth of both. God and you, say good people commonly: God and our Lady, Christ and S. Iohn: We confesse to God and to Peter and Paul; as * God and his Angel, To our Lord and Gideon, the sword of our Lord and of Gideon, Our Lord and Moses, Christ and his Angels, Our Lord and all Saints. ep. ad Philem. S. Paul and our Lord, 1 Thes. 1, 6. All these speeches being partly Scriptures, partly like unto the Scriptures speeches, are warranted also by this Councell, which saith boldly, and hath given the forme thereof to all other Councels lawfully called and confirmed to say the like, It hath pleased the holy Ghost and us. S Cyprin. ep. 54. num. 2. reporting the like of a Synode holden in Afrike, saith, It hath pleased us by the suggestion of the holy Ghost.

VISVM EST Spiritui sancto & nobis.

Secondly we note, that the holy Councels lawfully kept for the determination or clearing of doubts, or condemning of errours and heresies, or appeasing of schismes and troubles, or reformation of life, and such like important matters, have ever the assistance of Gods Spirit, and therefore cannot erre in their sentences and determinations concerning the same, because the holy Ghost cannot erre, from whom (as you see here) ioyntly with the Councell the resolution proceedeth.

The holy Ghost assistant in all lawfull Councels, to the worlds end, and that by Christs promise.
Ioan. 16, 13.

Thirdly we learne, that in the holy Councels specially (though otherwise and in other Tribunals of the Church it be also verified) Christs promise is fulfilled, * that the holy Ghost should suggest them and teach them all truth, and that not in the Apostles time onely, but to the worlds end; for so long shall Councels, the Church, and her Pastours have this priviledge of Gods assistance, as there be either doubts to resolve, or heretikes to condemne, or truths to be opened, or evill men to be reformed, or schismes to be appeased; for which cause S. Greg. l. 1. Ep. 24. sub fin. reverenceth the foure generall Councels (Nicen. Constantinop. Ephes. Chalced.) as the foure bookes of the holy Gospel, alluding to the number: and of the fifth also he saith that he doth reverence it alike: and so would he have done moe, if they had beene before his time, who saith of them thus, Whiles they are concluded and made by universall consent, himselfe doth he destroy, and not them, whosoever presumeth either to loose whom they binde, or to binde whom they loose.

S. Gregories reverence of generall Councels.

S. Gregorie therefore reverencing all five alike, it may be marvelled whence the heretikes have their fond difference betwixt those foure first and other latter: attributing much to them and nothing to the rest. Whereas indeed the latter can erre no more then the first foure, being holden and approved as they were, and having the holy Ghost as they had. But in those first also when a man findeth any thing against their heresies (as there be divers things) then they say plainly that they also may erre, and that the holy Ghost is not tied to mens voyces, nor to the number of sentences: Which is directly to reprove this first Councell also of the Apostles, and Christs promise of the holy Ghosts assistance to teach all truth. Yea that you may know and abhorre these heretikes throughly, heare yee what a principall Sect-master with his blasphemous mouth or pen uttereth, saying, that In the very best times such was partly the ambition of Bishops, partly their foolishnesse and ignorance, that the very blinde may easily perceive, Satan verily to have beene president of those assemblies. Good Lord deliver the people and the world from such blasphemous tongues and bookes, and give men grace to attend to the holy Scriptures and Doctours, that they may see how much, not onely S. Augustine and other Fathers attribute to all generall Councels specially, (to which they referre themselves in all doubts among themselves and in all their controversies with heretikes:) but to which even S. Paul himselfe (so specially taught by God) and others also yeelded themselves. Notorious is the saying of S. Augustine concerning S. Cyprian, who being a blessed Catholike Bishop and Martyr, yet erred about the rebaptizing of such as were Christened by heretikes. If he had lived (saith S. Augustine lib. 2. de bapt. cap. 4.) to have seene the determination of a plenary Councell, which hee saw not in his life time, hee would for his great humility and charity straightway have yeelded and preferred the generall Councell before his owne judgement and his fellow Bishops in a Provinciall Councell onely. Whereby also we learne that Provinciall Councels may erre, though many times they doe not, and being conformable to the generall Councels, or confirmed and allowed by them or the See Apostolike, their resolutions be infallible as the others are.

What the Fathers attribute to Councels, and namely S. Augustine.
Provinciall Councels.

If any here aske what need so much disputing, studie and travell in Councels to finde out and determine the truth, if the holy Ghost infallibly guide them? We answere that such is the ordinary providence of God in this case, to assist them when they doe their indevour, and use all humane meanes of industry, and not else. And so (though somewhat otherwise) God assisted the Evangelists and other writers of the holy Scriptures, that they could not erre in penning the same, but yet they did and ought to use all possible humane diligence to know and learne out the histories and truth of matters, as is plaine in the beginning of S. Lukes Gospel: else the holy Ghost would not have assisted them. Even so in this Councell of the Apostles, though they had the holy Ghost assistant, Yet the text saith, Cùm magna conquisitio fieret, When there was great disputation search and examination of the case, then Peter spake, &c. If againe it be demanded, what need is there to expect the Councels determination, if the Popes or See Apostolikes judgement be infallible and have the assistance of God also, as the Catholikes affirme? We answere, that for the Catholike and peaceable obedient children of the Church, it is a comfort to have such various meanes of determination, triall, and declaration of the truth, and that it is necessary for the recoverie of heretikes, and for the contentation of the weake, who not alwayes giving over to one mans determination, yet will either yeeld to the judgement of all the learned men and Bishops of all Nations, or else remaine desperate and condemned before God and man for ever. And as I said before, this assistance of the holy Ghost promised to Peters See, presupposeth humane meanes of searching out the truth, which the Pope alwayes hath used, and will, and must use in matters of great importance, by calling Councels, even as you see S. Peter and S. Paul themselves, and all the Apostles, though indued with the holy Ghost, yet thought it notwithstanding necessary for further triall and clearing of truth and maintenance of unitie to keepe a Councell.

Notwithstanding the holy Ghosts assistance, yet humane meanes must be used to search the truth.
Luke 1, 3.
Though the See Apostolike it self have the same assistance, yet Councels be also necessary for many causes.

Lastly it is to be noted, that as Christ & the holy Ghost be present by his promise, to all such assemblies as gather in the obedience & unity of the Church, with full mind to obey whatsoever shalbe determined, whereby the assembled though [illegible] all [illegible] Church [illegible] or [illegible] with [illegible] Catholike [illegible] in Councels, Prayers, [illegible] and [illegible]. Read [illegible] S. Cyprian [illegible] Gospel, that he would be in the midst of two or three gathered in his Name, [illegible] out of our church.

FVLK. 10 When any of Gods creatures are by him appointed to be inferiour causes or [illegible], it is no fault to ioyne them: as the sword of the Lord, and of Gideon. But where God hath not [illegible] to be ioyned with him in cause, there it is blasphemous to match them with him in effect: as when you say, God and our Lady hath holpen [illegible] to God and our Lady, our Lord and his Saints be [illegible]. These speeches are neither Scriptures, nor Scripture like, nor warranted by this Councell. Neither [illegible] the forme of the speech [illegible] to all other Councels, how lawfully soever called [illegible] the Bishop of Romes assent, except their determination may be warranted as this was by the holy Scriptures. Cyprian saith the Fathers of Africa, doe declare unto Cornelius Bishop of Rome, upon what authority of [illegible] determination [illegible], and are bold to say, It hath pleased us by the suggestion of the holy Ghost, before their Councell received confirmation of the Bishop of Rome, yea before he once heard of it. Neither [illegible] they in that Epistle, require his assent, but onely report what they had done, and for what causes, [illegible] what ground.

God [illegible]

Secondly you note, that holy Councels have ever the assistance of Gods Spirit, and therefore cannot erre, where you play the Sophisters kindly: for if it be proved that any doe erre in that point, they are not holy. But if by holy Councels you meane lawfull Councels, as you say in the margent, or as you seeme to explaine holy Councels, such as are lawfully kept for determination or clearing of doubts, &c. there is no doubt but they may erre, if they follow not the direction of Gods word, against which, in vaine they may boast of the direction of Gods Spirit. S. Cyprian, and all the Bishops of Africa, gathered a Councell as lawfull as any they did before, no doubt but of good intent for determination and clearing of a doubt that was moved among them, whether such as came from heresies, were to be baptized againe: and with a purpose to condemne errours, and heresies, and to appease schismes and troubles: yet did they erre in their sentence and determination, concerning the same doubt, and all through ignorance of the Scriptures, and not of any perverse or hereticall affection. Whereupon S. Augustine, as is before declared, doubteth not to affirme that all men and all Councels, both provinciall and generall may erre, and that the certainty of truth is to be found onely in the Canonicall Scriptures. Quis autem nesciat (saith he) sanctam Scripturam Canonicam, &c. And who can be ignorant, that the holy Canonicall Scripture, as well of the old, as of the new Testament, is contained within her certaine limits, and that it is so preferred before all latter writings of Bishops, that it cannot in any wayes be doubted or disputed of it, whether it be true, or whether it be right, whatsoever, it is certaine to be written in it: But that the writings of Bishops which have beene written, or which are now written after the Canon is confirmed, may be lawfully reprehended, both by the more wise speech, perhaps of any man that is more skilfull in that matter, and also by the more grave authority, and more learned prudence of other Bishops, and by Councels, if any thing in them perhaps have strayed from the truth. And even Councels themselves, which are gathered in every region or province, (without all doubt) must give place to the authority of generall Councels, which are gathered out of all the Christian world: And that oftentimes the former generall Councels themselves, may be corrected by the later, when by any triall of matters, that is opened which was shut, and that is knowne which was hidden, without any swelling of sacrilegious pride, without any stiffenecke of puffing arrogance, without any contention of cankred envie, with holy humility, with Catholike peace, with Christian charity. Concerning your third observation, there is no doubt but Christs promise shall be performed unto the end, but the priviledge of Gods assistance, pertaineth onely to them which follow the direction of his holy word in Councels or other sentences of the Church. For the Spirit of God, must not be sacrilegiously separated from the word of God. Therefore the determination of the foure generall Councels is to be reverenced as the foure Gospels, because it was taken out of the foure Gospels, which teach the truth of the divinity and humanity of Christ, and of the divinity of the holy Ghost: not because it was so agreed by authority of so many Bishops gathered in those Councels. Neither doe we make any such fond difference of the Councels as you dreame of, but receive the fifth, and sixth, as well as the first foure, for the matters of faith and doctrine concluded in them, agreeable to the holy Scriptures; & further we receive none. You say there be divers things in the first foure councels that you finde against our heresies, yet you are able to shew none. But we shew against you the sixth Canon of Nice Councell, declaring the Bishop of Alexandria to be equall to the Bishop of Rome, and generally every Metropolitane in his Province. We shew the 27. Canon of Chalcedon, wherein is declared the determination as well of that Councell as of the first of Constantinople, that the See of Constantinople should have equall priviledges of dignity and authority with the See of Rome. We shew the words of the Councell of Ephesus in their Epistle to Nestorius, that Peter and Iohn were of equall dignity because they were both Apostles and holy Disciples: By which words, the supremacie of the Pope pretended from Peter is overthrowne. So we shew the foure first generall Councels, all against the Popes supremacie. Likewise the fifth, confirming all that was decreed in the fourth, and in the sixth of Constantinople, Can. 36. we shew, confirming the equality of priviledges of the Bishop of Constantinople with the Bishop of Rome, according to the former determinations of the Councels of Constantinople the first, and of Chalcedon. When we say that Councels may erre, and that the holy Ghost is not tied to the voyces of men, nor to the number of sentences, you affirme, that it is directly to reprove this first Councell also of the Apostles, and Christs promise of the holy Ghost. But by what Logicke you gather this conclusion, we cannot perceive, except it be thus: Councels may erre, ergo, this Councell of the Apostles did erre. Or else thus: Christ promised the holy Ghost, ergo, he tied the holy Ghost to the voyces of men, or to the number of mens sentences. If these be good conclusions, I referre me to all that have but one crumme of right reason, or naturall Logicke. That you report of Beza is a most detestable slander, for he speaketh not a word against the first generall Councels, but against the assemblies of proud and unlearned lightheaded Bishops of Greece, which lived in those best times, whereof it is manifest by the Church stories, that many of them were hereticall and blasphemous, having not the holy Ghost, but the devill himselfe to be President of their meetings. This Logicke is like the former: Beza saith, there were wicked Bishops in the best times, ergo, he blasphemeth against the first generall Councels. The father of lies and slanderers of the Saints, will welcome you for this Logicke, except you repent in time. What Augustine ascribeth to generall Councels, you heard before in his owne words: how he acknowledgeth that they may erre, because they may be amended or corrected, that something may be shut up and hidden from them, which afterward may be opened and knowne.

The [illegible] of Councels is to ſearch out [illegible], and [illegible] you ſay [illegible] God, which is [illegible] and is the truth. Ioh. 17. 17. [illegible] For your firſt reaſon [illegible] reaſon [illegible] meanes of ſearching [illegible] the Pope out of [illegible] humane meanes of ſearching [illegible] not [illegible], (as you [illegible]) becauſe you ſay: the aſſiſtance of the holy Ghoſt promiſed to Peter [illegible] ſuppoſeth [illegible] meanes, and calling of Councels is an humane meane, therefore calling of Councels is [illegible] that the Pope [illegible] not erre. Whereby it ſeemeth that you take [illegible] you to decide [illegible] hitherto beene decided [illegible] generall Councels of C[illegible] and Baſil, that the Councell is [illegible] which may erre out of the Councell, yet is it not agreed [illegible] among all Papiſts at this time. For the [illegible] hold, and ſo doe you elſwhere, that the Pope is above the Councell, and that the Councell may erre, if it be not [illegible] by the Pope. Yet the Councell of Conſtance was confirmed in that point by Ioh. 23. before his [illegible] . 2. and in the end thereof, all things concluded in that Councell. Conciliariter, that is, as in forme of a [illegible] were confirmed by Pope Martin. 5. Seſſ. 45. That Chriſt is not preſent with heretikes, and ſchiſmatikes, [illegible] of doubt: but ſeeing in many of the Synods, and Councels holden in Germany, France, Poole, England, and other places the truth hath beene concluded out of the holy Scriptures, it is certaine that Chriſt was preſent in thoſe aſſemblies by his holy Spirit, and that in ſuch things as they have determined according to the word of God, they are not to be reputed for heretikes or ſchiſmatikes, but for true Chriſtian Catholikes.

RHEM. 11 31 Rejoyced upon the Conſolation.] Straight upon the intelligence of the Councels determination, not onely the Gentiles, but even the Maſters of the former troubles and diſſenſion, were at reſt, and all tooke great comfort that the controverſie was ſo ended. And ſo ſhould all Chriſtian men doe, when they ſee the ſects of our time condemned by the like authority, and moſt grave judgement of the holy Councell of Trent. Againſt which the heretikes of our time make the like frivolous exceptions and falſe cavillations, as did the old heretikes heretofore againſt thoſe Councels that ſpecially condemned their errors. The Pope and Biſhops (ſay they) are a party, and they ought not to be our judges: they are partiall and come with prejudicate mindes to condemne us, and we accuſe them all of idolatry and other crimes, and we will be tried by Gods word onely, and we will expound it according to another rule: that is to ſay, as we liſt. So ſay they againſt this Councell, and the like ſay the Arians againſt the firſt Nicene Councell, and all ſuch like againſt thoſe Councels, namely, that condemned their hereſies. And ſo ſay all theeves againſt their correctors and puniſhers, and would both ſay and doe more againſt temporall Tribunals, Iudges, Iuſtices, and Iuries, if they had as much licence and liberty in thoſe matters, as men have now in religion.

All good Chriſtians reſt upon the determination of a generall Councell.

All heretikes make exceptions againſt the councels that condemne them.

FVLK. 11 When the Papiſts themſelves doe not acknowledge the authority of the Tridentine aſſembly, for both the Emperour and the French King proteſted againſt it, and it is not at this day received of the Popiſh Church of France, there is no reaſon that we ſhould be ſubject unto it, although we have many other arguments to oppoſe againſt it. And where you ſay in the margent, that all good Chriſtians reſt upon the determination of a generall Councell, you condemne your ſelves to be no good Chriſtians, becauſe you doe not reſt upon the determination of the generall Councels of Conſtance and Baſil, in the queſtion of the Popes ſupremacie above the Councell. You condemne the Popiſh Church of France, which accepteth not your Tridentine Chapter, for a generall Councell, in which there were ſcarce forty Biſhops, and they for the moſt part Italians and Spaniards. That all heretikes make exceptions againſt Councels that condemne them, it proveth not all to be heretikes that are condemned by Councels. The Catholikes alſo condemned by the Councels of heretikes, tooke exceptions againſt thoſe Councels. The exceptions that we make are moſt reaſonable. For it is againſt all equity that they which are parties, that are partiall, that are accuſed, ſhould be the onely Iudges. Neither could the Arians juſtly ſay ſo againſt the Nicene Councell, or other heretikes againſt the Councels that condemned them: neither can all theeves juſtly ſay ſo againſt their puniſhers. For their Iudges are never parties, ſeldome partiall, never accuſed in that offence, whereupon they ſit as Iudges. That we would be tried onely by Gods word, it is true, but that we will expound it as we liſt, it is falſe. For we will and doe by Gods grace expound it ſufficiently to confute your hereſies, according to the plaine and naturall ſenſe thereof, and in doubtfull places according to plaine places, and according to the expoſition of the moſt ancient and beſt approved Fathers of the Primitive Church, in the moſt and chiefe of the controverſies that are betweene you and us.

Authority of Councels.

RHEM. 12 39 Diſſenſion.] Such occaſions of differences fall out even among the perfect men often, without any great offence. And this their departing fell out to the great increaſe of Chriſtians. And therefore it is very ridiculouſly applied to excuſe the diſagreeing of the heretikes among themſelves, in the principall points of religion, namely, the Sacrament.

FVLK. 12 It cannot be alledged to juſtifie any diſſenſion, but to ſhew that for diſſentions ſake in matters of externall policie, and diſcipline of the Church, ſpecially, as this of the Apoſtles was, the ſubſtance of the doctrine is not to be miſliked, nor the Church or teachers thereof to be utterly rejected: it is rightly alledged. The diſſenſion that is among many true Chriſtians in the Sacrament of the Supper, doth no more convince either part to be no member of the Church, then the like diſſenſion that was betweene Cyprian and the Biſhops of Africa, and Cornelius with the Biſhops of Europe, about the Sacrament of Baptiſme, doth deny either of them to have beene true members of the Church, and yet the one party erred from the truth.

Every diſſenſion is not a ſchiſme.

Acts

5 And ſo were the Churches ſtabliſhed in the faith, and increaſed in number daily.

6 Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia, and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the holy Ghoſt to preach the word in Aſia.

7 They comming to Myſia, ſought to goe into Bithynia: but the ſpirit ſuffered them not.

8 And they paſſing thorow Myſia, came downe to Troada.

9 And a viſion appeared to Paul in the night: There ſtood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, ſaying, Come into Macedonia, and helpe us.

10 And after he had ſeene the viſion, immediatly we prepared to goe into Macedonia, gathering by conference, that the Lord had called us for to preach the Goſpel unto them.

11 Then we being caried from Troada, came with a ſtraight courſe to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis:

12 And from thence to Philippos, which is the chiefe city in the partes of Macedonia, and a free city: and we were in that city abiding certaine daies.

13 And on the day of the Sabboths we went out of the city, beſides a river, where prayer was wont to be made, and we ſate downe, and ſpake unto the women which reſorted thither.

14 And a certaine woman named Lydia, a ſeller of purple, of the citie of the Thyatirians, which worſhipped God, gave us audience: Whoſe heart the Lord opened, that ſhe attended unto the things which were ſpoken of Paul.

15 And when ſhe was baptized, and her houſhold, ſhe beſought us, ſaying, If ye have judged me to be faithfull to the Lord, come into my houſe, and abide there. And ſhe conſtrained us.

16 And it came to paſſe, as we went to prayer, a certaine damoſell poſſeſſed with a ſpirit of ſoothſaying, met us: which brought her maſters much vantage with ſoothſaying.

17 The ſame followed Paul and us, and cryed, ſaying, Theſe men are the ſervants of the moſt high God, which ſhew unto us the way of ſalvation.

18 And this did ſhe many dayes: but Paul not content, turned about, and ſaid to the ſpirit, I command thee in the Name of Ieſu Chriſt, that thou come out of her. And he came out the ſame houre.

19 And when her maſters ſaw that the hope of their gaines was gone, they caught Paul and 20 And preſenting them to the magiſtrates, they ſaid, Theſe men trouble our citie, being Iewes:

21 And they preach a faſhion which it is not lawfull for us to receive, nor doe, being Romanes.

22 And the people ranne againſt them: and the magiſtrates tearing their coats commanded them to be beaten with rods.

23 And when they had laid *many ſtripes upon them, they did caſt them into priſon, commaunding the keeper that hee ſhould keepe them diligently.

24 Who when he had received ſuch commandement, caſt them into the inner priſon, and made their feet faſt in the ſtockes.

25 And at mid-night, Paul and Silas praying, did praiſe God. And they that were in priſon, heard them.

26 But ſodenly there was made a great earthquake, ſo that the foundations of the priſon were ſhaken. And foorthwith all the doores were opened: and the bandes of all were looſed.

27 And the keeper of the priſon waked out of his ſleepe, and ſeeing the doores of the priſon opened, drawing out his ſword, would have killed himſelfe, ſuppoſing that the priſoners had been fled.

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Do thy ſelfe no harme, for we are all here.

29 And calling for light, he went in, and trembling fell downe to Paul and Silas at their feete:

30 And bringing them forth, he ſaid, maſters, what muſt I doe that I may be ſaved?

31 But they ſaid ‡ Beleeve in our Lord Iesvs: and thou ſhalt be ſaved and thy houſe.

32 And they preached the word of our Lord to him with all that were in his houſe.

33 And he taking them in the ſame houre of the night, [c] waſhed their wounds: and himſelfe was baptized and all his houſe incontinent.

34 And when he had brought them into his owne houſe, he layed the table for them, and rejoyced with all his houſe, beleeving God.

35 And when day was come, the magiſtrates ſent the ſergeants, ſaying, Let thoſe men goe.

36 And the keeper of the priſon told theſe words to Paul, That the magiſtrates have ſent that you ſhould be let goe; now therefore departing, goe ye in peace.

37 But Paul ſaid to them, Being whipped openly, uncondemned, men that are Romans, they have caſt us into priſon: and now doe they ſend us out ſecretly? Not ſo, but let them come, and let us out themſelues.

38 And the ſergeants reported theſe words to

CHAP. XVII.

How in other parts of Macedonia he planted the Church, and namely at Theſſalonica, 5 where the [illegible] are ſo malicious, that they purſue him alſo into Beræa, 14 From whence being conducted into Greece, [illegible] preached at Athens both to the Iewes & Gentiles, diſputing with the Philoſophers, 19 and in Areopagus, perſwading them from their Idoles unto one God and Iesvs Christ raiſed from the dead.

AND when they had walked through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Theſſalonica, where there was a Synagogue of the Iewes.

2 And Paule according to his cuſtome entred in unto them, and three Sabbaths he diſcourſed to them out of the Scriptures,

3 Declaring and inſinuating that it behoved Christ to ſuffer and to riſe againe from the dead: and that it is Iesvs Christ whom I preach to you.

4 And certaine of them beleeved and were joyned to Paul and Silas, and of the Gentiles that ſerved God a great multitude, and noble women not a few.

5 But the Iewes ‡ envying, and taking unto them of all the raſcall ſort certaine naughty men and making a tumult, ſtirred the citie: and beſetting Iaſons houſe, ſought to bring them forth unto the people.

6 And not finding them: they drew Iaſon and certaine brethren to the Princes of the citie, crying, That theſe are they that ſtirre up the world, and are come hither,

7 Whom Iaſon hath received, and all theſe doe againſt the decrees of Cæſar, ſaying that there is another king, Iesvs.

8. And they moved the people, and the Princes of the citie hearing theſe things.

9 And taking a ſatisfaction of Iaſon and of the reſt, they diſmiſſed them.

10. But the brethren forthwith by night ſent away Paule and Silas unto Beroea. Who when they were come, entred into the Synagogue of the Iewes.

11 (And theſe were more noble then they that are at Theſſalonica, who received the word with all greedineſſe, dayly || ſearching the Scriptures, if theſe things were ſo.

12 And many ſurely of them beleeved, and of honeſt women Gentiles, and men not a few.)

13 And when the Iewes in Theſſalonica underſtood, that at Beroea alſo the word of God was preached by Paule; they came thither alſo, moving and troubling the multitude.

14 And

AS they made their journey through Amphipolis, and Apollonia, they came to Theſſalonica, where was a Synagogue of the Iewes.

2 And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three Sabbath daies diſputed with them out of the Scriptures,

3 Opening and alledging, that Chriſt muſt needes have ſuffered and riſen againe from the dead: and that this is Chriſt Ieſus which I preach unto you.

4 And ſome of them beleeved, and joyned with Paul and Silas, and of the devout Greekes a great multitude, and of the chiefe women not a few.

5 But the Iewes which beleeved not, moved with envy tooke unto them certaine vagabonds, and evill men, and gathered a companie, and ſet all the citie on a rore, and made aſſault unto the houſe of Iaſon; and ſought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, they drew Iaſon and certaine brethren unto the heads of the citie, crying, Theſe that have troubled the world are come hither alſo, 7 Whom Iaſon hath received privily*; and theſe all doe contrary to the decrees of Cæſar, ſaying that there is another king,* one Ieſus.

8 And they troubled the people, and the officers of the citie, when they heard theſe things.

9 And when they had taken ſufficient ſuretie of Iaſon, and of the other, they let them goe.

10 And the brethren immediatly ſent away Paule and Silas by night unto Beræa: which when they were come thither, they entred into the Synagogue of the Iewes.

11 Theſe were the nobleſt of birth among them of Theſſalonica, which received the word with all readineſſe of minde, and ſearched the Scriptures dayly, whether ſuch things were ſo.

12 Therefore many of them beleeved: alſo of honeſt women which were Greekes, and of men not a few.

13 But when the Iewes of Theſſalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paule at Beræa alſo, they came thither, and moved the people.

14 And then immediatlie the brethren sent away Paule, to goe unto the sea: but Silas and Timothy remained there.

15 And they that conducted Paule, brought him as farre as Athens, and receiving commandement of him to Silas and Timothee, that they should come unto him very speedily, they departed.

16 And when Paule expected them at Athens, his spirit was incensed within him, seeing the citie given to Idolatry.

17 He disputed therefore in the Synagogue with the Iewes, and them that served God, and in the market-place, everie day with them that were there.

18 And certaine Philoſophers of the Epicures and the Stoikes diſputed with him, and certaine ſaid, What is it that this [b] wordſower would ſay? But others, He ſeemeth to be a preacher of new [c] Gods; becauſe he preached to them IESVS and the reſurrection.

FULK. 2. The authors of this note, ſhew themſelves to be ignorant in the Greeke tongue, for the Greeke word doth ſigniſie whatſoever men doe reverence for religions ſake. The Dictionaries ſay, it ſignifieth the formes of worſhip, or devotions, as well as the thing worſhipped. Now the word devotion, is indifferent either to true or falſe devotion, and ſo is the Greeke word. Therefore the devotions of good Chriſtians, is no more touched by this terme, then true religion by the terme of religion, when it is applyed to falſe religion.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XVII.

RHEM. 3 11 Searching the Scriptures.] The Heretikes uſe this place to prove that the hearers muſt trie and judge by the Scriptures, whether their teachers and preachers doctrine be true, and ſo reject that that they find not in the ſcriptures, as though here the ſheepe were made judges of their Paſtors, the people of the Prieſts, and men and women of all ſorts, even of S. Pauls doctrine it ſelfe: which were the moſt fooliſh diſorder in the world. And they did not therefore reade the Scriptures of the old Teſtament (for none of the new were yet extant commonly) to diſpute with the Apoſtle or to try and judge of his doctrine, or whether they ſhould beleeve him or no: for they were bound to beleeve him, and obey his word, whether he alleaged Scriptures or no and whether they could reade or underſtand the Scriptures or no, but it was a great comfort and confirmation for the Iewes that had the Scriptures, to find even as S. Paul ſaid, that Chriſt was God, crucified, riſen, and aſcended to heaven: which by his preaching and expounding they underſtood, and never before, though they read them, and heard them read every Sabbath. As it is a great comfort to a Catholike man to heare the Scriptures declared and alleaged moſt evidently for the Churches truth againſt heretikes, in Sermons or otherwiſe, and it doth the Catholikes good and much confirmeth them, to view diligently the places alleaged by the Catholike preachers. Yet they muſt not be judges for all that, over their owne Paſtors, whom Chriſt commandeth them to heare and obey, and by whom they heare the true ſenſe of Scriptures.

The people are not judges of the ſenſe of Scriptures.

The comfort of Chriſtian men by hearing or reading the Scriptures.

FULK. 3 This place is rightly uſed, to proove that the hearers ought to examine by the Scriptures, whether the teachers doctrine be true, and to reject whatſoever they find not prooved by the Scriptures. Yet are not the ſheepe made judges of the ſheepheards, people of the Prieſts, &c. But the word of God is made judge of all doctrine, whether it be true or falſe. And theſe men ſearched the Scriptures, to try whether thoſe things were ſo, as the Apoſtle preached. For they having received the Scriptures in credit before, were not bound to beleeve him, except his doctrine were conſonant unto the holy Scriptures, as he himſelfe teſtifieth Gal. 1. 8. That if he preached any other Goſpel then he had preached before, they ſhould hold him accurſed. And the Goſpel which he preached before, was that which God had promiſed before by the Prophets in the holy Scriptures. Rom. 1. 2. And although they could not reade the Scriptures, yet they heard the Scriptures read, and were brought to underſtand them by his preaching. Wherefore their ſearching of the Scriptures, was not onely to confirme them being before throughly perſwaded, but to perſwade them being not throughly brought to the faith, untill they found the Scriptures to be manifeſtly agreeable to the Apoſtles preaching. And yet it followeth not that the ſheepe muſt be judges of their Paſtors, but that they muſt heare them, obey them, and be ordered by them, which they will doe more cheerefully, when by ſearching the Scriptures, they finde their Paſtors doctrine to be the doctrine of the holy Ghoſt: and not the invention or tradition of men.

The authority and ſufficiency of the Scriptures.

RHEM. 4. 22 Superſtitious.] S. Paul calleth not them ſuperſtitious, for adoring the true and onely God with much devotion or many ceremonies, or in comely preſcribed order, or for doing due reverence to holy Sacraments, to Saints and their memories, Images or Monuments: or for keeping the preſcribed lawes, dayes, and faſts of the Church, or for fulfilling vowes made to God, or for bleſſing with the ſigne of the Croſſe, or for capping and kneeling at the name of IESVS, *or for religiouſly uſing creatures ſanctified in the ſame name, or any other Chriſtian obſervation; for which our new Maſters condemne the Catholike people of Superſtition: themſelves wholly voide of that vice by all wiſe mens judgement, becauſe they have in maner taken away all religion; and are become Epicureans and Atheiſts, who are never troubled with ſuperſtition, becauſe it is a vice conſiſting in exceſſe of worſhip or religion, whereof they are voide. But the Apoſtle calleth them ſuperſtitious for worſhipping the Idoles and gods of the heathen, and * for the feare they had, leſt they ſhould leave out any God that was unknowne to them; for thus their Altar was inſcribed:* Diis Aſiæ, Europæ, & Lybiæ, Deo ignoto & peregrino, that is, To the goddes of Aſia, Europe, and Lybia: to the unknowne and ſtrange God. This ſuperſtition (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) is wholly taken away from the Church by Chriſts incarnation, and by the Apoſtles preaching, and by Martyrs holy life and death. Neyther doth the Catholike [illegible] in this place, doe[illegible] not [illegible] reproue any [illegible] deuotion, not a great number of [illegible] ſuperſtitions [illegible], yet are your ſuperſtitions manifeſtly conuinced by other teſtimonies of holy Scripture, [illegible] worſhip, or [illegible] you ſeeme [illegible] ſuperſtition,) but as a will worſhip, ſuperſtition [illegible] is appointed [illegible]. And [illegible] the Etymologie of this word: [illegible] For in zeale of [illegible] worſhip of God, [illegible] as a rule thereof, we cannot [illegible]. Thus you diſcharge vs of ſuperſtition, we accept your teſtimony, [illegible] of our aduerſaries: but where you charge vs to be voide of religion, the Lord be iudge betweene you and vs. The Greeke word, which the Apoſtle vſeth againſt the heathen, is abuſed alſo by the heathen againſt the Apoſtle [illegible] Chriſtian religion. Acts 25.19. and therefore ſuperſtition is not onely worſhipping of Idoles and gods of [illegible]. For although he [illegible] ſuperſtition be taken away, as S. Auguſtine ſaith: Yet other as euill ſuperſtition, is [illegible] in the place among the vngodly, that will not be directed by Gods word in religion, but follow their owne [illegible]. S. Auguſtine himſelfe condemneth worſhippers of ſepulchres and pictures, of ſuperſtition. Now [illegible] ſhall ſee (ſaith he) what difference there is betweene the Meremaides of ſuperſtition, and the Hauen of Religion. [illegible] *not vnto me the profeſſors of the name of Chriſt neither knowing nor ſhewing the force or vertue of their profeſſion. S. Ambroſe calleth it an heatheniſh error, to worſhip the Croſſe whereon Chriſt died. De obitu Theodoſij. Gelaſius Biſhop of Rome, calleth it ſuperſtition to abſteine from the cup in the Lords Supper. De conſec. diſt.2. C. Comperimus. Celeſtinus Biſhop of Rome reprooueth certaine Prieſts for ſuperſtitious apparell, Ep.2. ad Galliæ Epiſcopos. But the ſuperſtition of Papiſts, hath not onely all theſe points but many more, which they would perſwade the ignorant to be high points of true religion. You ſee by theſe few teſtimonies we call that ſuperſtition, which the ancient Fathers before vs haue ſo termed, and that we doe not ſo define ſuperſtion, as we would emply all true religion, but onely thoſe things that are not preſcribed by the word of God. Wherein notwithſtanding, Papiſts doe place by theſe words, all true religion.

RHEM. 5. 29 The Diuinity to be like.] Nothing can be made by mans hand of what forme or ſort ſoeuer, that is like to Gods eſſence, or to the forme or ſhape of his Godhead or Diuinity; therefore howſoeuer the heathens did paint or graue their Idols, they were nothing like to God. And this alſo is impertinently alleaged by Heretikes againſt the Churches images: Which are not made, either to be adored with godly honour, or to be any reſemblance of the Diuinity or any of the three perſons in Godhead, but onely in Chriſt as he was in forme of man, who in that reſpect may be truely expreſſed, as other men by their portraits: and of the holy Ghoſt, not as he is in himſelfe, but as he appeared in fierie tongues, or in the ſimilitude of a Doue, or ſuch like. And ſo to paint or graue any of the three perſons as they appeared viſibly and corporally, is no more inconuenient or vnlawfull then it was vndecent for them to appeare in ſuch formes. And therefore to paint or portraite the Father alſo being the firſt perſon, as he hath ſhewed himſelfe in viſion to any of the Prophets of the old or new Teſtament (namely to Daniel as an old man) or the three Angels repreſenting the three Perſons to Abraham, or the one Angel that wraſtling with Iacob bare our Lords perſon, no ſuch thing is any where forbidden, but is very agreeable to the peoples inſtruction. In which ſort the Angels were commonly pourtraited (and namely the Cherubins ouer the propitiatory) as they be now in the Church; not in their naturall forme, but with corporall wings (as the Seraphins appeared to Eſay the Prophet) to expreſſe their quality and office of being Gods Angels, that is, Meſſengers: and God the Father with the world in his hand, to ſignifie his creation and gouernement of the ſame, and ſuch like: Whereof the people being well inſtructed may take much good, and no harme in the world, being now through their faith in Chriſt farre from all fond imagination of the falſe gods of the Pagans. And therefore S. Gregory ſaith of the Churches Images, That which Scripture or writing doth to the readers, the ſame doth the picture to the ſimple that looke thereupon; for in it euen the ignorant ſee what they ought to follow, in it they doe reade, that know no letters. Where he calleth it a matter of antiquity and very conuenient, that in holy places Images were painted to the peoples inſtruction, ſo they be taught that they may not be adored with diuine honour, and he in the ſame place ſharpely rebuketh Serenus the Biſhop of Maſſilia, that of indiſcreete zeale he would take away Images, rather then teach the people how to vſe them.

How there may be Images or reſemblances of the three perſons in Trinity, and of Angels.

Greg. Reg. ep.9.

Images are for the peoples inſtruction.

FVLK. 5. In your blaſphemous Images of God the Father, and of the holy Trinity, you doe transforme the glory of the immortall God, to the Image of a mortall man, or fethered foule. Rom.1.23. Yea of a monſter which is worſe. And where you ſay, they are not made to be adored with godly honour, you ſay vntruely, for all religious honour is due to God onely, and it is concluded in that Idolatrous Councell of Nice 2. and defended by Thomas and other Papiſts, that the Image of God is to be worſhipped, with the ſame worſhip that is due to God himſelfe. Your other excuſe, that they are not made to be any reſemblance of the Diuinity, or of the three perſons in the Godhead, it is alſo falſe; for to what end elſe ſhould any Image of the Trinity be made? The Gentiles ſaid as much of their Idols, That they knew they were not gods, nor like to gods, being voide of ſenſe and life, neither did they worſhip them as gods, but they worſhipped the inuiſible godhead, and the ſame that we call Angels, the vertues and miniſteries of the great God, but all in vaine as S. Auguſtine ſheweth in Pſal.96. Becauſe they worſhipped as you doe, thoſe that haue eyes and ſee not, mouths and ſpeake not, hands and handle not, &c. Neither can you make the image of Chriſt, as he was in forme of man: for you can make no image but of his bodily ſhape, and not as he was God in the forme of man. And that image which you make of his bodily ſhape, is no more the image of Chriſt, then of any other man. When Epiphanius ſaw in a Church at Anablatha, an image painted in a vaile, as it were of Chriſt, or ſome Saint, he affirmeth that it was contrary to the authority of the Scriptures, that any image of a man ſhould hang in the Church of Chriſt. Epiph. ep. ad Ioan. How much more the image of the holy Trinity, and of the holy Ghoſt? But you ſay boldly, to paint or graue any of the three perſons, or the three perſons, as they appeared viſibly and corporally, is no more inconuenient or vnlawfull, then it was vndecent for them to appeare in ſuch formes. Thus theſe ſenſleſſe Idolaters controle the law of God, which expreſly forbiddeth any ſuch image, of any ſimilitude or ſhape of any thing in heauen, in earth, in the waters to be made. Exod.20. Accuſing the maieſtie of God of vndecency, if he hath appeared in any viſible ſhape, which he hath forbidden to be made of him. And yet in giuing the law, God would not appeare in any viſible ſhape, leſt the people ſhould abuſe that ſhape, to make an image of God after it, as the Lord himſelfe declareth expreſly, Deut.4.15.&c. Therefore, though it be not ſimply vnlawfull, to expreſſe in painting the viſible ſhapes that were ſhewed in viſions to the Prophets, yet to make thoſe ſhapes for any vſe of religion, or ſeruice of God, is abhominable idolatry. You ſtreine very much to finde the image of God the Father, when you ſay, [illegible] himſelfe to Daniel as an old man. For although Daniel in viſion ſaw an old man, how prooue [illegible] ſhape of an old man repreſented the perſon of the Father, rather then of the Sonne, who [illegible] Father, or then the whole Godhead? As for the Cherubins ouer the propitiatory, when you can ſhew [illegible] good warrant for your images, Images.

[illegible] in the Scripture for them, namely an expreſſe [illegible] commandement to make them, we will yeeld them vnto you to be lawfully made. Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelfe (ſaith the Lord) that is of thy priuate authority or motion, reſeruing to himſelfe power to command what Images he thought neceſſary to be made for the vſe of his religion. Where you talke of the images of Angels with their wings, you might haue alleaged the authority of the ſecond Nicene Councell, which defineth, that they haue bodies and are [illegible] viſible, Act. 5. but that you are aſhamed of the groſſe error of that Idolatrous Councell. The image of God the Father with the world in his hand, you commend highly, to ſignifie his creation and gouernement in the ſame, whereof the people being well inſtructed, may take much good and no harme in the world. But firſt, you [illegible] remember that theſe images haue beene and are where the people are not inſtructed at all. Secondly, that if they be truely inſtructed of the creation and gouernment of the world, This is a lying image, and doctrine of vanity, as the Prophet calleth all images, Abac.2.18. Becauſe it maketh the creation and gouernement of the world to ſeeme proper to the perſon of the father, which is common to the whole Godhead. Finally, where you ſay the people through their faith in Chriſt, are farre from all fond imaginations of falſe gods, it is moſt vntrue. For your Popiſh ignorant people, be as fond in their imaginations as the heathen were. S. Auguſtine ſaith, worſhippers of pictures, though they profeſſe the name of Chriſt, neither know, nor ſhew foorth the vertue or force of their profeſſion. And of all worſhippers of images, or before images, S. Auguſtine ſaith, Quis autem adorat, vel orat intuens ſimulachrum, &c. And who doth worſhip, or pray beholding an image, which is not ſo affected, that he thinketh he is heard of it, and hopeth that to be performed by it, which he deſireth. In Pſal.113. Gregory in deed, contrary to the ſaying of the Prophet, Ab.2. alloweth images to be lay mens bookes, but he forbiddeth all kinde of worſhipping of them. And as for the antiquity of them, it was not long before his time that they were tollerated in Churches. Epiphanius rent the Image that he found in the Church, becauſe it was there (as he ſaith) contrary to the authority of the Scriptures. Ep. ad Ioan. &c. The Councell of Eliberis before him decreed that pictures ſhould not be in the Church, leſt that which is worſhipped or adored, ſhould be painted on the walls. Behold, the Councell feared that which afterwards by the negligence of the Biſhops came to paſſe, leſt the Image of God who onely is to be worſhipped, ſhould be painted on the walles; and eſteemed that to be moſt deteſtable, which you defend to be conuenient and lawfull. So well you agree with the doctrine of the ancient Fathers and Councels.

RHEM. 6. 34 Dionyſius Areopagita.] This is that famous Denys that firſt conuerted France, and wrote thoſe notable and diuine works, De Eccleſiaſtica & cœleſti hierarchia, de diuinis nominibus, and others, in which he confirmeth and prooueth plainely, almoſt all things that the Church now vſeth in the miniſtration of the holy Sacraments, and affirmeth that he learned them of the Apoſtles, giuing alſo teſtimony for the Catholike faith in moſt things now controuerſed, ſo plainely, that our Aduerſaries haue no ſhift but to deny this Denys to haue beene the author of them, faining that they be as others of latter age. Which is an olde ſlight of Heretikes; but moſt proper to theſe of all others. Who ſeeing all antiquity againſt them, are forced to be more bold or rather impudent then others in that poynt.

S. Dionyſius Areopagita is all for the Catholikes.

FVLK. 6 That Dionyſius Areopagita was author of thoſe bookes which now beare his name, you bring no proofe at all. We alledge that Euſebius, Hierome, Gennadius neuer heard of his writings, for if they had heard, Dionyſius Areopagita ſhould haue beene regiſtred by them among Eccleſiaſticall writers. And further whoſoeuer ſhall reade thoſe bookes of his, ſhall finde in deed many ceremonies, but as vnlike to the ceremonies of the Popiſh Church, as they are to ours. The reſt, of the ſlight of Heretikes, and that we ſee all antiquity againſt vs, is but vaine iangling without proofe, and contrary to manifeſt proofe in all our writings againſt the Papiſts, and namely, in confutation of theſe popiſh notes.

CHAP. XVIII.

At Corinth in Achaja, he worketh with his owne hands, preaching IESVS to be CHRIST, vnto the Iewes vpon their Sabboths. 6 But they being obſtinate and blaſpheming, he in plaine termes forſaketh them, and turneth to the Gentiles, among whom according to a viſion that he had to embolden him, he planteth the Church in great numbers. 12 The obſtinate Iewes in vaine ſolliciting the Proconſull againſt him. 18 From thence at length departing he returneth, 19 by Epheſus (where he promiſeth the Iewes to returne to them) 22 and ſo to Antioch in Syria (from whence he began his iourney, Act.15.) 23 but not reſting, by and by he goeth againe to viſit the new Churches that he planted, Act. 16. in Galatia and Phrygia: 24 Apollo in his abſence mightily confounding the Iewes at Epheſus; 27 and afterward at Corinth.

[illegible] ſincere [illegible], and comfort of mind and conſcience, upon hope that he is [illegible] confe[illegible] to be peace toward God) is an unfallible certainty, ſeeing hope confoundeth [illegible] in the [illegible] 5. As for vain ſecurity, it is that which is placed in merites of men, in Popes pardons, maſſ[illegible], & [illegible]

And whereas you ſay our faith, which we call Fiducia, Truſt or confidence, is quite out [illegible] compaſſe of [illegible] Creed and Scriptures: you doe wilfully blaſpheme the truth. For it is comprized in the very [illegible] words of the Creed, Credo in Deum, I beleeue in God, which is, I repoſe my whole truſt and confidence in God. So doth Ruffinus in expoſit. ſymboli expound the verbe Credo, as is manifeſt by his examples, of him that committeth h[illegible] to a [illegible] of the husbandman, of him that is married, of him that taketh the charge of the [illegible] which truſt to receiue fruit of their beleefe. But ſpecially by the teſtimony of the Apoſtle, which ſaith, [illegible] to God muſt beleeue that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that beleeue in him; (ſaith Ruffine) the text is [illegible] them that ſeeke him, Heb.11.6. Where we ſee plainly, not only an hiſtoricall faith, that God is, but a truſt and confidence, that he is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him. But that our truſt and confidence is within the compaſſe of the [illegible] whereupon the Creed is grounded, it is manifeſt by theſe teſtimonies, a few of a great number. Bleſſed are all they that truſt or haue confidence in him, Pſal.2.12. I haue truſt or confidence in the Lord, I ſhall not be confounded for ever, Pſal.24.1. They that haue truſt or confidence in the Lord, ſhall be as the mount Sion which ſhall never be moved, Pſal.125.1. Bleſſed is that man whoſe truſt is in the Lord, and whoſe fiducia, confidence is the Lord, Ier.17.7. Confidite (ſaith Chriſt) be of good confidence, I haue overcome the world. Iohn 16.33. And for the very word fiducia, confidence in God, which you doe ſcornfully object unto us, as Senacherib by the mouth of Rabſack objected to Ezechias, 2 Reg.18.22. It is found even in your owne tranſlation in many places, Haue confidence in the Lord with all thy heart, Pro.3.5. That thy confidence may be in the Lord, Pro.22.19. He that hath truſt or confidence in me, ſhall inherite the land, and poſſeſſe my holy hill, Eſa.57.13. Thy life or ſoule ſhall be ſaved, becauſe thou hadſt confidence in mee ſaith the Lord, Ier.39.18. In our Lord Ieſus Chriſt we haue truſt and acceſſe with confidence through his faith, Eph.3.12. Let us go unto the throne of grace, with confidence, that we may obtaine mercy, Heb.4.16. Finally ſaith S. Iohn, This is the confidence or truſt that we haue in God, that whatſoever we ſhall aske according to his will, he heareth us, 1 Iohn 5.14.

Confidence [illegible] reſt.

Rhem. 5. 2 Acceſſe through faith:] Iuſtification, implieth all grace and vertues received by Chriſts merites, but the entrance and acceſſe to this grace and happie ſtate is by faith, becauſe faith is the ground and firſt foundation to build [illegible] and port to enter into the reſt. Which is the cauſe that our juſtification is attributed to faith, namely in this Epiſtle, though faith it ſelfe bee of grace alſo.

Iuſtification [illegible] tributed much [illegible] faith as to the foundation.

Fulk. 5. Grace ſignifieth the favour of God, by which we are not juſtified for a moment according to the new device of the Papiſts, but wherein we ſtand and glory in the aſſured hope of eternall life: and from this faith proceed all vertues and fruits of obedience, not to our juſtification, but to Gods glory, and our greater reward of his mercy, not of the merite of our works.

Iuſtification [illegible] ſalvation.

Rhem. 6. 4 Probation hope.] This refelleth the errour alſo of the Proteſtants, that would haue our hope to hold onely on Gods promiſes, and not a whit on our doings. Where wee ſee that it ſtandeth (and is ſtrengthened alſo) upon patience and conſtancie, and good probation and triall of our ſelues in adverſities: and that ſo grounded upon Gods promiſes and our owne doings, it never confoundeth.

Our hope is ſtrengthened by well doing.

Fulk. 6. You confeſſed in the firſt ſection, that hope is given in juſtification, and confirmed by probation and tribulati[illegible] on, therefore it is not grounded upon our doings, for probation and tribulation doe not properly cauſe hope, but declare it, as tribulation doth not cauſe patience, therefore our hope is grounded only upon Gods promiſes. For our faith and hope are in God, and not in our owne doings, 1 Pet.1.21.

Hope in Gods promiſes.

Rhem. 7. 5 Charitie is powred.] Charitie is alſo given us in our firſt juſtification, and not onely imputed unto us, but in deed inwardly powred into our hearts by the Holy Ghoſt, who with and in his giftes and grace is beſtowed upon us, for this Charitie of God is not that which is in God, but that which hee giveth us, as S. Auguſtine expoundeth it, li. de Sp.& lit.c.32. Who referreth this place alſo to the grace of God given in the Sacrament of Confirmation. De Bapt. cont.Donat.li.3.c.16.

Charitie is a qualitie in us.

Fulk. 7. The text is plaine, that he ſpeaketh of the loue of God, wherewith he loveth us, as it is manifeſt in the eight verſe. So doth Chryſoſtome expound it, in 5. Rom. hom.9. God ſheweth the heat of his loue towards us, chiefly that he hath not honored us a little at once or ſlenderly but at once hath powred forth his loue, as a fountaine of all good things. So doth Photius and Oecumenius underſtand it. S. Ambroſe alſo upon this place. Therfore S. Auguſtines expoſition muſt giue place to the truth. And yet he ſaith not that it is the loue wherewith wee loue God, but whereby God maketh us lovers of him. In the other place, the loue of God is ſecretly given by impoſition of hands: but he is ſo far from calling it the Sacrament of Confirmation, that he ſaith, impoſition of hands may bee repeated, though baptiſme cannot. For what is impoſition of hands but prayer over a man?

Popiſh con[illegible]tion.

Rhem. 8. 12 By one man ſinne entred.] By this place ſpecially the Church of God defendeth and proveth againſt the old heretikes the Pelagians, that denied children to haue any originall ſin, or to be baptized for the remiſſion thereof: that in and by Adam all be conceived, borne, and conſtituted ſinners. Which no leſſe maketh againſt the Calviniſts alſo, that affirme, Chriſtian mens children to bee holy from their mothers wombe. And the ſame reaſon S. Auguſtine deduceth (l.1.c.8.9. de pec. meritis) out of this text, to prove againſt the ſaid Pelagians, that the Apoſtle meaneth not of the generall imitation of Adam in actuall ſinnes, ſerveth againſt Eraſmus and others, inclining rather to that new expoſition, then to the Churches and fathers grave judgement herein. Conc. Milevitanum. c.2.

Conc.Trid. ſeſſ. [illegible] decr. de pec. [illegible] All by Adam borne in [illegible] ſinne.

Fulk. 8. Wee doe none otherwiſe affirme Chriſtian mens children to be holy from their mothers wombe, then Saint Paul 1. Cor.7.14. ſaith: they are holy, becauſe they be comprized in Gods covenant, and haue right to bee baptized, but that they are guilty of originall ſinne, wee confeſſe and teach more ſoundly, and ſubſtantially then you doe.

FVLK. 9. [illegible] place doth manifeſtly conuince, that the virgin Marie alſo was conceiued in originall ſinne : [illegible] on-ly Chriſt was conceiued by the holy Ghoſt of a virgine. But why doe you not boldly affirme it as an vndoubted truth, that the bleſſed virgine was not conceiued in ſinne ? ſeeing that Pope Sixtus the fourth hath cleerely determined that it was ſo, and inſtituted the feaſt of her conception to confirme that opinion, and added to the ſalutation of the virgin Mary theſe words : Et benedicta ſit Anna mater tua, de qua ſine macula tua proceßit caro virginea. And bleſſed be Anne thy mother, of whom thy virgins fleſh hath proceeded without ſpot. And condemned the Dominike Friers, charging them not to preach nor publiſh the contrary opinion, by his bull bearing date 1483. Here you muſt either confeſſe the Popes error, or els hold this opinion abſolutely againſt the Maſter of the Sentences, li.3.diſt.3. Thom. Aquinas and other ſchoolemen upon him, yea and S. *Bernard epiſt.174 ad Canonicos Lugdunenſ. Anſelmus, Cur Deus homo, li.2.cap.*16. And S. *Auguſt. de Geneſ. ad liter. li.*10.*cap.*18.

RHEM. 10 That ſinne might abound.] That, here hath not the ſignification of cauſalitie, as though the law were giuen for that cauſe to make ſinne abound: but it noteth the ſequele, becauſe that followed thereof, and ſo it came to paſſe, that by the prohibition of ſinne, ſinne increaſed : by occaſion whereof, the force of Chriſts grace is more amply and abundantly beſtowed in the new Teſtament.

The Law did not cauſe more ſinne, though that were the ſequel thereof.

CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 1. He exhorteth vs, now after Baptiſme, to liue no more in ſinne, but to walke in good workes : becauſe there wee died to the one, and roſe againe to the other. 14 (grace alſo giuing vs ſufficient ſtrength) 16 and were made free to the one, and ſeruants to the other, 21 and ſpecially becauſe of the fruit heere, and the end afterward both of the one and of the other.

FVLK. 1. There is nothing in the text to proue that grace giveth us ſtrength to avoyd all ſinne : for if wee had ſufficient ſtrength, we ſhould neyer ſinne of infirmitie.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 2. 4 We are buried.] Remiſsion of ſinne, new life, ſanctification, and iuſtification, are giuen by Baptiſme, becauſe it reſembleth in vs and applieth to vs Chriſts death and reſurrection, and engraffeth vs into him.

FVLK. 2. Baptiſme is a ſeale of the iuſtification by faith ; and therefore aſſureth us of remiſſion of ſinne, renovation and ſanctification ; that God giveth unto us being iuſtified. The application of Chriſts death, burial, and reſurrection, is the proper worke of the holy ſpirit, by whom we are regenerate, which is reſembled and ratified by the externall ſeale of Baptiſme, which teſtifieth that wee are ingraffed into the ſimilitude of his death and reſurrection.

RHEM. 3. 17 Haue obeyed from.] Here againe is ſignified, that our diſcharge from the bondage of ſinne, is by the Chriſtian faith, and by obedience to the whole doctrine of Chriſts religion : in that the Apoſtle attributeth this their deliuerance from ſinne, to their humble receiuing of the Catholike faith.

FVLK. 3. Obedience from the heart, unto the forme of doctrine, is faith, by which we are diſcharged from ſinne, and haue profeſſed to leade a new life, not to continue ſervants unto ſinne. Therefore remiſſion of ſinnes, is not aſcribed to workes of obedience, that follow iuſtification.

RHEM. 4. 19 Vnto ſanctification.] Hee ſignifieth that as when they were ſubiect to ſinne by continuall and often working wickedneſſe, they increaſed their iniquitie : that ſo alſo now being iuſtified, they may and ſhould by externall workes of iuſtice, increaſe their iuſtice and ſanctification.

FVLK. 4. Wee may and ought to increaſe the vertues of iuſtice and holineſſe, that are given us by Gods grace with daily exerciſing our ſelues in practiſe of them, by ſtrength of his ſpirit, without whom we can doe nothing. But hereof we gaine not a new iuſtification before God, neither adde unto the iuſtification by faith, whereby wee are made the children of God. But declare the ſame to the glory of God, the benefit of our brethren, and to the increaſe of our reward, according to his promiſe.

Our iuſtification unto ſaluation.

RHEM. The old man, and the new.

6 Old man, body of ſinne.] Our corrupt ſtate ſubiect to ſinne and concupiſcence, comming to us from Adam, is called the Old man: as, our perſon reformed in and by Chriſt, is named the New man. And the lumpe and maſſe of ſinne which then ruled, is called the corps or body of ſinne.

Dying to ſinne. Living to God.

To ſinne he died.] Chriſt died to ſinne, when by his death he deſtroyed ſinne: We die to ſinne, in that wee be diſcharged of the power thereof, which before was as it were the life of our perſons, and commanded all the parts and faculties of our ſoule and body: as contrariwiſe wee liue to God, when his grace ruleth and worketh in us, as the ſoule doth rule our mortall bodies.

RHEM. 6. How concupiſcence is called ſinne.

12 Sinne reigne.] Concupiſcence is heere named ſinne, becauſe it is the effect, occaſion, and matter of ſinne, and is as it were a diſeaſe and infirmitie in us, inclining us to ill; remaining alſo after Baptiſme according to the ſubſtance or matter thereof: but it is not properly a ſinne, nor forbidden by commandement, till it reigne in us, and wee obey and follow the deſires therof. Auguſt. li. de nupt. & concupiſc. cap. 23. Contr. 2. epiſt. Pelag. lib. 1. cap. 13. Conc. Trident. Seſſ. 5. decret. de pec. orig.

FVLK. 6. Concupiſcence is ſinne.

This is to draw the Scripture to your owne private opinions: not to ground your opinions upon the Scripture. S. Paul ſaith, it is ſinne, and afterward Chap. 7. 7. he ſaith it is forbidden by the Commaundement, Thou ſhalt not covet; and verſe 17. though it doe not reigne, &c. he calleth it ſinne dwelling in us. S. Auguſtine de nupt. & c. Conc. lib. 1. cap. 23. denieth it to be ſinne in the regenerate, becauſe in them it is forgiven, and not imputed, as hee ſheweth plainly Chap. 25. of the ſame booke, where he ſaith: anſwering the queſtion, how it can be ſin in the child unregenerate, that was not ſinne in the father being regenerate, when he begot the child. Ad haec reſpondetur, &c. To thoſe things it is anſwered that concupiſcence of the fleſh, is forgiven in Baptiſme, not ſo that it is not, but ſo that it is not imputed for ſinne. And albeit the guilt thereof be looſed, or taken away, yet it remaineth till all our infirmities be healed, the renewing of the inward man profiting from day to day, when the outward man ſhall haue put on incorruption, for it remaineth not ſubſtantially, as a body or a ſpirit, but it is a certaine affection of ill quality, as a diſeaſe or ſickneſſe.

By this place it is plaine, how hee denieth it to be ſinne, namely, as it is not imputed, yet remaineth ſinne by nature, and therefore paſſeth by generation, from the parents to the children. In the ſecond place by you quoted, he ſaith, that the guilt of concupiſcence is conſumed in the lauer of regeneration, ſo that for it, the baptized ſay not in their prayer, forgiue us our debts: which is all one in effect, as though he ſaid, it is ſinne, whereof the regenerate are aſſured of the forgiuenes or remiſſion thereof. And Contr. Iul. Pel. li. 5. ca. 3. he ſaith plainely: Concupiſcentia carnis, &c. Concupiſcence of the fleſh, againſt which the good ſpirit doth luſt, is ſinne, becauſe there is in it diſobedience, againſt the gouernment of the mind. The authoritie of the Tridentine Councell alledged by Papiſts, is as good, as aſke my fellow if I be a theefe.

RHEM. 7. The doctrine of our firſt Apoſtles.

17 Forme of doctrine.] At the firſt converſion of every nation to the Catholicke faith, there is a forme and rule of beleefe ſet downe; unto which when the people is once put by their Apoſtles, they muſt never by any perſwaſion of men alter the ſame, nor take of man or Angell, any new doctrine or Analogie of faith, as the Proteſtants call it.

FVLK. 7. They that are converted to the Chriſtian faith by the true Apoſtles, and haue received a forme of doctrine or Analogie of faith (which alſo is S. Pauls words, Rom. 12. 6.) according to the trueth of the holy Scriptures, ought by no meanes to be removed from it. But ſuch as haue beene converted to the Chriſtian profeſſion by falſe Apoſtles, Heretikes, or men infected with any error, muſt not continue in the forme of doctrine which they haue firſt received, if it containe any thing repugnant to the word of God. But muſt reforme their faith, and forme of doctrine alſo, according to the truth.

RHEM. 8. Life everlaſting a ſtipend, and yet grace.

23 The grace of God, life everlaſting.] The ſequele of ſpeech required, that as he ſaid, death or damnation is the ſtipend of ſinne, ſo life everlaſting is the ſtipend of iuſtice: and ſo it is, and in the ſame ſenſe hee ſpake in the laſt chapter: that as ſinne reigneth to death, ſo grace reigneth by iuſtice to life everlaſting; but here he changed the ſentence ſomewhat, calling life everlaſting grace, rather then reward: becauſe the merits by which wee attaine unto life, be all of Gods gift and grace. Aug. Ep. 105. ad Sixtum.

FVLK. 8. Merite.

This place doth moſt plainely declare, that eternall life is not due to the merite of workes, but is the free gift of God. Saint Auguſtine in the place quoted, meaneth not by the word merite, deſert of mens good workes, but good workes themſelues, to which God giveth reward freely, as to his owne giftes and graces in us, proceeding of faith, which is alſo the gift of God. And ſo reaſoning againſt the Pelagian in his owne termes, by this ſentence of S. Paul, doth cleerely overthrow him. When wee finde life eternall to bee called grace (ſaith hee) wee haue in the ſame Apoſtle Paul, a magnificall defender of grace, this ſaying, The wages of ſinne is death, but eternall life is the grace of God, in Chriſt Ieſu our Lord. See I pray thee in how great breuitie, how carefully hee hath placed his wordes, which being diligently conſidered, the obſcuritie of this queſtion may be ſomewhat cleared. For when he had ſaid, the wages of ſinne is death, who would not iudge, that moſt agreeably and conſequently hee ſhould adde: but the wages of iuſtice is life everlaſting. And it is true, that as to the merite of ſin death is rendred as wages, ſo to the merite of iuſtice, eternall life as wages. Or if he would not ſay to iuſtice, he might haue ſaid to faith; becauſe the iuſt liveth by faith, whereof alſo it is called in many places of holy Scripture, a reward: but iuſtice or faith is no where called a reward, becauſe the reward is rendred to iuſtice or faith. And that which a reward is to him that worketh, that is as wages or ſtipend, to the warrior. But the bleſſed Apoſtle againſt preſumption, which ſo much aſſaieth to creepe upon great perſons, that he ſaith, for it, the Angel of Sathan was given unto him, by whom he was buffeted, that he ſhould not be lifted up in preſumption: Therefore fighting moſt watchfully againſt this peſtilence of preſumption: he ſaith, the wages of ſinne is death. He calleth it rightly wages, becauſe it is due, becauſe it is worthily payed, becauſe it is rendred to merite. Afterward leſt iuſtice ſhould lift up it ſelfe, of mans good merite, as mans ill merite is not doubted to be ſinne: he hath not ſaid contrariwiſe: eternall life is the wages of iuſtice, but eternall life (ſaith he) is the grace of God. And leſt it ſhould be ſought any other way, then by the Mediatour, he addeth, in Chriſt Ieſu our Lord, as though hee ſhould ſay: Hearing that death is the wages of ſinne, what goeſt thou about to aduance thy ſelfe, O thou not iuſtice of man, but plaine pride, under the name of iuſtice, why goeſt thou about to lift [illegible] eternall, which is [illegible] death [illegible] that is due [illegible] iuſtice, [illegible] it is true iuſtice, it is [illegible] For the [illegible] haſt received it. For what [illegible] fore, O [illegible] eternall life, it is [illegible] the wages of iuſtice, but to thee it is grace, to whom even iuſtice it ſelfe is grace. For it ſhould be rendred to thee, as due, if thou haddeſt of thy ſelfe iuſtice whereto it is due. But now wee haue received of his fulneſſe not onely grace, by which we now liue iuſtly in labors, unto the end, but alſo grace for this grace, that we may liue hereafter in reſt, without end. Our faith beleeveth nothing more wholſomely then this, becauſe our underſtanding findeth nothing more true.

This ſaying at large, declareth, that albeit he uſe the terme of merit, yet hee acknowledgeth that there is no deſert of good workes unto eternall life, which is the free grace of God, by which wee haue true and perfect iuſtice in Chriſt through faith; according to which free gift of faith, when we labour in the workes of Iuſtice, which is his grace, even for this grace, wee receiue not the wages, but the grace of eternall life: Therefore Auguſtine acknowledgeth no merite or deſert of good workes, underſtanding the word merite properly, for deſert, becauſe grace is not given to merite, but freely. VVherefore it is nothing but hereticall wreſtling againſt the trueth, to abuſe his tearmes, cleane contrary to the purpoſe of his meaning.

Chryſoſtome upon this place ſaith thus: Hee ſaith not, eternall life is the reward of your good workes, but eternall life is the gift of God, that hee might ſhew, that they are delivered not by their owne ſtrength, or vertues, and that it is not a debt or a wages, or a retribution of labours, but that they haue received all thoſe things freely of the gift of God. Saint Ambroſe ſaith: As they that follow ſinne, gaine death, ſo they that follow the grace of Chriſt, that is faith which forgiveth ſinnes, ſhall haue life eternall. Theodoret likewiſe upon this place: He ſaith not beene reward, but grace, for eternall life is the gift of God. For although a man could performe the higheſt and abſolute iuſtice, yet eternall ioyes being weighed with temporall labours, are not anſwerable. Photius upon the ſame place, ſaith: Hee ſayd not, the reward of good workes, but the gift of God, ſhewing that they are not delivered from ſinne, by workes, but by grace. The Authour of the Commentaries under Saint Hieromes name, ſaith alſo: Hee ſaid not likewiſe, the wages or reward of Iuſtice: becauſe it is not in us before it be rewarded. For it is not gotten by our labour, but granted by the gift of God. VVherefore you ſee, that not onely the manifeſt wordes of the text, but alſo the conſent of the ancient Fathers, is againſt the Popiſh doctrine, of the merite of good workes.

CHAP. VII.

RHEM. 1. Our former husband (ſinne) with his law, is dead in baptiſme: and now we are maried to another husband (to Chriſt) to bring forth children to God, that is good workes. 7 And how the law being good, was yet to us the law of ſinne and death, becauſe concupiſcence reigned in us. 17 But now by baptiſme grace reigneth in us, though alſo concupiſcence doth remaine and tempt us ſtill.

FVLK. 1. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not one word of Baptiſme, in all this Chapter.

ARe you ignorant brethren (for I ſpeake to them that know the law) that the law hath dominion over a man as long time as he liveth?	KNow yee not brethren (for I ſpeake to them that know the Law) how that the Law hath power over a man as long as hee liveth?
2 For * the woman that is under a husband: ‡ her husband living, is bound to the law; but if her husband be dead, ſhe is looſed from the law of her husband.	2 For the woman which hath an husband, is bound by the law to her husband, as long as he liveth: but if the husband be dead, ſhe is looſed from the law of her husband.
3 Therefore her husband living, ſhe ſhall be called an advoutreſſe, if ſhee bee with another man: but if her husband be dead, ſhee is delivered from the law of her husband: ſo that ſhe is not an advoutreſſe, if ſhe be with another man.	3 So then if while her husband liveth, ſhe couple herſelfe with another man, ſhee ſhall bee † counted a wedlocke breaker: but if her husband be dead, ſhe is free from the law, ſo that ſhe is no wedlocke breaker, though ſhee couple her ſelfe with another man.
4 Therefore my brethren ‡ you alſo are made dead to the law by the body of Chriſt: that you may bee another mans who is riſen againe from the dead, that wee may fructifie to God.	4 Even ſo, yee alſo my brethren, are dead concerning the law by the body of Chriſt, that ye ſhould be coupled to another, who is raiſed from the dead, that we ſhould bring foorth fruit unto God.
5 For when we were in the fleſh, the paſſions of ſinnes, that were by the Law, did worke in our members, to fructifie unto death.	5 For when we were in the fleſh, the luſts of ſinne which were by the Law wrought in our members, to bring foorth fruit unto death.
6 But now wee are looſed from the law of death, wherein we were deteined: ᶜ in ſo much we ſerue in ‡ newneſſe of ſpirit, and not in the oldneſſe of the letter.	6 But now are we delivered from the law, and dead unto it wherunto we were in bondage, that wee ſhould ſerue in newneſſe of ſpirit, and not in the oldneſſe of the letter.
7 What ſhall wee ſay then? is the Law ſin? God forbid. But ſinne I did not know, but by the Law; for concupiſcence I knew not, unleſſe the law did ſay: ‖ Thou ſhalt not covet.	7 What ſhall wee ſay then? Is the Lawe ſinne? God forbid. Neverthèleſſe, I knew not ſinne, but by the Law: For I had not knowne luſt, except the Law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not luſt.

* 1 Cor. 7, 39.

† Or, called.

ᶜ ὥστε δουλεύειν.

‖ Exod. 20, 17. Deut. 5, 21.

8 But ‡ occaſion being taken, ſinne by the commaundement wrought in me all concupiſcence. For without the Law ſinne was dead.

9 And I lived without the Lawe ſometime. But when the commaundement was come, ſinne reuiued.

10 And I was dead: and the commaundement, that was vnto life, the ſame to mee was found to be vnto death.

11 For ſinne taking occaſion by the commaundement, ſeduced mee, and by it killed mee.

12 Therefore * the law indeed is holy, and the commaundement holy, and iuſt and good.

13 That then which is good, to mee was it made death? God forbid; but ſinne, that it may appeare ſin, by the good thing wrought mee death: that ſinne might become ſinning aboue meaſure by the commaundement.

14 For we know, that the law is ſpirituall, but I am carnall, ſold vnder ſinne.

15 For || that which I worke, I vnderſtand not; for || not that which I will, the ſame do I: but which I hate, that I doe.

16 And if that which I will not, the ſame I doe: I conſent to the law, that it is good.

17 But now, not I worke it any more, but the ſinne that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that there dwelleth not in me, that is to ſay, in my fleſh, good. For to will, is preſent with mee, but to accompliſh that which is good, I find not.

19 For || not the good which I will, that doe I: but the evill || which I will not, that I doe.

20 And if that which I will not, the ſame I doe: now not I worke it, but the ſinne that dwelleth in me.

21 I find therefore, the Law, to me hauing a will to good, that evill is preſent with me.

22 For I am delighted with the Law of God according to the inward man:

23 But I ſee another Lawe in my members, repugning to the Law of my mind, and captiuing mee in the Law of ſinne that is in my members.

24 Vnhappy man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death?

25 The grace of God by Iesvs Chriſt our Lord. ☞ Therefore I my ſelfe || with the mind c ſerue the Law of God; but with the fleſh, the law of ſinne.

‡ Sinne or concupiſcence which was a ſleep before, was wakened by prohibition, the law not being the cauſe therof, nor giuing occaſion therevnto, but occaſion being taken by our corrupt nature to reſiſt that which was commanded.

8 But ſinne taking occaſion by the commaundement, wrought in mee all manner of concupiſcence. For without the Law ſinne was dead.

9 I once liued without Law: but when the commandement came, ſinne reuiued,

10 And I was dead: and the very ſame commaundement which was ordeined unto life, was found to bee unto mee an occaſion of death.

11 For ſinne taking occaſion by the commandement, hath deceived me, and by the ſame ſlew me.

12 Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandement holy, and iuſt, and good.

13 Was that then which was good, made death unto me? God forbidde. But ſinne, that ſinne might appeare, by that which was good to worke death in mee: that ſinne by the commandement might bee out of meaſure ſinfull.

14 For we know that the law is ſpirituall: but I am carnall, ſold under ſinne.

15 For that which I doe, I allow not: for what I would, that doe I not; but what I hate, that do I.

16 If I doe now that which I would not, I conſent unto the law that it is good.

17 Now then it is not I that do it: but ſinne that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know, that in me (that is to ſay, in my fleſh) dwelleth no good thing. For to will is preſent with me: but I find no meanes, to performe that which is good.

19 For the good that I would, do I not: but the evill which I would not, that doe I.

20 And if I doe that I would not, then is it not I any longer that doth it, but ſin that dwelleth in me.

21 I find then by the law, that when I would doe good, evill is preſent with me.

22 For I delight in the law of God, after the inward man.

23 But I ſee another law in my members, rebelling againſt the law of my minde, and ſubduing mee unto the law of ſinne, which is in my members.

24 O wretched man that I am: who ſhall deliver me from the bodie of this death?

25 I thanke God through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. So then, with the minde I my ſelfe ſerue the law of God: but with the fleſh, the law of ſinne.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VII.

Rhem. 2. 2 Her husband liuing.) Nothing but death diſſolueth the band betwixt man and wife: though for fornication one may depart from anothers company; therefore to marry againe is aduoutrie, during the life of the party ſeparated.

Fvlk. 2. S. Paul ſaith not, that nothing diſſolueth the bond of matrimonie but death, but that although the bond of mariage continue for both their liues; yet it is diſſolued by the death of the husband.

Rhem. 3. 4 You alſo are made dead.) Being now baptized and dead to ſinne, and ingraffed in Chriſts myſticall body, you are diſcharged of the Law of Moſes, and are free in Chriſt.

Fvlk. 3. Baptiſme in the elect, is a ſeale of their incorporation and conformitie vnto the death, and reſurrection of Chriſt, but not a cauſe thereof. For all are not incorporate to Chriſts myſticall body, but onely the true members thereof.

Baptiſme not cauſe of our incorporation to Chriſt.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VII.

Rhem. 5. 7 Thou ſhalt not couet.] It is not the habituall concupiſcence, or infirmitie of our nature, or ſenſuall deſire or inclination to evill, coveting againſt the ſpirit, that is forbidden properly in this precept: but the conſent of our reaſon and mind unto it, to obey and follow the luſt thereof, that is a ſinne and prohibited.

Actuall [illegible] ſcence for[illegible] not habituall.

Fvlk. 5. All concupiſcence that hindreth the perfect loue of our neighbor, is forbidden in this precept. For S. Paul could never be ignorant, ſince he had the uſe of reaſon, that concupiſcence with conſent, is ſin, which the heathen men did know and confeſſe. Tullie counteth it a morall vertue, Ab alienis mentes, oculos, manus abſtinere, to refraine not onely the hands and eyes, but even the minde from that which belongeth to other men. De oratore, lib. 1. therefore the contrary muſt needs be a vice. And that actuall concupiſcence which you ſpeake of, is forbidden in the 6. 7. and 8. commandements of the Law, according to the interpretation of our Saviour Chriſt, Math. 5. 22, 28. Therefore the 10. commaundement forbiddeth even habituall concupiſcence, and ſenſuall deſire, and inclination to evill, and the evill fruits thereof, that is, iniurious thoughts, though by the ſpirit we reſiſt them, and giue not place unto them. In tantum natura caeca ſine lege peccat, ut peccare ſe neſciat: propter quod dicitur, Concupiſcentiam neſciebam, &c. Fulgent. de incarn. & grat. cap. 16.

Concupiſcence is ſinne.

Rhem. 6. 15 That which I worke.] This being underſtood of S. Paul himſelfe, or any other iuſt perſon, the ſenſe is, that his fleſh and inferiour part ſtirreth up divers diſordered motions and paſſions or perturbations againſt the minde, and upon ſuch a ſudden ſometimes invadeth the ſame, that before it attendeth, or reaſon can gather it ſelfe to deliberate, man is in a ſort, (though unwittingly) entangled. Which as ſoone as it is perceived, being of the iuſt condemned, reiected, and reſiſted, never maketh him a ſinner.

Sudden involuntarie motions are no ſinne.

Fvlk. 6. Thoſe ſudden involuntary motions, are ſinne in their owne nature, though pardoned to the elect, and ſo the plaine words of the text are: for els how ſhould the Apoſtle by this verſe proue, that which he ſaid in the verſe going immediatly before, that he was ſold under ſinne, if that which he ſo doth unwillingly in that caſe, be not ſin. Anſelm. de Concord. grat. & lib. arbit. Ipſos motus ſiue appetitus quibus propter peccatum Adae ſicut bruta animalia ſubiacemus, quos Apoſtolus vocat, Carnis concupiſcentiam, quam invitum ſe tollerare manifeſtat, cum dicit, quod odi illud facio, id eſt, nolens concupiſco, ſatis oſtendit ſacra authoritas imputari ad peccatum.

Concupiſcence in thought ſinne.

Rhem. 7. 15 Not that which I will.] He meaneth not, that he can doe no good that he willeth or deſireth, or that he is ever forced to doe that which his will agreeth not unto: but that by reaſon of the forcibleneſſe of concupiſcence, whereof hee cannot rid himſelfe during life, he cannot accompliſh all the deſires of his ſpirit and minde, according as he ſaith to the Galatians, The fleſh coveteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, that not whatſoever you will, you can doe.

Concupiſcence taketh not away freewill. c. 5 17.

Fvlk. 7. Concupiſcence ſheweth, that the will even of the beſt, is not altogether free from the captivitie and bondage of ſinne, although in the regenerate, it hath ſome freedome and ſtrength againſt ſinne, which it hath not at all in them which be not regenerate.

Freewill.

Rhem. 8. 19 Not the good which I will.] So may the iuſt alſo be forced by the rage of concupiſcence or ſenſuall appetite, to doe or ſuffer many things in his inferiour part, or externall members, which his will conſenteth not unto. And ſo long it is ſo farre from ſin, that (as * S. Auguſtine ſaith) he need never ſay to God, forgiue vs our ſinnes, for the ſame; for ſinne is voluntary, and ſo be not theſe paſſions.

Ep. ad Aſellicum. 200.

Sinne is voluntarie, and otherwiſe it is no ſinne.

Fvlk. 8. There can be no force or rage of concupiſcence in the inferiour part, but the will of the outward man conſenteth unto it, although the will of the inward man doe reſiſt it. For the deſires of the fleſh are contrary to the deſires of the ſpirit, and the will of the one, to the will of the other. Therefore the Apoſtle ſaith not onely, I doe not that good which I will, but I doe that evill which I will not. S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh not of ſuch inforcement or rage of concupiſcence, but of the diſeaſe of originall ſinne, if we did never giue conſent unto it. Incipit autem homo, &c. A man beginneth to be renewed, according to grace in the inward man, that with his minde hee doth that which he loveth, neither conſenteth to the fleſh, doing that which hee hateth, that is not ſo, that hee doth not covet at all, but that goeth not after his concupiſcence, which truely is ſo great a matter, that if it were brought to paſſe altogether, although the deſires of ſinne be in us, while we bee in this mortall body, yet if we did giue conſent to none of them, there ſhould not bee whereof wee ſhould ſay to our Father which is in heaven, Forgiue us our debts. You ſee he ſaith not, that a iuſt man need never ſay to God for theſe motions, forgiue us our ſinnes, but if any man were throughly renewed, ſo that he never conſented to the deſires of ſinne, but were as Adam was in paradiſe before he fell, he had no debts to be forgiven. But ſeeing renovation is not perfect, and wee giue often conſent, though ſometime we haue the victorie: it followeth of his words, that wee haue need daily to deſire pardon, even of thoſe ſinfull deſires: which though they be not ſo voluntary as other ſinnes, whereunto we giue conſent, yet are they voluntary in the originall, becauſe originall ſinne in Adam was voluntarie. Aug. Ret. lib. 1. cap. 13. & 15.

Freewill.

Firſt motion to evill.

Rhem. 9 19 Which I will not.] It maketh not any thing againſt free will that the Apoſtle ſaith, that good men do or ſuffer ſometimes in their bodies, that which the will agreeth not unto: but it proveth plainly freewill; becauſe the proper act thereof, that is, to will or nill, to conſent or diſſent, is ever (as you may ſee here) free in it ſelfe: though there may bee internall or externall force to ſtay the members of a man, that they obey not in every act, that which the will commandeth or preſcribeth. And therefore that is never imputed to man which hee doth in his externall or internall faculties, when will concurreth not. Yea afterward (verſ. 20.) the Apoſtle ſaith, Non ego operor, man doth not that which is not done by his will: which doth moſt evidently proue freewill.

Fvlk. 9. The will of man is alwaies free from force or conſtraint, but not from thraldome or bondage of ſin, as this place manifeſtly declareth, that it is not perfectly ſet at liberty, no not in the regenerate. That thoſe things which are done without the conſent of the inward man, are not imputed, it is true, but that is to be underſtood only of the regenerate, in whom there is a new man borne of the ſpirit of God; not generally of all men.

Freewill.

Rhem. 10. 25 With the mind, with the fleſh.] Nothing done by concupiſcence (which the Apoſtle here calleth ſinne) whereunto the ſpirit, reaſon, or mind of man conſenteth not, can make him guilty before God, neither can the motions of the fleſh in a iuſt man ever any whit defile the operation of his ſpirit, as the Lutherans doe hold: but make them often more meritorious, for the continuall combat that he hath with them: for it is plaine that the operations of the fleſh and of the ſpirit doe not concurre together to make one act, as they imagine; the Apoſtle concluding cleane contrary, That in mind he ſerveth the law of God, in fleſh the law of ſinne, that is to ſay, concupiſcence.

Concupiſcence defileth not a iuſt mans actions as the Lutherans ſay

Nothing

Rhem. 10.

Nothing done by infirmitie of concupiſcence, without conſent of the inward [illegible] make the [illegible] man guilty before God, becauſe the grace of God in Ieſus Chriſt doth diſcha[illegible] ſight [illegible] the which hee were a miſerable and unhappy man (as the Apoſtle confeſſeth of [illegible] ore guilty in Gods ſight. So likewiſe they defile the operations of a iuſt man which are according [illegible] ſpirit, becauſe they hinder them from ſuch perfection, as Gods iuſtice requireth, whereby we ought to loue God with all our heart, and our neighbour as our ſelues, which by meanes of concupiſcence we cannot. For though the operations of the fleſh and the ſpirit, doe not alwayes concurre in one act, yet doe the operations of the fleſh alway hinder the operation of the ſpirit from perfection. And therefore it is ſo farre off, that they make the works of the ſpirit meritorious, that for want of perfection alwayes, and moſt often with intermedling corruption, they make them unable to ſtand before Gods iuſtice, if he ſhould not in mercy behold them.

Concupiſcence is ſinne.

Merite.

CHAP. VIII.

Rhem. 1 That now after Baptiſme we are no more in ſtate of damnation, becauſe by the grace which we haue receiued, we are able to fulfill the law: unleſſe we doe wilfully giue the dominion againe to concupiſcence. 18 Then (becauſe of the perſecutions that then were) he comforteth and exhorteth them with many reaſons.

Fulk. 1 The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the ſtate of all men after Baptiſme, but only of the iuſtified and regenerate, who ar able to keepe the law in part, but not perfectly.

THere is now therefore no damnation to them that are in Chriſt IESVS: that walke not according to the fleſh.

2 For the lawe of the ſpirit of life in Chriſt IESVS, hath deliuered mee from the law of ſinne and of death.

3 For that which was impoſſible to the Lawe, in that it was weakened by the fleſh: God ſending his ſonne in the ſimilitude of the fleſh of ſinne, euen of ſinne damned ſinne in the fleſh,

4 That ‡ the iuſtification of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walke not according to the fleſh, but according to the ſpirit.

5 For they that are according to the fleſh, are affected to the things that are of the fleſh, but they that are according to the ſpirit: are affected to the things that are of the ſpirit.

6 For the wiſdome of the fleſh, is death: but the wiſdome of the ſpirit, life and peace.

7 Becauſe the wiſedome of the fleſh is || an enemie to God: for to the law of God it is not ſubject, neither can it be.

|| enimitie.

8 And they that are in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God.

9 But you are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, yet if the Spirit of God dwell in you. But if any man haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt, the ſame is not his.

10 But if Chriſt bee in you: the body in deede is dead becauſe of ſinne, but the ſpirit liueth becauſe of iuſtification.

11 And if the Spirit of him that raiſed up IESVS from the dead, dwell in you: hee that raiſed up IESVS CHRIST from the dead, ſhall quicken alſo your mortall bodies, becauſe of his Spirit dwelling in you.

12 c Therefore brethren wee are detters: not to the fleſh, to liue according to the fleſh.

13 For if you liue according to the fleſh, you ſhall die; but if by the ſpirit, you mortifie the deedes of the fleſh, you ſhall liue.

14 For whoſoeuer † are led by the ſpirit of God, they are the ſonnes of God.

THere is then no damnation to them which are in Chriſt Ieſu, which walke not after the fleſh but after the ſpirit.

2 For the law of the ſpirit of life, through Ieſus Chriſt, hath made me free from the law of ſinne and death.

3 For what the law could not do, in as much as it was weake through the fleſh, God hauing ſent his owne Sonne in the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh, euen by ſinne, condemned ſinne in the fleſh:

4 That the righteouſneſſe of the law might be fulfilled in us, which walke not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit.

5 For they that are carnall, are carnally minded: but they that are ſpirituall are ſpiritually minded.

6 To bee carnally minded is death: but to bee ſpiritually minded, is life and peace:

7 Becauſe that the fleſhly mind is enimitie againſt God: for it is not obedient to the law of God, neither can be.

8 So then, they that are in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God.

9 But yee are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, if ſo be that the ſpirit of God dwell in you. If any man haue not the Spirit of Chriſt, the ſame is none of his.

10 And if Chriſt be in you, the body is dead becauſe of ſinne: but the ſpirit is life for righteouſneſſe ſake.

11 But if the ſpirit of him that raiſed up Ieſus from the dead, dwell in you: euen he that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortall bodies, becauſe that his ſpirit dwelleth in you.

12 Therefore brethren wee are detters, not to the fleſh, to liue after the fleſh.

13 For if ye liue after the fleſh, ye ſhall die: but if ye through the ſpirit, doe mortifie the deeds of the body, ye ſhall liue.

14 For as many as are led by the ſpirit of God, they are the ſonnes of God.

|| condigne ad gloriam.

19 For the expectation of the creature, expecteth the reuelation of the ſonnes of God.

20 For the creature is made ſubiect to vanitie, not willing, but for him that made it ſubiect in hope:

21 Becauſe the creature alſo it ſelfe ſhall be deliuered from the ſeruitude of corruption, into the libertie of the glory of the children of God.

22 For we know that euery creature groneth, and trauelleth euen till now.

23 And not only it, but we alſo our ſelues hauing the firſt fruites of the ſpirit, wee alſo grone within our ſelues, expecting the adoption of the ſonnes of God, the redemption of our body.

24 For || by hope we are ſaued. But hope that is ſeen, is not hope; for that which a man ſeeth, wherefore doth he hope it?

25 But if we hope for that which we ſee not: we expect by patience.

26 And in like manner alſo the Spirit helpeth our infirmity. For what we ſhould pray as we ought, wee know not: but the Spirit himſelfe requeſteth for us with gronings vnſpeakeable.

27 And he that ſearcheth the harts, knoweth what || the Spirit deſireth: becauſe according to God he requeſteth for the ſaints.

16 [illegible] ſpirit, that we are the [illegible] God.

17 If we be [illegible], the heires of [illegible], and ioint heires with [illegible], ſo that we ſuffer together, that we may [illegible] glorified together.

18 For I am certainely perſwaded, that the afflictions of [illegible], are not worthy of the glory which [illegible] us.

19 For the earneſt [illegible] of the creature abideth, looking [illegible] the ſonnes of God ſhall appeare:

20 Becauſe the creature is ſubiect to vanitie, not willing, but for him which hath ſubdued the ſame in hope.

21 For the creature it ſelfe ſhall bee made free from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious libertie of the ſonnes of God.

22 For wee know that euery creature groneth with us alſo, and trauaileth in paine with us, euen unto this time.

23 Not onely they, but we alſo which haue the firſt fruits of the ſpirit, and wee our ſelues mourne in our ſelues, waiting for the adoption, euen the deliuerance of our body.

24 For we are ſaued by hope: But hope that is ſeene, is no hope. For how can a man hope for that which he ſeeth?

25 But and if we hope for that wee ſee not, then doe we with patience abide for it.

26 Likewiſe the ſpirit alſo helpeth our infirmities. For we know not what to deſire as wee ought; but the ſpirit it ſelfe maketh great interceſſion for us, with gronings, which cannot bee expreſſed.

27 And he that ſearcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the meaning of the ſpirit: for hee maketh interceſſion for the ſaints, according to the pleaſure of God.

28 For we know that all things worke for the beſt unto them that loue God, to them which alſo are called of purpoſe.

29 For thoſe which he knew before, he alſo did predeſtinate, that they ſhould be like faſhioned unto the ſhape of his ſonne, that he might be the firſt begotten among many brethren.

30 Moreouer, whom he did predeſtinate, them alſo he called: and whom he called, them alſo he iuſtified: and whom he iuſtified, them alſo hee glorified.

31 What ſhall wee then ſay to theſe things? If God be on our ſide, who can be againſt us?

32 Which ſpared not his owne Sonne, but gaue him for us all: how ſhall he not with him alſo giue us all things?

33 Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? It is God that iuſtifieth:

34 Who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt which died, yea rather which is raiſed againe, which is alſo on the right hand of God, and maketh interceſſion for us.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 2. 4 The iustification.] This convinceth against the Churches adversaries, that the law, that is, Gods commandements may bee kept, and that the keeping thereof is iustice, and that in Christian men that is fulfilled by Christs grace, which by the force of the Law could never be fulfilled.

FVLK. 2. The Apostle saith not that the iustice of the Law is fulfilled by us, but in us by Christ, which is made iustice unto us, which by faith are in Christ Iesus. And that inherent iustice which is begun in us by Christ, is a testimonie that wee are in Christ, in whom wee have obteined all things needfull unto our salvation. How is the iustification of the law fulfilled in us (saith S. Ambrose) but when forgivenesse of all our sinnes is given us, that sinne being taken away, the iustified man may appeare serving the Law of God with his minde, in Rom. 8. Therefore this place proveth not that the commandements of the Law may bee kept of us in this state of infirmitie, cleane contrary to the scope of the Apostle. For the Law remaineth still impossible to bee kept, through the weakenesse of our flesh. And therefore Christ hath satisfied the Lawe for us, not giving us abilitie to keepe it. For then some should be voyd of sinne: but if we say we have no sinne (saith the Apostle) wee deceive our selves, and there is no truth in us, 1. Ioan. 1. 8. Lex subintravit ut abundaret peccatum, de quo nemo liberari potest, nisi per agnum Dei qui tollit peccata mundi. De corpore enim mortis huius, non liberum hominis arbitrium, neque legis sanctum, iustum, bonumque mandatum, sed sola nos liberat gratia Dei per Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum, Lex enim spiritus vitæ &c. Fulg. de incarnat. & gratia cap. 16.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 3. 16 The spirit giveth testimonie.] This place maketh not for the Heretikes speciall faith, or their presumptuous certaintie that every one of them is in grace: the testimony of the spirit being nothing els, but the inward good motions, comfort, and contentment, which the children of God doe daily feele more and more in their hearts by serving him: by which they have, as it were, an attestation of his favour towards them, whereby the hope of their iustification and salvation is much corroborated and strengthened.

The testimonie of the Spirit.

FVLK. 3. This place sheweth that Gods children have every one the testimony of Gods Spirit, whereby they know they are Gods children, therefore in his favour, and assured of eternall life, which is the inheritance promised to his children. And this is no presumption, but true humilitie, seeing they acknowledge they have this dignitie, only of his grace without their merits or worthinesse. Which it is no marvell that Papists know not, because they doe not feele it, but turne it into good motions, comfort and contentment grounded upon their owne workes: and therefore have the spirit of servitude, and not the spirit of adoption. And even that comfort and contentment that they have in their serving God according to mens traditions, is meere vaine and wicked presumption, and no true comfort nor peace of conscience.

Certaintie of salvation.

RHEM. 4. 17 Yet if they suffer.] Christs paines or passions have not so satisfied for all, that Christian men bee discharged of their particular suffering or satisfying for each mans owne part: neither be our paines nothing worth to the attainement of heaven, because Christ hath done enough; but quite contrary: hee was by his passion exalted to the glory of heaven: therefore we by compassion or partaking with him in the like passions, shall attaine to bee fellowes with him in his kingdome.

Notwithstanding Christs satisfaction and passion, yet ours is also required.

FVLK. 4. Horrible blasphemy against the effect of Christs Passion, who satisfied for all, so that Christian men are discharged of all that they have deserved to suffer, as due to the iustice of God for punishment of their sinnes. Yet must they suffer willingly to be made conformable, or like to him in suffering as they looke to be in glory. Our sufferings therfore are a condition required to our glorification, not a cause thereof, or satisfaction for our sins.

Merite.

Satisfaction for sinne.

RHEM. 5. 18 Condigne.] Our Adversaries ground hereon, that the workes or sufferances of this life bee not meritorious or worthy of life everlasting, where the Apostle saith no such thing, no more then he saith that Christs passions be not meritorious of his glory, which I thinke they dare not much avouch in our Saviours actions. Hee expresseth only, that the very afflictions of their owne nature, which we suffer with or for him, be but short, momentanie and of no account in comparison of the recompense which wee shall have in heaven, no more in deede were Christs paines of their owne nature, compared to his glory, any whit comparable: yet they were meritorious or worthy of heaven, and so bee ours. And therefore to expresse the said comparison, here he saith, They are not condigne * to the glory. He saith not, of the glory, as the Heretikes falsly translate: though the Scripture speaketh so also, when it signifieth onely a comparison; as Prov. 3. in the Greeke, Omne preciosum non est * illa dignum. S. Augustine, illi dignum. Saint Hierome, non valet huic comparari; that is, No precious thing is worthy of wisedome, or to bee compared with it. See the like, Eccles. 26, 20. Tob. 9, 2. But when the Apostle will expresse that they are condigne worthy or meritorious of the glory, hee saith plainely, That our tribulation which presently is momentanie and light, worketh above measure exceedingly an eternall weight of glory in us. The value of Christs actions riseth not of the length or greatnes of them in themselves, though so also they passed al mens doings: but of the worthines of the person. And so the value of ours also riseth of the grace of our adoption, which maketh those actions that of their natures be not meritorious

All suffering in this life is nothing in comparison of heavenly glory: and yet it is meritorious and worthy of the same not answerable to the [illegible] in themselves, to be worthy of heaven. And they might as well [illegible] workes of [illegible] ... [illegible] it alwayes proceedeth from the [illegible] of God, as good works [illegible] from the [illegible].

FVLK. 5. What meane you by condigne, but worthy, or comparable in respect of worthinesse? The glory that shall bee revealed in Gods children, is a matter of much more excellencie then all their sufferings can deserve or be worthy of: not onely in respect of the shortnesse of the time in which we suffer or continue in suffering, but also in the greatnesse of the reward. And it is marveilous impudencie to deny that the Apostle saith no such thing, when not only the words of the Apostle are so evident, and his purpose so plaine, to comfort and incourage the faithfull in their afflictions, by the excellent worthinesse of the reward, which is farre above the value of the labour. You say that Christs paines were of no account of their owne nature compared with his glory, but yet meritorious, and so are ours. What monstrous blasphemy is this? If there were no comparison betweene Christs sufferings, and the glory that he purchased by them, then his sufferings were no satisfaction to Gods iustice, who required a full and perfect recompence, both for our sinnes and for the reward of iustice, which by his passion he procured for us. But his passion being the passion of the Sonne of God, was a full satisfaction and worthy desert of the glory, which he purchased for us, and hath given to us. Therefore it is not merited nor deserved by our suffering. Your cavill of worthy to the glory, and worthy of the glory, is but a vaine brable of words: for worthie being a relative, must have his correlative, whether it be whereof, or whereto he is worthie. And the comparison of inequalitie, is not onely in time, but also in excellencie. But our translation, and this quarrell is at large discussed in my defence against Gr. Martine, cap. 9. from the first Section to the seventh. Wherfore a good argument may be drawn out of this place against the merit of our sufferings, because there must be an equalitie or equall proportion betweene the labour and the reward, where the labour deserveth the reward: but there is no equalitie or equall proportion betweene our sufferings of this life, and the reward of eternall glory: therefore the sufferings of this life doe not merit nor deserve the reward of eternall glory. But when the Apostle (say you) will expresse that they are condigne, worthy or meritorious of the glory, hee saith; that our tribulation which presently is momentany and light, worketh above measure exceedingly, an eternall weight of glory in us. Thus you say, but all the Logicke of Rhemes cannot conclude in lawfull forme of syllogisme out of this text, that our sufferings are condigne, worthy or meritorious of that glory. The contrary may well be proved: where there is so great excellencie of the reward above the sufferings, there is no equalitie, and consequently no merit of the reward. For condigne, worthy or meritorious, will never be proved out of the verbe, worketh. The tribulations of the godly, are a cause working this reward, as they be the way by which God hath appointed that they must passe to glory, not as condigne, worthy, or meritorious of the glory. A man hath a troublesome way to passe, that he may come to the possession of his inheritance which his father hath given him. This journey worketh or procureth to him the possession of the inheritance which is far more worthy then his labour, therefore this travell is not the cause meritorious of his inheritance. Chrysostome upon this text, Hom. 14. alleageth this authoritie of 2 Cor. 4. to beat downe the pride of desert. Quando enim, &c. For when he sheweth that the rewards to come are greater then the labours, he doth both exhort them more, and doth not suffer them to be high minded, and proud as conquerors are, when they have obtained the reward of crownes. And in another place he saith: For the momentanie lightnesse of our tribulation, doth worke an eternall weight of glory in us, exceeding measure. S. Ambrose saith, that God being as a good or prodigall giver, seeketh occasions how hee may give to us being unworthy. Theodoret saith upon this text, The crownes doe excell the battels, the rewards are not compared with the labours, for the labour is small, but great gaine is hoped for. And therefore hee called those things that are looked for, not an hire or reward, but glory. The author of the Commentaries in Hieromes name, saith: In this place the Apostle will set forth the glory to come, that we may more easily tolerate the present afflictions. And in truth a man could suffer nothing worthy of the heavenly glory, although it were such as our life is now. For whatsoever he should suffer from death, is no more then he deserved before for his sinnes. But now both his sinnes are forgiven, and then also eternall life, fellowship with the Angels, brightnesse of the Sunne, and the rest which wee read to have been promised, shall be performed. Cyrillus apud Oecumenium saith, He sheweth that the whole is in a manner of grace, because God is more abundant in rewards, neither can we suffer any thing worthy of the rewards that shall be, or conferre any thing toward it.

Merit.

Cavilling.

Thus the ancient Fathers gather out of the inequalitie of the labors unto the reward, that the labours are not worthy of the reward, and the reward is of the free grace & mercy of God. But the value of our labors (you say) ariseth of the grace of our adoption, which maketh them meritorious. The reward indeed is freely given by the grace of our adoption, but that grace maketh not our workes meritorious and worthy of heaven, but freely giveth reward unto our works, which they deserve not. For nothing can be more contrary to grace, then merit or desert. Sinne doth deserve eternall damnation, because it is a transgression of the law of the eternall God, whether men take any pleasure therin, or no, but eternal life is the free gift of God, for Iesus Christs sake, and not for the merit of our works, by what fantasie soever you goe about to foist it in.

RHEM. 6. 24 By hope saved.] That which in other places he attributeth to faith, is here attributed to hope; for whensoever there be many causes of one thing, the holy writers (as matter is ministred, and occasion given by the doctrine then handled) sometime referre it to one of the causes, sometime to another: not by naming one alone, to exclude the other, as our adversaries captiously & ignorantly do argue: but at divers times and in sundry places to expresse that, which in every discourse could not, nor needed not to bee uttered. In some discourse faith is to be recommended: in others, charitie; in other, hope: sometimes, almes, mercy: elsewhere, other vertues. One while, Every one that beleeveth, is borne of God, 1 Ioh. 5, 1. Another while, Every one that loveth, is borne of God, 1 Ioh. 4, 7. Sometimes faith purifieth mens heart, Act. 15, 9. And another time, Charity remitteth sinnes, 1 Pet. 4, 8. Of faith it is said, The just liveth by faith, Rom. 1. 17. Of charity, We know that we are transferred from death to life, because we love, &c. 1 Io. 3, 14.

As sometime faith only is named, so elsewhere onely hope, and onely charitie, as the cause of our salvation.

FVLK. 6. Iustification is never attributed to hope, but to faith which goeth before hope: and to faith without works, but we are here said to be saved by hope, because our salvation is not in present, but in hope or expectation of that which is promised. Not that by the merit or worthinesse of hope, we are saved. For hope hath relation to faith by which we are justified freely, by the grace and mercy of God in Christ. Therupon S. Augustine saith, Tota spes mea, non nisi magna valdè misericordia tua, &c. My whole hope is nothing, but thy exceeding great mercy, Conf. lib. 10. cap. 29. And againe, The only hope of all the godly, groning under this burden of corruptible flesh, and in the infirmitie of this life is, that we have an advocate with the father Iesus Christ the righteous, and he is the propitiation or exoration for our sinnes, Cont. 2. Ep. Pel. lib. 3. cap. 5. Neither doth the Scripture ascribe our justification before God, to any thing in us, but only to faith. For when it is said, that every one that beleeveth is borne of God, and every one that loveth is borne of God, there is no contrarietie, for both faith and love are the fruits of our regeneration by the spirit of God, yet their offices remaine severall and distinct: faith to justifie us before God, love to declare us

RHEM. 8. 30 Whom he hath predeſtinated.] Gods eternall foreſight, loue, purpoſe, predeſtination and election of his deere children and in time their calling, iuſtifying, glorifying by Chriſt, as all other acts and intentions of his diuine will and prouidence towards their ſaluation, ought to bee reuerenced of all men with dreadfull humilitie, and not to bee ſought out or diſputed on with preſumptuous boldneſſe and audacitie. For it is the gulfe that many proud perſons in euery age and alwayes, haue by Gods iuſt iudgement periſhed in, founding thereon moſt horrible blaſphemies againſt Gods mercie, nature and goodnes, and diuers damnable errors againſt mans freewill, and againſt all godlineſſe and religion. This high concluſion is here ſet downe for us, that we may learne to know of whom we ought to depend in all our life, by whom we expect our ſaluation, by whoſe prouidence all our graces, gifts and works doe ſtand: by what an euerlaſting gracious determination, our redemption, which is in Chriſt Ieſus, was deſigned: and to giue God ineffable thanks for our vocation and preferment to the ſtate we be in, before the Iewes, who deſerued no better then they, before the light of his mercie ſhining upon us accepted us, and reiected them. But this ſaid eminent truth of Gods eternall predeſtination ſtandeth (as we are bound to beleeue under paine of damnation, whether we underſtand how or no) and ſo S. Auguſtine in all his diuine workes written of the ſame (De gratia & lib. arb. De corrept. & gratia. Ad articulos falſo impoſitos.) defendeth, declareth, proueth, and conuinceth that it doth ſtand (I ſay) with mans free will and the true libertie of his actions, and forceth no man to be either ill or good, to ſin or vertue, to ſaluation or damnation, nor taketh away the meanes or nature of merits, and cooperation with God to our owne and other mens ſaluation.

The doctrine of predeſtination, how to be reuerenced, and what it teacheth us.

Gods predeſtination taketh not away free will.

FVLK. 8. The eternall predeſtination of God, excludeth the merits of man, and the power of his will, thereby to attaine to eternall life: yet forceth not a mans will to good or ill, but altereth the will of him, that is ordained to life, from euill to good, and giueth power to chuſe that which is good, and all meanes which he hath appoynted unto ſaluation. And this is the doctrine of S. Auguſtine in all his bookes againſt the Pelagians, wherein he declareth the effect of Gods predeſtination: as he that will reade them may eaſily perceiue. Let one example ſuffice to ſhew how hee defendeth, proueth, &c. that mans free will ſtandeth, ſpeaking of the reprobate, which are iuſtly condemned either for originall ſinne onely, or alſo for other ſinnes which they haue added by freewill. Arbitrium inquam liberum, ſed non liberatum, liberum iuſtitiæ, peccati autem ſeruum. I ſay freewill, but not made free, free from iuſtice, but ſlaue of ſinne. De corrept. & gratia. cap. 13.

RHEM. 9. 38 I am ſure.] This ſpeech is common in S. Paul, according to the latin tranſlation when hee had no other aſſured knowledge but by hope: as Rom. 15, 14. 2 Tim. 1, 5. Heb. 6, 9. Where the Greeke word ſignifieth onely a probable perſwaſion. And therefore except he meane of himſelfe by ſpeciall reuelation, or of the predeſtinate in generall, (in which two caſes it may ſtand for the certitude of faith or infallible knowledge) otherwiſe that every particular man ſhould be aſſured infallibly that himſelfe ſhould be iuſtified, and not that onely, but ſure alſo neuer to ſinne, or to haue the gift of perſeuerance and certaine knowledge of his predeſtination: that is a moſt damnable falſe illuſion and preſumption, condemned by the Fathers of the holy Councell of Trent. Seſſ. 6. c. 9. 12. 13.

πέπεισμαι. Confido. Hiero. q. 9. ad Algaſ. No man ordinarily is ſure of his ſaluation, but onely in hope.

FVLK. 9. The knowledge that we haue by hope grounded upon Gods promiſes is ſo ſure, that it cannot bee deceiued, as it is plaine, Rom. 5. 5. The perſwaſion that the Apoſtle hath in other places, is alſo grounded upon good arguments: but here, upon the immutable decree of God. And it is a good reaſon to prooue that every Chriſtian man which is indued with faith and hope, may and ought to be infallibly aſſured, that he is iuſtified, and ſhall be ſaved, becauſe the word of God and his promiſe to all that beleeue in him, (and in faith call upon him) cannot faile, but be moſt infallibly true. But that any man can be ſure neuer to ſinne, it is deuilliſh and falſe preſumption. For we haue no promiſe that we ſhall be preſerved from all ſinne, but onely from that which is irremiſſible. But that we ſhall alwayes perſeuere in the fauour of God, and ſo conſequently that wee are predeſtinated to eternall life, the Apoſtle doth moſt plainely proue in this Chapter: wherefore by the ſpirit of adoption, and the effects of Gods grace agreeable, wee may haue certaine knowledge that wee ſhall inherite Gods kingdome, which none ſhall doe, but they that continue unto the end, and were appoynted unto it before the beginning of the world. And this is true humilitie, when we preſume nothing of our owne ſtrength or worthineſſe, but depend wholly upon the truth of Gods promiſes; wherfore it was a damnable preſumption of the Popiſh Prelates of Trent, to condemne that for a falſe illuſion, which the word of Trueth doth ſo manifeſtly leade us unto, and by all meanes perſwade us to acknowledge.

Certaintie of ſaluation.

from Chriſt [illegible]

4 [illegible] vice of God, and the promiſes:

5 Of whom are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the fleſh, Chriſt came, which is God, in all things to be praiſed for euer. Amen.

6 And it cannot be that the word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not all Iſraelites, which are of Iſrael:

7 Neither are they all children that are the ſeed of Abraham: but in Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called.

8 That is to ſay, They which are the children of the fleſh, theſe are not the children of God: but they which be the children of promiſe, are counted the ſeed.

*9 For this is the word of promiſe, * About this time will I come, and Sara ſhall haue a ſonne.*

*10 Not onely this, but alſo * Rebecca was with childe by one, euen our father Iſaac.*

11 For before the children were borne, when they had neither done good, neither bad (that the purpoſe of God by election might ſtand: not by reaſon of workes, but by the caller)

12 It was ſaid unto her, The elder ſhall ſerue the younger.

13 As it is written, Iacob haue I loued, but Eſau haue I hated.

14 What ſhall we ſay then? is there any unrighteouſneſſe with God? God forbid.

15 For he ſaith to Moſes, I will ſhew mercie, to whomſoeuer I ſhew mercie: and will haue compaſſion, on whomſoeuer I haue compaſſion.

16 So then election is not of the willer, nor of the runner: but of God that ſheweth mercy.

*17 For the Scripture ſaith unto Pharao, * Euen for the ſame purpoſe haue I ſtirred thee up, that I might ſhew my power in thee, and that my Name might be declared throughout all the world.*

18 So hath he mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardeneth.

19 Thou wilt ſay then unto me, Why then blameth he us yet? For who hath reſiſted his will?

*20 But, O man, what art thou which diſputeſt with God? * Shall the worke ſay to the workman, Why haſt thou made me on this faſhion?*

*21 * Hath not the Potter power ouer the clay, euen of the ſame lumpe to make one veſſell unto honour, and another unto diſhonour?*

22 What if God, willing to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power knowne, ſuffered with long patience the veſſels of wrath ordained to deſtruction, 23 To declare the riches of his glory on the veſſels of mercy, which hee had prepared unto glory?

c Here we ſee that they are the cauſe of their owne damnation by infidelity.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IX.

Rhem. 1 22 Suſtained.] That God is not the cauſe of any mans reprobation or damnation, otherwiſe then for puniſhment of his ſins, he ſheweth by that he expecteth all mens amendment with great patience, and conſequently that they have alſo free-will.

Fulk. 1 God reprobateth juſtly whom he will, and condemneth the reprobate juſtly for ſinne, but hereof it followeth not, that the reprobate have their will free, but from coaction, for to ſinne it is thrall, and ſlave, as S. Auguſtine ſaith, De cor. & gr. c.13.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IX.

Rhem. 1 Anathema.] Anathema, by uſe of Scripture is either that which by ſeparation from profane uſe, and by dedication to God, is holy, dreadfull, and not vulgarly to be touched: or contrariwiſe, that which is rejected, ſevered, or abandoned from God as curſed and deteſted, and therefore is to be avoided. And in this latter ſenſe (according as S. Paul taketh it, 1 Cor.16. If any love not our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, be he Anathema, that is to ſay, Away with him, Accurſed be he, Beware you accompany not with him) the Church and holy Councels uſe the word for a curſe and excommunication againſt heretikes and other notorious offenders, and blaſphemers. Now how the Apoſtle wiſhing himſelfe to be Anathema from Chriſt to ſave his countrey mens ſoules, did take this word, it is a very hard thing to determine. Some thinke, he deſired onely to die for their ſalvation. Others, that being very loth to be kept from the fruition of Chriſt, yet could be content to be ſo ſtill, for to ſave their ſoules. Others, he wiſhed what malediction or ſeparation from Chriſt ſoever that did not imply the diſfavour of God towards him, nor take away his love towards God. This onely is certaine, that it is a point of unſpeakable charity in the Apoſtles breſt, and a patterne to all Biſhops and Prieſts, how to love the ſalvation of their flocke. As the like was uttered by Moſes, when he ſaid, Either forgive this people, or blot mee out of thy booke.

Anathema.

In what ſenſe S. Paul wiſheth to be Anathema.

Exod.32,32.

6 Not all of Iſrael.] Though the people of the Iewes were many wayes honoured and priviledged, and namely by Chriſt taking fleſh of them: yet the promiſe of grace and ſalvation was neither onely made to them, nor to all them that carnally came of them or their fathers: Gods election and mercy depending upon his owne purpoſe, will, and determination, and not tied to any nation, family, or perſon.

Gods promiſe not made to carnall Iſrael.

7 But in Iſaac.] The promiſe made to Abraham was not in Iſmael, who was a ſonne borne onely by fleſh and nature: but in Iſaac, who was a ſonne obtained by promiſe, faith, and miracle: and was a figure of the Churches children borne to God in Baptiſme.

Iſaac preferred before Iſmael.

10 Of one copulation.] It is proved alſo by Gods chuſing of Iacob before Eſau (who were not onely brethren by father and mother, but alſo twinnes, and Eſau the elder of the two, which according to carnall count ſhould have had the preeminence) that God in giving graces followeth not the temporall or carnall prerogatives of men or families.

Iacob before Eſau.

Rhem. 2 11 Not yet borne.] By the ſame example of theſe twins [illegible] for originall ſin, which was alike in them both. And therefore [illegible] juſtly he might have [illegible], he ſaved of mercy one. Which one therefore, being as ill and as void of good as the other, muſt thinke of Gods [illegible], and confeſſe, that he was preferred before his brother which was elder then himſelfe, [illegible]. And his brother Eſau on the other ſide hath no cauſe to complaine, for that God neither did nor [illegible] thing to be done towards him, that his ſinne did not deſerve; for although God doth [illegible] and give his [illegible] without all merits, yet he doth not reprobate or hate any man but for ſin, or the foreſight thereof.

[illegible] reprobate.

Fulk. 2 Gods election and reprobation is moſt free, of his owne will, not upon the foreſight of the merits, of either of them, for he hath mercy on whom he will, and he hardeneth whom he will, verſe 18. Yet he condemneth none, but for ſinne, either originall onely, or elſe both originall and actuall.

Merits.

Rhem. 14 Is there iniquity?] Vpon the former diſcourſe that of two perſons equall, God calleth the one to mercy, and leaveth the other in his ſinne, one might inferre that God were unjuſt and an accepter of perſons. To which the Apoſtle anſwereth, that God were not juſt nor indifferent indeed, ſo to uſe the matter where grace or ſalvation were due. As if two men being chriſtened, both beleeve well, and live well: if God ſhould give heaven to the one, and ſhould damne the other, then were he unjuſt, partiall, and forgetfull of his promiſe: but reſpecting or taking two, who both be worthy of damnation (as all are before they be firſt called to mercy) then the matter ſtandeth on meere mercy, and of the givers will and liberality, in which caſe partiality hath no place. As for example.

That God is not unjuſt, or an accepter of perſons, is declared by familiar examples. S. Auguſtines example is of two debtors: the one forgiven all: and the other put to pay all, by the ſame creditour. Lib. de praedeſt. & grat. c.4.

1 Two malefactors being condemned both for one crime; the Prince pardoneth the one and letteth the law proceed on the other.	1 So likewiſe, God ſeeing all mankinde and every one of the ſame in a generall condemnation, and maſſe of ſinne, in and by Adam, delivereth ſome, and not other ſome.
2 The theefe that is pardoned, cannot attribute his eſcape to his owne deſerving, but to the Princes mercy.	2 All that be delivered out of that common damnation, be delivered by grace and pardon, through the meanes and merits of Chriſt.
3 The theefe that is executed cannot challenge the Prince that he was not pardoned alſo: but muſt acknowledge that he hath his deſerving.	3 Such as be left in the common caſe of damnation cannot complaine, becauſe they have their deſerving for ſinne.
4 The ſtanders by muſt not ſay, that he was executed becauſe the Prince would not pardon him; for that was not the cauſe, but his offence.	4 We may not ſay that ſuch be damned, becauſe God did not pardon them, but becauſe they had ſinne, and therefore deſerved it.
5 If they aske further, why the Prince pardoned not both, or executed not both: the anſwere is, that as mercy is a goodly vertue, ſo juſtice is neceſſary and commendable.	5 That ſome ſhould be damned, and not all pardoned, and other ſome pardoned rather then all condemned, is agreeable to Gods juſtice and mercy: both which vertues in Gods providence towards us are recommended.
6 But if it bee further demanded why Iohn rather then Thomas executed: or Thomas rather then Iohn pardoned: anſwere, that (the parties being otherwiſe equall) it hangeth meerely and wholly upon the Princes will and pleaſure.	6 That Saul ſhould be rather pardoned then Caiphas (I meane where two be equally evill and undeſerving) that is onely Gods holy will and appointment, by which many an unworthy man getteth pardon, but no good or juſt or innocent perſon is ever damned.

Rhem. 3 In all this mercie of God towards ſome, and juſtice towards other ſome, both the pardoned worke by their owne free-will, and thereby deſerve their ſalvation: and the other no leſſe, by their owne free-will, without all neceſſity, worke wickedneſſe, and themſelves and onely of themſelves procure their owne damnation. Therefore no man may without blaſphemy ſay, or can truly ſay, that he hath nothing to doe towards his owne ſalvation, but will live, and thinketh he may live without care or cogitation of his end the one way or the other, ſaying, If I be appointed to be ſaved, be it ſo: if I be but deſigned to damnation, I cannot helpe the matter: come what come may. All theſe ſpeeches and cogitations are ſinfull, and come of the enemy, and be rather ſignes of reprobation then of election. Therefore the good man muſt without ſearch of Gods ſecrets, worke his owne ſalvation, and (as S. Peter ſaith) make his election ſure by good workes, with continuall hope of Gods mercy, being aſſured that if he beleeve well, and doe well, he ſhall have well; for example, if a husbandman ſhould ſay, If God will, I ſhall have corne enough: if not, I cannot make it, and ſo neglect to till his ground: he may be ſure that he ſhall have none, becauſe he wrought not for it. Another man uſeth his diligence in tilling and ploughing, and committeth the reſt to God, he findeth the fruit of his labours.

Predeſtination and reprobation take not away free will, neither muſt any man be retchleſſe and deſperate.

2 Pet.1.10.

Fulk. 3 The elect worke willingly toward their ſalvation, their will by grace being made free in part, from the ſlavery of ſinne, whereunto all are ſubject by Adams fall, but they doe not thereby deſerve their ſalvation. For ſalvation dependeth upon their election, which you confeſſe to be without all reſpect of merits, or workes done or foreſeene, as S. Auguſtine ſheweth moſt plainly, Epiſt. 105. ad Sixtum. Yet they muſt worke their ſalvation, walking in that way by Gods grace, which he hath appointed for all them that attaine to ſalvation. And they muſt make ſure their election unto themſelves (which is moſt ſure in Gods knowledge) by good works which proceeding of faith, are the undoubted fruits of Gods election.

Free-will.
Grace.
Merits.

Rhem. 4 16 Not of the willer.] If our election, calling, or firſt comming to God, lay wholly or principally upon our owne will or workes: or if our willing or endeavouring to be good, would ſerve without the helpe and grace of God, as the Pelagians taught, then our calling were wholly in our ſelves, which the Apoſtle denieth; and then might Pharao and other indurate perſons (whom God hath permitted to be obſtinate, to ſhew his power and juſt judgement upon them) be converted when themſelves liſt, without Gods helpe and aſſiſtance: whereas we ſee the contrary in all ſuch obſtinate offenders, whom God for puniſhment of former ſins, viſiteth not with his grace, that by no threats, miracles, nor perſwaſions they can be converted. Whereupon we may not with heretikes inferre, that man hath not free-will, or that our will worketh nothing in our converſion or comming to God: but this onely, that our willing or working of any good to our ſalvation, commeth of Gods ſpeciall motion, grace and aſſiſtance, and that it is the ſecondary cauſe, not the principall.

Our election or converſion is not of our ſelves, but of Gods grace and mercy.

Fulk. 4 Our election, calling, and firſt comming to God, lieth wholly in Gods mercy, and not either wholly, or principally, or any thing at all in our owne will or workes. But whom God elected before time, he calleth in time by him appointed, and of unwilling, by his grace, maketh them willing, to come to him: and to walke in good workes, unto which he hath elected them. So that man hath no free-will, untill it be freed, mans will worketh nothing in our converſion untill it be converted, man hath no power to change his will unto better, except it be given of God. *Aug. retract. l.1.c.22. Eſt liberum non tamen bonum, eſt liberum non tamen ſanum, eſt liberum non tamen juſtum. liberum ſub Deo, id eſt, [illegible] juſtitia [illegible] liberum ſub gratia, [illegible] ob hoc juſtum & [illegible] ter liberum, [illegible] miſerenti[illegible] liberatum, [illegible].

Rhem. 5 17 To this purpoſe have I raiſed.] He doth not ſay, that he hath of purpoſe raiſed [illegible] up to [illegible] he was the cauſe of [illegible] ſinne in Pharao, or that he intended his damnation directly or [illegible], or any [illegible] but in reſpect of his demerits, but rather (as the Apoſtle ſaith ſtraight after in this chapter [illegible] hardened and [illegible] offenders) that he with long patience and toleration expected his converſion; and (as S. C[illegible] interpreteth this word, Excitavi) preſerved him alive to repent, whom he might juſtly have condemned before. In [illegible] whence this allegation is, we reade, Poſui te, I have put or ſet thee up, as here, I have raiſed thee, that is to [illegible] I have purpoſely advanced thee to be ſo great a King, and choſen thee out to be a notorious example both of the [illegible] malice that is in ſuch whom I have for ſo great ſins forſaken, and alſo to ſhew to the world, that no obſtinacie of never ſo mighty offenders can reſiſt me to doe any thing which ſhall not fall to my glory. Which is no more to ſay, but that God often for the puniſhment of Nations, and to ſhew his juſtice and glory, giveth wicked Princes unto them; and [illegible] them with power and all proſperity, and taking his grace from them upon their deſerts, hardeneth their hearts ſo, as they withſtand and contemne God, and afflict his people, in whoſe end and fall, either temporall or eternall, at the length God will ever be glorified. Neither would he either raiſe or ſuffer any ſuch thing, or give them power and proſperity in this life, whereupon he knoweth they will be worſe, but that he can work all that to his honour and glory. Marry, that he uſeth not ſuch rigorous juſtice on all that deſerve it, that is his great grace and mercy. And that he exerciſeth his juſtice upon ſome certaine perſons, rather then upon other ſome of equall deſerts, that lieth wholly upon his will, in whoſe judgements there be many things ſecret, but nothing unjuſt.

Exod. 9, 16. In what ſenſe God raiſed up Pharao, &c.

Fulk. 5 The purpoſe for which God ſet up Pharao, is manifeſt in the text, that in him he might ſhew his power, &c. God made all things, for himſelſe, even the wicked man unto the evill day. Therefore was Pharao a veſſell of wrath ordained to deſtruction verſe 22. His reprobation therefore was for the glory of God, his condemnation moſt juſt, for his obſtinate contempt of God and his word.

Reprobation.

Rhem. 6 20 Who art thou?] Here the Apoſtle ſtayeth the raſhneſſe and preſumption of ſuch poore wormes, as take upon them to queſtion with God of their election or reprobation: as certaine impious heretikes of our time have done, ſetting out bookes farſed with moſt blaſphemous and erronious doctrine concerning this high and hidden myſtery, and having given occaſion to the ignorant which alwayes be curious to jangle, and perniciouſly to erre in theſe things, that are impoſſible to be underſtood of any, or well thought of, but of the obedient and humble.

Hereticall books concerning Predeſtination.

Fulk. 6 What bookes you meane, farſed with blaſphemous and erronious doctrine I know not. But I know divers bookes of Predeſtination, written by learned men in this time, that open the truth of this myſtery, as farforth as it is revealed in the Scriptures, to the glory of God, and great comfort of his children: upon the ſame principles for the moſt part, that you doe acknowledge in theſe notes; wherein you confeſſe in effect, the ſubſtance of the doctrine, though you ſhew not the moſt profitable uſe thereof, to the glory of God, and the humbling of all fleſh before him, but flie from it, as much as you can, and ſeeke to obſcure it.

Slander.

Rhem. 7 21 The Potter.] This example of the pot and potter reacheth no further but to declare, that the creature may not reaſon with God his maker; why he giveth not one ſo great grace as another; or why he pardoneth not one as well as another: no more then the chamber pot may challenge the Potter why he was not made a drinking pot, as well as another. And therefore the heretikes that extend this ſimilitude to prove that man hath no free-will no more then a piece of clay, doe untruly and deceitfully apply the example, ſpecially when we may ſee expreſly in the booke of Exodus, that Pharao notwithſtanding his indurate heart, had free-will: where both it is ſaid, He would not diſmiſſe the people, and He indurated his owne heart himſelfe, Exod. 8, 15. and (in the Hebrew) v. 32, &c. 9, 35. 1 Reg. 6, 6. *And this Apoſtle alſo writeth, that * a man may* cleanſe himſelfe from the filthy, and ſo become a veſſell of honour in the houſe of God.

The example of the pot and the Potter.

2 Tim. 2, 21.

Fulk. 7 I ſuppoſe there was never man ſo mad, to ſay, that a man hath no more free-will then a piece of clay. But this example teacheth, that Gods election and reprobation dependeth no more of mans will, then the forme which the Potter giveth to the clay, dependeth upon the will of the clay, which it hath not. Neither had man any more will, before he was. But being now created he hath a will, free from coaction. And the firſt man, had will free from ſervitude of ſinne, which by ſinning he loſt, as witneſſeth S. Aug. Enchir. ad Lau. c. 30. For free-will, being made captive, availeth to nothing but to ſinne: but to juſtice except it be made free and holpen by God, it availeth not. Contr. duas Ep. Pel. l. 3. c. 8. There is no doubt therefore, but Pharao had his will free from conſtraint, but yet ſlave to ſinne. Neither doth the Apoſtle ſay, 2 Tim. 2. 21. that a man may cleanſe himſelfe from the filthy, and ſo become a veſſell of honour: but if a man doe or ſhall cleanſe himſelfe, which he cannot doe by the ſtrength of free-will, but by the grace of God, converting his will and giving him ſtrength to performe that he willeth.

CHAP. X.

The Law was not (as the Iewes ignorant zeale ſuppoſed) for them to juſtifie themſelves by it (conſidering that they could not fulfill it:) but to bring them to Chriſt, to beleeve in him, and ſo for his ſake to be juſtified by the grace of God: 5 according to Moſes ſaying, and the Apoſtles preaching: 11 that ſo the Gentiles alſo (according to the Prophets) hearing and beleeving might come to juſtice: the Iewes in the meane time (though inexcuſably) remaining incredulous.

BRethren, the will of my heart ſurely and prayer, to God, is for them, unto ſalvation.

2 For I give them teſtimony that they have zeale of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 For, not knowing || the juſtice of God, and ſeeking to eſtabliſh their owne, they have not beene ſubject to the juſtice of God.

4 For, ‡ the end of the Law, is Chriſt: unto juſtice to every one that beleeveth.

‡ The Law was not given to make a man juſt or perfect by it ſelfe, but to bring us to Chriſt to be juſtified by him.

5 For Moſes wrote, ‡ that, the juſtice which is of the Law, the man that hath done it ſhall live in it.

6 But || the juſtice which is of faith, ſaith thus, [illegible] heaven? [illegible] Chriſt downe.

Levit. 18, 5.

7 [illegible] into the depth? that is to call Chriſt againe from the dead.

Deut. 30, 12.

8 But what ſaith the Scripture? The word is nigh, in thy mouth, and in thy heart; this is the word of faith which we preach.

9 For if thou confeſſe with thy mouth our Lord Ieſus, and in thy heart beleeve that God hath raiſed him up from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved.

10 For with the heart we beleeve unto juſtice: but with the mouth confeſſion is made to ſalvation.

The Epiſtle upon S. Andrews day, Novemb. 30.

11 For the Scripture ſaith: Whoſoever beleeveth in him, ſhall not be confounded.

Eſa. 28, 16.

12 For there is no diſtinction of the Iew and the Greeke: for one is Lord of all, rich toward all that invocate him.

13 For every one ‡ whoſoever ſhall invocate the Name of our Lord, ſhall be ſaved.

‡ To beleeve in him and to invocate him, is to ſerve him with all love and ſincere affection. All that ſo do, ſhal doubtleſſe be ſaved and ſhall never be confounded.

Ioel 2, 32.

14 || How then ſhall they invocate in whom they have not beleeved? Or how ſhall they beleeve him whom they have not heard? And how ſhall they heare without a preacher?

15 But how ſhall they preach || unleſſe they be ſent? as it is written: How beautifull are the feet of them that evangelize peace, of them that evangelize good things?

Eſa. 52, 7.

16 But all ‡ doe not obey the Goſpel. For Eſay ſaith, Lord, who hath beleeved the hearing of us?

Eſa. 53, 1.

17 Faith then, is by hearing: and hearing is by the word of Chriſt.

18 But I ſay, have they not heard? And certes into all the earth hath the ſound of them gone forth: and unto the ends of the whole world the words of them.

Pſal. 18, 5.

19 But I ſay hath not Iſrael knowne? Moſes firſt ſaith, I will bring you to emulation in that which is not a nation: in a fooliſh nation, I will drive you into anger.

Deut. 32, 21.

20 But Eſay is bold, and ſaith, I was found of them that did not ſeeke me: openly I appeared to them || that asked not of me.

Eſa. 65, 1.

21 But to Iſrael he ſaith, All the day have I ſpred my hands to a people that beleeveth not, and contradicteth me.

Eſa. 65, 2.

BRethren, my hearts deſire and prayer to God for Iſrael is, that they might be ſaved.

2 For I beare them record, that they have a zeale of God: but not according to knowledge.

3 For they being ignorant of Gods righteouſneſſe, and going about to ſtabliſh their owne righteouſneſſe, have not beene obedient unto the righteouſneſſe of God.

4 For Chriſt is the end of the Law, for righteouſneſſe to all that beleeve.

5 For Moſes writeth of the righteouſneſſe which is of the Law, how that the man which doth thoſe things, ſhall live by them.

6 But the righteouſneſſe which is of faith, [illegible] fetch Chriſt downe from above.

7 [illegible] that is, to fetch up Chriſt againe from the dead.

8 But what ſaith he? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart. The ſame is the word of faith which we preach.

9 For if thou ſhalt [illegible] with thy mouth the Lord Ieſus, [illegible] in thine heart, that God raiſed him from the dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved.

10 For with the heart man beleeveth unto righteouſneſſe, and with the mouth confeſſion is made unto ſalvation.

11 For the Scripture ſaith, Whoſoever beleeveth on him, ſhall not be confounded.

12 There is no difference betweene the Iew and the Greeke: for the ſame Lord over all, is rich unto all that call upon him.

13 For whoſoever ſhall call on the Name of the Lord, ſhall be ſaved.

14 How then ſhall they call on him, on whom they have not beleeved? How ſhall they beleeve on him, of whom they have not heard? How ſhall they heare without a preacher?

15 And how ſhall they preach, except they be ſent? As it is written, How beautifull are the feet of them which bring good tidings of peace, and bring good tidings of good things?

16 But they have not all obeyed the Goſpel: for Eſaias ſaith, Lord, who hath beleeved our ſayings?

17 So then faith commeth by hearing, and hearing commeth by the word of God.

18 But, (I aske) have they not heard? No doubt, their ſound went out into all lands, and their words into the ends of the world.

*19 But I demand whether Iſrael did know, or not? Firſt Moſes ſaith, * I will provoke you to envy by them that are no people, and by a fooliſh nation I will anger you.*

Deut. 32, 21.

*20 And Eſaias is bold, and ſaith, * I have beene found of them that ſought me not: I have beene made manifeſt unto them that asked not after me.*

Eſa. 65, 1.

*21 But againſt Iſrael he ſaith, * All day long have I ſtretched out my hand unto a people that beleeveth not, but ſpeaketh againſt me.*

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. X.

Rhem. 1 5 That, the juſtice.] The juſtice of the Law of Moſes went no further of it ſelfe, but to ſave a man from the temporall death and puniſhment preſcribed to the tranſgreſſours of the ſame.

Fulk. 1 The juſtice of the Law of Moſes, if any man could keepe it perfectly, was able to juſtifie him to eternall life, as the tranſgreſſor thereof deſerved the curſe of God unto eternal death. So ſaith Chryſoſtome upon this text, Hom. 17. For a man cannot otherwiſe be juſtified in the Law, but he that hath fulfilled all things. But that as yet hath not beene poſſible for any man. Therefore that juſtice is loſt. The Authour of the Commentaries under the name of Hierome ſaith: Some of this place thinke, that the Iewes deſerved this preſent life onely by the workes of the Law; which the words of our Lord declare not to be true, which being asked of eternall life, ſetteth forth the Commandements of the Law, ſaying: If thou wilt enter into life, keepe the Commandements, whereof we underſtand, that he which in his time hath kept the Law, had life everlaſting. Of the ſame judgement are Theodoret, Oecumenius, and Theophilactus, and thoſe ancient Fathers, that ſeeme to ſay otherwiſe, meane of the Ceremoniall Law, not of the morrall Law, as it is plaine by S. Ambroſe in cap. 3. ad Gal.

Rhem. 2 16 Doe not obey.] We ſee then that it is in a mans free-will to beleeve or not to beleeve, to obey or diſobey the Goſpel or truth preached.

FVLK. 3 We [illegible] in [illegible] grace and [illegible] ſeeing [illegible] worke of [illegible] (ſaith he) [illegible] [illegible] l. 1. c. 2 [illegible].

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. X.

RHEM. 3 The iuſtice of God.] The iuſtice of God, is that which God giveth us through Chriſt [illegible] is that which they had or challenged to have of [illegible] and by their owne ſtrength, [illegible] of the Law without the helpe or grace of Chriſt.

[illegible] The iuſtice of faith.] The iuſtice which is of faith, reacheth to the life to come, [illegible] the truth of ſuch Articles as concerne the [illegible], of Chriſt Aſcending to heaven, his Deſcending to hell, his comming downe to be incarnate, and his Reſurrection and returne againe to be glorified by which his actions we be pardoned, iuſtified and ſaved, as by the Law we could never be.

Gods iuſtice and the Iewes owne iuſtice.

Iuſtice of faith.

RHEM. 3 8 The word of faith.] *The word of faith is the whole Law of Chriſt, concerning both life and doctrine, grounded upon this, that Chriſt is our Saviour, and that he is riſen againe. Which point (as all other) muſt both be beleeved in heart, and alſo be confeſſed by mouth; for though a man be iuſtified inwardly when he hath the vertues of faith, hope, and charity from God: yet if occaſion be given, he is alſo bound to confeſſe with his mouth, and by all his externall actions, without ſhame or feare of the world, that which he inwardly beleeveth: or elſe he cannot be ſaved. Which is againſt certaine old heretikes that taught, a man might ſay or doe what he would, for feare or danger, ſo that he kept his faith in heart.

Open confeſſion and proteſtation of our faith is ſometime neceſſary.

* Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 31. hiſt. Eccleſ.

FVLK. 3 The word of faith, is the doctrine of iuſtification by faith, without the workes of the Law, as it is manifeſt by the ſixth verſe, out of which faith, proceedeth hope, love, and confeſſion, and all good workes, but the root of all is faith onely, by which we are accounted iuſt, in the ſight of God. S. Ambroſe upon theſe words of the text; This is the word of faith which we preach, giveth this onely interpretation, Nullum opus dicit legis, ſed ſolam fidem donandam in cauſa Chriſti. He ſaith that no worke of the Law, but faith onely, is to be given in the cauſe of Chriſt. Theodoret giveth this expoſition, Quod dixit Moſes de preceptis legitimis, hoc nos de fide dicimus. That which Moſes ſaid of the precepts of the Law, the ſame ſay we of faith. Wherefore faith which iuſtifieth before God, is not the whole Law of Chriſt which containeth both faith and workes; but faith onely, that is faith conſidered without workes, yet as the root of all good workes.

RHEM. 4 14 How ſhall they invocate?] This maketh not (as heretikes pretend) againſt invocation of Saints: the Apoſtle ſaying nothing elſe, but that they cannot invocate Chriſt as their Lord and Maſter, in whom they doe not beleeve, and whom they never heard of. For he ſpeaketh of the Gentiles or Pagans, who could not invocate him, unleſſe they did firſt beleeve in him. To the due invocation of Chriſt, we muſt know him, and our duties to him. And ſo is it true alſo that we cannot pray to our bleſſed Lady or any Saint in heaven, till we beleeve and know their perſons, dignity and grace, and truſt that they can helpe us. But if our Adverſaries thinke that we cannot invocate them, becauſe we cannot beleeve in them: let them underſtand that the Scripture uſeth alſo this ſpeech, to beleeve in men: and it is the very Hebrew phraſe, which they ſhould not be ignorant of that brag thereof ſo much. Exod. 14, 31. They beleeved in God and in Moſes, and in 3 Paral. 20, 20. in the Hebrew, Epiſt. ad Philem. v. 5. And the ancient fathers did reade in the Creed indifferently, I beleeve in the Catholike Church; and, I beleeve the Catholike Church, Conc. Nicen. apud Epiph. in fine. Ancorat. Hieron. contr. Lucif. Cyril. Hieroſ. Catech. 17.

The place alledged againſt invocation of Saints anſwered.

FVLK. 4 Wee cannot call upon any, whom wee doe not know out of Gods word, and beleeve to bee both able and willing to helpe us. Therefore Papiſts may have a vaine perſwaſion, of the ability of Saints to helpe them: but teſtimony of the holy Scripture to aſſure their conſcience they have none. And further, ſeeing wee can invocate none, but him in whom we beleeve, and we ought to beleeve in God onely: we cannot without ſacriledge, invocate any creatures. Howbeit, you defend that you may beleeve alſo in creatures. And that the Scripture uſeth this ſpeech, Exod. 14. 31. They beleeved in God and in Moſes, where your owne tranſlation hath Crediderunt Domino, & Moſi ſervo ejus, that is, they gave the credit to the Lord, and to Moſes his ſervant. In the next text, 2 Paral. 20. 20. your owne tranſlation hath Credite in Domino Deo veſtro & ſecuri eritis, Credite Prophetis ejus & cuncta evenient proſpera. Beleeve in the Lord your God, and you ſhall be ſure, beleeve his Prophets, or give credit to his Prophets, and all ſhall fall out proſperouſly. But here you muſt forſake your owne tranſlation though it be true, and flie to the Hebrew text, where the propoſition or ſervile letter, is in both alike. Whereunto I anſwere you, that the Hebrewes phraſe ought not in Greeke, or Latine, to be tranſlated with the Prepoſition that ruleth an Accuſative or Ablative caſe, but with a Dative caſe, as your vulgar Latine interpreter hath well obſerved: and ſo hath the Greeke text, in the firſt place, but in the ſecond a Prepoſition before the Dative. But in the Epiſtle to Philemon, the text is, Hearing of thy love and faith which thou haſt toward our Lord Ieſus, and unto all the Saints, where every man that is not obſtinately blinde, doth ſee, that faith is referred to Chriſt, and love to the Saints, which diſtinction and divers relation is obſerved even by your owne Latine interpreter, and by your ſelves. Therefore the Scripture uſeth no ſuch ſpeech, that can be tranſlated in Engliſh, whereby it ſhould appeare, that we may beleeve in creatures, that is, put our whole truſt in creatures. For as S. Cyprian ſaith: Non credit in Deum, qui non in eo ſolo collocat totius felicitatis ſuæ fiduciam. He doth not beleeve in God which doth not place in him alone the truſt of his whole felicity. De duplici martyrio, Greg. Bæticus ad Gallam & Placidiam. Si creatura eſt filius unigenitus, quomodo qui credit in eum non perit, ſed vitam habebit æternam, cum credere in creaturam ſit divinitatis offenſio? Reſpice ad Apoſtolum Paulum, conſidera quæ opprobria, quas obſcœnitates de his refutat, qui ut ipſe ait, commutaverunt veritatem Dei in mendacio, & coluerunt & ſervierunt creaturæ potius quam Creatori. Tu ſi ſic credis & colis & ſervis unigenito filio Dei, ut eum dicas eſſe creaturam, illa te mala miſer expectant quibus illi puniuntur, qui commutaverunt, &c. But the Fathers (you ſay further) did reade in the Creed indifferently, I beleeve in the Catholike Church, and I beleeve the Catholike Church. I grant ſome did ſo, but in the ſame ſenſe: namely, that to beleeve in the Church, was no more but to beleeve that there is a Catholike Church, as they ſaid alſo, I beleeve in one Baptiſme, I beleeve in the reſurrection of the dead, and in the life to come. For that diſtinction in ſenſe, muſt be obſerved which Ruffinus ſheweth, to be alſo in the words: Non dicit in ſanctam Eccleſiam, &c. He ſaid not, I beleeve in the holy Catholike Church, nor in the remiſſion of ſinnes, nor in the reſurrection of the body, for if he had added the Prepoſition In, there ſhould have beene the ſame force of meaning, with that which went before. But now in theſe words in which is ſet forth our faith of the Godhead, it is ſaid, In God the Father, and in Ieſus Chriſt his Sonne, and in the holy Ghoſt. But in the reſt where the ſpeech is not of the Godhead, but of creatures and myſteries, the Prepoſition In, is not added, that it ſhould be ſaid in the holy Church, but that we ſhould beleeve that there is an holy Church, not as God, but as a Church gathered to God. And men ſhould beleeve that there is remiſſion of ſinnes, not in the remiſſion of ſinnes, and they ſhould beleeve the reſurrection of the body, not in the reſurrection of the body. Therefore by this ſyllable of Prepoſition, the Creatour is diſtinguiſhed from the creatures, and things

RHEM. 5 15 Vnleſſe they be ſent.] This place of the Apoſtle invincibly condemneth all the preachings, writings, ordinances, innovations, and uſurpations of Church, Pulpit, and whatſoever our new Evangeliſts have intruded themſelves and entred into by the window: ſhewing, that they be every one from the higheſt to the loweſt, falſe prophets, running and uſurping, being never lawfully [illegible]. Which is ſo evident in the heretikes of our dayes, that the Calviniſts confeſſe it in themſelves, and ſay that there is an exception to be made in them, becauſe they found the ſtate of the Church interrupted.

Preachers not lawfully called nor ſent.

Confeſſ. des Egl. de France.

FVLK. 5 The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the ordinary calling or ſending by the Church, nor of the teſtimony of conſcience, that every one which is called ought to have, that he is called and ſent of God, but of the providence of God, by which the preachers of the Goſpel are ſent, whether they have lawfull calling by men or no, to preach the Goſpel to any nation, which is an argument of Gods love unto that people, to whom the meſſage of ſalvation is offered. But that no men ought to intrude themſelves into the office of preaching, without lawfull calling, it is prooved ſufficiently by other places of Scripture. And we (God be thanked) have lawfull calling, howſoever you ſlander the confeſſion of the miniſters of the French Church; which doe not require an exception to be made in them, becauſe they found the ſtate of the Church interrupted, but ſhew that the ordinary calling is not alwaies neceſſary, where the ſtate of the Church is ſo corrupted, that it cannot be had of them that are accounted to holde the Church, but are indeed profeſſed enemies of the true Church. But that the ordinary calling or ſending is not [illegible], where either there is no Church, or the Church is ſo corrupted with hereſie that it ceaſeth to be a member of Chriſt: we may learne by examples of nations converted to the faith by them that had no calling at all of the Church. As a great nation of the Indians was by Ædeſius and Frumentius. Ruff. hiſt. lib. 1. cap. 9. Theod. li. 1. cap. 24. And the nation of the Iberians by a captive woman, which after ſhe had converted the King and the Queene, they both became teachers of the Goſpel to the people. Ruff. li. 1. c. 10. The nation of the Inmeres, a moſt warlike people of Perſia, received the faith before they had any Biſhop, as teſtifieth Niceph. li. 16. cap. 37. And who doubteth but the ſame may be done in a nation infected by hereſie? when even in a Catholike and ſound Church, Alexander Biſhop of Ieruſalem, and Theoctiſtus of Cæſarea, defend themſelves againſt Demetrius Biſhop of Alexandria, who reprehended them for ſuffering Origines, before he was ordeined by the Church, to teach in the Church, and to interpret the Scriptures in the preſence of Biſhops. Yea, they charge Demetrius with a lie, becauſe he had written that it was never heard of or done before, that Lay-men ſhould teach in preſence of a Biſhop, and bring foorth notable examples of the contrary cuſtome: namely, that Euelpis was required to teach by Neon Biſhop of Larindi; Paulinus by Celſus at Iconium, Theodorus by Atticus at Synnadorum, and divers other in other places. Yea Demetrius himſelfe which reprehended them, ſeemeth to allow, that when no Biſhop was preſent, ſome other Lay-man might teach; ſeeing he taketh occaſion to reproove them, becauſe they ſuffered Origen to teach in preſence of the ordinary Biſhop. Euſeb. lib. 6. cap. 19. Ruffinus concludeth hereof, in his tranſlation of Euſebius, that there is no doubt, but many other Lay-men in other places, if there be any which can ſet foorth the worke of God in word and doctrine, are provoked by the Biſhops to doe it. lib. 6. cap. 19. How much more are they bound in charity, where there is no ordinary Catholike teachers, to endevour to convert heretikes to the Catholike faith. And yet this is vainely objected againſt Luther, Calvin, and others, that they lacked ſending or calling, of which ſome, as they had baptiſme, ſo they had calling of the Popiſh Church, to preach therein, other had ordinary calling of the Catholike Churches, ſeparated from the Popiſh hereſie, to be Preachers and Paſtours of them.

Lawfull calling.

Slander.

RHEM. 6 20 That asked not.] That Chriſt was found of theſe that never asked after him, it prooveth that the firſt grace and our firſt iuſtification is without merits. That God called ſo continually and earneſtly by his prophets, and by other his ſignes and wonders, upon the Iewes; and they withſtood it: free will is prooved, and that God would have men ſaved, and that they be the cauſe of their owne damnation themſelves.

The firſt iuſtification of meere grace.

Free will.

FVLK. 6 The firſt grace and iuſtification being without merits by onely faith, is ſufficient to glorification, as the Apoſtle ſaith: Whom God iuſtifieth, he glorifieth. Neither doth the Scripture teach any grace or iuſtification by merits. It hath beene often anſwered that mans will is free from coaction, but yet thrall to ſinne, untill by grace it be enlarged.

Our iuſtification to ſalvation.

Free will.

CHAP. XI.

Not all the Iewes were reprobate, but ſome elect: and they by grace obtained iuſtice, the reſt (according to the Prophets) being excæcated. 11 Againſt whom notwithſtanding the Chriſtian Gentiles (to whom by that occaſion Chriſt is come) muſt not inſult: but rather feare every man himſelfe to be likewiſe cut off the tree (which is the Catholike Church) 25 and know that when all the Gentiles are brought into the Church, then (about the end of the world) ſhall the multitude of the Iewes alſo come in: 33 according to the diſpoſition of the wonderfull wiſedome of God.

I Say then: Hath God rejected his people? God forbid; for I alſo am an Iſraelite, of the ſeed of Abraham, of the tribe of Ben-jamin.

2 God hath not rejected his people which he foreknew. Or know you not in Elias what the Scripture ſaith: how he requeſteth God againſt Iſrael?

10 Be their eies darkened, that they may not ſee: and their backe make thou alwaies crooked.

11 I ſay then, haue they ſo ſtumbled, ‡ that they ſhould fall? God forbid, but by their offence, ſaluation is to the Gentiles, that they may emulate them.

12 And if the offence of them be the riches of the world, and the diminution of them ‡ the riches of the Gentiles, how much more the fulneſſe of them.

13 For to you Gentiles I ſay, as long verely as I am the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, I will honour my miniſtery, 14 If by any meanes I may prouoke my fleſh to emulation, and may ſaue ſome of them.

15 For if the loſſe of them be the reconciliation of the world: what ſhall the receiuing be, but life from the dead?

16 And if the firſt fruit be holy, the maſſe alſo: and if the root be holy, the boughs alſo:

17 And if ſome of the boughs be broken, and thou whereas thou waſt a wilde Oliue, art graffed in them, and art made partaker of the root and of the fatneſſe of the Oliue, 18 Glory not againſt the boughes. And if thou glory: not thou beareſt the root, but the roote thee.

19 Thou ſayeſt then: The boughes were broken, that I might be graffed in.

20 Well: ‖ becauſe of incredulity they were broken, but thou by faith doeſt ſtand: be not too highly wiſe, but ‡ feare.

21 For if God hath not ſpared the naturall boughes: leſt perhaps he will not ſpare thee neither?

22 See then the goodneſſe and the ſeuerity of God: vpon them ſurely that are fallen, the ſeuerity: but vpon thee the goodneſſe of God, if thou abide in his goodneſſe, otherwiſe thou alſo ſhalt be cut off.

23 But

‡ The Iewes are not rejected wholly and incurably and for ever: but for a part, and for a time ſuffered to fall. Which God did turne to the Gentiles generall good. ‡ If God could and did turne their fall & ſin into the good of the Gentils, much more wil he work good of their generall conuerſion, which ſhall be at length the accompliſhment of the Church conſiſting of both the nations.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XI.

RHEM. 3 4 Seven thouſand.] The Heretikes alledge this place and example very impertinently to proue that the Church may be wholly ſecret, hid, or vnknowne; for though the faithfull were forced to keepe cloſe in that perſecution of Achab and Iezabel, which was onely in the kingdome of the tenne tribes, that is, of Iſrael: yet at the very ſame time, in Ieruſalem and all the kingdome of Iuda, the externall worſhip and profeſſion of faith was open to all the world, and well knowne to Elias *and the faithfull, ſo many, that * the very Souldiers onely were numbred aboue tenne hundred thouſand, beſides that there is a great difference betweene the Chriſtian Church and the Iewes, ours reſting vpon better promiſes then theirs. And we will not put the Proteſtants to proue that there were ſeuen thouſand of their ſect, when their new* Elias Luther began: but let them proue that there were ſeuen, or any one, either then or in all ages before him, that was in all poyntes of his beliefe. Heretikes there were before him, as Iovinian, Vigilantius, Helvidius, Wickliffe, &c. and with him, Zuinglius, Caluin, &c. who beleeued as he did in ſome things, but not in all.

Gods anſwere to Elias of ſeuen thouſand nothing for the Proteſtants inuiſible Church. 2 Par.17.

FVLK. 3. You may as well ſay, that Saint Paul alledgeth this example impertinently, to proue that a remnant may be ſaued, which is vnknowen to men. But that the Church at other times hath beene ſo hidden, that there was no publike exerciſe of religion in Iuda and Ieruſalem, the ſtory of Scripture is full of examples. [illegible] of Achaz, [illegible] of God was remooued, and an idolatrous altar ſet by the high Prieſt [illegible] vp. 2 Reg.16. And cap.17.19. it is ſaid, that neither Iuda did keepe the Lords commandements, but [illegible] the errours of Iſrael: where was then the viſible Church? Likewiſe when Manaſſes built idolatrous altars in the temple. 2 Reg.21.4, & 5. Alſo in the dayes of Amon which walked in all the wayes of Manaſſes. 2 Reg.21.22. But you haue another helpe, to ſay that the Church of Chriſt reſteth upon better promiſes then the Church of the Iewes. I pray you where is there any promiſe that the Church of Chriſt ſhall neuer be hidden? we find a propheſie that ſhe ſhall flie into the wilderneſſe. Apoc.12. But for the perpetuall continuance of the Church of the Iewes untill the firſt comming of Chriſt, there be as many and as good promiſes, as for the Church of the Gentiles to continue untill the ſecond comming of Chriſt. Howbeit, you will not put vs to proue that there were ſeuen thouſand, but ſeuen, or any one of our beliefe when Luther began, whereas it is certaine there were many thouſands (beſides them that were ſcattered and hidden in England, France and other nations) in Calabria, Piemont, Morauia, Bohemia, and other places, which many hundred yeeres before Luther, profeſſed the ſame doctrine of Chriſt which Luther taught in Saxonie, and were called of the Papiſts Waldenſes, Pauperes de Lugduno, Leoniſtæ, Lollardi, Picardi, and by ſuch other opprobrious names: whoſe doctrine in all the chiefe poynts to be the ſame, witneſſeth Reinerius an inquiſitor, more then three hundred yeeres agoe. And their apologie againſt Rokecana, and other that ſubmitted themſelues to the Councell of Baſil, ſet out Anno 1431. Alſo by the treatiſe of Claudius Couſard a Doctor of Diuinity of Paris, which profeſſeth to confute the errours of the Waldenſes, Wickleuits, and other ancient heretikes (as he calleth them) becauſe they conteined in a maner (as he ſaith) all the hereſies of this time long agoe by the Popiſh Church condemned. Therefore it is a fond and ridiculous euaſion, to ſay; there was not any that did beleeue in all poynts as Luther did, when there is no ancient writer but hath ſome priuate opinions, and perhaps peculiar to himſelfe: yet they that conſent in the chiefe and neceſſary Articles of faith, notwithſtanding they agree not in all points, haue beene alwaies accounted members of one true Church: as Anicetus and Polycarpus, Victor and Irenæus, Cornelius and Cyprian, Epiphanius and Chryſoſtome, Hierome and Auguſtine, Hierome and Ruffinus, Theodoretus and Cyrillus, Leo and the Councell of Chalcedon, and ſuch other. You your ſelues will not refuſe the Thomiſts and Scotiſts, Dominicans, and Franciſcans, Ieſuits, and other Papiſts, though they agree not in all points of doctrine.

RHEM. 4 6 Not now of works.] If ſaluation be attributed to good workes done of nature without faith and Gods helpe, the ſame cannot be of grace, for ſuch workes exclude grace, fauour, and mercy: and challenge onely of debt, and not of gift. Therefore take heed here of the Heretikes expoſition, that untruely exclude Chriſtian mens workes from neceſſity or merit of ſaluation, which are done with and by Gods grace, and therefore euidently conſiſt with the ſame, and be ioyned with Gods grace as cauſes of our ſaluation. Our aduerſaries are like ill Potecaries, euer taking quid pro quo, either of ignorance, or of intent to deceiue the ſimple.

What workes are not, and what are the cauſe of ſaluation.

FVLK. 4 The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the election by grace by which all are ſaued, therefore he excludeth the merit of all workes as well of the circumciſed Iewes and baptiſed Chriſtians, as of the unbeleeuing Gentiles: yet are Chriſtian men bound of neceſſity to doe good workes, not as cauſes meriting ſaluation, but as the end of their election: Epheſ.1.4. Epheſ.2.8,9,10, where the Apoſtle ſayeth, We were choſen before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy and unblameable before him in loue. And, You are ſaued by grace through faith, and that not of your ſelues, it is the gift of God. Not of workes, leſt any man ſhould boaſt. For we are his workemanſhip, created unto good workes in Chriſt Ieſus, which God hath prepared that we ſhould walke in them. Wherefore the Papiſts be not like ill Potecaries, that for lacke of one medicine take another as good, or at leaſt not hurtfull, but like moſt venemous ſerpents that poyſon all things that they touch or come neere unto.

RHEM. 6 20 Becauſe of incredulity.] He repreſſeth the pride of the Gentiles, vaunting themſelues of their receiuing, and of the Iewes rejection, namely in that they thought the Iewes to be forſaken for no other cauſe, but that they might come into their roomes: declaring that the direct and proper cauſe of their forſaking, was their incredulity, exhorting the Gentiles to beware of the ſame, becauſe they may fall as well as the other, and that God is as like to execute juſtice againſt them as againſt the Iewes, as he hath done in many nations falling to hereſie.

28 According to the Goſpel.] In reſpect, or, as concerning beliefe in Chriſt and receiuing the Goſpell, they are Gods enemies: by occaſion of which their incredulity, the Gentiles found mercy: otherwiſe in reſpect of his ſpeciall election of that nation, and the promiſes made to the Patriarches, the Iewes are deere to him ſtill; for God neuer promiſeth but he performeth, nor repenteth himſelfe of the priuileges giuen to that nation.

30 For as you.] As the Gentiles which before beleeued not, found mercy and came to faith, when the Iewes did fall: ſo the Iewes not now beleeuing, when all the Gentiles haue obtained mercy, ſhall in the end of the world by Gods diſpoſition obtaine grace and pardon as the Gentiles haue done.

A paraphraſticall explication of the text concerning the Iewes and Gentiles, their ſtanding, falling, riſing againe, &c.

RHEM. 6. 32 Concluded all.] That ſo God taking all nations and all men in ſinne (which they fell into, not by his drift or cauſing, but of their owne free will) may of his mercy call and conuert whom and in what order he will: and the parties haue no cauſe to bragge of their deſeruings: but both countries and particular men may referre their eternall election and their firſt calling and conuerſion to Chriſt, and to his mercy onely: no workes which they had before in their incredulity, deſeruing any ſuch thing, though their workes afterward proceeding of faith and grace doe merite heauen.

FVLK. 6. Not onely our election, firſt calling, and conuerſion unto Chriſt, is to be referred unto Gods only mercy, but alſo our perſeuerance unto the end, and the reward of eternall life in the end without end (as Saint Auguſtine ſaith) is of the onely grace and mercy of God, and not of the merit of our workes. Nam unde mihi tantum meritum eſt, cui indulgentia pro corona eſt? For whence haue I ſo great merit, whoſe mercy is my crowne. Ambroſ. exhort. ad virgines.

RHEM. 7. 33 O depth.] *The Apoſtle concludeth, that no man ought to ſearch further into Gods ſecret and unſearchable counſels of the vocation of the Gentiles, & rejecting the Iewes, otherwiſe then this, that all which be rejected, for their ſinnes be juſtly rejected: and all that be ſaued, by Gods great mercy and Chriſts grace be ſaued. And whoſoeuer ſeeketh among the people to ſpread contagion of curioſity, by ſeeking further after things paſt mans and Angels reach, they ouerreach and ouerthrow themſelues. If thou wilt be ſaued, beleeue, obey the Church, feare God, and keepe his Commandements: that is thy part, and euery mans elſe. But out of the compaſſe of Gods word, all curious [illegible] is dangerous and damnable. The bookes of Caluin, Beza, and Verone keepe themſelues within the compaſſe of the holy Scriptures, and hold no blaſphemous or other erronious opinions, that derogate any thing from the glory of God, or be hurtfull to the ſaluation of men, as your ſlanderous and malicious pen ſuppoſeth, beſide your preſumptuous judgement, that they be reprobates, whereof ſome be yet liuing, of whom it is hard to pronounce, although they were now blaſphemous heretikes, and you the Catholike Church (as the contrary is true) becauſe God might giue them repentance.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XII.

RHEM.

1 A living hoſt.] Leſt men ſhould thinke by the former diſcourſe of Gods eternall predeſtination, that no reward were to be had of almes and workes, the Apoſtle now earneſtly recommendeth to them holineſſe of life.

1 A living hoſt.] Man maketh his body a ſacrifice to God by giving it to ſuffer for him, by chaſtiſing it with faſting, watching, and ſuch like, and by occupying it in workes of charity and vertue to Gods honour. Whereby appeareth how acceptable theſe workes are to God and gratefull in his ſight, being compared to a ſacrifice, which is an high ſervice done to him.

The body chaſtiſed by pennance is a gratefull ſacrifice.

RHEM. I.

6 According to the rule of faith.] By this, and many places of holy writ, we may gather, that the Apoſtles by the holy Ghoſt, before they were ſundered into divers Nations, ſet downe among themſelves a certaine rule and forme of faith and doctrine, containing not onely the Articles of the Creede, but all other principles, grounds, and the whole platforme of all the Chriſtian religion. Which rule was before any of the books of the new Teſtament were written, & before the faith was preached among the Gentiles; by which not onely every other inferiour teachers doctrine was tried, but all the Apoſtles, and Evangeliſts preaching, writing, interpreting (which is here called prophecying) were of Gods Church approved and admitted, or diſproved and rejected. This forme, by mouth and not by Scripture, every Apoſtle delivered to the countrey by them converted. For keeping of this forme, the Apoſtle before praiſed the Romanes, and afterward earneſtly warneth them by no meanes plauſible ſpeech to be drawen from the ſame. This he commendeth to Timothee, calling it his Depoſitum. For not holding this faſt and ſure, he blameth the Galatians, further alſo denouncing to himſelfe or an Angel that ſhould write, teach, or expound againſt that which they firſt received, Anathema, and commanding alwayes to beware of them that taught otherwiſe. For feare of miſſing this line of truth, himſelfe notwithſtanding he had the holy Ghoſt, yet leſt he might have preached in vaine and loſt his labour, he went to conferre with Peter and the reſt; for the faſt keeping of this rule of truth, the Apoſtles held Councels, and their ſucceſſors by their example. For the holding of this rule, and by the meaſure thereof, were all the holy Scriptures written; for and by the ſame, all the glorious Doctors have made their ſermons, commentaries, and interpretations of Gods word: all writings and interpretations no otherwiſe admitted nor deemed to be of God, but as they be agreeable to this Rule.

Acts 15,6.

And this is the ſame Analogie and meaſure of faith, ſet downe and commended to us every where for the Apoſtles tradition: and not the phantaſticall rule or ſquare that every Sectmaſter pretendeth to gather out of the Scriptures falſely underſtood and wreſted to his purpoſe, by which they judge of Doctor, Scripture, Church, and all. Arius had by that meanes a rule of his owne, Luther had his falſe weights, and Calvin his owne alſo. According to which ſeverall meaſure of every Sect, they have their expoſitions of Gods word: and in England (as in other infected Countries) they kept of late an apiſh imitation of this prophecying which S. Paul here and in other places ſpeaketh of, and which was an exerciſe in the Primitive Church, meaſured not by every mans peculiar ſpirit, but by the former rule of faith firſt ſet downe by the Apoſtles. And therefore all this new phantaſticall Prophecying & all other preaching in Calvins ſchoole, is juſtly by this note of the Apoſtle condemned, for that it is not according to, but quite againſt the rule of faith.

The Heretikes phantaſticall rule or rather rules of faith, wholy and divers one from another.

FVLK. I

Firſt you tranſlate boldly, rationem fidei, the rule of faith, which is not the proper ſignification of the word Ratio. Secondly, where all the ancient writers, that comment upon the text in a maner, underſtand the word Analogia, for the meaſure of every mans faith, whereunto God giveth a gift agreeable, and not one underſtandeth it, for ſuch a rule of faith, as you ſuppoſe; what credit ſhall your interpretation have, with any man of meane judgement? But ſpecially where you affirme, that it was ſuch, as being delivered without writing, all the writings of the new Teſtament were tried and approoved by it: it is horrible blaſphemy againſt the holy Scriptures. That a rule of faith might be concluded of by the Apoſtles, to direct all teachers and beleevers by it, we deny not: but that this rule was drawen out of all the holy Scriptures, and contained nothing but that which is grounded upon them, it is manifeſtly prooved, becauſe the Goſpell which they preached, was grounded wholly upon the holy Scriptures, as teſtifieth Saint Paul, Rom.1,2. Acts 26,22. and by many other places of Scripture. And therefore all your wrangling is in vaine, to perſwade men without argument of Scripture, that there was ſuch a rule unwritten that contained more then the Scripture. The faith which Saint Paul commended in the Romanes, was the faith of the Goſpel, which God had promiſed before by the Prophets, in the Scriptures. That forme of doctrine, which was committed to Timothy, was contained in the holy Scriptures, wherein he had beene trained up from a childe, and which were able to make him wiſe unto ſalvation, and perfectly inſtructed, to all parts of his office, 2 Tim. 2, 15, 16, 17. It was the Goſpell which he preached to the Galathians ſet foorth in the Scriptures, and not a ſecret tradition, but the publique doctrine of juſtification by faith, without all ceremonies and workes of the law. But that he feared to miſſe the rule of truth, when he went up to Ieruſalem, after he had preached the Goſpell fourteene yeeres, what is it but blaſphemous impudency, to affirme? when he ſaith, he did declare to the reſt of the Apoſtles privately, the doctrine that he preached publiquely, not for feare leaſt he had miſſed himſelfe, but that the reſt of the Apoſtles might give publique teſtimony of his doctrine, to be the ſame that theirs was, againſt them, that to hinder the profite of his preaching, reported that he taught otherwiſe then the reſt of the Apoſtles, Gal.2. Finally, the Scriptures inſpired of God, were written to be the rule of truth, for certainty of faith: and not to maintaine ſuch an unwritten tradition, but to defend the truth and faith, from all hereticall pretences of ſecret tradition. Therefore the Apoſtle either ſpeaketh not at all, of any rule of trueth in this place, or elſe he ſpeaketh of the articles of the Creede, which being taken out of the Scriptures, and containing a briefe ſumme of Chriſtian faith, may be called that rule of faith, according to which all prophecying, and interpretation of the Scripture, is to be framed. Where you ſay, that we have ſeverall rules of faith amongſt us, it is true

Vnwritten tradition.

Rhem. 1. 8 Fulfilled the law.] [illegible] by love in this life [illegible] ries, [illegible]

Fulk. 1. [illegible] hee which loveth his neighbour as himſelfe, hath fulfilled the law of the ſecond Table. But [illegible] never ſaw the man, nor ever ſhall, that loved his neighbour as himſelfe. Therefore unperfect love doth not [illegible] fulfill the Law: and it is ſtill unpoſſible to keepe the [illegible], in ſuch perfection, as the juſtice of the Law requireth.

The law impoſſible to bee kept.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIII.

Rhem. 2. 1 Every ſoule be ſubject.] Becauſe the Apoſtles preached liberty by Chriſt from the yoke of the law and ſervitude of ſin, and gave all the faithfull both example and commandement to obey God more then men, and withall ever charged them expreſly to be obedient and ſubject to their prelates, as to them which had care of their ſoules, and were by the holy Ghoſt placed over the Church of God: there were many in thoſe dayes newly converted, that thought themſelves free from all temporall Poteſtates, carnall Lords, and humane creatures or powers: whereupon the bondman tooke himſelfe to bee looſe from his ſervitude, the ſubject from his Soveraigne, were hee Emperour, King, Duke, or what other ſecular Magiſtrate ſoever, ſpecially the Princes of thoſe daies being Heathens and perſecuters of the Apoſtles, and of Chriſts religion; for which cauſe and for that the Apoſtles were untruely charged of their adverſaries, that they withdrew men from order and obedience to civill lawes and officers: S. Paul here (as S. Peter doth 1 Chap. 2.) *cleareth himſelfe, and expreſly chargeth every man to be ſubject to his temporall prince and ſuperiour: Not every man to all that bee in office or ſuperioritie, but every one to him whom God hath put in authoritie over him, by that he is his Maſter, Lord, King, or ſuch like: neither to them in matters of religion or regiment of their ſoules (for moſt part were pagans, whõ the Apoſtle could not will men to obey in matters of faith) but to them in ſuch things only as concerne the publike peace and policie, and what other cauſes ſoever conſiſt with Gods holy will and ordinances, for * againſt God no power may be obeyed.*

Obedience to temporall rulers, & in what cauſe.

Acts 4. 19. 5. 29.

Authoritie of civill Princes.

Fulk. 2. Chryſoſtome upon this place ſaith Hom 23. he ſheweth, that theſe things are commanded to all men, both Prieſts and Monks, & not to temporall men only, which he declareth in the beginning, when he ſaid, Let every ſoule be ſubject to the higheſt powers: although thou be an Apoſtle, although thou be an Evangeliſt, although thou be a Prophet, although thou be whatſoever thou art: for this ſubjection doth not overthrow religion. And if Heathen princes are to be obeyed of all men, in all things that are not againſt Chriſtian religion, how much more Chriſtian princes, in matters that are agreeable to Chriſtian faith and religion. Seeing that (as S. Auguſtine ſaith) they ſerve God as Kings, making juſt lawes, and deſtroying idolatry as Ezekias did. The ſame father counteth him not ſober, that would ſay to Chriſtian Kings: Take no care in your kingdome, of whom the Church of your Lord is defended or oppugned: it pertaineth not to you, who in your dominion will be religious or ſacrilegious, to whom it may not be ſaid it pertaineth not unto you, who in your dominion will bee chaſte or unchaſte, Epiſt. 50. Bonifacio. Therefore it ſtandeth with Gods holy will and ordinance, that Princes ſhould make lawes to maintaine true religion, and to ſuppreſſe falſe religion, whereunto all men are commanded to be obedient.

Rhem. Chryſoſt. in epiſt. Rom. hom. 23. 1 No power but of God.] S. Chryſoſtome here noteth, that power, rule, and ſuperiority, is Gods ordinance, but not eftſoones all Princes: becauſe many may uſurpe, who raigne by his permiſſion onely, and not by his appointment; nor all actions that every one doth in and by his ſoveraigne power, as Iulians apoſtaſie and affliction of Catholikes, Pharaos tyrannicall oppreſſion of the Iſraelites, Achabs perſecution of the Prophets, Neros executing of the Apoſtles, Herods and Pilats condemning of Chriſt: all which things God permitted them, by the abuſe of their power to accompliſh, but they were out of the compaſſe of his cauſing and ordinance.

In what ſenſe, all power or ſuperioritie is of God.

Rhem. 3. 2 They that reſiſt.] Whoſoever reſiſteth or obeyeth not his lawfull Superior in thoſe cauſes wherein he is ſubject unto him, withſtandeth Gods appointment, and ſinneth deadly, and is worthy to be puniſhed both in this world by his ſuperior, and by God in the next life; for in temporall government and cauſes, the Chriſtians were bound in conſcience to obey their heathen Emperours: though on the other ſide, they were bound under paine of damnation to obey their Apoſtles and Prelats, and not to obey their Kings or Emperors, in matters of religion. Wherby it is cleare, that when we be commanded to obey our ſuperiors, it is meant alwaies and only in ſuch things as they may lawfully command, and in reſpect of ſuch matters wherein they be our ſuperiours.

In things lawfully commanded it is mortall ſin not to obey our ſuperiours.

Fulk. 3. If Heathen Princes commaund any thing in matters of religion that is agreeable to true religion, they are to bee obeyed, even in matters of religion. As Cyrus in the law which hee made for building the Temple, Ezra 1. and Darius, as well for building, as for offering of ſacrifice, Ezra 6. And Artaxerxes, for reformation of the Church, by the diſcretion and wiſedome of Ezra, Ezra 7. And Darius the Median, for worſhipping of the true God, Dan 6.27.

Authoritie of civill Princes in matters of religion.

Rhem. 4. 4 Beareth not the ſword.] That the Apoſtle meaneth here ſpecially of temporal powers, we may ſee by the ſword, tribute, and externall compulſion, which be here attributed to them. And the Chriſtian men then had no doubt whether they ſhould obey their ſpirituall powers, but now the diſeaſe is cleane contrary. For all is given to the ſecular power, and nothing to the ſpirituall, which expreſly is ordained by Chriſt and the Holy Ghoſt: and all the faithfull are commanded to bee ſubject thereunto, as to Chriſts owne word and will. There were Heretikes called Begardi, that tooke away all rule and ſuperioritie: The Wicleffiſts would obey nor Prince nor Prelate, if he were once in deadly ſinne. The Proteſtants of our time (as we may ſee in all Countries where the ſecular ſword is drawne againſt their Sectes) care neither for the one nor for the other, though they extoll only the Secular when it maketh for them. The Catholikes onely moſt humbly obey both, even according to Gods ordinance, the one in temporall cauſes, and the other in ſpirituall: in which order both theſe States have bleſſedly flouriſhed in all Chriſtian countries ever ſince Chriſts time, and it is the very way to preſerve both, as one day all the world ſhall confeſſe with us.

The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of temporall powers.

Hereſies againſt rule and ſuperioritie.

The obedience of Catholikes both to ſpirituall and temporall ſuperiours.

Fulk. 4. We give no more to the ſecular power, then is due by the word of God. Wiclef was ſlandered to deny obedience to Princes, and ſpirituall Paſtors, for he denied neither of both. But proved that the Pope was Antichriſt, and his Clergie were no Paſtors of the Church, but wolves. The Proteſtants (God bee thanked) at this day, as alwayes, are obedient even to wicked Princes unto death and martyrdome. The Papiſts conſpire moſt horrible treaſon to murder Chriſtian Princes, and to invade their land with ſtrangers, as it is manifeſt, to the reproch and ſhame of that murthering hereſie.

Slander.

Rhem. 5. Hiero. in Mat. 17. 6 You give tributes.] Though every man ought to bee ready to ſerve his temporall Prince with his goods, by tributes or what other lawfull taxes and ſubſidies ſoever: yet they may exempt by priviledges whom they thinke good. As in all countries Chriſtian: prieſts for the honour of Chriſt, whoſe Miniſters they be, have by the grants and ancient charters of kings bin excepted and exempted. Notwithſtanding they were never unready to ſerve voluntarily their Soveraigne, in all common cauſes, with whatſoever they had. See Annot. in Matt. 17.26.

CHAP. XIIII.

Like a moderator and peacemaker betweene the firme Chriſtians (who were the Gentiles) and the infirme (who were the Chriſtian Iewes, making yet a ſcruple to ceaſe from keeping the ceremoniall meates and dayes of Moſes lawe) hee exhorteth the Iew not to condemne the Gentile uſing his libertie: and the Gentile againe, not to contemne the ſcrupulous Iew: but rather to abſtaine from uſing his libertie, then offending the Iew, to bee an occaſion unto him of apoſtating.

AND him that is weake in faith, take unto you: not in diſputations of cogitations.

2 For one beleeveth that he may ‖ eat all things: but hee that is weake, ‖ let him eat hearbes.

‖ eateth.

3 Let not him that eateth, deſpiſe him that eateth not: and hee that eateth not; let him not judge him that eateth; for God hath taken him to him.

4 Who art thou that judgeſt another mans ſervant? To his owne Lord he ſtandeth or falleth; and he ſhall ſtand: for God is able to make him ſtand.

5 For one judgeth ‖ betweene day and day: and another judgeth every day; let every one abound ‖ in his owne ſenſe.

6 He that reſpecteth the day, reſpecteth to our Lord. And hee that eateth, eateth to our Lord: for he giveth thanks to God. And he that eateth not, to our Lord he eateth not, and giveth thanks to God.

7 For none of us liveth to himſelfe: and no man dieth to himſelfe.

8 For whether wee live, we live to our Lord: or whether wee die, wee die to our Lord. Therefore whether wee live, or whether we die, we are our Lords.

9 For to this end Chriſt died and roſe againe: that hee may have dominion both of the dead, and of the living.

10 But thou, why judgeſt thou thy brother? or thou, why doeſt thou deſpiſe thy brother? for * wee ſhall all ſtand before the judgement ſeat of Chriſt.

2 Cor. 5, 10.

Eſa. 45, 23.

11 For it is written, Live I, ſaith our Lord, that every knee ſhall bow to mee: and every tongue ſhall confeſſe to God.

12 Therefore every one of us for himſelfe ſhall render account to God.

13 Let us therefore no more judge one another; but this judge ye rather, that you put not a ſtumbling blocke or a ſcandall to your brother.

14 I know and am perſwaded in our Lord Iesvs Chriſt that nothing is † common of it ſelfe, but to him that ſuppoſeth any thing to be common, to him it is common.

15 For if becauſe of meat thy brother

† Common, that is, uncleane. See Ann. Mar. 7, 2. Though he wiſh the weak to be borne withall, yet he uttereth his mind plainly, that indeed al the meats forbidden and uncleane in the law, are now through Chriſt cleanſed and lawfull for every man to eat.

HIm that is weake in the faith receive, not to doubtfulneſſe of diſputations.

2 One beleeveth that hee may eate every thing: another which is weake, eateth hearbs.

3 Let not him that eateth, deſpiſe him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not, judge him that eateth. For God hath received him.

4 What art thou that judgeſt another mans ſervant? To his owne maſter he ſtandeth or falleth: Yea, he ſhalbe holden up: for God is able to make him ſtand.

5 This man putteth difference betweene day and day. Another man counteth all dayes alike. Let every man bee fully perſwaded in his owne minde.

6 Hee that eſteemeth the day, eſteemeth it unto the Lord: and hee that eſteemeth not the day, to the Lord hee doeth not eſteeme it. Hee that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for hee giveth God thankes: and hee that eateth not, eateth not to the Lord, and giveth God thankes.

7 For none of us liveth to himſelfe, and no man dyeth to himſelfe.

8 For if we live, we live unto the Lord: and if we die, we die unto the Lord: Whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lords.

9 For to this end Chriſt both died, and roſe, and revived, that hee might bee Lord both of dead and quicke.

*10 But why doeſt thou then judge thy brother? Either, why doeſt thou ſet at nought thy brother? * we ſhall all ſtand before the judgement ſeate of Chriſt.*

2 Cor. 5. 10.

*11 For it is written, * I live, ſaith the Lord, and all knees ſhall bow to mee, and all tongues ſhall give praiſe to God.*

Eſay 45. 23. phil. 2. 10.

12 So ſhall every one of us give accompt of himſelfe to God.

13 Let us not therfore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a ſtumbling blocke, or an occaſion to fall, in his brothers way.

14 For I know, and am perſwaded by the Lord Ieſus, that there is nothing common of it ſelfe, but unto him that judgeth it to bee common, to him it is common.

15 But if thy brother be grieved with thy meate,

1 Cor. 8.

be grieued now thou walkeſt not according to charitie. * Doe not with thy meat deſtroy him for whom Chriſt died.

16 Let not then our good be blaſphemed.

17 For the kingdome of God is || not meat and drinke: but iuſtice, and peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt.

18 For hee that in this ſerueth Chriſt, pleaſeth God and is acceptable to men.

19 Therefore the things that are of peace let vs purſue: and the things that are of edifying one toward another let vs keepe.

Titus 1, 15.

20 Deſtroy not the worke of God for meate. * All things indeed are cleane: but it is ill for the man that eateth by giuing offence.

21 It is good not to eate fleſh, and not to drinke wine, nor that wherein thy brother is offended, or ſcandalized, or weakened.

22 Haſt thou faith? || haue it with thy ſelfe before God. Bleſſed is he that iudgeth not himſelfe in that which he approueth.

23 But || he that diſcerneth, if hee eate, is damned: becauſe not of faith; for || all that is not of faith is ſinne.

*meate, now walkeſt thou not charitably: * deſtroy not him with thy meate, for whom Chriſt died.*

1 Cor. 8, 11.

16 Let not your good be euill ſpoken of.

17 For the kingdome of God is not meat and drinke: but righteouſneſſe, and peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt.

18 For he that in theſe things ſerueth Chriſt, pleaſeth God, and is commended of men.

19 Let vs therfore follow thoſe things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edifie another.

Titus 1. 15.

20 *Deſtroy not the worke of God for meats ſake: * all things are pure, but it is euill for that man which eateth with offence.*

21 It is good neither to eate fleſh, neither to drinke wine, neither any thing wherby thy brother ſtumbleth, either is offended, or is made weake.

22 Haſt thou faith? Haue it with thy ſelfe before God. Happie is hee that condemneth not himſelfe in that thing which he alloweth.

23 For hee that maketh conſcience, is damned if hee eat, becauſe he eateth not of faith: For whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIIII.

Rhem. 1. 2 Eate all things.] By ſimilitude of words the ſimple are ſoone deceiued, and Heretikes make their aduantage of any thing to ſeduce the vnlearned. There were diuers meates forbidden in the law of Moyſes, and for ſignification made and counted vncleane, whereof the Iew might not eat at all, as porke, hare, cony, and ſuch like, both of fiſhes, fowles, and beaſts a great number. Chriſt diſcharged all them that became Chriſtians, after his paſſion, of that obſeruance and all other ceremonies of the old law: Notwithſtanding, becauſe diuers that were brought vp in the law, had a religion and conſcience, ſuddenly to forſake their former manner, the Apoſtle here admoniſheth ſuch as bee ſtronger and better inſtructed in the caſe, to beare with the weaker ſort, that being Chriſtians could not yet find in their hearts to eat or taſt the meats forbidden by God in the law: as on the other ſide hee warneth the weake that would not eat, not to take offence or ſcandall at them that did eate without ſcruple, any of the irregular or forbidden meats in the law, nor in any wiſe to iudge or condemne the eater, but to commit that to God; and finally, that neither neither ſhould condemne the other for eating or not eating. Now the Proteſtants fondly apply all this to the faſtes of the Church, and differences of meats in the ſame: as though the Church did forbid any meat wholy neuer to be eaten or touched, or made any creatures vncleane, or otherwiſe preſcribed any abſtinence, then for chaſtiſing of mens bodies & ſeruice of God. It is a great blindnes that they can put no difference betweene Chriſts faſt of fortie daies, Mat. 4. Iohns abſtaining from all delicate meats and drinke, Mat. 3, 11. the widow Annes, Luk. 2, 37. the Nazarites, Num. 6. the Rechabites, Iere. 35, 14. the Niniuites, Iona. 3. S. Pauls, 2 Cor. 11, 27. S. Timothees, 1 Tim. 5, 23. Iohns diſciples and Chriſts diſciples faſt, Mat. 9, 14. 15. (which he ſaid they ſhould keepe after his departure from them:) and the ceremoniall diſtinction of creatures and meats cleane and vncleane, in the old law, of which it is euident the Apoſtle treateth in all this chapter, and of none other at all. Therfore when the Proteſtants by the words of this place would proue, that we be either made free from faſting and from obeying the Churches commandement, or following Chriſts example in that matter, or that the obſeruers of Chriſtian faſts be weake in faith, and ought not in any wiſe condemne of ſinne the breakers of the preſcribed faſtes of the holy Church, they doe abuſe ignorantly or wilfully the Apoſtles words and diſcourſe.

The Apoſtles meaning about eating or not eating certaine meates.

The heretikes fondly abuſe this place againſt the faſtes of the Church.

Fooliſh Heretikes ſee not the differences of things.

Fulk. 1. We neuer went about to proue by this place, or by any other, that Chriſtians are free from faſting, or from obeying the Churches commandement, or Chriſtes example in faſting without ſuperſtition. But we condemne your Antichriſtian forbidding of meats to ſome men at all times, & to all men at ſome times for religions ſake, and for greater holineſſe, which is no faſting, but a change of diet. And where you ſay, you forbid no meat, but for chaſtiſing of mens bodies, it is falſe: for you leaue them all things that may inflame the body to luſt, beſide fleſh, as wine, ſpices, fruits, and all daintie fiſhes, in which of ancient time, was counted the greateſt delicacie. And Durand ſaith plainly, that fiſh is eaten in faſting dayes, becauſe God hath not curſed the waters, becauſe remiſſion of ſinnes ſhould be by the water of baptiſme: for this element is moſt worthy, which waſheth away filthineſſe, and vpon which the ſpirit of the Lord before the conſtitution of the world was caried: but he curſed the earth in the worke of man; hereof it is, that it is not lawfull to eat in the faſting dayes, any kind of fleſh that liueth in the land: whereby it is plaine, howſoeuer you would cloke the matter, your prohibition of fleſh is, becauſe it was hypocritically deemed, not only vncleane, but alſo curſed. Dur. lib. 6. cap. de alijs Ieiunijs.

Faſtings.

Rhem. 2. 5 Betweene day and night.] By the like deceit they abuſe this place againſt the holy dayes of Chriſt and his bleſſed mother and ſaints, which concerneth onely the Iewes feſtiuities and obſeruation of times, whereof in the Epiſtle to the Galatians, cap. 4, 10.

Fulk. 2. Wee vſe no deceit, but ſhew the Chriſtian libertie in reſpecting all dayes alike, that are not diſcerned by the commandement of God. As for the doing of our feſtiuities, we condemne as open idolatrie, by manifeſt texts of Scripture, forbidding Gods honour to be giuen to creatures: and yet the dayes appoynted by the Church for exercise of religion, we obſerue, and that without ſuperſtition.

Not eating, but diſobedience damnable.

22 Haue it with thy ſelfe.] Thou that art perfect, and beleeueſt or knoweſt certainly that thou art free from the law concerning meats and feſtiuities, yet to the trouble and hinderance of the feeble that cannot yet be brought ſo farre, be diſcreet and vtter not thy ſelfe out of ſeaſon.

Rhem. 4. 23 All that is not of faith.] *The proper ſenſe of this ſpeech is, that euery thing that a man doth againſt his knowledge or conſcience, is a ſinne, for ſo by the circumſtance of the letter, faith muſt here be taken, though S. Auguſtine ſometimes applieth it alſo to proue that all the actions of infidels (meaning thoſe workes which directly proceed of their lacke of faith) be ſinnes. But in any wiſe take heed of the Heretikes commentary, who hereby would proue, that the infidell ſinneth in honouring his parents, fighting for his countrey, tilling his ground, and in all other works. And no maruell that they ſo hold of infidels, who maintaine * that Chriſtian men alſo offend deadly in euery good deed.*

What actions of infidels are ſinne, and what are not.

Luther.

Fulk. 4. S. Auguſtine applyeth this text, to proue that all the actions of Infidels are ſinne, euen thoſe that ſeeme to be vertues and good workes, ſaying that vertues muſt be defined, not by the offices, but by the ends. Contra Iul. lib. 4. cap. 3. where he handleth the queſtion at large, and ſaith, When a man doth any thing, wherein hee ſeemeth not to ſinne, if he doth it not for that end, for which he ought to doe it, he is conuinced to ſinne. Therefore though honouring of parents, and ſuch like actions bee not ſinne of themſelues, yet are they ſinne in an infidell, becauſe he honoureth not his parents for that end he ought to doe. Againe, of all things which infidels doe, it is ſaid, all that is not of faith is ſinne. Againe to the Pelagian he ſaith, as wee may ſay to the Papiſts, Omnia proinde cætera, &c. All the reſt of theirs, that ſeeme among men to haue ſome praiſe, let them ſeeme to thee to be true vertues; let them ſeeme to bee good workes, and to bee done without all ſinne. For my part I know this, that a good will doth them not: for an vnfaithfull and vngodly will is not good. Alſo contra duas epiſt. Pel. ad Bonifacium lib. 3. cap. 5. he ſaith, *Sine ipſa &c. Without faith euen thoſe which ſeeme to bee good works, are turned into ſinnes: for all that is not of faith is ſinne. Fulgent. de remiſſ. peccat. li. 2. c. 19. Leo ſermo 2. de jejunio Pentecoſt. Therefore good deeds are rewarded according to grace, and not according to merit.

All actions of Infidels are ſinne.

CHAP. XV.

He proceedeth to make peace betweene the Chriſtian Gentiles and Iewes, 8 with this reſtriction, that the Iewes vocation is of promiſe indeed, but the Gentils alſo of mercy, & foretold by the ſcriptures. 14 Then drawing to an end, he excuſeth himſelfe to the Romans for writing thus vnto them; 21 hoping now at length to ſee them, after that he hath bin at Hieruſalem, 29 whereunto alſo he requeſteth their prayers.

2 Let euery man pleaſe his neighbour in that that is good to edifying.

3 For Chriſt pleaſed not himſelfe, but as it is written, The rebukes of them which rebuked thee, fell on me.

4 For whatſoeuer things haue been written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might haue hope.

5 *The God of patience and conſolation, * graunt you to bee like minded one towards another, after the enſample of Chriſt Ieſu;*

1 Cor. 1. 10.

6 That yee all agreeing together, may with one mouth praiſe God, and the father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

7 Wherfore receiue ye one another, as Chriſt receiued vs, to the glory of God.

8 And I ſay, that Ieſus Chriſt was a miniſter of the Circumciſion for the trueth of God, to confirme the promiſes made vnto the fathers:

9 And that the Gentils might glorifie God,

for

Pſal.17,50. mercy, as it is written, Therfore will I confeſſe to thee in the Gentiles ô Lord, and will ſing to thy name.

Deut.32,43. 10 And againe he ſaith, Rejoyce yee Gentiles with his people.

Pſal.116,1. 11 And againe, Praiſe all yee Gentiles our Lord: and magnifie him all ye peoples.

Eſay 11,10. 12 And againe Eſaie ſaith, There ſhall bee the root of Ieſſe: and he that ſhall riſe up to rule the Gentiles, in him the Gentiles ſhall hope.

13 And the God of hope repleniſh you with all joy and peace in beleeving: that you may abound in hope, and in the vertue of the holy Ghoſt.

14 And I my ſelfe alſo, my brethren, am aſſured of you, that you alſo are full of loue, repleniſhed with all knowledge, ſo that you are able to admoniſh one another.

13 But I haue written to you (brethren) more boldly in part, as it were putting you in remembrance: for the grace which is given me of God.

16 To be the miniſter of Chriſt IESVS in the Gentiles: ſanctifying the Goſpell of God, that the oblation of the Gentiles may be made acceptable and ſanctified in the holy Ghoſt.

17 I haue therefore glory in Chriſt IESVS toward God.

18 For I dare not ſpeake any of thoſe things which Chriſt worketh not by me for the obedience of the Gentiles, by word and deedes, 19 In the vertue of ſignes and wonders, in the vertue of the holy Ghoſt: ſo that from Hieruſalem round about unto Illyricum I haue repleniſhed the Goſpell of Chriſt.

20 And I haue ſo preached this Goſpell, not where Chriſt was named, leſt I ſhould build upon an another mans foundation:

Eſay 52,15. 21 But as it is written, They to whom it hath not been preached of him, ſhall ſee: and they that haue not heard, ſhall underſtand.

22 For the which cauſe alſo I was hindred very much from comming unto you.

23 But now having no longer place in theſe countries, and having a deſire to come unto you theſe many yeeres now paſſed:

24 When I ſhal begin to take my journey into Spaine, I hope that as I paſſe, I ſhall ſee you, and be brought thither of you, if firſt in part I ſhall haue enjoyed you.

25 Now therfore I will go unto Hieruſalem to miniſter to the ǂ ſaints.

26 For Macedonia and Achaia haue liked well to make ſome contribution upon the poore ſaints that are in Hieruſalem.

27 For it hath pleaſed them: and they are their debters. For if the Gentiles bee made partakers of their ſpirituall things: they ought alſo in carnall things to miniſter unto them.

28 This

*for his mercie, as it is written, * For this cauſe I will praiſe thee among the Gentiles, and ſing unto thy Name.* 3 Reg.22.50. pſal.18.50.

*10 And againe he ſaith, * Rejoyce ye Gentiles with his people.* Deut.32.43.

*11 And againe, * Praiſe the Lord all yee Gentiles, and laud him all ye people together.* Pſal.117.1.

*12 And againe Eſaias ſaith, * There ſhall bee the root of Ieſſe, and hee that ſhall riſe to reigne over the Gentiles, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt.* Eſay 11.10.

13 The God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in beleeving, that ye may be rich in hope, through the power of the holy Ghoſt.

14 I my ſelfe am perſwaded of you, my brethren, that ye alſo are full of goodnes, and filled with all knowledge, able alſo to exhort one another.

15 Neverthe leſſe, brethren, I haue ſomewhat more boldly written unto you, as putting you in remembrance through the grace that is given to me of God,

16 That I ſhould bee the miniſter of Ieſus Chriſt to the Gentiles, † and ſhould miniſter the Goſpell of God, that the offering of the Gentiles might bee acceptable, and ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt. † Or, ſacrificing

17 I haue therefore whereof I may reioyce through Chriſt Ieſus, in thoſe things which pertaine to God.

18 For I will not be bold to ſpeake of any of thoſe things which Chriſt hath not wrought by mee, to make the Gentiles obedient with word and deed, 19 In mightie ſignes and wonders, by the power of the ſpirit of God, ſo that from Hieruſalem, and the coaſts round about unto Illyricum, I haue fully preached the Goſpel of Chriſt.

20 So haue I enforced my ſelfe to preach the Goſpel, not where Chriſt was named, leſt I ſhould haue built upon another mans foundation.

*21 But as it is written, * To whom he was not ſpoken of, they ſhall ſee: and they that heare not, ſhall underſtand.* Eſay 52.15.

22 For this cauſe I haue been oft let, that I could not come unto you:

23 But now having no more to doe in theſe countries, and alſo having a great deſire many yeeres to come unto you,

24 Whenſoever I take my journey into Spaine, I will come to you: for I truſt to ſee you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, after that I be ſomewhat filled with you.

25 But now goe I unto Hieruſalem, to miniſter unto the ſaints.

26 For it hath pleaſed them of Macedonia & Achaia, to make a certaine cōmon gathering for the poore ſaints which are at Hieruſalem.

*27 * It hath pleaſed them verely, and their detters are they. For if the Gentils be made partakers of their ſpirituall things, their dutie is to miniſter unto them in carnall things.* 1 Cor.9.11

28 When

28 This therefore when I ſhall haue accompliſhed, and ſigned them this fruit, I will goe by you into Spaine.

29 And I know that comming to you, I ſhall come in abundance of the bleſſing of Chriſt.

30 I beſeech you therefore brethren, by our Lord IESVS Chriſt, and by the charitie of the holy Ghoſt, that you ǂ helpe me in your prayers for me to God, ǂ In that the Apoſtle deſired to be prayed for, we may be moved to ſeeke the ſame as a great benefit.

31 That I may be delivered from the infidels that are in Iewrie, and the oblation of my ſervice may become acceptable in Hieruſalem to the ſaints, 32 That I may come to you in joy by the will of God, that I may bee refreſhed with you.

33 And the God of peace bee with you all. Amen.

28 When I haue performed this, and haue ſealed to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spaine.

29 And I am ſure that when I come unto you, I ſhall come with abundance of the bleſſing of the Goſpell of Chriſt.

30 I beſeech you brethren for the Lord Ieſus Chriſts ſake, and for the loue of the ſpirit, that ye helpe me in my buſineſſe with your prayers to God for me:

31 That I may bee delivered from them which beleeve not in Iewrie, and that this my ſervice which I haue at Hieruſalem, may be accepted of the Saints:

32 That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you bee refreſhed.

33 The God of peace bee with you all. Amen.

11 Salute

I Commend unto you Phebe our ſiſter, which is a miniſter of the Church at Cenchrea:

2 That yee receive her in the Lord, as it becommeth Saints, and that yee aſſiſt her in whatſoever buſineſſe ſhee hath neede of you: for ſhee hath ſuccoured many, and my ſelfe alſo.

*3 * Greet Priſcilla, and Aquila, my helpers in Chriſt Ieſu:* Acts 18.3.

4 (Which haue for my life layd downe their owne neckes: Vnto whom not onely I giue thankes, but alſo all the Churches of the Gentiles.)

5 Likewiſe greet the Church that is in their houſe. Salute my welbeloved Epænetus, which is the firſt fruits of Achaia in Chriſt.

6 Greet Mary, which beſtowed much labour on us.

7 Salute Andronicus and Iunia my couſins, and priſoners with me alſo, which are well taken among the Apoſtles, and were in Chriſt before me.

8 Greet Amplias my beloved in the Lord.

9 Salute Vrban, our helper in Chriſt, and Stachys my beloved.

10 Salute Appelles approved in Chriſt. Salute them which are of Ariſtobulus houſhold.

11 Salute Herodion my kinſman. Salute them that are of Narciſſus houſe, that are in our Lord.

12 Salute Triphæna and Triphoſa: who labour in our Lord. Salute Perſis the beloved, who hath much laboured in our Lord.

13 Salute Rufus the elect in our Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 ‡ Salute Aſyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes: and the brethren that are with them.

15 Salute Philologus and Iulia, Nereus, and his ſiſter, and Olympias: and all the ſaints that are with them.

16 ‖Salute one another in an holy ‖ kiſſe. All the Churches of Chriſt ſalute you.

17 And I deſire you brethren, ‖ to marke them that make diſſentions and ſcandals contrary to the doctrine which ye haue [c] learned, and avoyd them.

18 For ſuch doe not ſerue Chriſt our Lord, ‖ but their owne belly: and ‡ by ſweet ſpeeches and benedictions, ſeduce the hearts of innocents.

‡ The ſpeciall way that Heretikes haue ever had to beguile, was & is by ſweet words and gay ſpeeches, which their ſheepes coat ſee, before deſcribed particularly in the Annotations upon S. Matthew c. 7.15.

19 For ‖ your obedience is publiſhed into every place. I rejoyce therefore in you. But I would haue you to bee wiſe in good, and ſimple in evill.

20 And the God of peace cruſh Satan under your feet quickly. The grace of our Lord Iesvs Chriſt be with you.

21 Timothee my coadjutor ſaluteth you, and Lucius, and Iaſon, and Soſipater my kinſmen.

22 I Tertius ſalute you, that wrote the Epiſtle in our Lord.

23 Caius mine hoſte, and the whole Churches, ſaluteth you. Eraſtus the Cofferer of the citie ſaluteth you, and Quartus a brother.

24 The grace of our Lord Iesvs Chriſt be with all you, Amen.

25 And to him that is able to confirme you according to my Goſpell and preaching of Iesvs Chriſt, according to the revelation of the myſterie from eternall times kept ſecret,

26 Which now is opened by the Scriptures of the Prophets according to the precept of the eternall God to the obedience of faith knowne in all Gentiles, 27 To God the only wiſe through Iesvs Chriſt, ‖ to whom be honour and glorie for ever and ever, Amen.

11 Salute Herodion my kinſman. Greete them that be of the houſhold of Narciſſus, which are in the Lord.

12 Salute Tryphena and Tryphoſa, which labour in the Lord. Salute the beloved Perſis, which laboured much in the Lord.

13 Salute Ruphus choſen in the Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 Greet Aſyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Mercurius, and the brethren which are with them.

15 Salute Philologus, and Iulia, Nereus and his ſiſter, and Olympas, and all the ſaints which are with them.

*16 * Salute one another with an holy kiſſe. The Churches of Chriſt ſalute you.* 2 Cor. 13.12.

17 Now I beſeech you brethren, marke them which cauſe diviſion, and giue occaſion of evill, contrary to the doctrine which ye haue learned, and avoyd them.

18 For they that are ſuch ſerue not the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, but their owne belly, and with ſweet and flattering words deceiue the hearts of the innocents.

19 For your obedience is gone abroad unto all men. I am glad therfore on your behalfe: but yet I would haue you wiſe unto that which is good, and ſimple concerning evill.

20 The God of peace ſhall tread Satan under your feet ſhortly. The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt be with you. Amen.

*21 * Timotheus my workefellow, and Lucius, and Iaſon, and Soſipater my kinſman ſalute you.* Acts 16.1. and 2.19.

22 I Tertius which wrote this Epiſtle, ſalute you in the Lord.

23 Gaius mine hoſte, & of the whole Church, ſaluteth you. Eraſtus the chamberlaine of the citie ſaluteth you, and Quartus his brother.

24 The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt bee with you all, Amen.

See the Annotations 1 Peter c. 5.13.

Some great argument muſt they needs haue to controll the credit of the whole world. This of truth is here their argument, neither haue they a better in any place, to wit; If S. Peter had bene at Rome, S. Paul would haue ſaluted him as he did others here in the end of his letter to the Romanes. Is not this an high proiect to diſproue all antiquitie by? Any man of diſcretion may ſtraight ſee, that S. Peter might be knowne vnto S. Paul to be out of the citie, either for perſecution or buſineſſe, when this Epiſtle was written; (for he went often out, as S. Epiphanius declareth) and ſo the omitting to ſalute him, can proue no more, but that then he was not in Rome, but he peraduenture ſo much neither, becauſe the Apoſtle might for reſpect of his dignitie, and other the Churches affaires write vnto him ſpeciall letters, and ſo had no cauſe to ſalute him in his common Epiſtle. Or how know they that this Epiſtle was not ſent incloſed to S. Peter, to be deliuered by his meanes to the whole Church of the Romanes in ſome of their aſſemblies? It is very like it was recommended to ſome one principall man or other, that is not here named: and truely cauſes there may be vnknowne to vs, why hee ſaluted him not: but no cauſe why our Aduerſaries vpon ſuch friuolous reaſons ſhould impeache an approued truth. For euen as well might they ſay that S. Iohn was neuer at Epheſus, becauſe S. Paul in his Epiſtle to the Epheſians doth not ſalute him. And plaine it is, that it is the Roman ſeat and faith of Peter, which they (as all Heretikes before them) doe feare and hate, and which will be their bane: and they know that there is no argument which [illegible] in their conſcience, that Peter was neuer at Rome. Therfore to conclude, we ſay to them in S. Auguſtines words: Why call you the Apoſtolike chaire, the chaire of peſtilence? What hath the Church of Rome done againſt you, in which S. Peter did ſit, and from which by nefarious furie you haue ſeparated your ſchiſme?

The Proteſtants great argument that Peter was never at Rome.

Epiph. hær. 27.

The Heretikes hatred of the Romane See.

Lib. 2 cont. lit. Petil. c. 51.

Fulk. 4. In both theſe poynts concerning Peter, you paſſe your ſelues in impudencie, either, when you ſay that wee hold hee was not preferred before the other Apoſtles; for we acknowledge that he was in primacie of order and confeſſion the firſt: or, when you defend, that he was ſo preferred aboue the reſt of the Apoſtles, that they were not equall with him in honour and authoritie, but he made their head and Pope, and they but his inferiour Biſhops or Chaplens. In the ſecond, whereas you affirme vs to hold, that he was neuer at Rome, which none did but onely one Vlricus Velenus, whoſe reaſons you haue not yet ſatisfied: whereas we onely affirme, that he could not come thither ſo ſoone, nor tarry there ſo long, as ſome of the ancient Fathers affirme: becauſe the teſtimonie of the Scripture doeth proue the contrary. But whereas you goe about to conuince vs by very ſenſe and ſight of the monuments of his ſeat, and ſepulchre, it is a ridiculous matter. For how are you able to proue, that Peter ſate in ſuch a Chaire, as is ſhewed at Rome? As for his Sepulchre, what monſter haue you made of it, when halfe his body is at Saint Peters in Rome, the other halfe at S. Pauls: and yet hee hath an other head at S. Iohn Lateran. And his nether iawe with the beard vpon it, is in France at Poytiers. At Triers many of his bones. At Geneua was part of his braine, which was found to be a Pumice ſtone: Like as S. Anthonies arme was found to bee an Harts piſſell. And but lately at Tours in an Agate, which was worſhipped as the Image of the Virgin Marie, was grauen the Image of Venus, lamenting the death of her minion Adonis that was ſlaine with a Boare. Within a ſiluer arme was found none other relike, but a bawdy ſong, written in paper, and a card called the knaue of Pickes, wrapped in many ſouldings of ſilke. Theſe and ten thouſand ſuch other monuments of Saints Reliques, will make vs neuer to doubt, but Peter was buried, whereſoeuer you ſay his Sepulchre is. But touching Peters preaching at Rome, although the conſent of the moſt ancient Writers, which you heape vp without need, argueth that there was a common opinion thereof: yet ſeeing it is not ſet foorth in the Scripture, it is no article of our beliefe. Many falſe things were reported immediately after the Apoſtles death, and of many beleeued as true. Irenæus ſaith, that it was affirmed by all the Ancients of Aſia, that Iohn the Euangeliſt told them that our Sauiour Chriſt was betweene fourtie and fiftie yeares old when he ſuffered; yea, ſome of them that had ſeene other of the Apoſtles affirmed, that they heard the ſame of their mouthes, Irenæus lib. 2. cap. 39. Yet this is prooued to be moſt falſe by the Storie of the Goſpell. And why might not the report of Peters preaching at Rome, come firſt from ſuch a beginning, which being once receiued, as a ſtorie, by all that come after, is taken for a truth: as in matters of Hiſtories many fables are. But Peter himſelfe (you ſay) teſtifieth that hee was at Rome, calling it Babylon, as diuers ancient Fathers doe iudge: A ſimple teſtimonie for the credit of Rome, that Peter writing to the Iewes that were diſperſed in ſo many nations, defamed the See of his Biſhopricke, by the name of Babylon. Why ſhould we not [illegible] of the Corinthians, was then at [illegible] then [illegible] of Alexandria, neere [illegible], was then with [illegible], or [illegible] the time of [illegible] to Rome, [illegible] doe not agree. [illegible] was in the time of Claudius. But by Hierome, who ſaith hee ſate there [illegible] the laſt yeare of [illegible], [illegible], that he came thither the ſecond or third of Claudius. Yet [illegible] ſaith, he came to Rome in the [illegible] of Neroes Empire, and ſate there 25. yeares, whereas Nero reigned but 14 yeares. He ſaith alſo, that his diſputation with Simon Magus, was in the preſence of Nero the Emperour. Euſebius reporteth it under Claudius. Anacletus Biſhop of Rome, (as Nicephorus teſtifieth) did write, that Peter was tranſlated from Antioch to Rome, and from thence he paſſed to Alexandria, becauſe he might more profit the Church there. Niceph. lib. 14. ca. 39. Damaſus ſaith, he conſecrated Clemens Biſhop in his place. Irenæus ſaith, that Linus was made Biſhop by Peter and Paul, and after him Anacletus, and the third was Clemens, l.3.c.3. Tertullian ſaith, Clemens was the firſt after Peter. So that although moſt of the ancient Writers doe make mention of Peters being at Rome, yet there is great varietie of their reports, as in a matter whereof they had no certaine ground. Notwithſtanding, for the conſent of ſo many Writers, and the ancient received opinion, wee are content to acknowledge that he was there, as a matter of ſtorie, not as an article of faith. As for the fond imaginations and devices that you have, how he might be at Rome, and not to be ſaluted by the Apoſtle, are to no purpoſe. Seeing it is manifeſt, that this Epiſtle needed not to have been written unto them, if Peter had been ſo long reſident with them. Beſide that, when Paul did write his Epiſtles from Rome, hee was not there, as appeareth not onely by no ſalutations ſent from him, as there are from other: but alſo, that S. Paul writeth, that at his firſt appearance all men forſook him, which Peter would not have done, 2 Tim. 4.16. All men ſought their owne, when he wrote to the Philippians, Phil. 2.21. where he would have excepted Peter, if he had then been at Rome. Finally, when Paul was brought priſoner to Rome, Peter was not there, for he would have given him entertainment, as the reſt of the brethren did, Acts 28. Where you ſay, that wee might as well ſay, that S. Iohn was never at Epheſus, becauſe S. Paul ſaluteth him not: I anſwer, we uſe not ſo to conclude. But we take it to be very unlike, that S. Iohn was there at that time when S. Paul did write. To conclude, the chaire of Peter, is Peters doctrine, which we doe moſt gladly embrace. The Church of Rome when it was the Church of Chriſt, was unjuſtly condemned by the Donatiſts. But now that the Pope ſitteth in Babylon, as Antichriſt, not in Peters chaire as Peters ſucceſſor, becauſe he teacheth not Peters doctrine, but in Simon Magus ſeat, where all things are to be ſold for money, the See of Rome is juſtly called the chaire of peſtilence, and not the chaire of the Apoſtles.

Rhem. 5. 16 Holy kiſſe.] Hereof and by the common uſage of the firſt Chriſtians, who had ſpeciall regard of unity and peace among themſelves, and for ſigne and proteſtation thereof, kiſſed one another, came our holy ceremonie of giving the Pax, or kiſſing one another in the ſacrifice of the bleſſed Maſſe.

Orig. in 16. ad Rom.
Kiſſing the Pax.

Fulk. 5. Your popiſh Pax is ſcarce ſo good as an Apiſh imitation of the Apoſtles kiſſe: who doth not inſtitute a ceremonie of a ſuperſtitious toy to be kiſſed at the maſſe, but willeth that the maner of ſalutation, (which was then uſuall to be performed with a kiſſe) ſhould be reverently uſed, in holineſſe and ſinceritie. And of ſuch a kiſſe ſpeaketh Origen uſed in the Church after prayers, not of the Pax at Maſſe.

The popiſh pax.

Rhem. 6. 17 To marke them.] He carefully warneth them to take heed of ſeditious ſowers of Sectes and diſſention in religion, and this is ever to be their marke, if they ſhould teach or move them to any thing which was not agreeable to that which they had learned at their converſion: not bidding them to examine the caſe by the Scriptures, but by the firſt forme of faith and religion delivered to them before they had or did reade any booke of the new Teſtament.

Againſt Sectmaſters how to examine our faith.

Fulk. 6. The forme of doctrine that was delivered to the Romanes, was taken out of the holy Scriptures, although there had been never a booke of the new Teſtament written at that time, as you ſay: yet Euſebius ſaith, that S. Markes Goſpell was written immediatly after their converſion. And about the ſame time, as Irenæus teſtifieth, S. Matthewes Goſpel was written when Peter and Paul founded the Churches at Rome, lib.3.ca.1. Yea by Euſebius, who citeth it out of Clemens, it appeareth that the Romans not ſatisfied with the divine preaching of Peter by word of mouth only without writing, intreated Marke to put in writing for their perpetuall inſtruction of thoſe things which Peter preached, which when he had performed, Peter approved their devotion, confirmed the writing, and by his authoritie delivered it to bee read in the Church. Euſeb. lib.2.ca.14. citing Clemens 6. Hyp. & Hieron. in Cat. Which teſtimony (if it be true) declareth manifeſtly, that S. Markes Goſpell containeth the forme of doctrine which S. Peter delivered to the Romanes, & it that doctrine whereby S. Paul willeth them to examine all ſectes that riſe up among them. But if that were a perpetuall and generall marke which you ſay hee giveth, that men ſhould admit nothing but that which they have learned at their converſion, thoſe nations which were converted by the Arrians, ſhould never have become true Catholikes. The nations of the Ruſſians, Bulgarians, and other converted by the Grecians ſince their ſchiſme, ſhould never be brought to the unitie of the Church of Rome. And ſuch as from Iudaiſme, Paganiſme, Mahometiſme, and ignorance, are converted by us to Chriſtianitie, might never become Papiſts, if your owne marke be a good and perpetuall rule (as you ſay it is) being given by the Apoſtle. But we muſt firſt know by whom, and unto what religion, men were firſt converted unto Chriſtianitie; and if it be certaine they were converted to pure and ſincere religion at the firſt, they muſt alwaies hold it. Otherwiſe it is no conſtancie, but deviliſh obſtinacie to continue in any error that is contrary to the holy Scriptures, upon any pretence whatſoever.

The Scriptures ſufficient.

Rhem. 7. 18 But their owne belly.] Howſoever Heretikes pretend in words and externall ſhew of their ſpeeches zeale, indeed they ſeeke but after their owne profit and pleaſure, and by the Apoſtles owne teſtimonie we be warranted ſo to judge of them as of men that indeed have no religion nor conſcience.

Heretikes given to voluptuouſneſſe.

Fulk. 7. This note agreeth to no Heretikes that ever were, more aptly then to the Pope and his Clergie.

Rhem. 19 Your obedience.] Againſt Heretikes and their illuſions, there is no better way then in ſimplicitie to cleave unto that which hath beene taught before: for the which the Romanes obedience is much commended. See Annot. upon the firſt chap. verſ. 8.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE FIRST Epiſtle to the CORINTHIANS.

Rhem. HOw S. Paul planted the Church at Corinth continuing there a yeere and an halfe together, we read Act. 18. After that, when he was at Epheſus, Actes 19, about the end of the three yeeres that he abode there, hee wrote this firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians. For even as S. Luke there writeth, When theſe things were ended, Paul purpoſed in the ſpirit, when hee had gone over Macedonia and Achaia, to goe to Hieruſalem: ſo likewiſe doth Saint Paul himſelfe write here: I will come to you in Achaia, when I ſhall have gone over Macedonia; for I will goe over Macedonia; but I will tary at Epheſus untill Pentecoſt.

Actes 19,21.
1 Cor. 16,5.

The matter that he writeth of, is not one, as in the Epiſtle to the Romanes, but divers; partly ſuch faults of theirs, as were ſignified unto him by them that were of Chloe, 1 Cor. 1.11. partly ſuch queſtions as themſelves wrote to him of, And concerning the things that you wrote to me, 1 Cor. 7,1. for ſo we may (as is ſeemeth) divide the Epiſtle into theſe two parts. Or, to put all together, he writeth of eight things: 1 Of certaine Schiſmes beginning among them, by occaſion of certaine preachers, whom in the ſecond Epiſtle he toucheth more plainly, as being falſe apoſtles, cha.1.2.3.4. 2 Of an inceſtuous fornicator, and ſome that went to law before infidell judges, chap 5.6. 3 Of Matrimonie and continencie, chap.7. 4 Of meats ſacrificed to Idols, chap. 8.9.10. 5 Of his Traditions, chap.11. 6 Of the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, chap.12.13.14. 7 Of the Reſurrection, chap.15. 8 Of the contribution that he gathered of the Gentiles, to ſuccour the Chriſtian Iewes at Hieruſalem, chap.16.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAVL TO THE CORINTHIANS.

CHAP. I.

The 1. part of Schiſmes; that were about their baptizers and preachers.

After ſalutation, 4 having acknowledged the graces of their Church, 10 he exhorteth them from their Schiſmaticall boaſting againſt one another in their baptizers (telling them that they muſt boaſt only in Chriſt for their Baptiſme) 17 and in their preachers, who had the wiſdome of words: telling them that it is the preaching of the Croſſe whereby God ſaveth the world, and wherein onely Chriſtians ſhould boaſt: 26 ſeeing God of purpoſe choſe the contemptible, that ſo himſelfe might have the glory.

3 Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and our Lord IESVS Chriſt.	3 Grace bee unto you, and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Ieſus Chriſt.
4 I give thankes to my God alwayes for you, for the grace of God that is given you in Chriſt IESVS,	4 I thank my God alwaies on your behalfe, for the grace of God which is given you in Ieſus Chriſt,
5 That in all things you be made rich in him, in all utterance, and ‖ in all knowledge,	5 That in all things ye are enriched in him, in all utterance and in all knowledge.
6 (As the teſtimony of Chriſt is confirmed in you,)	6 As the teſtimony of Ieſus Chriſt was confirmed in you.
7 So that nothing is wanting to you in any grace, expecting the revelation of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt,	7 So that ye are deſtitute of no gift, waiting for the appearing of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

9 God is faithfull: by whom you are called into the ſociety of his ſonne IESVS Chriſt our Lord.	*9 * God is faithfull, by whom ye have been called unto the fellowſhip of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt our Lord.*	1 Theſſ. 5.24.
10 And I beſeech you brethren by the name of our Lord IESVS Chriſt, that you all ſay one thing, and that there be no ſchiſmes among you: but that you bee perfect in one ſenſe, and in one knowledge.	10 Now I beſeech you brethren by the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that ye all ſpeake one thing, & that there be no diſſentions among you: but that yee may bee perfectly joyned together in the ſame mind, and in the ſame meaning.

[illegible] of Chloe, [illegible] among you.

12 And I meane this, for that every one of you saith, I certes am Pauls, and I Apollos, but I Cephas, and I Christs.

13 Is Christ divided? Why, was Paul crucified for you? or in the name of Paul were you baptized?

14 I give God thankes, that I baptized none of you, but * Crispus and Caius.

15 Lest any man say that in my name you were baptized.

16 And I baptized also the house of Stephanas. But I know not if I have baptized any other.

17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to evangelize: not in wisdome of speech, that the crosse of Christ be not made voyd.

18 For the word of the crosse, to them in deed that perish, is foolishnesse: but to them that are saved, that is, to us, it is the power of God.

19 For it is written, I will destroy the wisdome of the wise: and the prudence of the prudent I will reject.

20 Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made the wisdome of this vvorld foolish?

21 For because in the wisdome of God the world did not by wisdome know God: it pleased God by the foolishnesse of the preaching to save them that beleeve.

22 For both the Iewes aske signes, and the Greekes seeke wisdome.

23 But wee preach Christ crucified to the Iewes, certes a scandall; and to the Gentiles, foolishnesse:

24 But to the called Iewes and Greekes, Christ the power of God and the wisdome of God.

25 For that which is the foolish of God, is wiser then men: and that which is the infirme of God is stronger then men.

26 For see your vocation brethren, that not many wise according to the flesh, not many mightie, not many noble.

27 But the foolish things of the world hath God chosen that he may confound the wise: and the weake things of the world hath God chosen that hee may confound the strong.

28 And the base things of the world and the contemptible hath God chosen, and those things which are not, that hee might destroy those things which are.

29 That no flesh may glory in his sight.

30 And of him you are in Christ Iesus, ||who is made unto us wisdom from God, and justice, and sanctification, and redemption.

31 That as it is written, He that doth glory, may glory in our Lord.

*14 I thanke God that I baptized none of you but * Crispus and Gaius:* Acts 18.8.

15 Lest any should say that I had baptized in mine owne name.

16 I baptized also the houshold of Stephana: Besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

*17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel: * not with wisdome of words, lest the crosse of Christ should be made of none effect.* Gal.5.2.

20 Where is the wise? where is the Scribe? where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made the wisdome of this world foolish?

21 For after that in the wisdome of God, the world through their wisdome knew not God, it pleased God through foolishnesse of preaching, to save them that beleeve.

*22 For * the Iewes require a signe, and the Greekes seeke after wisdome.* Matth. 12.38.

23 But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Iewes a stumbling blocke, and unto the Greekes, foolishnesse:

24 But unto them which are called, both Iewes and Greekes, Christ, the power of God, and the wisdome of God.

25 For the foolishnesse of God is wiser then men: and the weaknesse of God is stronger then men.

26 Brethren, ye see your calling, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called:

27 But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world, to confound the wise: and God hath chosen the weake things of this world, to confound the things which are mightie.

28 And unnoble things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are.

29 That no flesh should glory in his presence.

30 And of him are ye in Christ Iesus, which of God is made unto us wisdome, and righteousnesse, and sanctification, and redemption.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

Rhem. 1 [illegible] be set to picke our faith out of the Scriptures [illegible] would [illegible] among us.

Fulk. 1 The ordinary way of [illegible] is by hearing the word of God preached, [illegible] converted by reading onely. The Beroeans in their first conversion, joyned reading of the Scriptures with the Apostles preaching, Act.17.11. Timothie was not onely taught by his grandmother, and mother, but even from a young childe brought up in the reading of the Scriptures, 2 Tim.3.15. And this is the right order of bringing up of children in Christian religion: That they be not onely taught by their parents, or teachers and pastors, but also trained up in reading of the Scriptures. But if they that have the charge to see children [illegible], doe neglect their duties, children comming to the yeeres of discretion, being stirred up by Gods Spirit to reade the Scriptures, may learne their faith out of the Scriptures onely, which are able to make them wise unto salvation (as the Apostle teacheth) through faith in Christ Iesus. And a wiser worke may be made of onely reading the Scriptures, then is usually made among Papists, where the children are brought up in ignorance and idolatry, in stead of Christian faith and religion.

Reading of Scriptures.

Rhem. 2 30 Who is made.] He meaneth not, as our Adversaries captiously take it, that we have no justice, sapience, nor sanctity of our owne, other then Christs imputed to us: but the sense is, that he is made the author, giver, and meritorious cause of all these vertues in us, for so the Apostle interpreteth himselfe plainely in the sixth chapter following, when he writeth thus, You be washed, you be justified, you be sanctified in the Name of our Lord Iesus Christ, and in the Spirit of our God.

Christ is made our justice, because he is the author of the justice in us.

Fulk. 2 If we have justice, sapience, or sanctity of our own, we may glory in our owne, and not in the Lord. But Christ is made to us from God, not onely the beginning, but the perfection of wisdome, justice, and sanctification, as he is of redemption. For as rightly you may say, we have redemption in us of our owne, as that we have justice, wisdome, holinesse. And 2 Cor.5.21 the Apostle saith: That we are made the justice of God in Christ, as Christ was made sinne for us, which was none otherwise, then by imputing our sinnes to him, as his justice is imputed to us. And for the gifts of wisdome, justice, holinesse, which we have of Gods grace, they are in us, but not sufficient to make us wise, holy, just before God, that we may deserve eternall salvation, but of his meere grace, we are washed, justified, and sanctified, in the Name of our Lord Iesus, by the working of Gods Spirit. Chrysostome understandeth Christ to be so the author of wisdome, holinesse, and justice, as he is apprehended by faith: That Christ is made unto us wisdome, justice, and holinesse. It is not (saith he) of essence or substance, but of faith. Therefore he saith in another place, that we are made the justice of God in him, In 1 Cor. Hom. 5. Theodoret upon this text saith: You are not named by him, or by him, but you are accounted worthy of regeneration in Christ, he hath given you true wisdome, he hath given you remission of sinnes, and vouchsafed you of justice, and hath made you holy, being delivered from the tyranny of the devill. It is meet therefore to rejoyce, not because of men, but of God which hath saved you. Oecumenius saith, he hath done all these things, that no man should thinke himselfe to be any thing, neither should glory in himselfe, but in God. Bede saith upon this text: Christ the highest God, is the true justice, or else he being the true God, is the highest justice, which truly we ought to hunger and thirst for, the same is our justice in this peregrination, and wherewith we hope to be satisfied hereafter, the same is our full justice in eternity. The same also be the words of S. Aug. Ep.85. The author of the Commentary in Hieroms name saith, Whereas Christ is the wisdome of God, yet when one beleeveth in him, Christ is made wisdome to him. These ancient Fathers joyne with us in the exposition of this place.

Justice inherent.

CHAP. II.

That his owne preaching among them, was in humble manner in the sight of men, 5 howbeit it is most profound wisdome (as they should and would perceive, if they were not carnall) which is taught in the Church of Christ.

AND I (brethren) when I came to you, I came not in loftines of speech or of wisdom, preaching to you the testimony of christ.

2 For I judged not my selfe to know any thing among you but Iesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And * I was with you in infirmity, and feare, and much trembling. Act.18,1.

4 And my speech and my preaching was not in the perswasible words of humane wisdome, but in shewing of spirit and power.

5 That your faith might not be in the wisdome of men, but in the power of God. But we speake wisedome among the perfect.

6 But the wisdome not of this world, neither of the Princes of this world, that come to nought.

7 But we speak the wisdome of God in a mystery, which is hid, which God did predestinate before the worlds, unto our glory.

8 Which none of the Princes of this world did know: for if they had knowne, they would never have crucified the Lord of glory.

9 But

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not in gloriousnesse of words, or of wisedome, shewing unto you the testimony of God.

2 For I esteemed not to know any thing among you, save Iesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And I was among you in weaknesse, and in feare, and in much trembling.

*4 And my words and my preaching * was not with entising words of mans wisdome, but in shewing of the spirit, and of power:* 2 Pet.1.16.

5 That your faith should not stand in the wisdome of men, but in the power of God.

6 And we speake wisdome among them that are perfect: not the wisdome of this world, neither of the Princes of this world, which come to nought.

7 But we speake the wisdome of God in a mysterie, even the hid wisdome which God ordained before the world, unto our glory.

8 Which none of the Princes of this world knew: for had they knowne it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

How Angels and Saints and mortall men know our cogitations.

RHEM. 1 11 But the Spirit of man.] One man cannot know anothers cogitations naturally: but God giveth the Prophets and other, even in this world oftentimes, by extraordinary grace to know mens ſecrets. As he did to S. Peter, to know the fraud of Ananias and Saphira: and to Eliſeus, his ſervants bribery in his abſence, and what was done in the king of Syria his chamber. and as he giveth to all Angels and Saints (ſo far as is convenient to our neceſſities and their heavenly glory) to underſtand not onely our vocall prayers, but our inward repentance and deſires.*

Act. 5.
4 Reg. 5. & 6.
* Luke 15. 7.

FULK. 1 You quote Luk. 15. 7. to prove, that God giveth extraordinary grace to all Angels and Saints, to underſtand, not onely our vocall prayers, but alſo our inward repentance and deſires, ſo farre, as is convenient to our neceſſity. But firſt, there is no mention of Saints, in that place, but generally, that there ſhall be joy in heaven, which is expounded in that 10. verſe, to be before the Angels. Secondly, there is no mention of any prayers, vocall or mentall, but of the repentance of a ſinner, when God, whoſe onely worke it is, to convert a ſinner, doth reveale it. Thirdly, neither in that place, nor in any other of the Scripture, it can be proved, that God uſeth the miniſtery of Saints departed, for our neceſſities. Therefore that place maketh nothing to ſhew, how Saints heare our prayers.

The Heretikes allegation for their vaine ſecurity, anſwered.

RHEM. 2 12 That we may know.] The Proteſtants that challenge a particular ſpirit revealing to each one his own predeſtination, juſtification, and ſalvation, would draw this text to that purpoſe. Which importeth nothing elſe (as is plaine by the Apoſtles diſcourſe) but that the holy Ghoſt hath given to the Apoſtles, and by them to other Chriſtian men, to know Gods ineffable gifts beſtowed upon the believers in this time of grace: that is, Chriſts incarnation, Paſſion, preſence in the Sacrament, and the incomprehenſible joyes of heaven: which Pagans, Iewes, and Heretikes deride.

FULK. 2 We challenge no particular ſpirit, but the ſpirit of adoption, by which every one of us doth cry Abba, Father, and is aſſured of the inheritance of Gods children, which Papiſts underſtand not, becauſe they are void of it. Yet the whole diſcourſe of the Apoſtle, proveth that he ſpeaketh thereof, and not onely of the revelation of knowledge to the Apoſtles, by whom, without teſtimony of the ſame ſpirit, Chriſtian men know the ſame. But if any man hath not the Spirit of Chriſt (ſaith the Apoſtle) he is none of his. Rom. 8. 9. S. Auguſtine ſo underſtandeth this place, that it pertaineth to the ſpeciall revelation of Gods Spirit in every true Chriſtian that is made juſt. We beloved (ſaith he) *that we may be our Lords friends: Let us know what our Lord doth, for he himſelfe maketh us not only men, but alſo juſt men, and not we our ſelves. And that we may know this, who maketh but he himſelfe? For we have not received the ſpirit of this world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we may know thoſe things which are given to us of God. The ſenſuall man

RHEM. 3 14 The ſenſuall man.] The ſenſuall man is he ſpecially, that meaſureth theſe heavenly myſteries by naturall reaſon, humane prudence, externall ſenſe, and worldly affection, as the Iew, Pagan, and Heretike doe: and ſometime both here and elſewhere, the more infirme and ignorant ſort of Chriſtian men be called ſenſuall or carnall alſo, who being occupied in ſecular affaires, and given to ſenſuall joy and worldlineſſe, have no ſuch ſenſe or feeling of theſe great gifts of God, as the perfecter ſort of the faithfull have. Who trying theſe high points of religion, not by reaſon and ſenſe, but by grace, faith, and ſpirit, be therefore called ſpirituall. The ſpirituall then is he, that judgeth and diſcerneth the truth of ſuch things as the carnall cannot attaine unto: that doth by the Spirit of the Church, whereof he is partaker in the unity of the ſame, not onely ſee the errours of the carnall, but condemneth them and judgeth every power reſiſting Gods Spirit and word: the carnall Iew, Heathen, or Heretike, having no meanes or right to judge of the ſaid ſpirituall man. For when the ſpirituall is ſaid to be judged of none, the meaning is not that he ſhould not be ſubject or obedient to his Paſtours and ſpirituall Powers, and to the whole Church, ſpecially for the triall or examination of all his life, doctrine, and faith: but that a Catholike man, and namely, a teacher of Catholike doctrine in the Church ſhould not be any whit ſubject to the judgement of the Heathen or the Heretike, nor care what of ignorance

And we ſay againſt all heretikes, and firſt againſt thoſe that be of Marcions ſide, and againſt thoſe that are like to them, ſaying, that the Prophets are of another God: Reade ye more diligently the Goſpel which is given us by the Apoſtles, and reade more diligently the Prophets, and you ſhall finde all the doing, and all the doctrine, and all the Paſſion of our Lord preached or ſet forth in them.* If all the doctrine of Chriſt be ſet forth in the Scriptures, and ſo plainly that it may by diligent reading be found even of heretikes, the Spirit of the Church teaching nothing, but that which is ſet forth in the Scriptures.

The Church is under no mans judgement.

CHAP. III.

RHEM. 1 If they will not be carnall ſtill, they muſt truſt in God onely, and not in their Preachers, which are but his miniſters, 10 and need to looke well how they preach: 12 becauſe not all preaching, though it be Catholike, is meritorious: but rather it buildeth matter to be purged by fire, when it is vaine and unfruitfull (as alſo any other like workes of other Catholikes) marry if it be hereticall, deſtroying the Temple of God, then it worketh damnation. 18 The remedy is, to humble themſelves and referre all to God.

FULK. 1 The text ſpeaketh not of any preaching, or other worke that is meritorious.

AND I, brethren, could not ſpeake to you as to ſpirituall, but as to carnall. As it were to little ones in Chriſt,

2 I gave you ‡ milke to drinke, not meat: for you could not as yet; but neither can you now verely, for yet you are carnall.

3 For whereas there is among you emulation and contention, are you not carnall, and walke according to man?

4 For when one ſaith, I certes am Pauls, and another, I Apollos: are ye not || men? What is Apollo then? what is Paul?

5 The miniſters of him whom you have beleeved, and to every one as our Lord hath given.

6 I planted, Apollo watered: but God gave the increaſe.

7 Therefore neither he that planteth is any thing, nor he that watereth: but he that giveth the increaſe, God.

8 And he that planteth and he that watereth are one. And || every one ſhall receive his owne reward according to his owne labour.

9 For we are c coadjutors: you are Gods husbandry, you are Gods building.

10 According to the grace that is given mee, as a wiſe worke-maſter have I laid the foundation: and another buildeth thereupon.

AND I could not ſpeake unto you brethren, as unto ſpirituall, but as unto carnall, even as unto babes in Chriſt.

2 I have nouriſhed you with milke, and not with meat: for ye then were not ſtrong, neither are you as yet.

3 For ye are yet carnall: Seeing then there is among you envying, and ſtrife, and ſects, are ye not carnall, and walke as men?

4 For while one ſaith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollo, are ye not carnall?

5 For what is Paul: what is Apollo? but miniſters by whom yee beleeved, even as the Lord gave to every man.

6 I have planted, Apollo watered: but God gave the increaſe.

7 So then, neither is he that planteth any thing: neither he that watereth: but God that giveth the increaſe.

11 For other foundation no man can lay, beſide that which is laid: which is CHRIST IESVS.

12 And if any man build vpon this foundation, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, wood, hay, ſtubble,

15 If any mans worke burne, he ſhall ſuffer detriment: but himſelfe ſhall be ſaved: yet ſo || as by fire.

16 Know you not that you are the Temple of God: and the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 But if any violate the Temple of God, God will deſtroy him. For the Temple of God is holy: which you are.

18 Let no man ſeduce himſelfe: if any man ſeeme to bee wiſe among you in this world, let him become a foole that he may be wiſe.

Pſal.93,11. 20 And againe, Our Lord knoweth the cogitations of the wiſe that they be vaine.

21 Let no man therefore glory in men. For all things are yours:

11 For other foundation can no man lay, then that which is layd, which is Ieſus Chriſt.

12 If any man build on this foundation, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, timber, hay, or ſtubble, 13 Every mans worke ſhall be made manifeſt. The day ſhall declare it, becauſe it ſhall be revealed by the fire, and the fire ſhall try every mans worke what it is.

14 If any mans worke that he hath built upon, abide, he ſhall receive a reward.

15 If any mans worke burne, he ſhall ſuffer loſſe, but he ſhall be ſafe himſelfe: yet as it were through fire.

*16 * Know yee not that yee are the Temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?* 1 Cor.6.19.

18 Let no man deceive himſelfe: If any man among you ſeeme to himſelfe to be wiſe in this world, let him become a foole, that he may bee wiſe.

*19 For the wiſedome of this world, is fooliſhneſſe with God: for it is written, * He compaſſeth the wiſe in their owne craftineſſe.* Iob 5,13.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. III.

RHEM. 2 8 Every man ſhall receive according.] A moſt plaine text for proofe that men by their labours, and by the diverſities thereof, ſhall be diverſly rewarded in heaven: and therefore that by their workes proceeding of grace, they doe deſerve or merit heaven, and the more or leſſe joy in the ſame; for though the holy Scripture commonly uſe not this word merit, yet in places innumerable of the old and new Teſtament, the very true ſenſe of merit is contained; and ſo often as the word Merces, *and the like be uſed, they be ever underſtood as correlatives or correſpondent unto it; for if the joy of heaven be retribution, repayment, hire, wages for workes (as in infinite places of holy Scripture) then the works can be none other but the valure, deſert, price, worth, and merit of the ſame. And indeed this word, reward, which in our Engliſh tongue may ſignifie a voluntary or bountifull gift, doth not ſo well expreſſe the nature of the * Latine word or the Greeke, which are rather the very ſtipend that the hired workman or journeyman covenanteth to have of him whoſe worke he doth, and is a thing equally and juſtly anſwering to the time and weight of his travels and workes (in which ſenſe the Scripture ſaith,* Dignus eſt operarius mercede ſua, the workeman is worthy of his hire) rather then a free gift; though, becauſe faithfull men muſt acknowledge that their merits be the gifts and graces of God, they rather uſe the word reward, then hire, ſtipend, or repayment; though indeed it be all one, as you may ſee by divers places of holy writ; as, * My merces (reward) is with me to render to every one * according to his workes. And our Lord will render unto me according to my juſtice, Pſal. 17. And the very word it ſelfe merit (equivalent to the Greeke) is uſed thus. Mercy ſhall make a place to every one * according to the merit of his workes, Eccleſ. 16, 15. And if you doe your juſtice before men, you ſhall not have your reward in heaven, Matth. 6, 1. Where you ſee that the reward of heaven is recompence of juſtice. And the evaſion of heretikes is frivolous and evidently falſe, as the former and like words doe convince, for they ſay heaven is our Merces, or reward, not becauſe it is due to our workes, but to the promiſe of God: where the words be plaine, According to every mans workes or labours, upon which workes, and for which workes conditionally, the promiſe of heaven was made.

Good works meritorious, and the rewards in heaven are different according to the ſame.

κατὰ τὰ ἔργα.

FVLK. 2 Every man ſhall receive reward according to his labours, but not according to the merit of his labours. Neither doth the Scriptures in the originall tongues, ever uſe the words of meriting and deſerving, in the caſe of reward, nor any words that are correlative unto it. For the word merces, or μισθὸς, or reward, hath relation unto Gods promiſe, and not to the merite, worthineſſe, or deſert of the worke. And where you ſay in the ende, that we have a frivolous evaſion, to ſay that the reward is not due to our workes, but to Gods promiſe, we ſay not ſo, but thus, the reward is due to our workes [illegible] in reſpect of [illegible] of Gods promiſe [illegible] [illegible] yet [illegible], who alſo giveth [illegible] and ability, to worke that whereunto he repayeth reward. But you adde that the ſenſe of merit, is contained in the Scripture, though the word be not, becauſe the joy of heaven is called retribution, repayment, hire, wages, works, then the workes can be none other, but the valure, deſert, price, worth, and merit of the ſame. Firſt, I anſwer, that the joy in heaven is never called in Scripture by the ſlaviſh name of hire or wages. For μισθὸς, ſignifieth a reward of meere grace, as well as an hire or wages. And ſo the Apoſtle uſeth it plainely, Rom 4.4. ſaying, To him that worketh, μισθὸς, reward, is not reckned according to grace, but according to debt. Therfore the word reward, doth ſignifie as well that which is given according to grace, as that which is due in reſpect of deſert. And ſo it is alwayes taken, when the joy of heaven is called a reward, becauſe as the Apoſtle ſaith, we are ſaved of grace, and not of workes, Epheſ. 2, 8, 9. And leſt you ſhould flie to your diſtinction of the firſt grace and juſtification, the Apoſtle ſaith, we are ſo ſaved by grace, that when we were dead in ſinne, God hath quickened us with Chriſt, and raiſed us up with him, and placed us in heaven with Chriſt, and in Chriſt Ieſus. Wherein is comprehended grace of finall perſeverance and glorification. For who ſhall bring us downe, being once placed in heaven with Chriſt, and in Chriſt: he may as ſoone pull Chriſt out of heaven; Rom. 10. 6. Therefore, when the Scripture uſeth that word, reward, for hire and wages due to the worke, it ſpeaketh not of the reward of eternall life. As when it ſaith: The workman is worthy of his hire: He meaneth the Preacher is worthy of his maintenance of them to whom he preacheth, which his labour doth thorowly deſerve. In the ſecond place, Apoc. 22. Where Chriſt ſaith, his reward is with him, to render to every man according to his worke: The reward is of grace, and not of merit, and ſo of the like places. But where David ſaith, Pſal. 17. The Lord will render to him according to his worke, the reward is of grace, and not of merit, and ſo of the like places. But where David ſaith, Pſal. 17. The Lord will render to him according to his juſtice, he meaneth the juſtice of his cauſe againſt his perſecutors. For when he hath to doe onely with God, he ſaith: Enter not into judgement with thy ſervant, for no fleſh ſhall be juſt in thy ſight, Pſal. 142. 2. The place of Eccleſiaſticus, (beſide that it is no Canonicall Scripture) is falſly tranſlated or corrupted in your vulgar Latine edition. For according to the Greeke it is thus: Make a place to all kinde of mercy, for every man ſhall finde according to his workes. In which ſentence, there is neither word nor meaning of merit. Finally, the reward due to almes is of the mercy of the rewarder, not of the merit of the almes. For Mat. 6. The word is almes, which your tranſlation calleth juſtice. Our Saviour Chriſt ſheweth Mat. 25. 34. that the reward for almes is the inheritance of the kingdome of heaven which was prepared for the giver, before the beginning of the world: Therefore it is not the hire or wages due to the merit of almes, but a reward of the free grace and election of God, prepared and promiſed to the givers of almes. So there is no place in the Scriptures, whereupon to ground your hereticall doctrine, of the valure, merit, or worthineſſe of workes to deſerve the joyes of heaven.

Merit.

RHEM. 3 12 Vpon this foundation.] The foundation is Chriſt, and faith in him working by charity. The upper building may be either pure and perfect matter of gold, ſilver, and precious ſtone, which (according to the moſt authenticall and probable expoſition) be good workes of charity and all Chriſtian juſtice done by Gods grace: or elſe, wood, hay, ſtubble, which ſignifie the manifold acts of mans infirmity and his veniall ſinnes. Which more or leſſe mixed and medled with the better matter aforeſaid, require more or leſſe puniſhment or purgation at the day of our death. At which day if by penance or other meanes in the Church, the ſaid veniall ſinnes be beforehand cleanſed, there ſhall need no purging at all, but they ſhall ſtraight receive the reward due to them.

Building of gold, or ſtubble.

FVLK. 3 The building of precious matter upon the foundation, which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, is manifeſtly to be underſtood, of pure doctrine ſincerely delivered. The building of combuſtible matter, is vaine affectation of eloquence, and other like trifling matter, not taking away the foundation, but handling it unworthily. Heſych. lib. 1. cap. 1. Malas actiones & doctrinas ſignificatas. But admitting your interpretation, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of more or leſſe puniſhment or purgation, at the day of our death. And yet if that alſo were granted, the Apoſtles words will allow no purging by penance, or other meanes of the Church. For he ſaith, the fire ſhall try every mans worke, he ſaith not, the fire ſhall purge every man. So that if this fire here ſhould ſignifie purgatory, (as S. Auguſtine ſaith, expreſly it cannot) and if every man ſhould follow his worke, no man ſhould eſcape Purgatory.

Purgatory.

Satisfaction.

RHEM. 4 13 Shall be manifeſt.] Whether our life and workes be pure and need no cleanſing, now in this world is hard to judge: but the day of our Lord, which is at our death, will make it plaine in what termes every mans life is towarde God; for then Purgatory fire ſhall reveale and prove it; for, whoſoever hath any impure matter of veniall ſinnes or ſuch other debts, to Gods juſtice payable and purgable, muſt into that fire, and after due payment and cleanſing, be ſaved through the ſame. Where the workes of the perfect men and ſuch as died with all debts payed, cleanſed, or forgiven, are quitted from the fire, and never incurre damage, paine, or loſſe thereby. The places of Fathers expounding this for Purgatory, bee very many moſt evident, which are cited in the laſt Annotation following.

Our workes ſhall be manifeſted by fire.

FVLK. 4 The true text is, the day, and not the day of our Lord, and ſo doth S. Auguſtine reade, ſo the ſenſe is: Time will declare, for God hath appointed a time, to examine as it were by fire, every mans doctrine, as S. Ambroſe doth expound it. But of Purgatory fire after this life, here is no mention.

Purgatory.

RHEM. 5 13 The day of our Lord ſhall declare.] That this purgation rather ſignifieth the place of Gods juſtice after our death, then any affliction in this life, the Apoſtles preciſe ſignifying of fire declareth, and of revealing, notifying the difference of mens workes by the ſame: which is not done evidently ever in this life: and namely the word, day of our Lord: which commonly and properly ſignifieth in Scripture, and namely in this Apoſtle (1 Cor. 5, 5. 2 Cor. 1, 13. Phil. 1, 10. 6. 1 Theſ. 5, 2. 2 Theſ. 2. 2.) either the particular, or the generall judgement: and therefore that the triall ſpoken of is not properly nor literally meant any affliction or adverſity of this life, as Calvin alſo confeſſeth, coyning a fooliſh new conſtruction of his owne. Where you may note alſo in that mans Commentary, that this word Dies Domini, was ſo prejudiciall againſt him and all other expoſitions of the triall to be made in this world, that he would gladly have (Domini) out, reading thus. A day ſhall come which ſhall open, &c. Where underſtand, that if it were onely Dies (*as * in the Greeke*) yet thereby alſo the Scripture is wont to ſignifie the ſelfe ſame thing: as 2 Tim. 1, 12. 18 and 2 Tim 4, 8. and Heb. 10, 25. the day, as in this place, with the Greeke Article onely, which is all one with Dies illa, or Dies Domini.

What is ſignified by the day of our Lord.

ἡ ἡμέρα.

FVLK. 5 As I ſaid before, that word (our Lord) is not of the Greeke text, nor in all copies of your vulgar Latine, but in Plantines print, is marked with a note of ſuperfluity. Secondly, the text ſpeaketh not one word of purging, but of trying, and that not of the perſons, but of the workes. And where you ſay the Apoſtles preciſe ſpecifying of fire, declareth a place of juſtice after this life, it is a vaine and unlearned collection. For fire [illegible] taken allegorically, as all the reſt of the words, foundation, gold, ſilver, &c. wood, hay, ſtubble, &c. [illegible] that you quote for the day of our Lord, pertaine not to this place: where the day of the Lord is not named, but generally, a day. And yet in all thoſe places, the day of the Lord, or the day of Chriſt, ſignifieth the day of judgement, when Chriſt ſhall come to judge the quicke and the dead, and not any particular judgement before that day. Finally, let the Article be taken demonſtratively, (as ſometimes it is) yet you can make none other day of it, but doomeſday.

RHEM. 6 15 As by fire.] S. Auguſtine upon theſe words of Pſal. 37. Lord rebuke me not in thine indignation, nor amend me in thy wrath. For it ſhall come to paſſe (ſaith he) that ſome be amended in the wrath of God, and be rebuked in his indignation. And not all perhaps that are rebuked, ſhall be amended, but yet ſome there ſhall be ſaved by amending. It ſhall be ſo ſurely, becauſe amending is named: yet ſo as by fire; but ſome there ſhall be that ſhall be rebuked, and not amended, to whom he ſhall ſay, Goe ye into everlaſting fire. Fearing therefore theſe more grievous paines, he deſireth that he may neither be rebuked in indignation by eternall fire, nor amended in his wrath; that is to ſay, Purge me in this life, and make me ſuch an one as ſhall not need the amending fire, being for them which ſhall be ſaved, yet ſo as by fire. Wherefore? but becauſe here they build upon the foundation, wood, hay, ſtubble? for if they did build gold, ſilver, and precious ſtones, they ſhould be ſecure from both fires, not onely from that eternall which ſhall torment the impious eternally: but alſo from that which ſhall amend them that ſhall be ſaved by fire; for it is ſaid, he ſhall be ſafe, yet ſo as by fire. And becauſe it is ſaid, he ſhall bee ſafe, that fire is contemned. Yea verily though ſafe by fire, yet that fire ſhall be more grievous, then whatſoever a man can ſuffer in this life. And you know how great evils the wicked have ſuffered, and may ſuffer: yet they have ſuffered ſuch as the good alſo might ſuffer; for what hath any malefactor ſuffered by the lawes, that a Martyr hath not ſuffered in the confeſſion of Chriſt? Theſe evils therefore that are here, be much more eaſie, and yet ſee how men, not to ſuffer them, doe whatſoever thou commandeſt. How much better doe they that which God commandeth, that they may not ſuffer thoſe greater paines? Thus far S. Aug. See S. Ambroſ. upon this place, 1 Cor. 3. & Ser. 20. in Pſ. 118. Hier. l. 2. c. 13. adv. Iovin. Greg. l. 4. Dial. c. 39. & in Pſ. 3. Pœnit. in princip. Orig. ho. 6. in c. 15. Exo. & hom. 14. in c. 24. Levit.

Two fires after this life: one eternall, the other temporall, that is, the purging, or amending fire.

Purgatory fire paſſeth all the paines of this life.

FULK. 6 To the authority of S. Auguſtine I oppoſe his owne judgement upon better advice and examination of the text, Ignis de quo &c. The fire whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in this place, muſt be underſtood to be ſuch that both doe paſſe thorow it, that is, both he which buildeth upon this foundation, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones: and he which buildeth wood, hay, and ſtubble. For when he ſaid this, he added, The fire ſhall try every mans worke of what quality it is. If any mans worke ſhall remaine which he hath built upon the foundation, he ſhall receive reward, if any mans worke ſhall be burnt, he ſhall ſuffer loſſe, but he himſelfe ſhall be ſafe, yet ſo as it were by fire. Therefore the fire ſhall try not the worke of one of them, but of them both. And the fire truly is the tentation of tribulation, of which in another place it is written plainely, The furnace doth prove the potters veſſels, and tentation of tribulation juſt men. This fire doth the ſame in this life, which the Apoſtle ſaid &c. Enchir. ad Laurent. cap. 68. And as concerning Purgatory, which opinion in his dayes began to be hearkened unto, he doubteth of it, ſaying: Tale aliquid, &c. It is not incredible, that ſome ſuch thing alſo is done after this life, and it may be enquired of, whether it be ſo: and either be found or be hidden ſtill, that ſome faithfull men are ſaved by a certaine purging fire, ſo much ſooner or later, by how much they have loved corruptible goods more or leſſe, Ibid. & de Dulc. Quaeſt. q. 1. But afterward writing againſt the Pelagians, he utterly denieth any third place beſide heaven and hell. Primum, &c. The faith of the Catholike upon divine authority hath beleeved the firſt place to be the kingdome of heaven, from whence as I ſaid, he that is not baptized, is excepted. The ſecond place, hell, where every one that falleth from Chriſt, or is a ſtranger from Chriſt, ſhall finde eternall puniſhment. The third place we are utterly ignorant of, yea and we finde in the holy Scriptures that there is none, Contr. Pelag. hypogn. l. 5. Likewiſe he denieth all third or middle place, De verbis Apoſt. Ser. 14.

Purgatory.

S. Ambroſe upon this text, underſtanding it of doctrine, that is to be tried by fire, ſaith, that he whoſe evill doctrine ſhall periſh, ſhall ſuffer the paines of fire; that being purged by fire, he may be purged. But expounding what he meaneth by the paines of fire, he ſaith: Semper enim &c. For he muſt alwayes be aſhamed, which ſeeth that he hath defended falſhood in ſtead of truth, which cannot be underſtood of Popiſh Purgatory, but of other judgements of God in this life, wherein hee ſhall bee aſhamed when he ſeeth his errour convinced. Thereupon alſo, Ser. 20. in Pſ. 118. he ſaith, after he hath cited this text. Cognoſcentes itaq, &c. Knowing therefore that there be many judgements, let us examine all our workes, for a juſt man the loſſe is grievous, the burning of any worke is grievous. So he underſtandeth the fire to be the triall of all Gods judgements in this life, and not Purgatory after this life. For he praiſeth the death of all the faithfull. Quia deteriorem ſtatum &c. Becauſe it maketh not their ſtate worſe, but ſuch as it ſhall finde in every one, ſuch it reſerveth unto the judgement to come and cheriſheth them in quiet reſt. De bono mortis cap. 4. Likewiſe in Pſ. 40. he ſaith, Bene addidit, &c. The Prophet hath well added, In the earth, for except he be here cleanſed, he cannot be cleane there. You ſee therefore by theſe teſtimonies, that all the faithfull are in reſt after this life, and can have no purging after they are gone from hence. Therefore hee cannot bee underſtood of Popiſh Purgatory where there is ſo little reſt, and ſo great neceſſity of purging pretended. Hierome hath nothing that ſoundeth for Purgatory, whoſe words are theſe: Si is cujus opus, &c. If he whoſe worke is burnt and loſt, and hath ſuſtained loſſe of his labour, ſhall looſe indeed the reward of his labour, but ſhall himſelfe be ſaved, yet not without triall of fire, therefore he whoſe worke hath remained, which he hath built upon, ſhall be ſaved without triall of fire, ſo verily there ſhall be ſome diverſity betweene ſalvation and ſalvation. Here is triall by fire, according to the text, but no purging by fire after this life. Nay, that this triall is by tentation in this life, he ſheweth in the ſame booke: In malis, &c. In evill workes and ſinnes, our ſeeds are the incentives and perfection of the devill. For when he ſhall ſee us build upon the foundation of Chriſt, hay, wood, ſtubble, then he putteth fire to it. Let us therefore build gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, and hee ſhall not bee bold to tempt us. Dicit Apoſtolus, Quia unuſquiſq; propriam mercedem ſecundum ſuum laborem. Illum ſcilicet in quo unuſquiſq; invenitur quando de praeſenti ſeculo tranſire praecipitur, Fulgent. de rem. peccato. lib. 2. cap. 8.

In the dayes of Gregorie, which was ſix hundred yeeres after Chriſt, the opinion of Purgatory had gotten ſome ground in the Latine Church, though it was never received in the Greeke Church, yet in the place by you quoted, he granteth it, but for very ſmall offences. For after he had cited certaine teſtimonies of Scripture, he addeth, Ex quibus ſententiis, &c. Of which ſentences it is manifeſt, that ſuch as every man departeth hence, ſuch he is preſented in judgement, but yet of certaine light faults it is to be deemed, that the purging fire is before the judgement. Becauſe the truth ſaith, that if any man ſpeake blaſphemy againſt the holy Ghoſt, it ſhall not bee forgiven him in this world, nor in the world to come. In which ſentence it is given to be underſtood, that ſome faults may bee releaſed in this world, ſome in the world to come. For that which is denied of one Conſequent, Conſequent underſtanding it is, that it is granted of ſome. But yet as I ſaid before, this muſt be thought to be poſſible to be [illegible] of little, and of the leaſt ſinnes. As is idle talke, [illegible] laughter, or the ſinne of houſhold care, which [illegible] without fault, even of them which know how to decline from fault, or the errour of ignorance in no weighty matters, all which doe weigh downe after death, if they be not releaſed to men while they continue in this life. For when S. Paul ſaith that Chriſt is the foundation, and addeth if any man ſhould build upon it, &c. (although this may be underſtood of the fire of tribulation left to us in this life) yet if any man take it of the fire of purgation that ſhall be, we muſt carefully conſider that he ſaid: that man may be ſaved by fire, not which buildeth upon this foundation, iron, braſſe, or lead, that is the greater ſinnes, and therefore harder, and which then are inſoluble, but wood, hay, ſtubble, that is, ſmall and moſt light ſinnes, which the fire may eaſily conſume. If Gregories opinion had continued, or yet might be admitted among the Papiſts, purgatory would not be very gainefull unto them. Yet he confeſſeth alſo that this place may be otherwiſe underſtood then of Purgatory, which is contrary to your note. In pſ. 3. pœnit. he acknowledgeth grievous Purgatory flames, but he groundeth them not upon this text. Remigius, who lived 200. yeeres after Gregory, underſtandeth this fire to be God himſelfe, Cum tu ſis ignis conſumens, fœnum aut ſtipula non poteſt tibi adhaerere: Si quis enim aedificaverit ſupra fundamentum hoc lignum, fœnum, ſtipulam, omne hoc quale ſit, ignis probabit. In Pſ. 5. Origen allegoriſing of the text after his maner, yet ſpeaketh nothing of Popiſh Purgatory. For in the former place he ſaith: Sicut furnus, &c. As the furnace trieth gold, ſo tentation doth juſt men: therefore all men muſt come to the fire, they muſt come to the melting pot. This you cannot underſtand of Purgatory, whither you confeſſe that all doe not come. In the ſecond place nothing can be concluded of purgatory, but that as there be divers kinds of ſinns, ſo there be divers qualities of puniſhments, all which the faithfull man may avoide. But that there was no purgatory paine knowne in his time he teſtifieth in theſe words: Nam priores, &c. Men of former time did celebrate the day of birth, as they which loved this life onely, and hoped not for another after this. But now we doe not celebrate the day of nativity, ſeeing it is the entrance into ſorrowes and tentations, but we celebrate the day of death, as that which is the putting away of all ſorrowes, and the eſcaping of all tentations: we celebrate the day of death, becauſe they doe not die which ſeeme to die. Therefore we keepe memories of the Saints, and of our parents, or of our friends dying in the faith, we hold a memory devoutly, as well rejoycing of their refreſhing, as alſo praying for a godly conſummation in the faith of our ſelves. So therefore we doe not celebrate the day of nativity, becauſe they that die ſhall live for ever. And thus we celebrate it, we call together the devout people with the Prieſts, the faithfull with the Clergie. Moreover we invite the poore and needy, and feed the fatherleſſe and widowes, that our feſtivity may be made in remembrance of the reſt, which is unto the ſoules departed, whoſe memory we celebrate, and may be unto us a ſavour of ſweetneſſe in the ſight of the eternall God. Heere you ſee that Origen acknowledged the ſoules of all the faithfull departed to be in reſt, in refreſhing, and diſcharged of all ſorrowes, therefore not in Purgatory.

CHAP. IIII.

He requireth to be eſteemed for his office, but regardeth not to be praiſed of man for his vertue: conſidering that neither his owne conſcience is a ſufficient judge thereof, but onely God who ſeeth all. 8 He toucheth them for continuing in their pride, the Apoſtles themſelves as miſerable. 18 threatning to come to thoſe proud falſe apoſtles who were the authors of all theſe ſchiſmes.

The Epiſtle upon the fourth Sunday of Advent.

SO let a man eſteeme us as the miniſters of Chriſt, and the diſpenſers of the myſteries of God.

2 Heere now is required among the diſpenſers that a man be found faithfull.

3 But to me it is a thing of leaſt account, to be judged in you or of mans day: but I judge not my ſelfe neither.

4 For I am not guilty in conſcience of any thing: ‖ but I am not juſtified heerein: but he that judgeth me, is our Lord.

6 Therefore judge not before the time: untill our Lord doe come, who alſo will lighten the hidden things of darkeneſſe, and will manifeſt the counſels of the hearts: and then the praiſe ſhall be to every man of God.

‡ Lo when he named himſelfe and Apollo, and Cephas: he meant other ſeditious and factious preachers whoſe names he ſpared.

6 But theſe things, brethren, ‡ I have transfigured into my ſelfe and Apollo, for you: that in us you may learne, one not to be puffed up againſt an other, above that is written.

7 For who diſcerneth thee? Or what haſt thou that thou haſt not received? And if thou haſt received, what doeſt thou glory as though thou haſt not received?

8 Now you are filled, now are you become rich: without us you reigne: and I would to God you did reigne, that we alſo might reigne with you.

c The Epiſtle upon S. Iames day. Iul. 25.

9 c For I thinke that God hath ſhewed us Apoſtles the laſt, as it were deputed to death:

LEt a man ſo eſteeme of us as the miniſters of Chriſt, and the diſpoſers of the ſecrets of God.

2 Furthermore, it is required in the diſpoſers, that a man be found faithfull.

3 With me it is but a very ſmall thing that I ſhould be judged of you, either of mans judgement: yea, I judge not mine owne ſelfe.

4 For I know nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not thereby juſtified: but he that judgeth me, is the Lord.

5 * Therefore judge nothing before the time, untill the Lord come, who will lighten the hidden things of darkeneſſe, and open the counſels of the hearts: and then ſhall every man have praiſe of God.

Matt. 7. 1. rom. 2. 1.

6 And theſe things brethren, I have figuratively applied unto my ſelfe, and to Apollos, for your ſakes: that ye might learne by us not to be wiſe above that which is written, that you ſwel not one againſt another for any mans cauſe.

7 For who ſeparateth thee? And what haſt thou that thou haſt not received? If thou haſt received it, why doeſt thou glory as though thou hadſt not received it?

8 Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us, and I would God ye did reigne, that we alſo might reigne with you.

10 We are but fooles for Chriſt: but you wiſe in Chriſt; we weake: but you ſtrong, you noble, but we baſe.

11 Vntill this houre we do both hunger, and thirſt, and are naked, and are beaten with buffets, and are wanderers, 13 We are blaſphemed: and we beſeech, we are made the refuſe of this world, the droſſe of all even untill now.

14 Not to confound you, do I write theſe things: but as my deareſt children I admoniſh you. ☙

15 For [c] if you haue ten thouſand pædagogues in Chriſt: yet not many fathers. For in Chriſt Iesvs by the Goſpell I begat you. ☙

16 I beſeech you therefore be followers of me.

17 Therefore haue I ſent to you Timothee, who is my deareſt ſonne and faithfull in our Lord: who will put you in minde of my wayes that are in Chriſt Iesvs, as every where in every Church I teach.

18 As though I would not come to you, ſo certaine are puffed up.

Matt. 5.44.

14 I write not theſe things to ſhame you, but as my beloved ſonnes I warne you.

15 For though ye haue ten thouſand inſtructers in Chriſt, yet haue ye not many fathers: For in Chriſt Ieſus I haue begotten you through the Goſpel.

16 Wherefore I deſire you, be ye followers of me.

17 For this cauſe haue I ſent unto you Timotheus, which is my beloved ſonne, and faithfull in the Lord, who ſhall put you in remembrance of my wayes which be in Chriſt, as I teach every where in all Churches.

18 Some are ſwollen, as though I would come no more at you:

*19 * But I will come to you ſhortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the words of them which are ſwollen, but the power.*

Acts 19.21. jam. 4.15.

20 For the kingdome of God is not in word, but in power.

21 What will ye? Shall I come unto you with a rod, or in love, and in the ſpirit of meekeneſſe?

Rhem. 1. 15 If you haue.] So may S. Auguſtine our Apoſtle ſay to us Engliſhmen.

Fulk. 1. That Auguſtine whom you ſpeake of was no Apoſtle of Chriſt but of Gregory, neither did he beget the nation of the Engliſhmen to Chriſt by the pure Goſpell, as Saint Paul did the Corinthians, but with mixture of mens traditions. And that Chriſtian religion which he found in the Britaines, he laboured to corrupt with Romiſh inventions.

Auguſtine the monke no Apoſtle.

Rhem. 2. 4 But not Iuſtified.] The heretikes are certaine that they be in Gods grace, but S. Paul though guilty of no crime in his conſcience, durſt not aſſure himſelfe that he was juſtified, neither could take upon him to be judge of his owne heart and cogitations, whether they were pure or no: but the triall thereof he left onely to Gods judging day.

No man ſure of grace or juſtification.

Fulk. 2. S. Paul was moſt ſure of Gods grace, and his juſtification thereby through faith: Rom. 8.30. But he doth acknowledge that he is not juſtified by his faithfull ſervice and labour in the Goſpell, therefore no man can be juſtified by his workes done of Grace, in as great perfection as can be done of mortall men, which yet is farre unable to ſtand before the juſtice of God.

Certainty of faith. Iuſtification by workes.

Rhem. 21 In rodde.] The Apoſtles haue power of diſcipline and cenſures againſt offenders, and power of gentleneſſe, meekeneſſe, and indulgence alſo: to uſe either puniſhing or pardoning, according to their wiſedome, and according to the occaſions of time and place.

Cyprian) all [illegible] soules, that obey [illegible] new law, as they that were disobedient to the judges of the old law, were slaine with [illegible]. Would God the world knew what a marvelous punishment Christ hath appointed the priests to execute [illegible] lawes, and specially upon the disobedient, as Heretikes namely.

FVLK. 4 Without such bodily tormenting by the divell, we are sufficiently [illegible], that wh[illegible] from the Church of Christ, is in the power of Satan. That Christ did excommunicate Iudas we finde not in the Scripture, nor that Peter did excommunicate Ananias and Saphira. The punishment indeed of excommunication is exceeding great, when it is justly executed by the ministers of the true Church. But the banning of heretikes is no more to be feared, then their blessing is to be desired. And if they also that be true members of the Church will take upon them to excommunicate such as be not under their jurisdiction, their excommunication is not to be regarded. As when Victor Bishop of Rome tooke upon him to denounce all the Churches of Asia to be excommunicate, which did not keepe the feast of Easter as the Church of Rome did. The Churches of Asia did justly despise his unjust censure. And the Bishops of Asia (saith Eusebius) ἀντιπαρεκελεύοντο did countermand him (as it is to be thought) gathered in councell against his usurped excommunication, willing him to be better affected to peace and unity with his brethren. Beside this, many godly Bishops by their letters, did sharpely rebuke him for his doing, yea some of them that joyned with him in the use of the ceremony: as Ireneus Bishop of Lyons in the name of the brethren of France. Hist. lib. 5. c. 25.

RHEM. 5 8 Let us feast.] *The Paschal lambe, which was the most expresse figure of Christ every way, * was first sacrificed, and afterward eaten with azymes or unleavened bread, so Christ our Paschall, being then newly sacrificed on the Crosse, is recommended to them as to be eaten with all purity and sincerity in the holy Sacrament. Which mistery the holy Church in these words commendeth to the faithfull every yeere at the feast of Easter.*

FVLK. 5. S. Augustine referreth this feasting not to the celebration of Easter, nor to the receiving of the Communion, whereunto we ought to be prepared with all sincerity, but to our whole life. Etenim pascha nostrum, &c. Christ our Passeover (saith he) is slaine or offered, that they might learne by example of so great humility, to purge out the old leaven, that is what pride soever had remained in them of the old man. Therefore (saith he) let us keepe holy day, not for one day onely, but for our whole life, not in the old leaven, nor in the leaven of malice and malignity, but in the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth. Cont. ep. Parm. lib. 3. c. 2.

RHEM. 6. 11 Not to take meate.] It is not meant that we should separate our selves corporally from all sinners, or that we might refuse to live in one Church or fellowship of Sacraments with them, which was the errour and occasion of the Donatists great schisme: nor that every man is straight after he hath committed any deadly sinne, excommunicated, as some Lutherans hold: but that we should avoid them when the Church hath excommunicated them for such; though in mind, and condemnation of their faults, every one ought alwayes to be farre from them. As for the Heathen and Pagans, which be not under the Churches discipline, and at that time in externall worldly affaires dealt with Christians, and lived amongst them whether they would or no, the Apostle did not forbid Christians their company.

FVLK. 6. I know not any Lutherans that hold that every man streight after he hath committed any deadly sinne is excommunicated. But amongst Papists there is for some offences excommunication, ipso facto, and de jure, and without any sentence or denuntiation. Extra de sent. Excom. Cum desideres. And further I finde in your Canon law, this title, Vita non sententia, ab ecclesia aliquem ejicit, vel ad eam recipit. The life and not the sentence doth cast any man out of the Church, or receiveth him unto it. Which is thus expounded, Cum aliquis, &c. When any man goeth out from the truth, from the feare of God, from faith, from charity, he goeth out of the campe of the Church although he be not cast out by the voyce of the Bishop: As on the contrary side, some is cast out by no right judgement, but if he went not out before, that is, if he did not that whereby he deserved to goe out, he is nothing hurt. For sometimes, he that is cast out, is within, and he that is without, seemeth to be kept within. Decret. causa. 24. qu. 3. c. Cum aliquis, &c. By this judge, whether some Lutherans be justly charged with that which is affirmed by many Papists, as the Canon law is.

RHEM. 13 The evill one.] He concludeth that though they cannot, nor himselfe neither, cut off the Heathen that be publike offenders, yet the ill person by him excommunicated being of their owne body, they may cut off, as is aforesaid, and avoide his company. Upon which commandement of the Apostle, we see that we are bound by Gods word to avoide all company and conversation with the excommunicate, except in cases of necessity, and the spirituall profit of the persons excommunicated.

CHAP. VI.

He rebuketh them for going to law before Iudges that were not Christians, 9 telling that extortion (as many other offences likewise) is a mortall sinne. 12 And with divers reasons he inveigheth against fornication, bidding also to flee all occasions thereof.

DAre any of you having a matter against another, to be judged before the unjust, and not before the Saints?

3 Or know you not that ‡ the Saints shall judge of the world? And if the world shall be judged by you: are you unworthy to judge of the least things?

3 Know you not that wee shall judge Angels? how much more secular things?

4 If therefore you have secular judgements: the contemptible that are in the Church, set them to judge.

‡ The faithful judge and give sentence with God at the latter day, specially the Apostles and the perfect Christians that have forsaken all for Christs sake.

DAre any of you, having businesse † with another, be judged under the unjust, and not rather under the Saints?

2 Doe ye not know that the Saints shal judge the world? If the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know ye not how that we shall judge the Angels? How much more, things that pertaine to this life?

4 If then ye have judgements of things pertaining to this life, set up them to judge which are least esteemed in the Church.

† Or, against.

5 I speake [illegible] not [illegible] judge between his brother.

6 But brother with brother ‖ contendeth in judgement: and that before infidels?

7 Now certes there is plainely ‖ a fault in you, that you have judgements among you. Why doe you not rather take wrong? why doe you not rather suffer fraude?

8 But your selves doe wrong and defraude: and that to the brethren.

12 All things are lawfull for me, but all things are not expedient. All things are lawfull for me, but I will be brought under the power of none.

13 The meate to the belly, and the belly to the meates: But God will destroy both it and them: and the body not to fornication, but to our Lord, and our Lord to the body.

14 But God both hath raised up our Lord, and will raise up us also by his power.

15 Know you not that your bodies are the members of Christ? Taking therefore the members of Christ, shall I make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.

16 Or know you not, that he which cleaveth to an harlot, is made one body? For they shall be, saith he, two in one flesh.

Gen. 2, 24.

17 But he that cleaveth to our Lord, is one spirit.

18 Flee fornication. Every sinne whatsoever a man doth, is without the body: but he that doth fornicate, sinneth ‡ against his owne body.

‡ Fornication is not onely enemy to the soule, but wasteth, weakeneth, corrupteth and defileth the body, more properly and directly then any other sinnes doe.

19 Or know you not that your members are the temple of the holy Ghost which is in you, whom you have of God, and you are not your owne?

20 For you are bought with a great price. Glorifie and beare God in your body.

5 I speake it to your shame. Is it so that [illegible] that can judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that under the unbeleevers.

Titus 3. 3.

12 All things are lawfull unto me, but all things are not profitable: all things are lawfull for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.

13 Meats for the belly, and the belly for meates: but God shall destroy both it and them. Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord: and the Lord for the body.

*14 And God both hath raised up the Lord, * and also shall raise us up by his power.*

Rom. 6. 5.

15 Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? Shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.

*16 What, know ye not that he which is coupled with an harlot, is one * body? * For two (saith he) shall be one flesh.*

† With the harlot.

18 Flee fornication: every sinne that a man doth, is without the body: but he that committeth fornication, sinneth against his owne body.

*19 What, * know ye not that your body is the temple of the holy Ghost* which is in you, whom ye have of God, and ye are not your owne?

RHEM. 6 Contendeth in judgement.] To be given much to brabling and litigious sutes for every trifle, to spend a pound rather then loose a peny, the Apostle much reprehendeth in Christian men. For a Christian man to draw an other to the judgement seats and courts of Heathen princes (which then onely reigned) and not to suffer their controversies and quarels to be taken up among themselves brotherly and peaceably, was a great fault: as for one Catholike to draw an other for mere trifles before secular or hereticall Officers is a very unchristian part.

THE 3. PART.
Of Mariage and continency.

T[illegible]ried folke may aske their debt, and must pay it, though it be better for them to conteine, 8 as also for the unmaried and widowes to continue [illegible] they may marry. 10 That the married may not depart from one another [illegible] nor in any case marry another, during the life of the former) 12 [illegible] one that is unbaptized, which yet he disswadeth: 17 counselling also every one to be content with his state wherein he was Christened. 25 Virginity is not commanded, but counselled, as the better and more meritorious then Marriage, 39 As also widowhood.

Virginity is not counselled, as more meritorious, but as a more free state to serue God in.

AND concerning the things whereof you wrote to me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman.

2 But because of fornication let every man haue || his owne wife, and let every woman haue her owne husband.

3 || Let the husband [c] render his debt to the wife: and the wife also in like manner to her husband.

4 The woman hath no power of her owne body: but her husband. And in like maner the man also hath not power of his owne body: but the woman.

5 Defraud not one another, except perhaps by consent for a time, ‡ that you may || giue your selfe || to prayer: and returne againe together, lest Satan tempt you for your incontinency.

|| to fasting and prayer:

6 But I say this || by indulgence, not by commandement.

7 For I would all men to be as my selfe: but every one hath || a proper gift of God: one so, and another so.

8 ‡ But I say to the unmaried and to widowes: it is good for them if they so abide even as I also.

‡ Before he treated of the continency of such as were maried, now he giveth lessons for the unmaried also.

c vri. πυροῦσθαι.

10 But to them that be joyned in matrimony, not I giue commandement, but our Lord, * that the wife depart not from her husband.

Mat.5.32. 19.9. Marke 10,9. Luke 16,18.

11 And if she depart, || to remaine unmarried, or to be reconciled to her husband. And let not the husband put away his wife.

12 For the rest, || I say, not our Lord. If any brother haue a wife an infidell, and she consent to dwell with him: let him not put her away.

13 And if any woman haue a husband an infidell, and he consent to dwell with her: let her not put away her husband.

14 For the man an infidel is sanctified by the faithfull woman: and the woman an infidell || is sanctified by the faithfull husband: otherwise your children should be uncleane: but now they are holy.

15 But if the infidell depart, let him depart; for the brother or sister is not subject to servitude in such; but in peace hath God called us.

16 For

NOW as concerning the things whereof yee wrote unto me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman.

2 Neverthelesse to avoid fornication, let every man haue his owne wife, and let every woman haue her owne husband.

*3 * Let the husband giue unto the wife due benevolence: Likewise also the wife unto the husband.*

1 Pet.3.7.

4 The wife hath not the power of her owne body, but the husband: And likewise also the husband hath not the power of his owne body, but the wife.

5 Defraud you not the one the other, except it be with both your consents for a time, that yee may giue your selues to fasting and prayer: and afterward come together againe, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.

6 This I say † of favour, and not of commandement.

† Or, by way of sufferance.

7 For I would that all men were even as I my selfe: but every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this maner, another after that.

8 I say therefore to the unmarried and widowes, it is good for them if they abide even as I.

9 But if they cannot abstaine, let them marrie: for it is better to marrie then to burne.

*10 Unto the married command, not I, but the Lord, * Let not the wife depart from her husband:*

Mat.5.32, & 19.9.

11 But and if she depart, let her remaine unmarried, or bee reconciled to her husband againe: And let not the husband put away his wife.

12 But to the remnant speake I, not the Lord, If any brother haue a wife that beleeveth not, and she consent to dwell with him, let him not put her away.

13 And the woman which hath to her husband an infidell, and he consent to dwell with her, let her not put him away.

14 For the unbeleeving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbeleeving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children uncleane, but now are they holy.

15 But if the unbeleeving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not made subject in such things: but God hath called us in peace.

16 For

16 For [illegible] woman, if thou [illegible]? or how [illegible] man, if thou [illegible] woman?

17 But to every one as our Lord hath diuided, as God hath called every one, so let him walke, and as in all Churches I teach.

18 Is any man called being circumcised? let him not procure prepuce. Is any man called in prepuce? let him not be circumcised.

19 Circumcision is nothing, and prepuce is nothing: || but the observation of the Commandements of God.

20 Every one in the vocation that he was called, in it let him abide.

21 Wast thou called being a bondman? care not for it: but and if thou canst be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that in our Lord is called, being a bondman, is the [c] franchized of our Lord; likewise he that is called, being free, is the bondman of Christ.

c Libertus.

23 You were bought with price, bee not made the ‡ bondmen of men.

‡ You must not serve men so that you obey and please them more then God.

24 Every || brother wherein he was called, in that let him abide before God.

25 And as concerning virgines, a commandement of our Lord I have not: but || counsell I give, as having obtained mercy of our Lord to be faithfull.

The Epistle for holy Virgins and Martyrs.

|| one brethren.

26 I thinke therefore that this is good for the present necessity, because it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou tied to a wife? seeke not to be loosed. Art thou loose from a wife? seeke not a wife.

28 But if thou take a wife, † thou hast not sinned. And | if a virgine marry, she hath not sinned; neverthelesse || tribulation of the flesh shall such have; but I spare you.

† Virginity counselled as the better. Marriage not forbidden, because it is no sinne.

29 This therefore I say brethren, the time is short, it remaineth that they also which have wives, be || as though they had not.

30 And they that weepe, as though they wept not: and they that rejoyce as though they rejoyced not: and they that buy, as though they possessed not.

31 And they that use this world, as though they used it not; for the figure of this world passeth away.

32 But I would have you to be without carefulnesse. Hee that is without a wife, is || carefull for the things that pertaine to our Lord, how he may please God.

33 But hee that is with a wife, is carefull for the things that pertaine to the world, how hee may please his wife: and he is divided.

34 And the woman unmarried and the virgine, thinketh on the things that pertaine to our Lord: that shee may bee holy both in body

16 [illegible] wife?

17 But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walke, and so ordaine I in all Churches.

18 Is any man called being uncircumcised? let him not adde uncircumcision: Is any called in uncircumcision, let him not be circumcised.

19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandements of God.

*20 * Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called.*

Ephes.4.1.

21 Art thou called a servant? care not for it: nevertheless, if thou mayest bee made free, use it rather.

22 For hee that is called in the Lord being a servant, is the Lords freeman; likewise also hee that is called being free, is Christs servant.

1 Pet.1.19.

24 Brethren, let every man wherein hee is called, therein abide with God.

25 Now concerning virgins, I have no commandement of the Lord: yet give I counsell, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to bee faithfull.

26 I suppose therefore that it is good for the present necessity, that I say, it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seeke not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seeke not a wife.

28 But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned: neverthelesse, such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I † beare with you.

† Or, spare you.

29 But this I say brethren, because the time is short: for it remaineth that they also which have wives bee as though they had none:

39 And they that weepe, as though they wept not: and they that rejoyce, as though they rejoyced not: and they that buy, as though they possessed not.

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: for the fashion of the world goeth away.

32 I would have you without care. He that is unmarried, careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how hee may please the Lord:

33 But he that hath married, careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.

34 There is difference betweene a virgine and a wife: the unmarried woman careth for the things that are of the Lord, that shee may body and in Spirit. [illegible] that is married, [illegible] the things that pertaine to the world, how ſhe may pleaſe her huſband.

35 And this I ſpeake to your profit: not to caſt a ſnare upon you, but to that which is honeſt, and that may give you power without impediment to attend upon our Lord.

36 But if any man thinke that he ſeemeth diſhonoured upon his virgine, for that ſhe is paſt age, and if it muſt be ſo, let him doe that he will. He ſinneth not if ſhe marry.

37 For hee that hath determined in his heart being ſetled, not having neceſſity, but having power of his owne will, and hath judged this in his heart, to keepe his virgine, doth well.

38 Therefore both he that joyneth his virgine in Matrimonie, doth well: and hee that joyneth not, doth better.

Rom.7,2.

39 * A woman is bound to the Law ſo long time as her huſband liveth: but if her huſband ſleepe, ſhe is at liberty: let her marry to whom ſhe will: onely in our Lord.

be holy both in body and in ſpirit: but ſhe that is married, careth for the things of the world, how ſhee may pleaſe her huſband.

35 This ſpeake I for your profit: not that I may caſt a ſnare upon you, but for comelineſſe ſake, and ſitting faſt unto the Lord without ſeparation.

36 But if any man thinke that it is uncomely for his virgin if ſhe paſſe the time of mariage, and need ſo require, let him doe what he will, he ſinneth not; let them be married.

27 Neverthelesse, he that ſtandeth ſtedfaſt in his heart, having no need, but hath power over his owne will, and hath ſo decreed in his heart that he will keepe his virgine, doth well.

38 So then he that giveth in marriage doth well: but he that giveth not in marriage, doth better.

MARGINALL NOTES, CHAP. VII.

RHEM. 2 5 That you may.] If the lay-man cannot pray, unleſſe he abſtaine from his wife: the Prieſt that alwayes muſt offer ſacrifices and alwayes pray, muſt therefore alwayes be free from Matrymony, Hier.l.1.c.19.adv.Iovin.

Virginity.

FULK. 2 Hierome was an immoderate extoller of virginity, to the reproach and diſhonour of Matrimonie, as appeareth by his ſayings in the ſame booke. Si bonum eſt, &c. If it be a good thing not to touch a woman, ergo, it is an evill thing to touch a woman: for nothing is contrary to good but evill. This was S. Hieromes Logicke, in his heat againſt Iovinian. To touch a woman and not to touch a woman, bee contraries, which every childe knoweth to be otherwiſe. Againe he ſaith in depraving of the goodneſſe of Matrimonie, Oro te quale, &c. I pray you what good thing is that which forbiddeth to pray? which permitteth not the body of Chriſt to be received. So long as I fulfill the duty of an huſband, I fulfill not the office of a Chriſtian. The ſame Apoſtle commandeth in another place, that we ſhould pray alwayes. If we muſt alwayes pray, ergo, we muſt never ſerve marriage: for ſo often as I render debt to my wife, I cannot pray. I omit what he writeth againſt ſecond and third marriages, which afterward he was driven to retract. You ſee, if we muſt ſtand to his authority, all men muſt abſtaine from marriage, as from an evill thing: as that forbiddeth to pray or to communicate with the Lords body: as in doing the duty whereof, they cannot doe the duty of Chriſtian men. And ſeeing that married men alſo ought alwayes to pray, even married men muſt never yeeld to the duty of marriage, which cauſeth that they cannot pray. Theſe opinions are farre worſe then that Iovinian held, of the equall worthineſſe of virginity with marriage. Therefore leaving his authority, let us examine his reaſon. If the lay-man cannot pray unleſſe hee abſtaine from his wife, then the Prieſt muſt alwayes abſtaine from marriage. This antecedent is falſe, for a lay-man may not onely pray, but ought to pray alwayes, as Hierome alſo confeſſeth, though he doe not alwayes abſtaine from his wife. S. Paul willeth married men not to defraud one another, except it bee for a time with conſent, that they may give themſelves to faſting and prayer, which kinde of prayer with faſting, is not alwayes neceſſary, but ſometimes convenient, upon ſome ſpeciall occaſion, that requireth moſt fervent prayers, with humiliation by faſting, and abſtinence from all worldly delights: and yet in ſuch occaſion conſent is neceſſary for abſtinence from matrimoniall company, as it is plaine by the text. Yet it is ſo farre off, that the lay-man cannot pray, unleſſe he abſtaine from his wife, that oftentimes he prayeth more quietly and purely, then he that hath no wife, or abſtaineth from her, if he have not dominion over bodily luſt. Wherefore matrimony ſhall no more hinder the Prieſt to offer ſacrifice and prayer, then it doth the lay-man, who is bound alwayes to offer ſacrifice and prayers as much as the Prieſt. And therefore we muſt oppoſe againſt S. Hieromes authority, the authority of Paphnutius, and the whole Councell of Nice that condeſcended unto his reaſon, alledging that the company of Prieſts and Deacons, as well as of all other Chriſtian men with their lawfull wives is chaſtity, Socrat.l.1.c.11.

Marriage of Prieſts.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VII.

The Apoſtle biddeth not all to marry, but to keepe their wives before married.

RHEM. 3 a His owne wife.] He ſaith not as the Proteſtants here pretend to excuſe the unlawfull conjunction of Votaries, Let every one marry: but, let every one have, keepe or uſe his owne wife to whom he was married before his converſion: for the Apoſtle here anſwereth to the firſt queſtion of the Corinthians, which was not, whether it were lawfull to marry; but whether they were not bound upon their converſion, to abſtaine from the company of their wives married before in their infidelity, as ſome did perſwade them that they ought to doe, Hier.l.1.cont.Iovin.c.4. Chryſ.in hunc locum hom.19.

FULK. 3 The Apoſtles words are generall, that to avoid fornication, every man and woman ought to live chaſtly in holy Matrimonie. Hierome indeed more injurious to Matrimonie, then a Catholike Doctour ought to have [illegible], ſaith [illegible]: [illegible] &c. He ſaid not, let every man marry a wife, to avoid fornications: for [illegible] as often as the wife [illegible] another [illegible] be [illegible]: but let every man have his owne wife. [illegible] plainely, if Hierome [illegible] good in [illegible], it is good to [illegible] ſecond or third marriages, after a mans wife be dead, which is little better then hereſie, and therefore Hierome revoked his opinion therein. Chryſoſtome ſaith nothing to reſtraine the words onely to married men, but ſaith, that this ſaying: It is good for a man, &c. is not reſtrained to Prieſts, but extendeth to all men. For hee would not univerſally have admoniſhed onely Prieſts, if he had written theſe things for them, but have ſaid, it is good for a teacher not to touch a woman: but now he hath ſpoken univerſally, when he ſaith, it is good for a man. Therefore this is not ſaid onely to a Prieſt. And againe, Art thou looſe from a wife, ſeeke not a wife: he ſaith not, Thou Prieſt or Teacher, but generally; and ſo throughout all the Epiſtles, his ſpeech goeth generally: but when he ſaith, for fornication let every man have his wife, by the very cauſe of indulgence, he bringeth into continencie.

RHEM. 4 3 Let the huſband render.] Theſe words open the Apoſtles intention and talke to bee onely of ſuch as are already married, and to inſtruct them of the bond and obligation, that is betweene the married couple for rendring of the debt of carnall copulation one to another: declaring that the married perſons have yeelded their bodies ſo one to another, that they cannot without mutuall conſent, neither perpetually nor for a time, defraud one the other.

FULK. 4 Theſe words doe not reſtraine the univerſality of the Apoſtles former words, ſeeing avoiding of fornication, is the ſame cauſe in them that are unmarried to take wives, and in them that are married, to uſe the company of their wives.

Continencie in married folkes for prayer ſake.

RHEM. 5 5 Give your ſelfe to prayer.] This time, and the Heretikes doctrine, and high eſtimation of matrimoniall acts, are farre from the purity of the Apoſtolike and primitive Church, when the Chriſtians to make their prayers and faſtings more acceptable to God, abſtained by mutuall conſent even from their lawfull wives; our new Maſters doe much abſtaining (as it may be thought) from their wives for any ſuch matter. And yet S. Auguſtine ſaith, the Prieſt ſhould paſſe other in this caſe, and thinke that not to be lawfull for him, that may be borne in others, becauſe he muſt daily ſupply Chriſts roome, offer, baptize, and pray for the people. So ſaith he lib. 1. q. ex utroque teſt. q. 127. in fine. See S. Hierome lib. 1. cap. 19. adverſ. Iovinian. S. Ambroſ. lib. 1. Offic. cap. ult. But alas for the people, whoſe married Paſtors are in this point farre worſe than the vulgar folke, neither teaching continencie, nor giving good example.

Prieſts marriage.

FULK. 5 We have none other eſtimation of the matrimoniall act, then the Apoſtle doth teach. And it may well bee thought, that many of our miniſters uſe more continencie in lawfull marriage, than Popiſh Prieſts doe that are not lawfully married, yet uſe other wicked meanes to ſatisfy their unlawfull luſtes, as the world knew too well, when they lived at eaſe amongſt us. That it is lawfull for a Biſhop to be married, the authority of the Scripture is more to be regarded, then of any mortall man. S. Paul (as even S. Hierome confeſſeth) deſcribeth a Biſhop the huſband of one wife, and having children in all chaſtity, as Samuel, who was brought up in the Tabernacle, and as many Prieſts in his time were married, Cont. Iov.l.1. That you cite for the contrary out of Saint Aug.l.q.ex [illegible] &c. is neither of Auguſtine, neither of any learned mans writing, but of a lewd [illegible], as his barbarous phraſes doe declare; in many places alſo, confuting that which S. Auguſtine doth earneſtly defend, as in the cenſure of Eraſmus before that treatiſe, every man may ſee. S. Ambroſe for ſuch purity as is required of the Miniſter, ſaith, De caſtimonia, &c. Of chaſtity what ſhould I ſpeake, when one onely marriage is permitted, and not repeated? Even in marriage it ſelfe, there is a law not to marry againe, nor to have the conjunction of a ſecond wife. You ſee therefore, that marriage with one wife in his time was counted chaſtity, and lawfull for a miniſter of the Church: yea he addeth moreover, that the ſecond wife was not forbidden as a fault, but as againſt a law, which was, that he which had one wife before Baptiſme, and another after, was not admitted into the miniſtery. Ut conjugio, &c. In the marriage there is no fault but a law. Finally, by the Councell of Gangra, If any man make difference of a married Prieſt, as though through occaſion of his marriage he ought not to offer, and therefore doth refraine himſelfe from his oblation, he is accurſed, Cap.4.

Perpetuall continencie, even in married folkes, better then carnall copulation.

RHEM. 6 By indulgence, not commandement.] Leſt ſome might miſconſter his former words, as though hee had preciſely commanded married perſons not to abſtaine perpetually from carnall copulation, or not to give their conſent one to another of continencie but for a time onely: he declareth plainely that hee gave no rule or precept abſolutely therein, but that he ſpake all the foreſaid, condeſcending to their infirmities onely, inſinuating that continencie from carnall copulation is much better, and that himſelfe kept it continually. Auguſt. de bon. conjug. cap. 10. Enchirid. cap. 78.

Who are bound to live c[illegible] by, and that God giveth this gift to all that aske it.
*See S. Aug.l.2.de [illegible] 19. [illegible] de Adult. Coniug.cap.6.

RHEM. 6 7 A proper gift.] *To ſuch as may lawfully marry, or be already married, God giveth not alwayes that more high and ſpeciall gift or grace of continencie, though every one of them aſke humbly and labour for it, may be have it: but ſuch are not bound to endeavour to ſeeke for it alwayes, and therefore cannot be commanded to abſtaine further then they like; but whenſoever a man is bound to abſtaine, either by vow or any other neceſſary occaſion (as if one of the parties be in priſon, warre, baniſhment, ſickneſſe, or abſent perpetually by lawfull divorce) the other muſt [illegible] in paine of damnation abſtaine, and cannot excuſe the want of the gift of chaſtity; for * he is bound to aſke it and to ſeeke for it of God by faſting, prayer, and chaſtiſing of his body: and ſo labouring duly for it, God will give the grace of chaſtity. So had S.* Paul it, and ſo had all the holy men that ever lived chaſte. Therefore deteſt the doctrine of the Proteſtants in this point, that when they liſt not faſt nor pray for it, ſay they have not the gift. And it were a great marvell why ſo few of the new Sect, or rather none now a dayes have that gift, but that we ſee it is obtained by thoſe meanes which our forefathers uſed, and they uſe not at all. To live in marriage continually without the breach of conjugall fidelity, is a gift of God alſo, but men muſt not breake their faith of wedlocke for want of it, but muſt know that God giveth that gift to ſuch as humbly aſke it of him, Aug. de grat. & l. arbitrio c.4. de continent. c.1.

All cannot have the gift of continencie.

FULK. 6 It cannot be called a proper gift, if every one that labour for it, may have it. Our Saviour Chriſt teacheth, that all men cannot take it, but let him (ſaith he) that can take it, take it and uſe it, Matth.19.v.12. They that binde themſelves by a raſh and unadviſed vowe, before they were ſure of the gift, have no promiſe to be heard in their prayer for continencie. But where there is ſuch neceſſity, as they neither are cauſe of themſelves, nor can otherwiſe avoid, as in long or perpetuall ſickneſſe, it is certaine, that God will give the gift, being ſought for by ſuch meanes as it is convenient, becauſe he hath promiſed all things neceſſary for our ſalvation: as for impriſonment, baniſhment, warre, &c. I doe not take to be ſuch neceſſity, but the huſband is bound to follow his wife in them, and the wife her huſband. As for abſence by lawfull divorce, which is onely for fornication, doth not reſtraine Matrimony, ſeeing that caſe is excepted by our Saviour Chriſt, and there is no reaſon but that the exception ſhould extend as well to the ſecond marriage, as to the divorce. There is no cauſe therefore to deteſt the Proteſtants doctrine, when they ſay they have not the gift of continencie, but rather to deteſt both the doctrine, and the doings of the Papiſts, which ſay they have the gift, and teach that all men may have it if they will, and yet leade a filthy and abominable life out of marriage. Whether we uſe prayer and faſting, to try whether it will pleaſe God to give that gift, it is unknowne to you. Some I am ſure have uſed it, and many among us, both in the miniſtery, and out of it, have the gift of continencie, though they make no raſh vowes of it, nor deſpiſe them that have it not. How well you keepe your vowes that live abroad, we know not, but your forefathers the Popiſh Clergie, that lived here among us, we know, that as few of them lived chaſtly, as of us doe live out of marriage continently.

Rhem. 7 9 If they containe not.] He meaneth of ſuch as be free: for if they marry after they have made vow or promiſe to God of chaſtity, they are worthily damned, ſuch being bound to containe, and ſo may containe if they liſt, Auguſt. de bono viduit. c.8,9. & de adult. conjug. lib.1. c.15. & de fide ad Petrum c.3. in fine. Ambroſ. ad virg. lapſam c.5.

The Apoſtle permitteth marriage to them that be free, not to vowed perſons.

Fvlk. 7 He ſpeaketh generally, and therefore his precept extendeth alſo to them that have made raſh vowes of continencie, if they doe not containe: and if they may containe if they liſt, the fault of many Popiſh Prieſts is the greater, that they doe not containe. S. Auguſtine de bono viduitatis, although he count it a ſinne, to forſake continencie in them that have vowed it, yet he condemneth not the marriage of ſuch as have vowed. Non quia ipſæ nuptiæ vel talium &c. Not that the marriage it ſelfe, even of ſuch perſons, is judged to be condemned, cap. 9. and in the next chapter he proveth, that ſuch marriages are not to be diſſolved: for though he condemne the breaking of that vow to be evill, yet he affirmeth the marriage to be good. S. Ambroſe in the place quoted, although he affirmeth, that ſuch as have vowed ought not to marry, yet he counteth it more intolerable for ſuch to commit fornication. Epiphanius teſtifieth what the judgement of the Church was in his time. Contra Apoſtolicos, Hær. 61. Melius eſt itaq; &c. It is better to have one ſinne, and not many: It is better for him that is fallen from his courſe, openly to take unto him a wife according to the law, and to repent a long time from his virginity, and ſo to be brought againe unto the Church, as he that hath wrought evill, as he that is fallen and broken, and hath need to be bound up, and not to be daily wounded with ſecret darts of that improbity, which is offered to him by the devill: ſo knoweth the Church to preach: Theſe are the medicines of healing, &c. Contrary to this Doctrine, ſome Papiſts have preached, that it is leſſe ſinne for a vowed Prieſt to keepe many concubines, then to marry a wife: and as you affirme in the next Section.

Vow of continencie.

Rhem. 8 9 Better to marry.] *It is better to marry for the ſaid perſons that be free, then to be overthrowne and to fall into fornication; for, to burne, or, to be burnt, is not to be tempted onely (as the Proteſtants thinke that picke quarrels eaſily to marry) but it ſignifieth * to yeeld to concupiſcence either in minde or externall worke. We ſay alſo, for ſuch as be free; for concerning others lawfully made Prieſts, and ſuch as otherwiſe have made vow of chaſtity, they cannot marry at all, and therefore there is no compariſon in them betwixt marriage and fornication or burning; for their marriage is but pretended, and is the worſt ſort of incontinencie and fornication or burning.*

* Theodoret in hunc locum.

Fvlk. 8 By Epiphanius judgement, it is better for vowed perſons to marry, then to burne: which is not onely to be tempted, as you falſly ſlander us to thinke, but to be ſo continually inflamed with luſt, that the will doth conſent, and deſire quenching, which cannot be avoided in them that have not the gift of continencie, whether they be vowed or free from vowes. That you affirme the marriage of vowed Prieſts to be but pretenced, and to be the worſt ſort of incontinencie, and fornication, and burning, you are contrary to Auguſtine de bono viduitatis, cap. 9. who ſaith, That the marriage even of ſuch is not to be condemned. And moreover he ſaith, Damnantur tales &c. Such are condemned, not becauſe they have entred into the faith of marriage afterward, but becauſe they have made void the firſt faith of continencie, which thing that the Apoſtle might briefly inſinuate, he would not ſay, that thoſe widowes have damnation that marry after the purpoſe of greater holineſſe, not becauſe they are not condemned, but leſt the marriage it ſelfe in them might be thought to be condemned. And in the tenth chapter he ſaith, Therefore they which ſay, that the marriage of ſuch is no marriage, but rather adulteries, ſeeme to me, not to conſider throughly and diligently what they ſay: for a ſimilitude of truth doth deceive them. Againe, Fit autem &c. There commeth to paſſe by this inconſiderate opinion (whereby they thinke that the marriage of women that are fallen from their holy purpoſe, if they be married, to be no marriage) no ſmall evill, that wives are ſeparated from their husbands, as though they were adultereſſes, and not wives. And when they will reſtore them to continencie after they be ſeparated, they make their husbands adulterers, when they marry other women, while their owne wives are alive. Wherefore I cannot ſay, that if women that are fallen from a better purpoſe doe marry, that they are no marriages but adulteries: But plainly I would not doubt to ſay, that their fallings and ruines, from more holy chaſtity, which is vowed unto God, are worſe then adulteries.

Marriage of Votaries. Slander.

You ſee therefore by his hard judgement, that the marriage is true and not pretenced, ſuch as cannot be diſſolved, though the breach of the vow be a grievous ſinne, and more grievous then adultery.

Epiphanius alſo is cleane contrary to your filthy cenſure againſt marrying, as is ſhewed before: and further he ſaith againſt thoſe Apoſtolike Heretikes, that profeſſed continencie and kept it not, as many Popiſh Prieſts doe and have done, Qui virginitatem &c. He that hath corrupted virginity, is rejected out of that courſe, and deprived of crowne and reward: but yet judgement is better then condemnation. For they that commit fornication privily, leſt they ſhould be aſhamed before men, and exerciſe filthy luſt under ſhew of ſolitarineſſe and continencie, have not confeſſion before men, but with God, which knoweth all ſecrets, and reproveth all fleſh at his comming, as every man hath ſinned. Therefore it is better to have one ſinne, and not many, &c. as in the former Section, and in the end concludeth: Theſe be the medicines of healing, theſe be the ſpices for confection of the ointment; this is the preparation of the holy oile in the Law, this is good faith giving ſmell of ſweet odours, binding indeed the champion to his battell, and preaching unto him to continue his courſe that he may be crowned. This is Gods merchandize, gathering all men to his royall ordinance, both purple out of the ſea, and wooll from the ſheepe, and flax from the earth, and fine linnen, and ſilke, and ſkins died red, and the precious Emerauld, and the Pearle, and the Agate, ſtones differing in colours, but equall in price: But yet not rejecting gold, and ſilver, wood that rotteth not, braſſe and iron, no nor goats haire. And this was then the Tabernacle, but now the building of the Tabernacle is eſtabliſhed in God and the foundation in truth. And let all hereſie ceaſe, which is raiſed up againſt the truth, or rather which chaſeth it ſelfe from the truth. Thus it is manifeſt by the judgement of the Church in Epiphanius time, that that was accounted hereſie, which you deliver for wholſome doctrine.

Rhem. 9 11 To remaine unmarried.] Neither party may dimiſſe the other and marry another for any cauſe; for though they be ſeparated for fornication, yet neither may marry againe. Aug. de adult. conjug. l.1. c.8,9. & l.2. c.5,19. See Annot. Mat. 19. and S. Auguſtine in his whole bookes de adult. conjug. tom. 6.

After divorce not to marry.

Fvlk. 9 It is manifeſt, that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſuch departings as were not lawfull divorces, and ſo doth S. Ambroſe underſtand the place, ſaying, Subauditur autem excepta fornicationis cauſa. You muſt underſtand except this departure be for the cauſe of fornication. Quia viro licet, &c. Becauſe it is lawfull for the husband to marry a wife, if he have put away his wife offending. In which place although he thinketh the woman have not the like right, if ſhe forſake her husband for adultery, yet indeed the caſe is all one. Chryſoſtome underſtandeth the text of ſuch departings, as are not for the cauſe of fornication, and ſo doth Theodoret.

Marriage after divorce.

Rhem. 10 12 I ſay not the Lord.] [illegible] we learne, that there were many matters over and above the things that Chriſt [illegible], left to the Apoſtles order and interpretation: which when they [illegible], as the caſe required either [illegible] we are bound to obey accordingly.

The [illegible] precepts.

Fvlk. 10 The Apoſtles had not particular precepts for every caſe, but they had generall rules in Chriſts doctrine, which they were bound to follow in their precepts and counſels.

The Apoſtles precepts.

Rhem. 11 14 Sanctified.] When the infidell party is ſaid to be cleane or ſanctified by the faithfull, or the children of their [illegible] to be cleane, we may not thinke that they be in grace or ſtate of ſalvation thereby, but onely that the marriage is an occaſion of ſanctification to the infidell party and to the children; for S. Aug. (l.3. de pec. mer. & rem. c.12.) concludeth againſt the Pelagians; as we may doe againſt the Calviniſts, holding Chriſtian mens children to be holy from their mothers wombe; and not to need Baptiſme, that what other ſanctification ſoever it be that is here meant, it cannot be enough to ſalvation without faith Baptiſme, &c.

How the [illegible] or [illegible] are [illegible] by the Chriſtian. Hier. l.1. c.5. adv. Iovin.

Fvlk. 11 It is an impudent ſlander, that the Calviniſts hold Chriſtian mens children to be ſo holy from their mothers wombe, that they need not Baptiſme. For Calvine cleane contrariwiſe doth argue againſt the Anabaptiſts upon S. Pauls words: They are holy, ergo, they are to be baptized. And the Sacrament is not to be denied unto them that are therefore called holy, becauſe they are comprehended in Gods covenant: where he ſaith, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed after thee, Gen. 17.7.

Slander.

Rhem. 19 But the obſervation.] Neither to be Iew nor Gentile, bond or free, married or ſingle, nor the faith it ſelfe which is proper to Chriſtian men, will ſerve to ſalvation, without good workes and keeping the Commandements, S. Hiero. adv. Iovin. l.1. c.16.

Rhem. 12 25 Counſell I give.] A counſell is one thing, a commandement is another. To doe that which is counſelled, is not neceſſary, becauſe one may be ſaved notwithſtanding, but he that will doe that which he is counſelled unto, ſhall have a higher degree of glory. He that fulfilleth not a commandement, except he doe penance, cannot eſcape puniſhment, Aug. l. de virg. c.13. & 14.

The difference of counſels and precepts.

Fvlk. 12 Damaſcen underſtandeth the word to ſignifie Exhortation, παραίνεσιν, de fid. orthod. l.3. c.14.

Rhem. 13 28 If a virgine marry.] He ſpeaketh not of that virgine which had dedicated her ſelfe to God, (for if any ſuch marry, ſhe ſhall be damned for breaking her firſt vow) but onely of young maids unmarried in the world, Hier. adv. Iovin. l.1. c.7. Chryſ hom. 20. Theodoret, Photius, and the other Greeke Doctors upon this place, apud Oecum. Epiph. hæreſ. 61.

A profeſſed virgine may not marry.

Fvlk. 13 If a virgine, or any other that is vowed, marry, ſhe ſinneth not in marriage, as S. Auguſtine ſaith, De bono vid. c.9,10. but in breaking her vow. So meane the reſt of the Doctors, and we agree thereunto, if ſhe be able to live continently, ſhe ſinneth grievouſly to breake her vow: but if ſhe be not able to containe, then that hath place which I cited before out of Epiphanius, Hæreſ. 61. And that which S. Hier. writeth ad Demetr: Sanctum virginum propoſitum, &c. The name of certaine women, which behave not themſelves well, doth defame the holy purpoſe of virgines, and the glory of the heavenly and Angelike family: to whom it muſt needs be ſaid openly, that either they ſhould marry, if they cannot containe, or containe if they will not marry.

Marriage of Votaries.

Rhem. 14 28 Tribulation of the fleſh.] They are marvellouſly deceived (ſaith S. Aug l. de virg. c.13.) that thinke the Apoſtle counſelleth virginity rather then marriage, onely for that marriage hath many miſeries and moleſtations joyned unto it, which by virginity ſhall be avoided, and not in reſpect of the greater reward in heaven; for the Apoſtles provident counſelling to virginity, is for the next life, and he alledgeth theſe troubles of marriage in that ſenſe ſpecially as they be a hinderance from the ſervice of God here, and therefore an impediment to us toward the next life, and the more ample joyes thereof.

Virginity counſelled as more meritorious.

Fvlk. 14 S. Auguſtines words if they were granted to be as true as the Goſpel, yet prove not, that virginity is counſelled as more meritorious.

Merit.

Rhem. 29 As though they had not.] He exhorteth that ſuch as have wives, ſhould not wholly beſtow themſelves in the vaine tranſitory pleaſure and voluptuouſnes of their fleſh, but live in ſuch moderation, that marriage hinder them as little as may be, from ſpirituall cogitations. Which is beſt fulfilled of them that by mutuall conſent do wholly containe, whether they have had children or never, contemning carnall iſſue for the joyes of heaven. And theſe marriages be more bleſſed then any other,) ſaith S. Aug de Ser. Dom. in monte l.1. c.14.

The continencie of married folke. Their perpetuall continencie, beſt.

Rhem. 15 32 Carefull for the things of our Lord.] The Proteſtants might here learne if they liſt, firſt that virginity is not onely preferred before mariage, for that it is a more quiet ſtate of life in this world, but for that it is more convenient for the ſervice of God. Secondly, that virginity hath a gratefull purity and ſanctity both of body and ſoule, which marriage hath not. Thirdly, they may learne the cauſe why the Church of God requireth chaſtity in the Clergie, and forbiddeth not onely fornication, but all carnall copulation even in lawfull wedlocke: Which is not onely to the end that Gods Prieſts be not divided from him by the clogs of marriage, but alſo that they be cleane and pure from the fleſhly acts of copulation.

Virginity preferred, and why. Why continencie is required in the Clergie.

Fvlk. 15 We acknowledge, that virginity in them that have the gift, is more convenient for the ſervice of God, then marriage: but hereof it followeth not, that marriage which God hath permitted to all miniſters of the Church, ſhould be forbidden them by the Popiſh Church, as clogs and profanation of ſacred Orders: for ſo doth Gregorie Martin terme it, Diſcov. c.15. Sect. 11. This is not with the Apoſtle to counſell virginity as convenient, but to command it as neceſſary, and to forbid marriage as profane, which is the doctrine of devils, and a right badge of Antichriſtian apoſtaſie, 1. Tim. 4.

Marriage of Prieſts.

CHAP. VIII.

He rebuketh the learned who in pride of their knowledge did eat Idolothyta, that is, things offered to Idols, uſing (as they ſaid) their liberty: but not conſidering that the ignorant tooke their doing as an example for them to frequent ſuch meats ſo, as they did before in their Paganiſme, with opinion that they did ſanctifie the eaters.

The fourth part. Of meats ſacrificed to Idols.

AND concerning thoſe things that are ſacrificed to Idols, we know that ‖ we all have knowledge. ‡ Knowledge puffeth up: but charity edifieth.

2 And if any man thinke that he knoweth ſomething, he hath not yet knowne, as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the ſame is knowne of him.

‡ Knowledge without charity, puffeth up in pride, and profiteth nothing at all; when it is joyned with charity, then it edifieth, Aug. l.9 Civ. Dei c.20.

AS touching things offered unto idols, wee know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge maketh a man ſwell: but charity edifieth.

2 If any man thinke that he knoweth any thing, hee knoweth nothing yet as hee ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the ſame † is knowne of him.

† Or, taught.

4 But as for the meats that are immolated to Idols, wee know that an Idoll is nothing in the world, and that there is no God, but one.

5 For although there be that are called gods either in heauen, or in earth (for there are many gods, and many lords.)

6 Yet to us there is one God, the Father, of whom all things, and we unto him: and one Lord, IESVS CHRIST, by whom all things, and we by him.

7 But there is not knowledge in all. For ‖ ſome untill this preſent with a conſcience of the Idoll, eat as a thing ſacrificed to Idols and their conſcience being weake, is polluted.

8 But meat doth not commend us to God. For neither if we eat, ſhall we abound: nor if we eat not, ſhall we lacke.

9 But take heed leſt perhaps this your liberty be an offence to the weake.

10 For if a man ſee him that hath knowledge, ſit at table ‖ in the Idols temple: ſhall not his conſcience, being weake, bee edified, to eat things ſacrificed to Idols?

Rom.14.15. 11 And through thy knowledge ſhall the * weake brother periſh, for whom Chriſt hath died?

12 But ſinning thus againſt the brethren, and ſtriking their weake conſcience: you ſinne againſt Chriſt.

Rom.14.21. 13 Wherefore if * meat ſcandalize my brother: I will neuer eat fleſh, leſt I ſcandalize my brother.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of thoſe things that are offered in ſacrifice unto Idols, we know that an Idol is nothing in the world and that there is none other God but one.

5 And though there be that are called gods whether in heauen or in earth (as there be gods many, and lords many:)

*6 Yet unto us is there but one God, which is the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him, * and one Lord Ieſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him.* John 13.13. 1 Cor.12.3.

7 But there is not in euery man that knowledge: for ſome hauing that conſcience of the idol unto this houre, eat as a thing offered unto Idols, and their conſcience being weake, is defiled.

8 But meat doth not commend to God. For neither if we eat, haue we the more: neither if we eat not, haue we the leſſe.

9 But take heed leſt by any meanes this liberty of yours become a ſtumbling to them that are weake.

10 For if any man ſee thee which haſt knowledge, ſit at meat in the Idols temple: ſhall not the conſcience of him which is weake, be boldened to eat thoſe things which are offered to idols?

11 And through thy knowledge ſhall the weake brother periſh for whom Chriſt died?

12 But when yee ſinne ſo againſt the brethren, and wound their weake conſcience, ye ſin againſt Chriſt.

*13 Wherefore, * if meat offend my brother, I will eat no fleſh while the world ſtandeth, leſt I ſhould offend my brother.* Rom.14.21.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 1 We all haue knowledge.] The ſpirituall and perfectly inſtructed Christians know no meats, now to be uncleane, neither for ſignification, as in the Law of Moſes: nor alwayes by nature and creation, as the Manichees thought, nor by any other pollution, as in that they were offered to idols: and therefore they did eat boldly of ſuch meats as were ſacrificed, contemning and condemning their idols as meere nothing, and the worſhip of them as the honour of things imaginary, which their fact, for their want of diſcretion and charity, and for the uſe of that their liberty to the offence and ſcandall of the weake, the Apoſtle doth here reprehend. No meats uncleane. Giuing of ſcandal reprehended.

RHEM. 1 7 Some with a conſcience.] The perfecter mens fault was, that they gaue offence by their eating, to the weaker Chriſtians, who ſeeing them whom they reputed wiſe and learned, to eat the meats offered to idols, conceiued that there was ſome vertue and ſatisfaction in thoſe meats, from the Idoll to which they were offered: and thought that ſuch things were or might be eaten with the ſame conſcience and deuotion as before their conuerſion.

Therefore the caſe ſtanding thus, and the Apoſtles diſcourſe of eating or not eating meats being ſo as is declared (a thing ſo euident that it admitteth no other interpretation) if the Proteſtants apply any of this admonition againſt our Faſts in the Catholike Church, they be too too ridiculous. The heretikes ridiculouſly apply S. Pauls words againſt the Churches faſts and abſtinence.

FVLK. 1 Your Popiſh Faſts, which are abſtinence from fleſh as accurſed, and for Religions ſake, we condemne as Antichriſtian apoſtaſie, by the plaine teſtimony of the Apoſtle, 1 Tim. 4. and not as meat offered to Idols, although there is in your ſuperſtitious faſting, that, which in ſome caſes hath reſemblance to the Apoſtles words in this place. Popiſh faſtings.

RHEM. 2 10 In the Idols temple.] Like as now, ſome Catholikes haue ſaid, they know that Caluins Communion is but as other Bread and wine. But yet the ignorant ſeeing ſuch goe to the Communion, thinke that it is a good act of Religion. Yea whatſoeuer they pretend, it muſt needs ſeeme as an honour to Caluins Communion, when they are ſeene in the temple ſolemnely ſitting or communicating at the abominable table. Going to the Communion, what a ſinne in Catholikes.

FVLK. 2 Thankes be to God, our Temples are purged from Popiſh Idols, wherewith by you they were ſtuffed. Our Table is the Lords Table, and our Communion his holy Supper, according to his owne inſtitution. And therefore your blaſphemous railing is meet for your owne idoll ſeruice and ſacrifice, and ſacriledge which hath no word of holy Scripture to warrant it, but hath been lately deuiſed, to ouerthrow the onely and ſingular ſacrifice of Chriſts death, which is the price of our full redemption. Slander.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1. To th[illegible], he [illegible], to wit, that he [illegible] to liue by the Goſpel but yet that he uſed it not, 15 to auoid ſcandall of the weake, and becauſe it was more meritorious. 23 Dehorting againſt their ſecurity, and ſhewing them by ſimilitudes and examples, 24 both of himſelfe, 1 and of the Iſraelites, that ſaluation is not ſo lightly come by: 14 and ſo concludeth againe againſt eating of Idolothyta, becauſe it is alſo to commit idolatry, 22 and not onely to giue ill example to the infirme.

FVLK. 1 S. Paul abſtained not to liue by the Goſpel, becauſe it was more meritorious, but to auoid offence, and to declare that he did it freely, and not as an hireling. Merits.

AM I not free? Am I not an Apoſtle? Haue I not ſeene Chriſt IESVS our Lord? Are not you ‖ my worke in our Lord?

2 And if to others I be not an Apoſtle, but yet to you I am, for you are the ſeale of my Apoſtleſhip in our Lord.

3 My defence to them that examine me is this:

4 Haue not we power to eat and drinke?

5 Haue we not power to lead about ‖ a woman a ſiſter; as alſo the reſt of the Apoſtles, and our Lords brethren, and ‡ Cephas?

6 Or I onely and Barnabas, haue not we power to doe this?

7 ‖ Who euer playeth the ſouldier at his owne charges? who planteth a vine, and eateth not of the fruit therof? who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milke of the flocke?

8 Speake I theſe things according to man? Or doth not the Law alſo ſay theſe things?

Deut.25,4. 9 For it is written in the Law of Moſes, Thou ſhalt not mooſell the mouth of the Oxe that ‡ treadeth out the corne. Why, hath God care of Oxen?

‡ In that countrey they did tread out their corne with oxen, as we doe threſh it out.

10 Or for us certes doth he ſay it? For they are written for us; becauſe he that eateth, ought to eare in hope: and he that treadeth, in hope to receiue fruit.

11 If we haue ſowne unto you ſpirituall things, is it a great matter if we reape your carnall things?

12 If other be partakers of your power: why not we rather? howbeit we haue not uſed this power: but we beare all things, leſt we ſhould giue any offence to the Goſpel of Chriſt.

Deut.18,1. 13 Know you not * that they which work in the holy place, eate the things that are of the holy place: and they that ſerue c the altar, participate with the altar?

c τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ.

14 So alſo our Lord ordained for them that preach the Goſpel, to liue of the Goſpel.

15 But I haue uſed none of theſe. Neither haue I written theſe things, that they ſhould be ſo done in me: for it is good for me to die rather, then that any man ſhould make my glory void.

16 For and ‖ if I euangelize, it is no glory to me: for neceſſity lyeth upon me: for woe is to me if I euangelize not.

17 For if I doe this willingly, I haue reward: but if againſt my will, a charge is committed to me.

18 What is my reward then? That preaching the Goſpel, I yeeld the Goſpel without coſt, that I abuſe not my power in the Goſpel.

19 For

AM I not an Apoſtle? am I not free? haue I not ſeene Ieſus Chriſt our Lord? Are not you my worke in the Lord?

2 If I be not an Apoſtle unto other, yet doubtleſſe am I unto you: for the ſeale of mine Apoſtleſhip are ye in the Lord.

3 Mine anſwer to them that aske me, is this;

4 Haue we not power to eate and to drinke?

5 Haue we not power to lead about a ſiſter a wife, as well as other Apoſtles, and as the brethren of the Lord and Cephas?

6 Is the liberty of not labouring † taken from me and Barnabas onely? † With the hands.

7 Who goeth a warfare any time at his owne coſt? Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milke of the flocke?

8 Say I theſe things after the maner of men? or ſaith not the Law the ſame alſo?

9 For it is written in the Law of Moſes, Thou ſhalt not mooſell the mouth of the Oxe that treadeth out the corne. Doth God take care for Oxen?

10 Either ſaith he it not altogether for our ſakes? For our ſakes no doubt this is written: that he which eareth, ſhould eare in hope: and that he which threſheth in hope, ſhould be partaker of his hope.

11 If we haue ſowne unto you ſpirituall things, is it a great thing if we ſhall reape your carnall things?

12 If others be partakers of their power ouer you, wherfore are not we rather? Neuertheles, we haue not uſed this power: but ſuffer al things, leſt we ſhould hinder the Goſpel of Chriſt.

13 Do ye not know, that they which miniſter about holy things, eate of the things of the Temple? and they which wait at the altar, are partakers with the altar?

14 Euen ſo hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the goſpel, ſhould liue of the goſpel.

15 But I haue uſed none of theſe things. Neuertheles, I wrote not theſe things, that it ſhould be ſo done unto me: For it were better for me to die, then that any man ſhould make my † reioycing vaine. † Or, boaſting.

16 For if I preach the Goſpel, I haue nothing to † reioyce of: for neceſſity is layed upon me. But woe is unto me if I preach not the Goſpel. † Or, boaſt of.

17 For if I doe this thing with a good will, I haue a reward: but if againſt my will, the diſpenſation is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? Verily that when I preach the Goſpel, I may make the Goſpel of Chriſt free, that I miſuſe not mine authority in the Goſpel.

19 For whereas I was free of all, I made my ſelfe the ſervant of all: that I might gaine the moe.

20 And I became to the Iewes as a Iew, that I might gaine the Iewes.

21 To them that are under the Law, as though I were under the Law (whereas my ſelfe was not under the Law) that I might gaine them that were under the law, to them that were without the law, as though I were without the Law (whereas I was not without the Law of God, but was in the Law of Chriſt) that I might gaine them that were without the Law.

22 To the weake I became weake, that I might gaine the weake. To all men ‡ I became all things, that I might ſaue all.

‡ Not by fiction or ſimulation, but by compaſſion of the infirmities of all ſorts.

23 And I doe all things for the Goſpell, || that I may be made partaker thereof.

Aug. ep.9. The Epiſtle upon the Sunday of Septuageſima.

24 Know you not that they that runne in the price, all runne indeed, but one receiveth the price? || So runne that you may obteine.

25 And every one that ſtriveth for the maſtrie, refraineth himſelfe from all things: and they certes, that they may receiue a corruptible crowne: but we an incorruptible.

26 I therefore ſo runne not as it were at an uncertaine thing: ſo I fight, not as it were beating the aire:

27 But || I chaſtiſe my body and bring it into ſervitude, || leſt perhaps when I haue preached to others, my ſelfe become reprobate.

19 For though I be free from all men, yet haue I made my ſelfe ſervant unto all men, that I might winne the more.

20 Vnto the Iewes, I became as a Iew, that I might winne the Iewes: to them that are under the Law as under the Law, that I might winne them that are under the Law:

21 To them that are without Law, as without law (when I was not without law as pertaining to the law of God, but was in the Law of Chriſt) that I might winne them that are without law:

22 To the weake became I as weake, that I might winne the weake: I haue beene made all things to all men, that I might by all meanes ſaue ſome.

23 And this I doe for the Goſpels ſake, that I might be partaker thereof.

24 Know ye not, that they which runne in a race, runne all, but one receiveth the reward? So runne, that ye may obtaine.

25 Every man that prooveth maſteries, abſtaineth from all things: and they doe it to obteine a corruptible crowne, but we to obteine an incorruptible crowne.

26 I therefore ſo runne, not as at an uncertaine thing: ſo fight I, not as one that beateth the aire:

27 But I tame my body, and bring it into ſubjection: leaſt by any meanes that when I haue preached to other, I my ſelfe ſhould be a caſt-away.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IX.

Rhem. 2. 5 Cephas.] He nameth Cephas (that is Peter*) to proue his purpoſe by the example of the chiefe and Prince of the Apoſtles.* S. Ambro. S. Chryſ. Oecum. upon this place.

Primacy of Peter.

Fulk. 2. We doe acknowledge that Cephas was in order and promptneſſe chiefe of the Apoſtles, but not in auctority or dignity.

Rhem. 3 13 The altar.] The Engliſh Bible (1562) here and in the next Chapter, ſaith thriſe, for altar, temple: moſt falſly and heretically, againſt holy altars, which about the time of that tranſlation were digged downe in England.

Fulk. 3. This was no corruption of the Tranſlators, but a fault of the Printers. For the Tranſlatour, (as in the Bible Printed in King Henries time, is to be ſeene) did ſay altars, not temple. And why ſhould we not ſuffer the Iewiſh altar to ſtand, as well in this place, as in an hundreth places of the Bible beſide. Therefore it is a vaine and ridiculous ſlander to ſay, we corrupted the text, becauſe Popiſh altars were in digging downe when the Bible was in printing.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. IX.

Rhem. 4 1 My worke.] As he called himſelfe before Gods coadiutor, ſo heere he boldly alſo challengeth the Corinthians converſion to be his handie worke in our Lord: nothing derogating thereby from Chriſt, as the Proteſtants rudely charge the Fathers, and Catholike men (under pretence of Gods honour) for uſing ſuch phraſes or ſpeaches in the Apoſtles ſenſe, of the Saints or Sacraments.

The Heretikes find pretence of Gods honour.

Fulk. 4 The Proteſtants doe not charge the Fathers, for uſing of any ſuch ſpeech of the Saints and Sacraments as doe ſignifie no more, but that they be appointed miniſters and inſtruments of Gods working to our benefite.

Rhem. 5 5 A woman a ſiſter.] *The heretikes perverſely (as they doe all other places for the advantage of their Sect) expound this of the Apoſtles wiues, and for, woman, tranſlate, wife, all beſt ſounding wedding to them. Where the Apoſtle meaneth plainely the devout women that after the maner of Iewry * did ſerve the preacher of neceſſaries, of which ſort many followed Chriſt, and ſuſtained him and his of their ſubſtance. So doth S.* Chryſoſt. Theodorete, and all the Greekes (Oecu. in collect. ſuper hunc lo.) take it, So doth S. Auguſtine De op. Monach c.4. and S. Hierom li.1. adu. Iovinianum c.14. both diſputing and prooving it by the very words of the text. S. Ambroſe alſo upon this place. And the thing is moſt plaine, for to what end ſhould he talke of burdening the Corinthians with finding his wife, when himſelfe (c.7,7.8.) cleerely ſaith that he was ſingle?

Hereticall tranſlation.

New Teſt. 1580. Mat.27.55.

Fulk. 5. Our tranſlation is according to the plaine wordes and meaning of the Apoſtle. For firſt, the word is not γυναῖκα ἀδελφὴν a woman ſiſter, but ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα a ſiſter a wife, for no man would ſay, a ſiſter a woman, becauſe the word ſiſter implyeth a woman. Therefore of neceſſity, the latter word ſignifieth a wife ſpecially, and not a ſiſter generally. Chryſoſtome whom you cite impudently, ſaith never a word of the matter in controverſie, onely rehearſing the words of the text. Theodoret ſaith: Some doe interpret it ſo, that as certaine faithfull women followed our Lord, miniſtring neceſſary food to his Diſciples; ſo ſome ſhewing more fervent faith, followed ſome of the Apoſtles, depending of their doctrine, and helping their divine preaching. This interpretation he doth neither allow, nor diſallow, and therefore you ſay falſly, that he among the reſt doth take it ſo. But Oecumenius indeed doth ſo take it. Saint Auguſtine although he allow this interpretation, yet he ſheweth that ſome did interpret the word [illegible] ſororem, a [illegible], hath beene ſo [illegible], a ſiſter a wife. [illegible] word [illegible] mulieres in the [illegible]: By which corrupt[illegible] might more eaſily be deceived in the true meaning. As [illegible], who [illegible] being ready [illegible] any thing that ſoundeth never ſo little againſt mariage. And yet againſt Heluidius he citeth this text, Nunquid non habemus poteſtatem uxores circumducendi ſicut & cæteri Apoſtoli? Adde hereunto, that Tertullian to defend his hereſie of Monogamy, doth ſo take it, againſt the Catholike doctors of his time. And yet he confeſſeth according to this text, Exhort. de Caſt. Licebat & Apoſtolis nubere & uxores circumducere. Licebat & de euangelijs viuere. But Clemens Alexandrinus before him, by this text, doth prooue that the Apoſtles had wiues, and did leade them about, in theſe wordes: Doe they alſo reiect the Apoſtles? For Peter and Philip did beget children, Philip alſo did giue his daughters in marriage, and Paul feareth not in a certaine Epiſtle, to ſpeake to his yoke-fellow, which he did not leade about with him, becauſe he had no neede of great ſervice. Therefore he ſaith in a certaine Epiſtle: Haue we not power to leade about a ſiſter a wife, as the reſt of the Apoſtles? But they truely as it was meete becauſe they could not ſpare their Miniſtery, attending to preaching, ledde them not about as wiues, but as ſiſters, which ſhould miniſter together with them among the women, which kept the houſes, by whom alſo without any reprehenſion or evill ſuſpition, the doctrine of our Lord might enter into the cloſet of women. Stromat lib.3. And who would not thinke it agreeable to reaſon, that the Apoſtles which had wiues, would not leade them about rather then ſtrange women, at leaſt wiſe in the company of ſtrange women?

Againe, the word of leading about, declareth that they were their wiues that were ledde about, for the Apoſtles had no authority to lead other women about with them. We reade that certaine women did follow our Saviour Chriſt, we reade not that he did leade them about. The word ſignifying the authority of the husband over his wife, or of the Maſter over his maide. Finally, the ſcope of the text is againſt the expoſition of rich women, which ſhould miniſter of their ſubſtance to the Apoſtles neceſſity, for by them the Church ſhould not haue beene charged, but their dutifull charge releeved. Whereas by the Apoſtles wiues that were poore as their husbands, the Church was charged. But it is a pithie reaſon that is conteined in that your queſtion, What ſhould he talke of burdening the Corinthians with finding his wife, when himſelfe clearely ſaith, he was ſingle: As though he might not declare what was lawfull for him to doe, namely, to haue a wife as well as other Apoſtles, and to charge the Church with finding of her, although he meant not to uſe that liberty. Our interpretation therefore is not ſo hereticall as yours in the next verſe is ridiculous, who playeth the Souldier, as though to goe a warfare were a play.

Rhem. 7 Who playeth the Souldier?] He prooveth by the Scriptures and naturall reaſons that Preachers and Paſtors may challenge their finding of their flocke, though himſelfe for cauſes had not, nor intended not to uſe his right and liberty therein.

Paſtors and preachers due.

Rhem. 6 16 If I Evangelize.] If I ſhould preach either of compulſion and ſervile feare, or meere neceſſity, not hauing otherwiſe to liue and ſuſtaine my ſelfe in this world, I could not looke for reward in heaven; but now doing it, not onely as enioyned me, but alſo as of loue and charity, and freely without putting any man to coſt, and that voluntarily and of very deſire to ſaue my hearers, I ſhall haue my reward of God, yea and a reward of Supererogation, which is given to them that of abundant charity doe more in the ſervice of God then they be commaunded, as Saint Auguſtine expoundeth it, De op. Mon. c.5.

Workes of Supererogation.

Fulk. 6. S. Auguſtine hath no ſuch words as you faine, neither doth he name a reward of Supererogation, but he ſaith, Paul did beſtow more then was neceſſary for him to doe, when he warred at his owne finding, according to the ſaying of the Samaritane to the Inne-keeper, Whatſoever thou ſhalt beſtow more. But that S. Pauls abſtinence of his liberty was his duty in this caſe, (though generally he might uſe that liberty) his owne words are manifeſt, when he ſheweth. He abſtained that he ſhould giue no offence, which was neceſſary for him to avoide, that he ſhould not abuſe his power in the Goſpell. Therefore this refraining of his liberty in this caſe, was of duety, and not of Supererogation, more then duety. And of Supererogation of more then we haue received grounded upon the words of the Samaritane, S. Auguſtine ſaith in his Confeſſions to God: Supererogatur tibi ut debeas, &c. There is given more to thee, that thou mayeſt be a debter, and who hath any thing, which is not thy owne. By which he ſheweth that God is not properly brought in debt by any ſupererogation, when no man hath any thing but that which is Gods owne, and therefore is due to him.

Supererogation.

Rhem. 7 23 That I may be partaker.] A ſingular place to convince the Proteſtants, that will not haue men worke well in reſpect of reward at Gods hand: the Apoſtle confeſſing expreſly, that all this that he doth either of duety or of Supererogation aboue duety (as to preach of freecoſt, and to worke with his owne hands to get his owne meate and his fellowes, and to abſtaine from many lawfull things) all is, the rather to attaine the reward of heaven.

Doing well in reſpect of reward.

Fulk. 7 This place doth rather proue, that the Apoſtle did willingly abſtaine from uſing this liberty, becauſe it was his duety in this caſe, for otherwiſe he could haue no part of the Goſpel. Although you ſlander the Proteſtants, that they will not haue men worke well in reſpect of reward at Gods hand: for they would haue men worke well, not onely in reſpect of reward, but alſo for feare of puniſhment, due to them that worke not well, yet not onely for theſe reſpects, nor chiefely, but principally of loving obedience, and duety, as becommeth children to the glory of God their father, and not onely for reward, as hirelings, not onely for feare, as ſlaues.

Supererogation. Slander.

Rhem. 24 So runne.] If ſuch as runne for a price, to make themſelues more ſwift, and to winne the game, abſtaine from many meats and pleaſures: what ſhould we doe or ſuffer to winne the crowne of glory, purpoſed and promiſed to none but ſuch as runne, travell, and endevour for it?

Running for the game.

Rhem. 8. 27 I chaſtiſe.] The goale of everlaſting glorie is not promiſed nor ſet forth for onely faith-men for ſuch as runne at randome: but it is the price of them that chaſtice and ſubdue their bodies and fleſhly deſires by faſting, watching, voluntary poverty, and other afflictions. Lord, how farre is the carnall doctrine of the Sectaries, and the maners of theſe daies from the Apoſtles ſpirit. Wherein even we that be Catholikes, though we doe not condemne with the Proteſtants theſe voluntary afflictions as ſuperfluous (much leſſe as ſuperſtitious or iniurious to Chriſts death,) but much commend them, yet we uſe nothing the zeale and diligence of our firſt Chriſtian anceſtors herein, and therefore are like to be more ſubiect to Gods temporall chaſtiſements, at the leaſt in the next life then they were.

Pennance meritorious.

Fulk. 8. This impudent rotten ſlander commeth ſo often, that it would make a man caſt his gorge, to heare it ſo lothſomely repeated. We cry out as loud as we can: That faith which only juſtifieth, is not alone, but accompanied with good works, is not idle, but worketh by loue. But that the goale of everlaſting glory, is merited by chaſtening the body, &c. the Apoſtle doth not teach. It is a reward infinitly aboue the value of all mens works, therefore given of grace, not deſerved of merit. Another impudent ſlander it is, to ſay, that we condemne voluntary chaſtiſing of the body to ſuch ends, and in ſuch maner, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, as ſuperfluous and ſuperſtitious: As though the Apoſtle ſpake, of the counterfeit chaſtiſing of Popiſh hypocrites to merite, or ſatiſfie Gods

Onely faith. Merit.

Gods [illegible] by them, which we condemne as iniurious to Chriſts death, and not [illegible] prayer, faſting, la[illegible] [illegible] exerciſes to ſubdue the luſts of [illegible], and to ſerue God in the Goſpel.

RHEM. 9. Aug. apud Pet. Lomb. in hunc locum. 27 [illegible] haps.] Here may we Lambes tremble (ſaith a holy Father), when the Ramme, the guide of the flocke, [illegible] ſo laboure and puniſh himſelfe (beſides all his other miſeries adioyned to the preaching of the Goſpel) leſt perhaps [illegible] miſſe the marke. A man would thinke S. Paul ſhould be as ſure and as confident of Gods grace and ſaluation as we poore wretched caitiues: but the Heretikes unhappy ſecurity, preſumption, and raſh perſwaſion of their ſaluation is not fides Apoſtolorum, but fides dæmoniorum; not the faith of the Apoſtles, but the faith of diuels. — S. Paul had not the Proteſtants' ſecuritie of ſaluation.

FVLK. 9 S. Paul did not preſume of the end, without the meanes and wayes by which God bringeth us unto it. Yet did he not doubt of his ſaluation, which had beene to doubt of Gods promiſes. Our ſecurity of ſaluation is no vaine preſumption, but an aſſurance upon the word of God, that through faith in God, and walking in the way that God hath apointed us, we ſhall undoubtedly come to the end of eternall life. — Certainty of ſaluation. Slander.

CHAP. X.

See the Argument of the 9. Chapter, which comprehendeth the contents of this alſo.

FOr I will not haue you ignorant, brethren, that our fathers were all * under the cloud, and all * paſſed through the ſea. Exod. 13, 21. Num. 8, 18.

2 And all in Moſes were baptized in the cloud and in the ſea.

3 And * all did eate || the ſame ſpirituall foode. Exod. 14, 22.

4 And all * drunke the ſame ſpirituall drinke (and they * drunke of the ſpirituall rocke that followed them, and the rocke was Chriſt.) Exod. 16, 15. Exod. 17, 6.

5 But in the more part of them God was not well pleaſed. ☞ for they * were overthrowne in the deſert. Num. 20, 10. Num. 26, 65.

6 And theſe things were done in a figure of us, that we be not coveting evill things, as * they alſo coveted. The Epiſtle upon the 9. Sunday after Pentecoſt. Num. 11, 4.

7 Neither become ye Idolaters, as certaine of them: as it is written, The people ſate downe to eate and drinke, and roſe up to play. Exod. 32, 6.

8 Neither let us fornicate, * as certaine of them did fornicate, and there fell in one day three and twenty thouſand. Num. 25, 9.

9 Neither let us tempt Chriſt: as certaine of them tempted, and * periſhed by the ſerpents. Num. 21, 5.

10 Neither doe yee murmure: as * certaine of them murmured, and periſhed by the deſtroyer. Num. 11, 23. 14, 37.

11 And all theſe things chanced to them in figure: but they are written to our correption, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

12 Therefore he that thinketh himſelfe to ſtand, let him take heed ‡ leſt he fall.

13 Let not tentation apprehend you, but humane; and God is faithfull, who will not ſuffer you to bee tempted aboue that which you are able: but will make alſo with tentation iſſue, that you may be able to ſuſtaine. ☜ Tentation hath not apprehended.

14 For the which cauſe, my deereſt, flee from the ſeruing of Idols.

15 I ſpeake || as to wiſe men: your ſelues judge what I ſay.

16 The chalice of benediction || which we doe bleſſe: is it not the communication of the blood of Chriſt? and the bread which we breake, is it not || the participation of the body of our Lord?

17 For

BRethren, I would not that ye ſhould be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all paſſed thorow the ſea.

2 And were all baptized || unto Moſes in the cloud, and in the ſea.

3 And did all eate the ſame ſpirituall meate.

4 And did all drinke the ſame ſpirituall drinke: For they dranke of that ſpirituall rocke that followed them, and that rocke was Chriſt.

5 But in many of them had God no delight: for they were overthrowne in the wilderneſſe.

6 Theſe things verily are our enſamples, that we ſhould not be luſters after evill things, as they alſo luſted.

7 Neither be ye Idolaters, as were ſome of them, as it is written, * The people ſate downe to eate and drinke, and roſe up to play. Exod. 32, 6.

8 Neither let us commit fornication, as ſome of them committed || fornication, and fell in one day three and twenty thouſand.

9 Neither let us tempt Chriſt, as ſome of them tempted, and were deſtroyed of Serpents.

10 Neither murmure ye, as ſome of them murmured, and were deſtroyed of the deſtroyer.

11 All theſe things happened unto them for enſamples: but they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

12 Wherefore, let him that thinketh hee ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.

13 There hath no temptation taken you, but ſuch as followeth the nature of man: but God is faithfull, which ſhall not ſuffer you to be tempted aboue that you are able: but ſhall with the temptation make a way to eſcape, that ye may be able to beare it.

14 Wherefore my dearely beloued, flee from idolatry.

15 I ſpeake as unto them which haue diſcretion: judge ye what I ſay.

16 The Cup of bleſſing which we bleſſe, is it not the partaking of the blood of Chriſt? The Bread which we breake, is it not the partaking of the body of Chriſt?

17 For

17 For being many, [illegible] one bread, one [illegible] bread.

18 [illegible] according to the fleſh: [illegible], are they not partakers of the Altar?

19 What then? doe I ſay that that which is immolated to Idols, is any thing? or that the Idoll is any thing?

20 But the things that the heathen doe immolate, to devils they doe immolate, and not to God: And || I will not haue you become fellowes of devils.

21 || You cannot drinke the Chalice of our Lord, and the chalice of devils: you cannot be || partakers of the Table of our Lord, and of the table of devils.

22 Or doe we emulate our Lord? Why, are wee ſtronger then hee? || All things are lawfull for me, but all things are not expedient.

23 All things are lawfull for me, but all things doe not edifie.

24 Let no man ſeeke his owne, but another mans.

25 All that is ſold in the ſhambles, eate: asking no queſtion for conſcience.

26 The earth is our Lords, and the fulneſſe thereof. Pſal. 23, 1.

27 If any invite you of the infidels, and you will goe: eat of all that is ſet before you, asking no queſtion for conſcience.

28 But if any man ſay, This is immolated to Idols: doe not eat for his ſake that ſhewed it, and for conſcience.

29 Conſcience I ſay, not thine, but the others. For why is my liberty judged of another mans conſcience?

30 If I participate with thanks, why am I blaſphemed for that which I giue thankes for?

31 Therefore whether you eat or drinke, or doe any other thing: doe all things unto the glory of God.

32 Bee without offence to the Iewes and to the Gentiles, and to the Church of God:

33 As I alſo in all things doe pleaſe all men, not ſeeking that which is profitable to my ſelfe, but which is to many: that they may be ſaved.

17 For we that are many, are one bread, and one body, in as much as we all are partakers of one bread.

18 Behold Iſrael which is after the fleſh: are not they which eate of the ſacrifices, partakers of the altar?

19 What ſay I then? that the idoll is any thing? or that it which is offered in ſacrifice to idols is any thing.

20 But this I ſay, that the things which the Gentiles offer in ſacrifice, they offer to devils, and not to God: And I would not that ye ſhould haue fellowſhip with the devils.

21 Ye cannot drinke the cuppe of the Lord, and the cuppe of the devils: Ye cannot be partakers of the Lords Table, and of the table of devils.

22 Either do we provoke the Lord to anger? What, are we ſtronger then he?

23 * All things are lawfull for me, but all things are not expedient: All things are lawfull for me, but all things edifie not. Eccleſ. 37, 31.

24 Let no man ſeeke his owne: but every man anothers wealth.

25 Whatſoever is ſold in the || market, that eate, asking no queſtion for conſcience ſake.

26 For the earth is the Lords, and the plenty thereof. Pſal. 24. 1.

27 If any of them which beleeue not, bid you to a feaſt, and ye be diſpoſed to goe, whatſoever is ſet before you, eate, asking no queſtion for conſcience ſake.

28 But if any man ſay unto you, This is offered in ſacrifice unto idols, eate not for his ſake that ſhewed it, and for conſcience ſake. The earth is the Lords, and the plenty thereof.

29 Conſcience I ſay, not of thine owne ſelfe, but of the other: For why is my liberty judged of another mans conſcience?

30 For if I by Gods benefite may be partaker of the gifts of God, why am I evill ſpoken of, for that wherefore I giue thankes?

31 * Whether ye eate or drinke, or whatſoever ye doe, doe all to the glory of God. Col. 3, 17.

32 See that ye giue none offence, neither to the Iewes, nor yet to the Grecians, neither to the Church of God.

33 Even as I pleaſe all men in all things, not ſeeking mine owne profite: but the profite of many, that they may be ſaved.

FVLK. 3. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not one word of the ſacrifice of the body and blood of Chriſt in the Sacrament, but ſheweth, that it is the nature of all Ceremonies, to declare them that uſe them, to be partakers of that Religion, whereof they be Ceremonies: as the Sacrifices of the Iewes, the Sacraments of Chriſtians, and the execrable Sacrifices and Ceremonies of the Gentiles; declared the ſeverall uſers of them to be partakers of theſe ſeverall Religions. Therefore the Chriſtians, which were conſecrated to Chriſt, ought to haue nothing to doe with the wicked Ceremonies of the Gentiles, whereby they ſhould partake with devils, and not with Chriſt. Becauſe no man can be partaker of Chriſt, that is partaker of the devils. The fathers in their admonition, Norunt fideles, &c. The faithfull know, &c. ſpeake not of the Sacrifice of the Maſſe, but of the myſterie of the Lords Supper, which they called a Sacrifice, becauſe therein is offered a ſacrifice of praiſe and thankeſgiving not of the naturall body of Chriſt. Hoc eſt, &c. This is (ſaith S. Auguſtine) the ſacrifice of the Chriſtians, we being many are one body in Chriſt: which thing alſo in the ſacrament of the Altar, knowne unto the faithfull, the Church doth frequent, where it is ſhewed unto her, that in that oblation which ſhe offereth, ſhe her ſelfe is offered. De Civit. lib. 10. cap. 6. In the ſame Chapter he entreateth of ſpirituall ſacrifices of praiſe and thankeſgiving, which are the workes of mercy and mortification of our bodies, unto which he referreth this ſacrifice of the Chriſtians, wherein the Church is offered. In the 20. Chapter of the ſame booke, he writeth, ſpeaking of the ſacrifice of Chriſts death and of the Sacrament thereof. Per hoc, &c. By this he himſelfe is the Prieſt that offereth, and he himſelfe is the oblation. A ſacrament of which thing he would haue the daily ſacrifice of the Church to be, ſeeing he is the head of his owne body, and ſhe is the body of her owne head, as well ſhe by him, as he by her, being accuſtomed to be offered. Heere we ſee, the ſacrifice of the Church is a ſacrament of the death of Chriſt; in which Chriſt is none otherwiſe offered by the Church, then the Church is offered by Chriſt, that is, ſpiritually and figuratiuely, in praiſe and thankeſgiving, not properly or propitiatorily. So ſaith Chryſoſtome. We offer the ſame ſacrifice alwayes, or rather, we celebrate the remembrance of that ſacrifice. In Ep. ad Heb. cap. 10. Hom. 17. Againe, Ieſus died. If Ieſus did not die, whereof or of whom is this ſacrifice a ſigne or token? In Matth. Ho. 83. As for Origen, he doth not ſo much as name the ſacrament a ſacrifice, but ſpeaketh of it, as a memoriall of the death of Chriſt, by which we are redeemed, like as the ſacrifices of the law were figures of the death of Chriſt before he ſuffered.

Sacrifice of the Maſſe.

RHEM. 4. 16 Which we bleſſe.] That is to ſay, the Chalice of Conſecration which we Apoſtles and Prieſts by Chriſts commiſſion doe conſecrate, by which ſpeech as well the Calviniſts, (that uſe no conſecration of the cup at all, blaſphemouſly calling it magicall murmuration, and perverſly referring the benediction to thankeſgiving to God) as alſo the Lutherans be refuted, who affirme Chriſts body and blood to be made preſent by receiving, and in the receiving onely. For the Apoſtle expreſly referreth the benediction to the chalice, and not to God, making the holy blood and the communicating thereof the effect of the benediction.

The Apoſtles bleſſed the Chalice, and ſo conſecrated.

Conſecration.

FVLK. 4 We confeſſe, that to bleſſe ſignifieth heere, to ſanctifie or to conſecrate, and that the cup is bleſſed or conſecrated by us, to be a ſacrament of the blood of Chriſt, not by magicall murmuration of wordes over it, but by the whole action according to Chriſts inſtitution, in which receiving is a neceſſary part. Therefore Chryſoſt. ſayth, He called it the cup of bleſſing, becauſe, when we haue it in our hands, with admiration and a certaine horror of that unſpeakable gift, we praiſe and bleſſe him, becauſe he hath ſhed his blood, that we ſhould not remaine in error and hath not only ſhed it, but made us all partakers of it. So did Photius and Oecumenius expound this word: Which we bleſſe, which having in our hands, we bleſſe him, which hath graciouſly given us his blood, that is we giue him thankes, or which we prepare, when we bleſſe or giue thankes. You ſee the [illegible] the judgement of the ancient fathers, how the Apoſtle referreth the benediction to the cup and to God [illegible], when they ſhew that by giving praiſe and thankes to God; and receiving it accordingly, the cuppe is bleſſed, and not by ſaying the words of conſecra-

FVLK. 8. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of re[illegible] the ſacrifice [illegible] the Cup of the Lord, and of the Table of the Lord. Neither [illegible] Hoſt, or Oblation, or compare our Sacrament in any point [illegible] ſacrifices, or immolations of the Iewes or Gentiles, which is [illegible] to Altar, Hoſt, [illegible] but onely in that there is a feaſt in thoſe ſacrifices of the Iewes and Gentiles, as there is [illegible] in that point which is common to all ceremonies, to declare them that uſe them, to be partakers of that Religion, whereof they be ceremonies. And therefore the Apoſtle might in this reſpect haue uſed the example of our other Sacrament, which is Baptiſme, by which alſo we haue participation with Chriſt and his Church; but he did rather chuſe the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, becauſe it being a ſpirituall feaſt of our Religion doth more reſemble the curſed feaſts of the Gentiles, from which hee doth diſſwade them. Whereas if this Sacrament had been alſo a Sacrifice, he would not haue ſpared to enforce the compariſon alſo in that reſpect, which [illegible] ſeeing he hath not done, there is no reaſon to gather a ſacrifice out of this Diſcourſe. Indeed many of the Fathers do call it by the name of a Sacrifice or Oblation figuratiuely, as I haue ſaid before. But where you ſay all the Fathers doe acknowledge it, calling it onely and continually almoſt by ſuch names as ſignifie a Sacrifice, it is falſe. For Iuſtinus, Clemens Alexand. Origen, Tertullian, Epiphanius, Hilarius, Baſilius, and divers other doe not at all, or elſe very ſeldome call it a Sacrifice. That the Fathers call this Sacrament, as they doe, none other Sacrament or Ceremonie of Chriſtian Religion, what marvell is it? ſeeing it hath a proper difference, as every thing hath, whereby it is diſtinguiſhed from all other things.

The Councell of Nice ſaith not, that the very naturall bodie of Chriſt is offered upon the Altar, but that the Sacrament which is figuratiuely called the Lambe of God, (as it is called the body of Chriſt) is layd on the Table. And therefore they ſay alſo, that Chriſt is ſacrificed, without ſacrifice, becauſe Chriſt is not properly ſacrificed, but the remembrance of his ſacrifice celebrated in the Sacrament. The Councell of Epheſus ſaith: Wee celebrate in the Churches the unbloudy ſervice of Sacrifice. But how, they declare in the words going immediatly before, Shewing or preaching the death according to the fleſh, of the onely begotten Sonne of God, that is, of Ieſus Chriſt, and likewiſe confeſſing his reſurrection and aſcenſion into Heaven. By which words, they ſhew plainly, that the ſervice of the Sacrifice, which they did celebrate, was onely a memoriall of the death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion of Chriſt. Dionyſius calleth it τελετῶν τελετή, that is, the myſterie of myſteries, or the chiefe myſterie, or the chiefe ceremony, for ſo doth the word ſignifie any myſterie or ceremony of Religion, and not ſacrifice properly.

So doth Pachimers expound it, comparing this Sacrament with Baptiſme, which hee calleth alſo τελετή. Therefore this terme is unlearnedly alledged out of a partiall Tranſlation, for to prooue this Sacrament to be called a Sacrifice. That which you cite out of Cyril. Athen. 11. is an impudent forgerie: For there is no word of quickening holy Sacrifice, unbloudy Hoſt, or Victime. But when you haue ſo notably paſt the bonds of modeſtie, what marvell, if you paſſe your ſelues in greater impudencie? As when you ſay, it is called the propitiatorie ſacrifice for the quicke and the dead, by Tertullian, Chryſoſtome, Cyprian, Auguſtine; which is ſo monſtrous a lye, as none but ſuch as had ſold themſelves to maintaine falſehood, durſt for ſhame affirme unto the world. Firſt, Tertullian de corona mil. hath nothing that ſoundeth toward ſuch a matter, but Oblationes pro defunctis, pro natalitijs annua die facere, to make Oblations for the departed, for the birth-day on the yearely day. He ſaith not, that the Sacrament, or Chriſt in the Sacrament was offered. But what Oblations were offered, it is eaſie to gather, by that he ſaith, They were offered for mens birth-dayes, which could be none other but praiſe and thankſgiving, both for the departure of men out of the world, and for their birth into the world.

Chryſoſtome in the firſt place ſaith, That prayer was made for all that ſleepe in Chriſt, at the celebration of the myſteries, which was the errour of his time, but that the Sacrament is a ſacrifice propitiatory, he ſaith not one word. He ſaith that ſome comfort may come to them that ſleepe, if we offer for them. But how he would haue us to offer for them, he expreſſeth, ſaying: Offering prayers for them, prayers are the common ſacrifice of the whole world. In the ſecond place he nameth the Sacrament a ſacrifice, and ſpeaketh of prayer for the dead, uſed at the celebration therof, but a ſacrifice propitiatory, or offered for the dead, he calleth it not. In the third place, he doth not once ſpeak of the Sacrament or Sacrifice. But how he doth underſtand the terme of Sacrifice, which he uſeth divers times, he declareth in Epiſt. Hebr. Homil. 17. ſaying, This Sacrifice is an exemplar of that Sacrifice. And againe, This that we doe, is in remembrance of that which was done. For, doe ye this (ſaith he) in remembrance of me. We offer not another Sacrifice, as the High prieſt, but the ſame wee doe alwayes, but rather wee celebrate the remembrance of a Sacrifice. Cyprian Epiſt. 66. ſpeaketh not a word of the Sacrament, but ſaith, that for as much as Geminius Victor, had made a Prieſt his Executor, contrary to the Decree of a Councell, there ſhould be no Oblation celebrated for his falling aſleepe, which is meant of praiſe and thankſgiving. For if they had held the Popiſh opinion of Purgatorie, it had beene too extreame puniſhment, to denie him Prayers, or the Sacrifice of the Maſſe. But in what ſenſe he called the Sacrament a Sacrifice, he doth beſt expound himſelfe: Becauſe wee make mention of his Paſſion in all our Sacrifices, for the ſacrifice which we offer, is the Paſſion of our Lord, we ought to do nothing but that which he did. The Sacrament is called a ſacrifice, as it is called the Paſſion of Chriſt, which is not properly, but figuratiuely: becauſe we celebrate a memory of his paſſion and ſacrifice in it. And becauſe the Sacrament being received worthily, is a ſure ſeale and pledge of the vertue of Chriſts Sacrifice, once offered to be continually applyed unto us by faith, for remiſſion of our ſinnes. Therefore ſaith Cyprian, When wee doe theſe things, wee doe not prepare our teeth to bite, but with ſincere faith wee breake and divide the Holy bread. De cœna Domin.

S. Auguſtine [illegible] he [illegible] to [illegible] in [illegible] De [illegible]. The like of Prayer for the dead in the celebration of the ſacrifice. What you meane by [illegible] cap. 11. I [illegible] lib. 3. cap. 19. De Baptiſm. [illegible] ſaith, That our Saviour Chriſt did ſend them [illegible] of the old law, that they ſhould offer a ſacrifice for them, to the Prieſts, becauſe as yet there was not come in their place, that ſacrifice, which afterward he would haue to be offered for them all.

In theſe words, he ſpeaketh doubtleſſe of a ſacrifice of thankſgiving, as that was, which the lepers by the law were bound to offer for their cleanſing. But to make this matter more cleare, that he meaneth not a ſacrifice propitiatory, but a Sacrament of remembrance for praiſe and thankſgiving, he writeth thus Cont. Fauſt. Manichæum, lib. 20. c. 21. Sed quid agam, &c. But what ſhall I doe, and when ſhall I ſhew to ſo great blindneſſe of theſe Heretikes, what force that hath which is ſung in the Pſalmes? The ſacrifice of praiſe ſhall glorifie me, and there is the way where I ſhall ſhew my ſalvation. The fleſh and bloud of this ſacrifice was promiſed before the comming of Chriſt by ſacrifices of ſimilitudes, in the paſſion of Chriſt it was given by the very truth it ſelfe, after the aſcenſion of Chriſt it is celebrated by a Sacrament of remembrance. Likewiſe epiſt. 23. he ſaith, Was not Chriſt offered once in himſelfe? and yet in a Sacrament, not onely at every ſolemnitie of Eaſter, but alſo every day he is offered to the people. And he that being asked, doth anſwere that hee is ſacrificed, doth not lie. For if Sacraments had not a certaine likeneſſe of thoſe things whereof they bee Sacraments, they ſhould bee no Sacraments at all. Theſe places are ſufficient to ſatiſfie any reaſonable man, that the ancient fathers in calling the Sacrament a ſacrifice, did not meane that Chriſt was properly and really ſacrificed: but in a figuratiue ſpeech: as Sacraments are called by the names of thoſe things whereof they be Sacraments.

And therefore Gratian doth well conclude this matter out of Saint Auguſtine, as he ſayth, Sicut ergo, &c. Therefore as the heavenly Bread, which is the fleſh of Chriſt, is called after the proper manner thereof, the bodie of Chriſt; when in deed and trueth it is the Sacrament of the bodie of Chriſt, of that bodie, I ſay, which beeing viſible, which being palpable and mortall, was put on the croſſe, and the ſame oblation of the fleſh, which is made by the handes of the Prieſt, is called the paſſion, death, and crucifying of Chriſt, not in trueth of the thing, but in a ſignifying myſterie, ſo the Sacrament of Faith, which is underſtood to be Baptiſme, is faith. De con. Diſt. 2. c. Hoc eſt.

Cyprian de Cœn. Dom. 2. doth not call this Sacrament The onely inconſumptible Victime, without which there is no Religion, but ſpeaketh of the groſſe imagination of the Capharnaites; who thought, That if the fleſh of Chriſts perſon were cut in pieces, it could not ſuffice all mankind, which being once conſumed, it might ſeeme that religion were loſt, to whom remained no more any ſacrifice. But in ſuch cogitations, fleſh and bloud profiteth nothing, for as the Maſter himſelfe hath expounded theſe words are ſpirit and truth, neither doth carnall ſenſe pearce to the underſtanding of ſo great depth, except faith come to it. In theſe words is nothing for your propitiatorie ſacrifice, but rather againſt it. How Chryſoſtome underſtandeth the Sacrament to be a Sacrifice, Homil. 17. ad Heb. I haue ſhewed before by his owne wordes out of the ſame Homily. Now wee come to the ſacrifice prefigured by Melchiſedec, and propheſied by Malachy: which the Fathers doubtleſſe doe underſtand of a ſacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiving, and not of the naturall bodie of Chriſt. Firſt Cyprian ſaith, Epiſt. 63. That Chriſt offered the ſame thing which Melchiſedec had offered, that is bread and wine, that is to ſay, his bodie and bloud. If Chriſt offered bread and wine, which is the ſame thing that Melchiſedec offered, he offered not his naturall body and bloud, but a type thereof in bread and wine. But according to your Hereſie he offered not bread and wine, but his bodie and bloud.

In the ſame Epiſtle Cyprian ſaith, The ſacrifice which we offer is the paſſion of Chriſt. Againe, Hee ſpeaketh againſt them which thought that onely water was to be offered in the Lords cup. Againe, Wee finde that the cup was mixed which our Lord offered, and that it was wine which he called his bloud. Againe, That the cup which is offered in remembrance of him, bee offered mixt with wine. For when Chriſt ſaith, I am the true vine, the bloud of Chriſt is not water but wine. What can be more evident, to declare? that he uſeth the terme offering figuratiuely, in reſpect of the ſacrifice of praiſe and thankeſgiving which is offered in the celebration of the Supper, in remembrance of the onely ſacrifice of Chriſt. And when he ſaith ſo often, that Chriſt offered wine, and that his bloud is wine, it is manifeſt, that the Sacrament is called by the name of that whereof it is a ſigne, not properly, but figuratiuely.

Iuſtinus Dial. cum Tryphon. ſpeaketh yet more plainely to prove that the Church in his time knew no ſacrifice, but the ſacrifice of thankeſgiving, which hee ſayth was offered by all Chriſtians, that are ſpirituall Prieſts in the celebration of the Lords Supper. Ἡμεῖς [illegible], &c. So we, which by the name of Ieſus (as all ſhall bee one man in God the worker of all things) being ſtript out of our filthie garments, that is our ſinnes, by the name of his firſt begotten ſonne, and being ſet on fire by the word of his calling, are a right kind of high Prieſts of God, as God himſelfe doth witneſſe. That in all places among the Gentiles, acceptable and pure ſacrifices are offered to him. But God receiveth no ſacrifice of any, but of his Prieſts. Wherfore God ſheweth before hand, that he doth accept all them that offer by this Name, the ſacrifices which Ieſus Chriſt hath delivered to bee made, that is in the Euchariſt or thankſgiving of the Bread and the Cup, which are done in every place of Chriſtians. Againe, As concerning thoſe ſacrifices which are offered to him by us Gentiles in everie place, that is, of the bread of thankeſgiving, and likewiſe of the cup of thankeſgiving, hee foreſheweth, thus ſaying: that wee doe glorifie his name, and that you doe profane it. And yet more plainely following the ſame matter, hee ſayeth, Ὅτι μὲν, &c. For I my ſelfe doe affirme, that prayers and thankeſgiving, made by worthy perſons, are the onely perfect and acceptable ſacrifices to God. For theſe are the onely ſacrifices that Chriſtians haue received to make; to bee put in minde by their drie and moiſt nouriſhment, of the paſſion which Chriſt, the Sonne of God, is recorded to haue ſuffered for them. Thus Iuſtinus by theſe words, hath acquited himſelfe and all the Catholique Fathers, that call the Sacrament by the name of a Sacrifice, of the ſacrifice propitiatorie wherewith you unjuſtly burden them. Irenæus alſo, lib. 4. cap. 32. ſpeaketh manifeſtly of a ſacrifice of thankeſgiving, wherein the Bread and Wine are dedicated to God, to become the Sacrament of the Bodie and Bloud of CHRIST, his words are theſe: Giving counſell to his diſciples, to offer to God the firſt fruits of his creatures, not as though he had need, but that they themſelues ſhould neither bee unfolded [illegible] bodie. And [illegible] of the [illegible] Church [illegible] us, [illegible] of [illegible] new Teſtament, [illegible] Malachie foretold &c. And in the ſame chapter [illegible] phet [illegible], he ſaith: Seeing therefore [illegible] of the ſaint [illegible] to the future, [illegible] to God [illegible] by Ieſus Chriſt, hee ſaid [illegible] of [illegible] incenſe is offered to my name and a pure ſacrifice. But the incenſe ſaith Iohn in the Apocalypſe [illegible]. And cha. 34. he ſaith, That theſe ſacrifices doe not ſanctifie a man, becauſe [illegible], but the Conſcience of him that offereth, being pure, doeth ſanctifie the ſacrifice and cauſeth God [illegible]. You ſee moſt clearely, he ſpeaketh not of the body of Chriſt ſacrificed, but of prayers and thankeſgiving, and of bread and wine offered to be the Sacrament of thankeſgiving. Saint Auguſtine as we haue ſhewed already, underſtandeth the name of ſacrifice, for a Sacrament of remembrance, vvhen he calleth the celebration of the Lords Supper, a ſacrifice of the nevv Teſtament, after the order of Melchiſedech, that ſucceeded the ſacrifices of the old lavv, as he doth, lib. 17. cap 20. De Civitate & lib. 10. cap. 5. he ſaith: The viſible ſacrifice is a Sacrament, that is an holy ſigne of the inviſible ſacrifice. That which he vvriteth, lib 1. Cont. adver. leg. & Proph. cap. 18 of the onely true and ſingular ſacrifice, ſignified by many figures of ſacrifices in the Lavv, is the ſacrifice of Chriſts death: but that which followeth, of the ſacrifice of praiſe and thankeſgiving out of the 50. Pſalme, he referreth to the Sacrament, as appeareth in theſe words: Of the ſalvation of God, that it is Chriſt himſelfe, I haue made mention, and ſhewed before. But what ſacrifice of praiſe is more holy then in thankeſgiving? And for what are greater thankes to be given to God, then for his grace by Ieſus Chriſt our Lord? All which matter, the faithfull doe know in the ſacrifice of the Church, whereof all thoſe former kinds of ſacrifices were ſhadowes. See you not plainely, that the ſacrifice of the Church, is the ſacrifice of praiſe and thankeſgiving for the ſalvation of God by Chriſt? vvho offered that onely true and ſingular ſacrifice, vvhereby hee redeemed us from our ſinnes. Thus without judgement, you quote as vvell that which is directly againſt you, as that which ſeemeth to haue ſome ſhevv for you. The next place lib 3. De bap. cap. 19. Wee haue declared already what it is. Leo. ſerm. 8. De paſſ. ſpeaketh of the ſacrifice of Chriſt his body and bloud upon the croſſe, as I haue ſhevved plainely upon Luke 22. Sect. 25.

The name of Maſſe.

Novv for the name of Miſſa, although it be not greatly materiall vvhat it vvas called, vvhen vve knovv vvhat was meant by that name. Firſt you quote Saint Ambroſe in the margent, epiſt. 33. where he vvriteth, that as hee vvas inſtructing certaine perſons that deſired baptiſme in the baptizing place of the Church, word was brought him, that a certaine Church in the citie vvas taken by the Heretiques, for vvhich he had had great ſtrife: whereupon he ſaith: Ego tamen manſi in munere, miſſam facere cœpi, which is in Engliſh, Yet I taried in my office, I began to let it goe, for that ſignifieth Miſſam facere: or elſe you muſt ſay, to make Maſſe, which is abſurd. Therefore the name of Maſſe is not ſo ancient as S. Ambroſe. Next to him you quote two counterfeit Sermons under the name of Saint Auguſtine, which the phraſe ſhevveth to be of much later time, and the matter alſo. As that Serm. 251. hee ſaith: That the mightie men of the vvorld, vvhen they come to Church, compell the Prieſt to make ſhort his Maſſe, which manner agreeth not with S. Auguſtines age. In the 91 Sermon, the author ſpeaketh of a leſſon that was to bee read ad Miſſas, in the plurall number, Maſſes. Neuertheleſſe, about S. Auguſtines time, the name of Miſſa began to bee in uſe as it ſeemeth by Concil. Milevitan. Can. 12. ſignifying rather prayers then ſacrifices. But howſoever the name was afterward received and uſed for the celebration of the Lords Supper, the ancient Fathers knew no ſacrifice of Chriſts naturall body and bloud, offered really in the Sacrament, but onely a ſacrifice of prayer, of praiſe, and thankeſgiving, in remembrance of the ſacrifice of Chriſts death, which is the only true ſingular and unſacrificeable ſacrifice, as it is called by S. Auguſtine, cont. adverſ. leg. & Prophet. lib. 1. cap. 18. and by Gregor. Nazianz. in ſanct. paſc. orat. 4. See Luc. 22. ſect 5. Therefore in all your quotations, you haue gained nothing but a little droſſe out of Chryſoſtome and Auguſtine, touching prayer for the dead; which errour being firſt brought in by the Montaniſts, although it had gotten ſome liking in thoſe times, yet was it farre from the ſuperſtition and blaſphemie of Purgatory, which in later times as Antichriſt drewe neerer to his full manifeſtation, prevailed in the Romiſh Church, without all ground or warrant out of the holy Scriptures.

The diſtinction of Chriſtian Catholikes from the reſt, is by not communicating with them, ſpecially in their ſacrifices, and at the communion table. The Heretikes Communion is the very table and cup of devils.

RHEM. 9. 21 Partakers of the table.] *Though the faithfull people be many wayes knowne to be Gods peculiar, and be ioyned both to him and among themſelues, and alſo ſevered and diſtinguiſhed from all others that pertaine not to him, as well Iewes and Pagans, as Heretikes and Schiſmatikes, by ſundry other externall ſignes of Sacraments, doctrine and government: yet the moſt proper and ſubſtantiall union or difference conſiſteth in the Sacrifice and Altar: by which God ſo ſpecially bindeth his Church unto him, and himſelfe unto his Church, that he acknowledgeth none to be his, that is not partaker of his one onely Table and Sacrifice in his Church: and acquitteth himſelfe of all ſuch as ioyne in fellowſhip with any of the Heathen at their idolatrie, or with the Iewes at their ſacrifices, or with Heretikes and Schiſmatikes at their prophane and deteſtable table. Which becauſe it is the proper badge of their ſeparation from Chriſt and his Church, and an altar purpoſely erected againſt Chriſts Altar, Prieſthood, and Sacrifice, is indeede a very ſacrifice, or (as the Apoſtle heere ſpeaketh) a table and cup of Devils, that is to ſay, wherein the Devill is properly ſerved, and Chriſts honour (no leſſe then * by the altars of* Ieroboam, or any prophane ſuperſtitious rites of Gentilitie) defiled. And therefore all Catholike men, if they looke to haue fellowſhip with Chriſt and his members in his bodie and bloud, muſt deeme of it as of idolatry or ſacrilegious ſuperſtition, and abſtaine from it and from all ſocietie of the ſame, as good Tobie did from Ieroboams calues, and the altars in Dan & Bethel: and as the good and faithfull did from the Excelſes, and from the temple and ſacrifices of Samaria. Now in the Chriſtian times we haue no other Idols, but hereſies, nor Idolathytes but their falſe ſervices ſhifted into our Churches inſtead of Gods true and only worſhip. Cypr. de unit. Sacrifice of the Maſſe.

FVLK. 9. In the Popiſh ſacrifice of the Maſſe conſiſteth no union of Chriſtian men, neither doth the moſt proper and ſubſtantiall union or difference conſiſt in the Sacrament of the Lordes Supper. But there is as proper and as ſubſtantiall difference of true Chriſtians from other ſects, and union with Chriſt and his Church in baptiſme: or elſe they that are baptized ſhould not be properly and ſubſtantially Chriſtians. For although baptiſme as the other Sacrament may bee received out of the Church, yet haue they no vertue but in the Church. Where you blaſpheme the celebration of the Lords Supper, which wee keepe after the Inſtitution of Chriſt moſt purely, ſaying it is an Altar erected againſt Chriſts Altar, Prieſthood and Sacrifice, beſide that it is moſt impious, it is moſt ridiculous that you ſay. For we haue none Altar, ſacrificing Prieſthood, or Sacrifice propitiatorie, but onely the Altar of the croſſe, the eternall Prieſthood of Chriſt, the onely ſacrifice of his death once offered by himſelfe, and unpoſſible to bee repeated by any other. Whereas you, to overthrow that Altar, haue erected many thouſands of [illegible] C[illegible]: [illegible] ſay we [illegible] them [illegible]? [illegible] our table and cup (that [illegible]) but [illegible] which CHRIST [illegible] to bee done, and to that [illegible]: whereas your Maſſe neither obſerveth the [illegible] the end of his Inſtitution, but perverteth both, not onely by your idoll of Tranſubſtantiation, but alſo by robbing the people of the cup of the Lords bloud, and by turning the Sacrament of Remembrance to a Sacrifice of propitiation. And how can it be ſaid that we ſerve the devill properly in our celebration? when all things are done according to the Word and Commandement of Chriſt; without adding or detracting any thing from his holy Inſtitution. What reſemblance haue we with Ieroboams calues and altars, or any heatheniſh Idolatry which are expreſſely forbidden by Gods commandement? which doe ſquare all our forme of celebration and worſhip of God according to the ſtreight line of Gods word and commandement. Where you ſay that now in the Chriſtian times you haue none other idoles but hereſies, nor idolathites but their falſe ſervices, it is to make your ignorant adherents beleeue, that your groſſe worſhipping of Images (contrary to the expreſſe commandement of God) is no idolatry. And how impudently you doe quote the Fathers, to prooue that there can be none other idoles nor idolothites, but hereſies and their ſervices, it may be manifeſt to your owne conſciences, when in Cyprians time the world was full even of theſe idols and idolothites of the Gentiles that were in the Apoſtles time, beſide hereſies and their hereticall ſervices. Saint Auguſtine alſo condemneth profeſſors of the Chriſtian name, that were worſhippers of pictures, of ſuperſtition and idolatry, and void of true religion. De mor. eccleſ. cath. lib. 1. c. 34. S. Ambroſe ſaith, it is heatheniſh errour and vanitie of the ungodly, to worſhip the croſſe whereon Chriſt died: De obitu Theodoſ. What would he haue ſaid if hee had ſeene creeping to an idol of the croſſe? Epiphanius ſaith, it is a devilliſh attempt to make images of the Virgin Mary, or other Saints departed, and to worſhip them: as the Collyridian heretikes did their image of the virgin Marie, Hær. 79.

The [illegible]

Idolatrie.

How by participation with idolaters, idolatry is committed.

RHEM. 22. All things are lawful.] Hitherto the Apoſtles arguments and examples whereby hee would avert them from the meates offered to Idoles, ſeeme plainely to condemne their fact as Idololatricall, or as participant and acceſſarie to Idolatrie, and not onely as of ſcandall given to the weake brethren: and ſo no doubt it was in that they went into the verie Temple of the Idoles, and did with the reſt that ſerved the Idoles, eate and drinke of the fleſh and libaments directly offered to the Idole, yea and feaſted together in the ſame bankets made to the honour of the ſame idoles: which could not but defile them and entangle them with idolatrie: not for that the meat it ſelfe was juſtly belonging to any other but to God, or could bee defiled, made noyſome or unlawfull to bee eaten, but for and in reſpect of the abuſe of the ſame, and deteſtable dedicating of that to the divell which belonged not to him, but to God alone. Of which ſacrilegious act they ought not to bee partakers, as needs they muſt, entring and eating with them in their ſolemnities. To this end hath S. Paul hitherto admoniſhed the Corinthians. Now he declareth that otherwiſe in prophane feaſts it is lawfull to eate without curious doubting or asking whether this or that were offered meates, and in markets to buy whatſoever is there ſold, without ſcruple and without taking knowledge whether it bee of the Idolothites or no; with this exception firſt, that if one ſhould invite him to eate, or buy this or that as ſacred and offered meates, that then hee ſhould not eate it, leaſt hee ſhould ſeeme to approue the offering of it to the idole, or to like it the better for the ſame. Secondly, when the weake brother may take offence by the ſame. For though it bee lawfull in it ſelfe to eat any of theſe meats without care of the idole, yet all lawfull things be not in every time and place expedient to be done.

The 5. part. Of his Traditions.

RHEM. I. He commendeth them for keeping his traditions generally. 3 and in particular for this, that a man prayed and propheſied bareheaded, a woman veiled, he bringeth many reaſons. 17 About another, he reprehendeth the rich that at the charitable ſupper ſupped uncharitably, 23 telling them that they received therefore unworthily the B. Sacrament, and ſhewing them what an heinous ſinne that is, ſeeing it is our Lords body and the repreſentation of his death, as hee by tradition had taught them.

FVLK. I. S. Pauls traditions which he delivered, were either concerning matters of doctrine and faith, which are perpetuall, and they bee all expreſſed in the Scriptures, or elſe of ceremonies which are mutable by authoritie of the Church, according to times, places, and perſons; obſerving the generall rules preſcribed by the Apoſtle, that all things be done in order and comelineſſe, and to edification.

8 For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.

*9 * Neither was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man.* Gen. 2. 23.

10 For this cause ought the woman to haue power on her head, for the Angels ſakes.

11 Neuertheleſſe, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, even ſo is the man alſo by the woman, but all things of God.

13 Iudge in your ſelves, whether is hee comely that a woman pray unto God bareheaded?

14 Doeth not Nature it ſelfe teach you, that it is a ſhame for a man, if hee haue long haire?

15 But if a woman haue long haire, it is a praiſe for her: for her haire is given her for a covering.

16 If any man luſt to ſtriue, we haue no ſuch cuſtome, neither the Churches of God.

17 This I warne you of, and commend not, that yee come together not for the better, but for worſe.

18 For firſt of all, when ye come together in the Church, I heare that there be diſſentions among you, and I partly beleeue it.

19 For there muſt bee alſo Hereſies among you, that they which are † approved among you, might be knowne.

† Or, tryed.

20 When yee come together therefore into one place, † you cannot eate the Lordes Supper.

† Or, this is not to eat.

21 For every one preventeth other in eating his owne ſupper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken.

22 What, haue yee not houſes to eate and to drinke in? Or deſpiſe ye the Church of God, and ſhame them that haue not? What ſhall I ſay unto you, ſhall I praiſe you? In this I praiſe you not.

23 That which I delivered unto you, I received of the Lord, that the Lord Ieſus the ſame night in which hee was betrayed, tooke bread:

*24 And when hee had given thankes, hee brake it, and ſaid, * Take yee, eat yee, this is my body which is broken for you: this doe yee in remembrance of me.*

25 After the ſame manner alſo he tooke the cup when hee had ſupped, ſaying, This cup is the new Teſtament in my blood: this doe yee, as oft as yee drinke it, in remembrance of mee.

26 For as often as yee eate this bread, and drinke this cup, ye doe ſhew the Lords death till he come.

27 Wherefore, whoſoever ſhall eat this bread, and drinke this Cup of the Lord unworthily, ſhall be guiltie of the body and of the bloud of our Lord.

28 But let a man proue himſelfe: and ſo let him eate of that bread, and drinke of the Chalice.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh iudgement to himſelfe, not diſcerning the body of our Lord.

30 Therefore are there among you many weake and feeble, and many ſleepe.

31 But if we did iudge our ſelues: we ſhould not be iudged.

32 But whiles we are iudged, of our Lord we are chaſtiſed: that with this world we be not damned.

33 Therefore my brethren, when you come together to eat, expect one another.

34 If any man be an hungred, let him eat at home: that you come not together unto iudgement. And the reſt I will diſpoſe when I come.

ſhall be guiltie of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But let a man examine himſelfe, and ſo let him eate of that bread, and drinke of that cup.

29 For hee that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh his owne damnation, making no difference of the Lords body.

30 For this cauſe many are weake and ſicke among you, and many ſleepe.

31 For if wee would judge our ſelues, wee ſhould not be † judged.

32 But when we are † judged, we are † chaſtened of the Lord, that we ſhould not bee damned with the world.

33 Wherefore my brethren, when yee come together to eat, tary one for another.

Therfore S. Paul calleth the Sacrament the Lords Supper, as wee doe. Neither doth S. Ambroſe ſay, that the Sacrament is not called the Lords Supper, but upon the Inſtitution, he ſaith, the Apoſtle ſheweth that the myſterie of the Euchariſt, which was celebrated at ſupper, is not a ſupper, but a ſpirituall medicine. That is, it is not a profane ſupper to feed the body, but the Lords Supper, to heale the ſoule.

The Communion rightly called the Lords Supper.

Chryſoſtome upon this place, underſtandeth the Lords Supper to bee ſpoken of the [illegible]ent, ſaying, *The Apoſtle teacheth them farre more terribly, in theſe words: This [illegible] eat the Lords S[illegible] them to that night in which our Lord [illegible] thoſe wonderfull myſteries. In the Primitiue Church it appeareth by [illegible] their [illegible] water with their wine: becauſe they uſed commonly ſo to [illegible] it, ſpecially [illegible] wines are ſtrong. Cyprian alſo maketh a myſtery of the water, to [illegible] the people [illegible]. Chryſoſtome ſaith: But that is beſide the word of God, and therefore we are not to receiue it [illegible]. That when Chriſt deliuered this myſtery, he [illegible] wine, and after his [illegible] in the bare [illegible] of the myſterie, he uſed wine, which truely bringeth forth wine, and not water. By [illegible] words, it ſeemeth becauſe of [illegible] Heretikes, which in Cyprians time uſed onely water, in Chryſoſtoms time the Church ordained, that water ſhould no more be mixed with the wine: and ſo the Armenians, which of ancient time miniſtred without water, underſtand him, as appeareth by a Canon of the 6. Councell of Conſtantinople, Can. 32. Theodorus Balſamon teſtifieth alſo, that the Church of the Iberians, being ſound in all points of religion, uſed not to put water into the cup in their miniſtration. The Maſter of the ſentence thinketh, that the water is not of neceſſitie of the Sacrament, for if any man of forgetfulneſſe, or ignorance doe omit it, the Sacrament is not fruſtrate. For the Church of the Greeks, doth not put water into the cup, (li. 4. diſt. 11.) before the ſanctification, but after, and then they put hote water, as Balſamon teſtifieth, in Can. 31. Concil. Conſt. 6. And ſo the Doctors of the Canon law hold. De conſec. diſt. 2. in gloſſa, That water is to be mingled in the cup, De honeſtate tantum, of decencie only, and not of neceſſitie. The ſame opinion holdeth Scotus in 4. ſent. diſt 11. queſt 6. That to put water to the wine, is not ſimply neceſſary of the neceſſitie of the Sacrament. Whereas you alledge all the Greeke Liturgies of S. Iames, S. Baſil, S. Chryſoſtome, the Councell of Conſt. 6. doth the ſame. But Balſamon Patriarke of Antioch, ſaith, that the Liturgie of S. Iames was not extant in his time, but utterly worne away. Theſe that we haue at this day, under the names of Chryſoſtome, and Baſil, bewray themſelues not to be of ſuch antiquitie, as thoſe Fathers. In the Liturgie that beareth the name of Chryſoſtome, as it was ſet forth by Claudius du Sainctes, there is a praier for Pope Nicholas, and the Emperor Alexius, whereof the one was neere 500. yeares, the other 700. yeares after S. Chryſoſtome. The Liturgie bearing the name of S. Baſil, ſheweth it ſelfe to bee none of his, becauſe it obſerueth not that forme of Doxologie, that is, giuing praiſe to the holy Ghoſt, with the prepoſition σὺν, which S. Baſil doth ſo earneſtly defend to haue come from the Apoſtles tradition, and to haue been the forme uſed in the Church in his time. De ſpirit. ſanct. cap. 27. 28. 29. Againe, Petrus Diaconus, and the reſt that were ſent from the Eaſt to Rome, in their booke to Fulgentius and other Biſhops of Africa, cap. 8. doe rehearſe a prayer of Baſils Liturgy, which they ſay almoſt the whole Eaſt frequented, that is not found in that which now beareth the name of Baſils Liturgie. And whereas they ſay that the whole Eaſt church in a manner doth uſe Baſils Liturgie, it is not like that Chryſoſtome would abrogate a Liturgy ſo late made by ſo reuerend a father, ſo univerſally obſerued, to ſet up a new one of his owne. Wherfore in not mingling water, which we neither read Chriſt did, and diuers Churches of ancient time did not uſe, we depart not from Chriſts Inſtitution, but come neerer to it then they which mingle water; and are not able to proue, that it was mingled by Chriſt. Although (ſo the opinion of neceſſitie be taken away) we count it an indifferent thing, to mingle water, or to miniſter wine alone.

Tract. 80. in Ioh.

The wordes of conſecration, to be ſaid ouer the bread & wine, the which the Proteſtants doe not.

FVLK. 11. Wee rehearſe theſe words, which Chriſt uttered, when hee inſtituted this Sacrament, not as a Magicall charme, to be ſayd ouer the bread and wine, to conuert their ſubſtances, but as they import indeed, to declare what the bread and wine are made to us, by Chriſts inſtitution of this Sacrament, namely, his body and blood. Neither doth Saint Auguſtine meane your fantaſie of the words of conſecration, when he ſaith: The word muſt come to the element, that it may bee a Sacrament: but that the element muſt haue the word of God, for the inſtitution of it, which maketh it a Sacrament, as appeareth plainly by his whole diſcourſe in that place, Quare non ait, &c. Why doth he not ſay, you are cleane for baptiſme, wherewith you are waſhed? but he ſaith, for the word which I haue ſpoken unto you, but that euen in the water, the word doth cleanſe. Take away the word, and what is water but water? The word commeth to the element, and it is made a Sacrament, euen it ſelfe being a viſible word. For this verily he ſaid, when he waſhed his Diſciples feet, hee that is waſhed hath no need, but that hee waſh his feet, but is all cleane. Whence is this ſo great vertue of the water, that it toucheth the bodie, and waſheth the heart, but by the word which cauſeth it? Not becauſe it is ſaid, but becauſe it is beleeued, for euen in the word it ſelfe, the ſound that paſſeth away is one thing, the vertue which remaineth is another thing. This is the word of faith ſaith the Apoſtle, &c. In this ſaying, S. Auguſtine is directly againſt you, that the word ſaid ouer the element, is the forme of the Sacrament, and word of conſecration. Where you ſay, we neuer apply the words to the elements, it is falſe, though we apply them not after your magicall fantaſie, for wee ſo apply the words of Chriſts inſtitution, to confirme our faith, that we following the commandement of CHRIST, giuen us in his inſtitution, are aſſured that [illegible] This cup is the new Teſtament in my blood [illegible] CHRIST, [illegible] the [illegible] namely, [illegible] De [illegible] diſt. cap. [illegible] no [illegible]. Our [illegible] that, This is my body. Before the bleſſing of the heauenly words it is named another kind, after conſecration, the body of Chriſt is ſignified. He himſelfe ſaith, it is his blood, before conſecration it is called another thing, after conſecration, it is called blood. Thus Ambroſe prooueth not your purpoſe, for ſaying of the words ouer the creatures, nor, that thoſe onely wordes are the forme of conſecration, but ſheweth what force the words of Chriſt haue, to make of common bread and wine, the Sacraments or myſticall tokens and ſignes of his body and blood.

Iuſtinus Apol. 2. hath as little, or leſſe, for your purpoſe. His words are theſe: The food for which thankes are giuen by the word of prayer, which is from him, by which food our fleſh and blood by change are nouriſhed, wee are taught to bee the fleſh and blood of Ieſus, which was incarnate: You ſee here, that by the word of Prayer, the conſecration is made, and not by ſaying the wordes of Chriſt onely, ouer the bread and wine. And deſcribing the very forme of their Adminiſtration, hee ſpeaketh of nothing, but Prayer and Thankeſgiuing. Cyprian, De Cœna Domini, is directly againſt you, ſaying: Before theſe words: that common meat was profitable onely to nouriſh the bodie, and did miniſter ayd of corporall life, but after it was ſayd of our Lord, Doe this in my remembrance, this is my fleſh, and this is my blood, ſo oft as it is done, with theſe wordes, and with this faith, that ſubſtantiall bread and cup, being conſecrated with ſolemne benediction, doth profit to the life and ſaluation of the whole man.

Cyprian therefore requireth all the wordes of Chriſt, and that to be done which Chriſt commanded, and with that faith: therefore he is cleane contrary to your Popiſh forme of Conſecration. Saint Auguſtine ſaith little to the matter, Serm. 28. De verb. Dom. ſect. Marth. Before the words of Chriſt, that which is offered is called bread, after the words of Chriſt are uttered, now it is not called bread, but his body. Why ſhould we not thinke, that he meaneth as Cyprian ſaith? after the words of Chriſt: Doe this in remembrance of mee? &c. and yet here is neither the forme of Conſecration deſcribed, nor the words ſaid ouer the bread and cuppe. Tertull. contr. Marcion, lib. 4. ſaith, that Chriſt made the bread which he tooke and diſtributed to his Diſciples, his bodie, ſaying, This is my bodie, that is to ſay, a figure of my body. Here you ſee, he rehearſeth briefly the whole action of Chriſt, and not thoſe wordes onely, then hee doth ſo interpret thoſe words, as they can make little for Popiſh conſecration.

Chryſoſtome in 2. Tim. Hom. 2. hath theſe words: The holy oblation, whether Peter or Paul doe offer it, or any other Prieſt of what worthines ſoeuer he be, is the ſame which Chriſt gaue to his Diſciples, and which the Prieſts doe now make. This hath nothing leſſe, then that: why ſo? Becauſe men doe not ſanctifie this, but Chriſt, which did conſecrate that before. For as the words which Chriſt ſpake, are the ſame which the Prieſts doe now pronounce, ſo the oblation is the ſame, and the ſame reaſon is of Baptiſme, ſo all things conſiſt of faith. By theſe words of Chryſoſtome you can neuer conclude your purpoſe, but contrary to your doctrine, he ſaith that the Prieſt doth not conſecrate now, but Chriſt, as he did at the firſt: and by the words which then he uttered. As alſo in the Hom. de prod. Iud. And now Chriſt is alſo preſent, which garniſhed that table, he alſo doth conſecrate this table. For it is not man, which doth make thoſe things, that are ſet foorth of the conſecration of the Lords table, the bodie and blood of Chriſt, but euen the ſame Chriſt that was crucified for us. Wordes are uttered by the mouth of the Prieſt, and by the power of God and grace they are conſecrated. This (ſaith hee) is my bodie, by this word, the things ſet forth, are conſecrated. And as that voyce which ſaith, Grow and multiply, and fill the earth, was ſpoken but once, but hath alwayes effect, nature working to generation, ſo that voyce was once ſpoken, but it performeth continuance to the ſacrifice, throughout all tables of the Church unto this day, and unto his comming againe. By theſe words of Chryſoſtome, Chriſt did conſecrate, by pronouncing thoſe wordes once for all, and not the Prieſt ſo often as hee uttereth them ouer the bread. Although wee muſt underſtand a Synecdoche, in Chryſoſtomes ſpeach, where by naming a part, he meaneth the whole: or elſe we may as well exclude the conſecration of the cup, as the reſt of the words of Chriſts Inſtitution. The Oration of Gregor. Nyſſ. hath many things foyſted in, by Heretikes, as Nycephorus, witneth lib. 11. cap. 19. Among which, we may number that which in the 37. Chapter, is ſo often repeated of the tranſmutation of the bread, which is not found in many ancient Copies, and yet hee ſaith, It is ſanctified by the word of God, and by Prayer. Damaſcen. lib. 4. cap. 14. hath theſe wordes cleane contrary to your poſition. God ſaid in the beginning, Let the earth bring forth greene hearbes, and euen till this time, being watered with raine, it bringeth forth branches, being ayded and ſtrengthened by Gods commandement. God ſaid, This is my body, and this is my blood, and doe yee this in my remembrance: and by his Almightie commandement, it is brought to paſſe untill hee come. For ſo hee ſaid untill I come: and the ouerſhadowing vertue, by inuocation of the holy ſpirit, is made raine to this new huſbandrie: for as all things which God hath made, hee hath made by operation of the holy Ghoſt: ſo he worketh theſe things by operation of the holy Ghoſt, aboue nature, which faith onely can conceiue. Againe he ſaith: The bread, wine, and water that are ſet foorth, by inuocation and comming to of the holy Ghoſt, are ſupernaturally

Why the Protestants call it the Communion.

Communion which is a part of the Masse, what it signifieth.

Lib.4. c.14. de orthod.fide.

It is called Communion (saith S.[illegible]) and so in deed it is, for that by it we communicate with Christ, and bee partakers of his flesh and diuinitie, and by it [illegible] communicate and are united one with another: onely let us take heed that we doe not participate with heretikes. And when the Apostle saith, that all bee one bread and one [illegible] that are partakers of one Bread, hee meaneth not of them only that communicate at one time and place: but that all be so, that communicate in unitie through the whole [illegible]*. And yet this similitude is unsufficient to declare your purpose: heale: for of healing, it is called a medicine. And yet this similitude is unsufficient to declare your purpose: for (except it be by petition of principle) you cannot proue that the elements of the Sacrament, haue vertue of healing in them, although they bee not receiued, as [illegible] hath though it be neuer taken: for to the participation of the body and bloud of [illegible], f[illegible] of the receiuer is necessary, which is not required in a medicine. The Sacrament of Communion.

[illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] he [illegible] is voluntarily to [illegible] with them, [illegible] and so doe all the ancient Fathers understand the text of [illegible]. [illegible] text saith: We which [illegible] the holy mysteries, doe we [illegible] body and bloud we say that they are? seeing we all are partakers of one [illegible]. Chrysostome saith, What is the bread? the body of Christ. And [illegible] are they made, which receiue the body of Christ? not many bodies, but one body. You see then, these Fathers understand the text of sacramentall communion, whereof they onely are partakers which receiue the Sacrament, hauing a spirituall [illegible] beside with all the Church, whereof the Sacramentall is a seale. Oecumenius and the rest of the Greeke Fathers with him, consent in the same matter and words, so doth Theophylact. Bede out of S. Augustine, understandeth the communion here spoken of, to be of them that receiue the Sacrament [illegible], &c. In Sacramento. In the Sacrament it is so done, and the faithfull know how they eat the flesh of Christ. Euery one receiueth his part. Againe S. Augustine saith, Serm.ad infant.apud Bedam. Let us heare the Apostle himselfe. Therefore when he spoke of this Sacrament he saith, we being many are one bread, one body, understand ye, and reioyce ye. Againe upon the same text saith Bede out of Augustine. By his mercy, we are that which we receiue. Therefore they onely which receiue together, doe communicate in sacramentall communion at that time, and not all other that communicate with the body of Christ in spirituall communion. And this difference of sacramentall communion, and spirituall communion of the body of Christ, Saint Augustine in the same Sermon ad infantes, doth plainely set foorth in these words. Qui accipit &c. He that receiueth the mystery of unitie, and keepeth not the bond of peace, receiueth not the mysterie for himselfe, but a testimony against himselfe. No man ought to doubt any thing, that euery man is then made partaker of our Lords body and bloud, when in Baptisme he is made a member of Christ, and that he is no stranger from that bread & cup, although before he eat of that bread and drinke of that cup, he depart out of the world in the unity of the body of Christ. For he is not depriued of the participation and benefit of that Sacrament, when he hath found the same thing, which the Sacrament doth signify. The same doth Cyprian de coena Domi. So often as we doe these things, we doe not whette our teeth to bite, but with sincere faith we breake and diuide the holy bread, while we distinguish and separate that which is diuine, and that which is humane, and likewise ioyning together that wee haue distinguished, we confesse one God and man. And we our selues being made his body, are knit and united to our head, both by the Sacrament, and by the matter of the Sacrament, being euery one the members of another, shewing forth the ministerie of loue, one for another, we communicate in charity, we partake in mutuall carefulnesse, eating the same meate, and drinking the same cuppe, which issueth and floweth from the spirituall Rocke, which is meate and drinke, our Lord Iesus Christ. We see therefore most cleerely, that the Fathers making a difference of communion in Sacrament, from communion in spirit, that is in the matter of the Sacrament, did understand communion in sacrament, to bee of all them that receiued the Sacrament together, of whom, some perhaps did not communicate in spirit. And spirituall communion to be generall of all them, that by the spirit of Christ, were united together, although they neuer receiued this Sacrament. Dionysius also, after he hath shewed that this Sacrament is called communion, because it doeth most specially testify our participation with Christ and his Church, doeth very often call it communion, of the common distribution thereof to all that are present. Hierarch.Eccles.cap.3. in that part which is called the mystery of the collection or communion. The Bishop, after he hath praysed the holy workes of God, he consecrateth those things, that are most diuine, and bringeth into sight, those things that haue beene praysed, by the signes which are set forth after an holy manner. And after he hath shewed forth the guifts of the diuine workes, he himselfe commeth to the holy communion of them, and exhorteth the rest thereunto. And after he hath receiued and distributed the diuine communion, he endeth in holy thanksgiuing. This was the forme of celebration of the holy communion in the auncient time, and thus that auncient Father useth the name of communion. The same author in that part of the Chapter which is called the contemplation neere the beginning, hath these wordes, That diuine, common, and peaceable distribution of one and the same bread and cuppe, doeth prescribe and decree a diuine agreement of manners, to them that are so fedde together, and bringeth to holy remembrance, that most diuine supper and first pattern of those things which are done: in which the author himself of those signes, most iustly depriue[illegible] of his portion, which at the supper receiued with him, the holy things, not holily, nor charitably teaching purely and diuinely that the comming to the Diuine things which is true indeed, doth giue the communion to them that come to it, like unto themselues. Georgius Pachymer the Greeke Interpreter of Dionysius, in the very beginning of the exposition of this chapter saith. He calleth this Sacrament the communion, because at that time, all that were worthy, did communicate, or were partakers of the mysteries. Therefore whether we doe ignorantly and unlearnedly use the names of the communion, and the Lords Supper, let them that be learned iudge, when we use them as the auncient Fathers used them, and understand them according to the holy Scriptures.

RHEM.15 26 You shall shew] Upon this word the Heretikes fondly ground their false supposition, that this Sacrament cannot rightly be ministred or made without a Sermon of the death of Christ: and that this and other Sacraments in the Church, be not profitable when they are ministred in a strange language. As though the grace, force, operation, and efficacy together with the instruction and representation of the things which they signify, were not in the very substance, matter, forme, use, and worke it selfe of euery of the Sacraments: and as though preaching were not one way to shew Christs passion, and the Sacraments another way: namely this Sacrament, containing in the very kinds of the elements and the action, a most liuely representation of Christs death. As wisely might they say, that neither Abels sacrifice nor the Paschall lambe could signify Christs death without a Sermon.

How Christs death is shewed by the R.S. sacrament, it is selfe without sermon or otherwise.

FVLK.15 We hold no such superstition, that this Sacrament cannot bee rightly ministred without a Sermon of the death of Christ, (as you understand a Sermon) but wee doe rightly conclude out of this place, that the Sacrament cannot bee rightly ministred, except there bee a declaration of the Lords death, untill hee come againe. Not onely in the visible action of breaking and distributing of the elements, but also in shewing the end of Christs death out of the word of God, to stirre up the remembrance of his benefits to confirme the faith of the [illegible], in the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] and many [illegible] and [illegible] with our [illegible] members. For [illegible] Chriſt [illegible] it, [illegible] by the very words of the inſtitution, [illegible] body which is [illegible] and gave it, &c. but then he gave [illegible] and ſaid, [illegible] is ſhed for you, and [illegible], to you all of this: [illegible] Cup of the new Teſtament in my blood [illegible]. Therefore we need not ſeparate the preaching of the word, from the [illegible] which is a ſeale of [illegible], as if a [illegible] ſhould deliver a ſeale without any writing: for the word may be preached [illegible], but the Sacrament may not be adminiſtred without the word. Wherefore [illegible] alwayes preached, when the Sacrament is miniſtred, yet there ought to be [illegible] of the [illegible], at the leaſtwiſe briefly and ſummarily declaring the inſtitution and uſe of the Sacrament, and that is [illegible] in our Church, though there be not alwayes (as it were to be wiſhed) a Sermon, or more [illegible] thereof. Where you ſay we might as wiſely ſay, that neither Abels ſacrifice, nor the Paſchal [illegible] Chriſts death without a Sermon, we anſwere, that the cleare Sacraments of the new Teſtament in [illegible] declaration of Chriſts death are falſly compared with the obſcure figures of the old Teſtament: [illegible] according to their inſtitution not onely a divine action, or ſilent Ceremony, but alſo a preaching or declaration of Chriſts death and the benefit thereof. For although there be no expreſſe mention of the forme of Abels ſacrifice, yet ſeeing the Scripture teſtifieth that Abels ſacrifice was offered and accepted by faith, and faith hath alwayes relation to the word and promiſe of God, there is no doubt but Abel preſented his ſacrifice with ſuch words, as declared his faith in the word, whereby he was taught to ſacrifice, and in the ſeed which was promiſed to breake the ſerpents head, and to deſtroy the workes of the devill. As for the Paſchal Lambe, both an expreſſe Commandement, that the Iſraelites ſhould declare to their children, the inſtitution and uſe of the ſacrifice, whereby (though obſcurely) yet according to the inſtitution thereof, the Lords death was preached, before he came in the fleſh. And therefore according to Chriſts inſtitution and expreſſe Commandement, his death ought to be preached moſt clearely and plainely, to all that partake this Sacrament to their edification, which cannot be in a ſtrange tongue, which they underſtand not: therefore this Sacrament ought not to be miniſtred in a ſtrange language, nor any thing elſe ought to be done in the congregation, but to edifying. Chryſoſtome upon this text ſaith, there muſt be commemoration of the death of Chriſt, according to his Commandement, who declared the cauſe why he gave this myſtery. For when thou ſhalt underſtand (ſaith he) what our Lord ſuffered for thee, thou ſhalt be made wiſer. He that ſheweth the Lords death (ſaith Oecumenius upon this text) ſheweth all his gift, all his gentleneſſe and kindneſſe, and all our ſalvation together. S. Hierome on the ſame text ſaith. When we receive this Sacrament, we are admoniſhed by the Prieſts, that it is the body and blood of Chriſt, that we ſhould not be unthankefull for his benefits. Primaſius ſaith, God our Saviour gave example, that ſooften as we doe this, we ſhould have in minde, that Chriſt died for us all. Therefore it is ſaid unto us, The body of Chriſt, that when we remember this thing, we ſhould not be unthankefull to his grace. Againe, you ſhall ſhew the Lords death in your hearts when you heare, The body of Chriſt. Therefore according to the judgement of the Fathers, the Lords death muſt be ſhewed, not onely by the action, but alſo by words that may be underſtood; and ſtirre us up to the remembrance of Chriſts death, and the benefits thereof, and to thankefulneſſe in the ſame. To that effect ſpeaketh Saint Baſil, gathering upon this text De Baptiſmo. What then doe theſe words profit us? that eating and drinking, we ſhould alwayes call to remembrance, him that died and roſe againe for us; and ſo ſhould be inſtructed of neceſſity, to obſerve before God and his Chriſt, that leſſon which is delivered by the Apoſtle, where hee ſaith: For the love of Chriſt doth conſtraine us, judging this, that if one have died for all, then all are dead, &c. Wherefore inſtruction is needfull as well as the action.

RHEM. 16 27 Guilty of the body.] Firſt hereupon marke well, that ill men receive the body and blood of Chriſt: bee they infidels or ill livers. For in this caſe they could not be guilty of that which they receive not. Secondly, that it could not be ſo hainous an offence for any man to receive a piece of bread or a cup of wine, though they were a true Sacrament. For it is a deadly ſinne to receive any Sacrament with will and intention to continue in ſinne, or without repentance of former ſinnes: but yet by the unworthy receiving of no other Sacrament is man guilty of Chriſts body and blood, but here, where the unworthy (as S. Chryſoſtome ſaith) doth villany to Chriſts owne perſon as the Iewes or Gentiles did that crucified it, Chryſ. hom. de non contemn. Ec. &c. hom. 60. & 61. ad po. Antioch. Which invincibly proveth againſt the hereticks that Chriſt is really preſent.

The wicked receive the body and blood.
The real preſence is proved by the hainous offence of unworthy receiving.
Wicked men receive not the body and blood of Chriſt.

FVLK. 16 It followeth not of the text, that wicked men receive the body and blood of Chriſt, which unworthily eat of this bread, and drinke of this cup. He that contemptuouſly receiveth the Princes ſeale, is guilty of the majeſtie of the Prince, not which he receiveth, but which he deſpiſeth. And we ſee how hainous an offence it is to receive a Princes ſeale contemptuouſly, although in ſubſtance it be but printed wax: ſo we may ſee, that he which eateth this bread, and drinketh this cup unworthily, being the ſeale of Chriſts Paſſion, committeth an hainous offence, although in earthly ſubſtance they be but bread and wine. And is not he guilty of the blood of Chriſt, which deſpiſeth Baptiſme, that he hath received as a ſeale of his waſhing in the blood of Chriſt, although he were waſhed with water? Doth not the Apoſtle ſay of wicked men that fall from Chriſtian religion, that they crucifie againe unto themſelves the Son of God, and make a ſcorne of him? Heb. 6. 6. That they tread under their feet the Son of God, and account his blood wherewith they have beene ſanctified as uncleane? Heb. 10. 29. Can this be ſaid onely for receiving the Sacrament unworthily? yet doe thoſe villany to Chriſts owne perſon, as the Iewes or Gentiles did that crucified him. Not that his perſon ſuffereth any thing of them in deed, for he is now impaſſible, but that their malice is as great, and their wickedneſſe as hainous an offence againſt him, as that the Iewes or Gentiles did to his body when he ſuffered. And therefore this doth nothing in the world make for the Popiſh reall preſence. Neither doth Chryſoſtome in any place of his writings affirme that wicked men receive the body of Chriſt really, as you meane: yea he ſaith expreſly, Hom. 60. ad pop. Antioch. Let no Iudas ſtand to, no covetous perſon, if any be a Diſciple, let him be preſent: for this Table receiveth not ſuch perſons: for Chriſt ſaith, I keepe my Paſſeover with my Diſciples. Now it is certaine, that the Lords Table receiveth many wicked men to the participation of the outward Sacrament, but not to the matter or heavenly ſubſtance of the Sacrament, which is the body and blood of Chriſt. And becauſe the outward Sacrament is called the body of Chriſt, even the wicked in ſome ſenſe, may be ſaid to eat the body of Chriſt, but in proper ſpeech and according to your meaning, Chryſoſtome doth no where ſay, that infidels doe eat the body of Chriſt. Chryſoſtome in Matth. hom. 83. ſaith, that the wicked which receive unworthily, according to the ſaying of the Apoſtle, doe tread Chriſt under feet, and eſteeme the blood of the Covenant uncleane: yet he meaneth not that the naturall body of Chriſt is troden under the feet of men: no more doth he meane, that it entreth into the mouth and body of wicked men, that receiveth the Sacrament thereof. Againe in the ſame Homily he ſaith:

[illegible] De Civit. Dei lib. 21. cap. 25. It is not to be ſaid that he receiveth the body of Chriſt, which is not in the body of Chriſt. Againe, They are not to be ſaid to eat the body of Chriſt, becauſe they are not to be counted among his members. To omit other things, they cannot be at one time the members of Chriſt, and the members of an harlot. Finally, he himſelfe ſaying, he that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him, ſheweth what it is, not as in a Sacrament [illegible], but in very deed to eat the body of Chriſt, and to drinke his blood. This is S. Auguſtines judgement uttered [illegible], diſtinctly, and dogmatically, not in rhetoricall amplifications or figurative formes of ſpeaking: that [illegible] and wicked men receive not the body of Chriſt, much leſſe brute beaſts, as many Papiſts doe hold.

RHEM. 17 28 Let him prove.] A man muſt examine his [illegible] *diligently, whether he be in any mortall ſinne, and muſt confeſſe himſelfe of every offence which he knoweth or feareth to be deadly, before he preſume to come to the holy Sacrament. FVLK. 17 S. Auguſtine willeth every man to examine himſelfe, he biddeth him not to ſhew himſelfe to the Prieſt. Neither is the neceſſity of confeſſion laid upon every man by the Apoſtles Doctrine, or the practiſe of the Primitive Church, for many hundred yeeres after Chriſt. S. Cyprian de lapſis, ſpeaketh manifeſtly of them that were to make open confeſſion, becauſe they had openly fallen in time of perſecution, or elſe of them that of their owne accord, uncompelled, accuſed their owne purpoſe of ſhrinking, though they did not fall indeed. The booke De Dogmat. Eccl. is none of S. Auguſtines, and yet in the place quoted, the author ſpeaketh of publike confeſſion, and not of private or auricular ſhrift. Chryſoſtome upon this text ſaith, Hee doth not command that one ſhould be examined of another, but every man of himſelfe, not making a publike judgement, but an action without witneſſe. To the ſame effect writeth Theodoret: but of confeſſion ſee more, Mat. 3. Sect. 3.

FVLK. 18 S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh not of adoration of the Sacrament, ſuch as is uſed in Popery, with kneeling and holding up of hands to it, as though Chriſt were contained within the compaſſe of that which is ſeene, but of a reverent eſtimation, eſpecially due to the Sacrament above all other meats; becauſe it is a ſeale and pledge of our ſpirituall nouriſhment by the body and blood of Chriſt. The like reverent eſtimation is to be had of Baptiſme, above all other waſhings, becauſe it is a ſeale and pledge of our ſpirituall waſhing by the blood of Chriſt, and of our regeneration by the Spirit of God. S. Auguſtine therefore ſpeaking of two, whereof one (according to the cuſtome of the Church where he lived) received the Sacrament every day, Another following likewiſe the cuſtome of his Church, received onely at certaine times in the yeere. Neither of both (ſaith he) *diſhonoureth the body and blood of our Lord, if they ſtrive which of them may moſt honour the moſt wholeſome Sacrament. honouring [illegible] they [illegible] that [illegible] Chriſt [illegible] the Apoſtle ſaith: [illegible] they [illegible] to [illegible] The body of Chriſt [illegible] to [illegible] but [illegible] that [illegible] Therefore that which they [illegible] body and bloud of Chriſt. The ſame Auguſtine in [illegible] plainly ſheweth, that the naturall body of Chriſt [illegible] in the Sacrament, [illegible] is [illegible] adored as Chriſt were preſent there, but the fleſh of Chriſt (above the humanity of Chriſt) is to be adored and acknowledged, as joyned in perſonall union with the Sonne of God, of every Chriſtian man before he can eat the fleſh of Chriſt, either in the Sacrament, or [illegible] by faith, [illegible]. I enquire what is his footſtoole, and the Scripture ſaith unto me. The earth is my footſtoole. [illegible] to Chriſt, becauſe I ſeeke him here, and I finde how without impiety earth may be adored, [illegible] be adored without impiety. For of the earth he tooke earth, becauſe fleſh is of the earth, and of the fleſh of Mary he tooke fleſh, and becauſe he walked here in the ſame fleſh, and gave us the ſame fleſh to be eaten unto ſalvation, and no man eateth that fleſh, except he firſt adore it, it is found out how ſuch a footſtoole of the Lord may be adored, and we doe not onely not ſinne in adoring, but we ſinne in not adoring it. In theſe words he ſheweth that the naturall body of Chriſt is to be adored. Now that the ſame is not really preſent in the Sacrament, he ſheweth in theſe words: After he had ſhewed how unjuſtly the Capernaites were offended, he declareth how Chriſt inſtructed his Diſciples that remained with him, when he ſaid, It is the ſpirit which quickeneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing. The words which I have ſpoken to you, be ſpirit and life. Underſtand ye ſpiritually, that which I have ſpoken. You ſhall not eat this body which you ſee, and drinke this blood, which they ſhall ſhed which ſhall crucifie me, I have commended to you a certaine Sacrament, which being ſpiritually underſtood ſhall quicken you. And albeit it be neceſſary that the ſame be celebrated viſibly, yet it muſt be underſtood inviſibly. There can nothing be ſpoken more plainly and directly againſt the groſſe and carnall maner of preſence, which they call the real preſence of Chriſts body & blood in the Sacrament, then that which Aug. here affirmeth, as in the perſon of Chriſt. We eat not that body which his Diſciples ſaw, nor drinke that blood which the Iewes did powre out, but that was the naturall body and blood of Chriſt, therefore we doe not eat the naturall body and blood of Chriſt really, but Sacramentally, ſpiritually, in a myſtery by faith, not corporally with our mouth. Wherefore it followeth, we ought not to worſhip the Sacrament, but Chriſt which is ſignified and repreſented by the Sacrament. S. Ambroſe ſaith in effect, as S. Auguſtine of adoring the footſtoole, We adore the fleſh of Chriſt in the myſteries: which he ſpeaketh not onely of this Sacrament, but of all the myſteries of Chriſtian Religion, as it appeareth plainly within three lines after, where he gathereth of that he ſaid before, Cum igitur incarnationis adorandum ſit Sacramentum, Therfore ſeeing the Sacrament of his incarnation is to be adored, &c. Therefore S. Ambroſe ſpeaketh not of adoration of the Sacrament, as Chriſt and God, no more then the myſtery of the Incarnation is God and Chriſt in proper ſpeech; but of worſhipping Chriſt in the myſteries of his Supper, of Baptiſme, of his Incarnation, of his Death and Reſurrection, &c. Chryſoſtomes words, Hom. 24. in 1 Cor. 10. are both falſified and wreſted cleane from his meaning, for he exhorteth his hearers to come reverently and worthily to the participation of the body and blood of Chriſt, by example of the Sages, and not to adore the Sacrament, but Chriſt himſelfe in heaven, As we receive the greater benefit (ſaith he) ſo much more we ſhall be puniſhed, when we ſhall appeare unworthy. This body the wiſe men did reverence in the manger, being both ungodly men and barbarous men, after they had taken a long journey, they adore him with feare and trembling. Therefore at leaſt let us which are citizens of heaven follow theſe barbarous men. For they when they ſaw that manger and cottage onely, and ſaw none of thoſe things which thou doeſt now behold, came to him with great reverence and trembling. But thou ſeeſt it not in the manger but in the Altar, not a woman which holdeth him in her armes, but the Prieſt preſent, and the Spirit moſt abundantly powred out upon the Sacrifice, which is ſet forth. Neither doeſt thou behold his ſimple body as they did but alſo his power, and knoweſt all his adminiſtration, and art ignorant of none of thoſe things which were done by him, and art diligently inſtructed in all things. Let us be ſtirred up therefore and tremble, and ſhew greater piety then thoſe barbarous men, that we come not barely and coldly, and ſo heape our head to a more vehement fire.

Reall preſence.

These words (as every man may ſee plainely) make nothing for adoration of the Sacrament, but for ſpirituall reverence to be given to Chriſt, of them that come to receive the Sacrament, by which we are aſſured (if we come worthily) that we are made partakers of the very body and blood of Chriſt, after a ſpirituall maner, by faith on our behalfe, and by the working of the holy Ghoſt, on the behalfe of Chriſt. I omit other emphaticall ſpeeches which Chryſoſtome uſeth, of aſcending up to the gates of heaven, and of ſhewing Chriſt himſelfe to be ſeene, handled, eaten, &c. Which declare manifeſt, that he ſpeaketh of a ſpirituall and myſticall beholding, handling, eating by faith, not of a carnall ſight, handling, eating with the eyes, hands and mouth. Gregorie Nazianzenes words are likewiſe falſified, and racked out of joynt, for he ſaith: When his ſiſter had any reſpit from her ſickneſſe in the night, ſhe fell downe before the Altar with faith, calling upon him which is honoured at it. He ſaith not that ſhe prayed to the Sacrament, but to God which was worſhipped at the Altar or Communion table; for ſuch one it was, made of boords, and ſo placed, as men might ſtand round about it. And concerning the Sacrament, he ſheweth further how ſhe behaved her ſelfe toward it. [illegible], &c. And if her hand had laid up any where any part of the figures of the precious body, or of the blood, that ſhe mingled with teares, O marvellous thing! And immediatly departed feeling health. You ſee ſhe came not to the Altar to worſhip the Sacrament hanging over it, or lying on it, but ſhe brought theſe fragments of the Sacrament with her, and ſhe uſed them to ſtirre up her zeale in prayer: ſuperſtitiouſly (I grant) and ſo I thinke will you. For you will not ſuffer women to touch your Chalice with their hands, much leſſe the Sacrament it ſelfe, and to blubber it with their teares, which behaviour of hers was nothing like Popiſh adoration. To omit, that Gregorie calleth the Sacrament not the very body and blood of Chriſt but the figures and tokens thereof.

Theodoret ſaith: The myſticall ſignes after ſanctification doe not depart from their nature. For they remaine in their former ſubſtance, forme and ſhape, they may both be ſeene and touched as before. But they are underſtood to be thoſe things which they are made to be, and are beleeved and reverenced, as thoſe which are the ſame things that they are beleeved to be. Compare therefore the image with the exemplar or patterne. For the figure ought to be like the truth. In theſe words Theodoret denyeth both Tranſubſtantiation and the Reall preſence. Therefore you may eaſily underſtand what kinde of reverence or eſtimation he would have to be given to the outward Sacrament, namely, ſpirituall and by faith. Neither the ſubſtance of bread and wine which is the image and the patterne, the figure not the truth of Chriſt ſhould be adored as Chriſt himſelfe.

S. Denis

S. [illegible] from the [illegible] no purpoſe but to Chriſt himſelfe: ſo doth Pachymeres expound [illegible], ſaying, He [illegible] as to a living thing, and worthily. Even as the [illegible] Gregorie. [illegible] for our paſſeover, and ſo ſweet and holy myſterie is Jeſus Chriſt our Lord [illegible], and to [illegible] that he would [illegible] and fill him [illegible]. Therefore [illegible] prove that he prayed to the Sacrament, then the [illegible] Lords body. And although the Popiſh Church doe commit moſt deteſtable idolatry in praying to it; yet the Church of Chriſt did never make any ſuch prayer to the Sacrament, but onely to God through Ieſus Chriſt, whoſe Sacrament it is. Where you adde further, that for diſcerning of Chriſts body, you are called from profane houſes to Churches, from tables to Altars, from vulgar apparell to holy Veſtments, to Corporals and Chalices, from marriage to chaſtity, &c. You offer heinous injury to our Saviour Chriſt himſelfe, and to his Apoſtles, and to the Primitive Church for many hundred yeeres after Chriſt, who knew none of theſe meanes, to diſcerne the Lords body, nor any ſuch preſcribed or uſed. But let us examine them particularly. For better diſcerning of this divine meat (you ſay) you are called from common profane houſes, to Gods Church. Who hath called you for ſuch end? or who hath taught you to call thoſe, common and profane houſes, in which Chriſt miniſtred, and his Apoſtles, and to the Primitive Church for many hundred yeeres, and where Chriſt himſelfe is preſent? Mat. 18. 20. Who hath taught you to diſcerne the Lords body better then Chriſt, then his Apoſtles, then the Primitive Church? We are called by S. Paul from private houſes, to the place of publike aſſembly, for order, comelineſſe, and more convenience to edifie, but for better diſcerning of the Lords body, or for any greater holineſſe of the place, we are never called by Chriſt, nor his Spirit in his Apoſtles and Evangeliſts. You adde further, For this, you are forbidden to make it in the vulgar apparell, and are appointed ſacred ſolemne ornaments. From whom came this prohibition? By whom are you appointed? You quote Hier. in ep. Nepot. where there is no ſuch matter, nor any thing ſounding toward ſuch a matter, except you meane thoſe words, which Nepotianus ſpake immediatly before his death, to his uncle, ſaying, Send this coat which I did weare in the ſervice of Chriſt, to my beloved father by age, &c. Which coat by the circumſtance of the place could be no other, then ſuch as he then ware at that inſtant, or had preſent before him, peradventure his hairen coat, whereof Hierome ſpake before, that he ware it under his cloake and white linnen, while he was a Courtier. What garment ſoever it was, you ſhall never prove that it was your maſking veſtiments, except you can prove that Tunica ſignifieth Albe, a Cheſible, and ſuch like trumpery, and moreover that there is none other miniſtery or ſervice of Chriſt, but ſaying of Maſſe. In the ſecond place: Hierome ſaith, The Prieſts of the myſticall Temple, which is interpreted the Church, the ſonnes of Sadoch goe not forth unto the people with the garments of their miniſtery, leſt being ſanctified, they ſhould be defiled with humane converſation. And thou in the midſt of the common people, and art of the people, doſt thou beleeve that thou art cleane? Who is ſo blinde not to ſee that all true Chriſtians are Prieſts of the myſticall Temple, which is the Church, and muſt have care, not to defile their garments? Therefore Hierome ſpeaketh nothing of apparell worne by the Miniſters of the Church, in the celebration of this Sacrament, but ſheweth by the charge given to the Prieſt, Ezech. 44. that no man living in this world can be cleane. In the Epiſtle of Paulinus, I know not what you imagine ſhould make for your purpoſe, except it be two verſes written over a certaine cloſet, that was in the great Church or Minſter of Nola, Diſcerning of Chriſts body.

Churches.

Veſtments.

Hic locus eſt veneranda penus qua conditur, & qua
Promitur alma ſacri pompa Miniſterij.

This is the place where the venerable ſtore is laid up, and from whence the reverend pompe of the holy Miniſtery is brought forth. This you imagine to be the Veſtry where all Popiſh Veſtments are kept. But Paulinus meaneth, that all ſuch things as were occupied about the holy Miniſtery, except bookes (for they were in another cloſet) were kept and brought out of this place: as bread and wine, and veſſels for both, and ſuch other things as they occupied in their ceremonies, among which if there were any garments appointed for the celebration of the Lords Supper, it followeth not that they were ſo many, and ſuch manner of veſtments as you uſe in your Maſſe. By Chryſoſtome it may be gathered, they had none other apparell in the Church but a white veſture, In Matth. Hom. 85. nor in the Church of Rome, by Hierome cont. Pelag. lib. 1. But it will never be proved that they uſed any garments to diſcerne the Lords body by them, as you pretend. As for the fables of John Deacon, that wrote the life of Gregorie almoſt nine hundred yeeres after Chriſt; deſerve ſmall credit with wiſemen, to prove what garments and for what end, were worne in the Primitive Church, five hundred yeeres before he was borne.

But you proceed and tell us, that for this, namely, for diſcerning our Lords body, is the hallowing of Corporals and Chalices, calling to witneſſe Ambroſe Offic. 2. c. 28. who ſpeaketh never a word of Corporals, but of golden veſſels dedicated to the miniſtery of the Sacrament, which as he himſelfe had broken and melted to redeeme captives, ſo he judgeth that it is the beſt uſe that they can be put to: If they be given to the poore, if they be employed for redeeming of captives, or for building of Churches and enlarging the buriall places. In theſe three kindes (ſaith he) it is lawfull to breake, melt, and ſell the veſſels of the Church, even after they be dedicated. It is needfull that the forme of the myſticall cup goe not out of the Church, leſt the Miniſtery of the holy cup be transferred to wicked uſes. Therefore within the Church firſt there were ſought out veſſels that were not dedicated: then being broken, and laſt of all melted, they were diſtributed to the poore by ſmall portions, alſo they helped for the redemption of captives. But although there want new veſſels, and ſuch as ſeeme not to be dedicated, I thinke they may be all converted with piety to ſuch uſes, as I have ſaid before. The Church in his time therefore had golden veſſels dedicated for the holy uſe of the Sacrament, but not to diſcerne the Lords body, which might be diſcerned ſufficiently without them, & never a whit by them. Exuperius Biſhop of Tholoſa, is commended by Hierome to be ſo rich, as no man was richer then he, which carried the Lords body in a wicker basket, and his blood in a glaſſe, becauſe he beſtowed all upon releefe of the poore. Yet there is no doubt, but he diſcerned the Corporals and Chalices.

Lords

[illegible] body [illegible], then Popiſh [illegible] Prieſts and Chalices.

[illegible] carriers of the blood of Chriſt. What [illegible] Cups or Chalices [illegible] end [illegible] you [illegible] (if you will) Conſecrated [illegible] we [illegible] out of theſe words? We know they had Cups peculiarly appointed [illegible] to diſcerne the Lords [illegible] to the uſe of the holy Sacrament, but [illegible] Popiſh [illegible] Hom. 11. ſaith, [illegible] body and blood by them. The Authour of the imperfect worke [illegible] who drinking in the hallowed Cup, was depoſed out of his [illegible] and his life. If therefore it be [illegible] private uſes, theſe ſanctified veſſels, in which is not the true body of Chriſt but a [illegible] how much more the veſſels of our body, which God hath prepared for an habitation for [illegible] we ought [illegible] place for the devill, to doe what he will with them. You ſee they had ſanctified veſſels, and yet had [illegible] that the true body of Chriſt was not in them. But you proceed, and ſay, For this profane tables are removed, and altars conſecrated. Chriſt and his Apoſtles were to blame (if it be as you ſay) to miniſter upon profane tables, without conſecrating of Altars. But who ſhall beare witneſſe for conſecration of Altars? Who but S. Auguſtine Ser. 255. de tempo. And who ſhall warrant us that this Sermon is not falſly intituled to S. Auguſtine, (as a great number of thoſe Sermons are?) But admit it be S. Auguſtines owne authority, yet he ſpeaketh onely of conſecrating Altars, not for this end to diſcerne the Lords body and blood. For that their Tables and Altars were dedicated to the holy uſe of miniſtration, it is not the matter we ſtand upon, but whether they were conſecrated for this end. They were called Altars unproperly, as the Sacrament was called a Sacrifice, the Miniſters ſacrificing Prieſts and Levites, yet were they neither in matter, forme, nor uſe, like unto your Popiſh Altars of ſtone, that were ſet againſt a wall. For they were tables of wood, and ſo commonly were called, as it is manifeſt by S. Auguſtine, Ep. 50. Bonifac. And Optatus lib. 6. both ſpeaking of the rage of the Donatiſts, which brake, or ſhaved, or ſcraped the boards of the Altar or Table. It ſtood in the midſt, that the people might ſtand round about it, Euſeb. li. [illegible] Aug. de verb. Dom. ſecund. Mat. Ser. 46. It was removeable and carried by the Clerkes, [illegible] ad Paulin. [illegible] Aug. Queſt. vet. & nov. Teſt. Qu. 101. Or otherwiſe as appeareth by Optatus lib. 6. Therefore it was nothing like Popiſh Altars. But you goe on, and ſay: That for this, the very Prieſts themſelves, are honourable, chaſte, ſacred. The Lords body may be diſcerned of the receivers, though the Prieſt be a very varlet, unchaſte, and unholy. For the dignity of the Sacrament dependeth not upon the worthineſſe of the Miniſter. We confeſſe that the Miniſter ought to be chaſte, and holy, that in reſpect of himſelfe, he may diſcerne the Lords body, and that his Miniſtery is honourable, both in this Sacrament, and in the other. And ſo ſaith Hierome ad Heliodorum. Farre be it from me, that I ſhould ſpeake any thing amiſſe of them, which ſucceeding the order of the Apoſtles, doe make the body of Chriſt with their holy mouth, by whom alſo we are made Chriſtians. By making the body of Chriſt, he meaneth the celebration of the Sacrament of his body, as by making us Chriſtians the Sacrament of Baptiſme. For otherwiſe in proper ſpeech, they neither make the body of Chriſt, nor us Chriſtians, but onely Miniſter the Sacraments, whereby the body of Chriſt is repreſented unto us, and by uſe of them we are aſſured that we are by Gods grace and ſpirituall regeneration, become Gods children, that is, Chriſtians. In the other place againſt Iovinian, Hierome indeed and Ambroſe in 1 Tim. 3. thinketh it moſt convenient, that Miniſters of the Sacraments ſhould be continent, either unmarried or abſtaining from their wives. But the Councell of Nice that decreed the contrary, is of greater authority. Socrat. lib. 1. cap. 11. And Athanaſius ad Dracontium. Yet S. Ambroſe denieth not, but that it is lawfull to have wife and children, as the Apoſtle ſaith: For theſe are the ſignes (ſaith he) of Biſhoplike dignity. But if any man following better things, and hath dedicated both his body and ſoule to God, that he couple not himſelfe in Matrimony, he ſhall be made ſo much the more worthy. And in the 1 Corinth. 11. He ſaith, that All the Apoſtles except Iohn and Paul had wives. Yet you proceed, and ſay, For this, the people is forbidden to touch it with their common hands, Nazianzen, Or. ad Arianos. What Gregorie ſaith of the veſſels of the Iewiſh Temple, I have ſhewed before. But that the people were not forbidden to touch the Sacraments, it is manifeſt by that which he writeth of his ſiſter Gorgonia, which did not onely touch it with her hands, but alſo bewet it with her teares. And by that which S. Baſil of the ſame time writeth unto Caeſarea patritia of the very caſe of the people handling the Sacrament, and putting it to their owne mouthes. And Cyril. Hier. Myſtag. 5. biddeth them take it in the hollow of their hand. That care is had that no part fall to the ground, it is of reverence to the holy myſteries, not as though the Sacrament were the naturall body and blood of Chriſt, for no part can fall to the ground from his body and blood, though crummes of bread and drops of wine may fall. Cyril. Hieroſ. ſaith: Take heed leſt any part of it fall from thee. For whatſoever thou ſhouldeſt loſe, (as it were a part of thine owne member) thou ſhouldeſt loſe it. For if any man ſhould give thee grains of gold, wouldeſt thou not keepe them with great diligence, taking heed leſt any part of them ſhould be loſt, and thou ſhouldeſt ſuffer dammage? And wilt thou not provide much more diligently for this which is more precious than gold or precious ſtones, that no crumme of it doe fall away?

Theſe words declare, that although the Sacrament was highly eſteemed by him, yet not taken to be the very body and blood of Chriſt, for then he would have ſaid, that every crumme is a part of his body, or his whole body. The like is to bee ſaid of that ſuperſtitious Conſecrating of their eyes, forehead, and organes of their ſenſes, with the moiſture that remaineth on their lips, after they have drunke of the Cup, which he preſcribeth, declaring that he tooke it not for the naturall blood of Chriſt, as you perſwade men.

Origen alſo ſaith, In Exod. 27. I will admoniſh you by examples of your Religion, You know that are accuſtomed to be preſent at the divine myſteries, how when you receive the Lords body, with all heed and reverence you keepe it, that never ſo ſmall a piece fall from it, leſt any part of the conſecrated gift doe fall away. For you thinke you are blameworthy, and you thinke rightly if any part fall from it by negligence. And if you uſe, and worthily uſe ſo great heed to keepe his body, how doe you thinke it is [illegible] to neglect his word than his body? That the neglect of the word (by Origens judgement) is as great an offence, as the neglect of the Sacrament. But that he eſteemed not thoſe parts which by negligence might fall to be the naturall body of Chriſt (although he called it the body of Chriſt, which is a Sacrament thereof) he declareth moſt plainly in his Commentary upon the 15. chap. of Matthew. Where he affirmeth, that the materiall part of the Sacrament goeth into the belly,

The real preſence

But [illegible]; For the [illegible] proviſion is made, that if any hoſtes or parts of the Sacrament [illegible] reſerved, with all honour and diligence poſſible. Hence come in all the councils and proviſions of the Maſſe, if it be eaten by a Mouſe, a Dogge, an Hogge, if a Spider or a Flie fall into the Cup, if it [illegible], if it be vomited up by a Prieſt, or a Lay-man, if it be mouldie and corrupt (ſo that wormes breed of it,) with an hundred like caſes, which Chriſt and his Apoſtles did not provide for, nor the Primitive Church [illegible] is ſacred proviſion made by the Church of Antichriſt, who as in all things he advanceth himſelfe above Chriſt, ſo in wiſe and holy proviſions, farre exceedeth Chriſt and his ſpirit in the Goſpel. As for examination of conſciences, confeſſion of ſinnes, continence from unclean luſts, we confeſſe ought to be preparatives, [illegible] to receive worthily, but not Popiſh excarnificationes of conſciences, auricular confeſſion, and a more [illegible] preſcription of continence in married perſons, than the Scripture doth require. As for receiving faſting, is a thing indifferent, of convenience according to the order of the Church, but not of neceſſity, neither doth S. Auguſtine teach otherwiſe, Ep. 118. For even in his time, on the day of the inſtitution of the Supper, the [illegible] Church was to receive after dinner, as he ſheweth in that Epiſtle, and it appeareth by the councill of Carthage 3. C. 29. Matiſcon. 2. C. 6.

But now after you have ſhewed, how you Papiſts diſcerne the Lords body, you will prove, that we diſcerne it not, becauſe after the order of our booke, if any thing remaine after our Communion, the Curate or Clarke may take it home to his owne uſe. A ſubſtantiall argument, I promiſe you. But we diſcerne the Lords body, as the Apoſtle hath here taught us. Let a man therefore examine himſelfe, &c. Not by making ſuperſtitious proviſions, for the bread and wine, which remaineth after the communion: whereof there is no greater account to be made, than of the water after baptiſme, for the conſecration extendeth to no more bread and wine, than is beſtowed according to Chriſts inſtitution. Therefore Evagrius teſtifieth, that by an old cuſtome of the Church of Conſtantinople, that which remained after the communion, was given to young children that went to ſchoole. In the Church of France by the Matiſcon 2. Councill cap. 6. it was decreed, that the remnants of the Sacrament, on Wedneſday or Friday ſhould be given to young children faſting, ſprinkled with wine. And the Church of England by as good authority, hath appointed, for avoiding of ſuperſtition, and all other inconveniences, that the miniſter, ſhall have the bread and wine to his private uſe. As for the ceremony of bread, that was given to the Catechumeni in S. Auguſtines time, we have no more to doe with it, than you, and leſſe with your ſuperſtitious holy bread.

But ſeeing in our celebration of the Lords Supper, we have all things materiall and eſſentiall, according to the inſtitution of Chriſt, and the doctrine and practiſe of his Apoſtles, and you doe manifeſtly pervert the end of his inſtitution, by your blaſphemous ſacrifice, and Idolatrous worſhipping of the creatures, by not ſhewing the Lords death, by your ſacrilegious depriving of the people of the one halfe of the Sacrament, and other your ſuperſtitious prophanations, if any of you, that gathered theſe notes, pertaine to Gods election, I beſeech him at his good time, to call you to his knowledge and acknowledging of his truth. To the reſt I ſay with the Apoſtle, the Lord reward you according to your workes.

RHEM. 19 30 Many ſleepe.] We ſee hereby this, it is a fearefull caſe and crime to defile by ſinne (as much as in us lyeth) the body of Chriſt in the Sacrament, ſeeing God ſtroke many to death for it in the primitive Church, and puniſhed others by grievous ſickneſſe. No marvell that ſo many ſtrange diſeaſes and deaths fall upon us now in the world.

FVLK. 19 The body of Chriſt is not ſo in the Sacrament, that it can be defiled by any mans ſinne, or otherwiſe be abuſed by any act of man or beaſt. For Chriſt is now in heaven glorified, and can ſuffer no more of wicked men. Yet it is an heinous offence, to defile by ſinne, the Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt.

RHEM. 20 31 Iudge your ſelves.] We may note here that it is not enough, only to ſinne no more, or to repent lightly of that which is paſt: but that we ſhould puniſh our ſelves according to the weight of the faults paſt and forgiven: and alſo that God will puniſh us by temporall ſcourges in this life or the next, if we doe not make our ſelves very cleane before we come to receive his holy Sacrament, whoſe heavy hands we may eſcape by puniſhing our ſelves by faſting and other penance.

FVLK. 20 He that ſinneth no more, doth not lightly, but earneſtly repent of his ſinne paſt. As for Popiſh ſatisfaction by puniſhment of our ſelves, otherwiſe than by hearty ſorrow for our ſinnes, (which yet is no ſatisfaction for them) there can none be concluded out of this text. Nor that God doth puniſh his children, in the next life, although he chaſtiſe them with temporall ſcourges in this life to bring them to repentance and amendment, not to make ſatisfaction for their ſinnes forgiven. By true and faithfull repentance therefore, with prayer, faſting, almes, and other workes by God allowed, as the fruits of repentance and faith, we may avoid Gods heavy judgement which our ſinnes have deſerved, through the merits of Chriſt, and not by the merit of ſatisfaction of our workes but by the meere mercy of God.

RHEM. 21 33 Expect one another.] Returning now to their former fault and diſorder for the which he tooke this occaſion to ſpeake of the holy Sacrament, and how great a fault it is to come unworthily to it: he exhorteth them to keepe their feaſt ſuppers or feaſts in unity, peace, and ſobriety, the rich expecting the poore, &c.

FVLK. 21 The words that follow, (If any be an hungred, let him eate at home,) doe declare moſt manifeſtly, that this expectation, and tarying one for another, is to receive the Communion of the Lords ſupper together, and not to the eating of their love ſuppers: which were chiefly to relieve the poore, that were hungry. Photius upon theſe words, ſaith, Tarie one for another. Wherefore? leſt you be prevented to receive the Lords body and blood unworthily, leſt partaking unworthily, being made guilty of the murder of his body, and the ſhedding of his blood, you receive judgement unavoidable. S. Ambroſe upon this text, ſaith; He ſaith that they muſt tary one for another, that the oblation of many may be celebrated together, and that all may be ſerved, and if any be impatient, he may be fed with earthly bread at home. That you come not together to judgement, that is, that you keepe not the myſtery ſo, as you be worthy to

If your last note be true, he speaketh not heere of matters pertaining to the celebration of the Sacrament, [illegible] concerning ordering of the feasts of loue. And indeed S. Ambrose, Chrysostome, Photius, Theophylact, [illegible] stand these matters generally of other things, to be reformed, and which needed his presence rather [illegible] But admit that he speaketh specially, of the order of celebration of the Sacrament, how can [illegible] part of your Popish Masse to haue beene set downe, by tradition from the Apostles? Gregory [illegible] prayer, was the custome of the Apostles to consecrate the host of oblation, at the onely saying of [illegible] ble thereto, Lib 7 Ep. 63. And yet you are not ashamed to say, the whole administration of your Masse [illegible] agree vnto these vn- and ours wholly repugnant vnto the same. Yet you say, we doe confesse, that it doth [illegible], but that the written traditions. Indeede we acknowledge, that we are not bound to any vnwritten [illegible] auncient authors doe forme of your Masse commeth from the Apostles tradition, we doe [illegible] let vs see what you testifie, that euery patch of it was thrust in, by the Popes of later time [illegible] First to can confirme out of the auncient writers, to haue beene of the Apostles tradition, which we obserue not. For it was not in take it onely fasting. August. Ep. 118 Wherein I haue discouered your falshood before. Secondly we haue taken Augustines time, nor long after, appointed to be taken onely of them that were fasting. Secondly you say, no Sacrament is rightly perfo- away consecration, with the signe of the crosse, without which S. Augustine saith, no Sacrament is rightly perform- ted. Indeede S. Augustine in Io. Tr. 118. saith, that the signe of the crosse, was a ceremony vsed in all the Sacra- ments, which if it were not vsed, nihil eorum rite perficitur, nothing is performed or done according to rite or custome, but that this signe was necessary vnto the consecration, or that it was of the Apostles tradition, he saith not. Chrysostome likewise saith that the signe of the Crosse was vsed, to put men in minde of the death of Christ, but neither that it was necessary to consecration, nor that it was taught by [illegible] to be vsed in such maner. And the forming of it with the finger in the body; he accounteth little [illegible] be formed in the minde, with great faith. Therefore that which Chrysostome requireth, we [illegible] the shew- ing of the Lords death and passion, though we haue not that which in his time was vsed as a bare figure, to put men in remembrance of it. Thirdly you say, the Apostles taught to keepe a memorie or inuocation of Saints in this sacrifice; which we haue not, for which you quote Augustine tract. 84. in Ioan. & Chrysostome Hom. 21. in Act. of which neither of both saith, that the Apostles taught the Church to keepe any such memory: and Chry- sostome sayth neuer a word of inuocation of Saints. They both indeede say, that at the celebration of the Supper, they kept a memory of Martyrs. Chrysostome sayth, they offered for them, and that was no dishonour to them. But what should they offer, but thankesgiuing? Saint Augustine sayth, We doe not so make memorie of them at the very table it selfe, as we doe for other that rest in peace, so that we also pray for them, but rather that they might pray for vs, that we may follow their steppes. Not that they did properly inuocate the Saints, but that this commemoration of the Martyrs, might mooue them, to pray for them. For the auncient me- mory, or commemoration as appeareth by Epiphanius Cont. Aerium haer. 75. was both for iust men and for sinners, for the Patriarkes, Prophets, Apostles, Martyrs, Confessors, &c. as he saith, to separate or di- stinguish Christ from the order of men: as Saint Augustine saith, to offer thanks for them Ench. C. 110. In which, although there were neither expresse prayers for the dead, nor to the Saints, but a memory and rehearsall of their names, yet by little and little the errors of prayer for the dead and inuocation of Saints, gathered strength and increase.

Last of all you say, the Apostles decreed, that in this Sacrifice, there should be speciall prayers for the dead, Chrys. in Phil. hom 3. Aug. de cur. pro mort. Chrysostom indeed sayth, That we haue none. Witnesse of this decree Chrys. in Phil. hom 3. ... in the celebration of the reuerend mysteries, memory or mention should it was not in vaine decreed by the Apostles, that ... to haue beene for that end, men should be made of them which are departed from peace. Which he doth interpret, to haue beene for that end, men should pray for them, to procure some little helpe for them, for so he saith in his exhortation. Let vs procure them some helpe, small indeed, but let vs helpe them. S. Augustine alledgeth no decree of the Apostles, but the custome of the Church in this time. That in the prayers of the Priest, which are powred fourth to the Lord God, at his altar, the commendation of the dead, also hath his place. Thus haue you but one witnesse, who also without any good ground affirmeth this memory to be of the Apostles decree. Iustin Martyr neerer to the Apostles times by 200. yeeres, rehearsing the order of celebration, according to the Apostles writings, hath no memory or mention of the dead. Dionysius, of whom it is [illegible] in what time he liued, yet certaine it is, he is ancient, and of some thought to be that Dionys[ius] [illegible], of whom Eusebius maketh often mention in the 6 and 7. bookes of his histories, declareth [illegible] was none other memory of the dead in his time, but of the Saints only, whose commendation was [illegible] to the praise of God, and to the imitation of the liuing. Eccl. Hier. cap. 3. part. 3 who if he were [illegible] Apostles immediate scholler, as you contend, giueth sentence flatly against you, touching inuocation of [illegible], and prayer for the dead, to be the doctrine and tradition of the Apostles: when [illegible] ... Therefore in both ... that are promised by God, and are acceptable to God, ... granted, both seruing to God which loueth the good, ... tenperet, or by way of interpretation, to them that are present, those rewards, ... And ... of that question which he mooueth, whether prayers ... the dead, and in other respect they may be profitable. Whereby we see, that ... had not yet obtained strength, when prayers for the dead were not taken simply for prayers, but ... the performance of Gods promises, to all his elect after this life, namely, that they are [illegible] of all their sinnes committed of frailty, and are placed in rest with Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob. For [illegible] onely were required in those prayers, which were vttered by the Bishop, for them that were buried. Concerning the mixing of water with wine, I haue answered before in the notes of this Chapter, Sect. 10. That it is neither of Christs institution, nor of the generall practise of the Church, but a thing indifferent, if it be vsed without superstition. Caluin therefore and the reformed Churches in these dayes made no new administration according to the Apostles vnwritten words, but reformed the new administration of the Popish Church according to the most auncient institution and practise of Christ and his Apostles, and of the Primitiue Church, in all necessary and essentiall poyntes set foorth in the Word written. And as for those things which the Apostles did dispose at his pre- sence, ... they pertained not to the administration of the Sacrament, or else they were acciden- tall orders, meete for the Church of Corinth, which are not necessary to be the same in all times and places. How agreeable our doctrine and practise of this Sacrament is to Christs institution, set forth in the Scripture in name, substance, and all essentiall poynts, let the world see, and God judge.

CHAP. XII.

The first part. As touching the Gifts of the Holy Ghost.

They must not make their diuersity of Gifts an occasion of Schisme, considering that all are of one Holy Ghost, and for the profit of the one body of Christ, which is the Church: 12 Which also could not be a body, without such variety of members: 21 Therefore neither they that haue the inferiour gifts, must be discontent, seeing it is Gods distribu- tion: nor they that haue the greater, contemne the other, considering they are no lesse necessary: 25 but all in all ioyne together: 28 And euery one keepe his owne place.

The Epistle vpon the 10. Sunday after Pentecost.

AND concerning spirituall things, I will not haue you ignorant, brethren.

2 You know that when you were Hea- then, you went to dumbe Idols, according as you were ledde.

3 Therefore I do you to vnderstand, that no man speaking in the Spirit of God, saith Anathema to IESVS. And no man can say, Our Lord IESVS, but in the holy Ghost.

4 And there are diuisions of graces, but one Spirit.

5 And there are diuisions of ministrati- ons: but one Lord.

6 And there are diuisions of operations, but one God which worketh all in all.

7 And the manifestation of the Spirit is giuen vnto euery one to profit.

8 To one certes by the Spirit is giuen ‡ the word of wisedome: and to another, the word of knowledge according to the same Spirit.

9 To another, ‖ faith in the same Spirit: to another, the grace of doing cures in one Spirit.

10 To another, the working of miracles: to another, prophecy: to another, discerning of spirits: to another, kinds of tongues: to another, interpretation of languages.

11 And all these things worketh one and the same Spirit, dividing to euery one accor- ding as he will.

12 For

CONCERNING spirituall gifts, brethren, I would not haue you ignorant.

2 Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carri- ed away vnto dumbe Idols, euen as ye were ledde.

*3 Wherefore I declare vnto you, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God † defieth Iesus: * also no man can say † that Iesus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghost.*

4 There are diuersities of gifts, but it is the selfe-same Spirit.

5 And there are differences of administra- tions, but it is the selfe-same Lord.

6 And there are diuers manners of opera- tions, but it is the selfe-same God which worketh all in all.

7 The manifestation of the Spirit, is giuen to euery man to profit withall.

8 For to one is giuen by the Spirit the word of wisedome, to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit.

9 To another is giuen faith by the same Spirit, to another the gift of healing by the same Spirit.

10 To another power to do miracles, to ano- ther prophecy, to another discerning of spirits, to another diuers kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues.

*11 * But these all worketh euen that one and the selfe-same Spirit, diuiding to euery man seuerally euen as he will.*

... One body.

12 For * as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of the body, whereas they be many, yet are ‡ one body: so also Christ.

13 For in one Spirit were we all baptized into one body, whether Iewes, or Gentiles, or bond or free: and in one Spirit we were all made to drinke.

14 For the body also is not one member, but many.

15 || If the foot should say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body, is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the eare should say, because I am not the eye, I am not of the body: is he therefore not of the body?

17 If the whole body were the eye: where is the hearing? If the whole were the hearing, where is the smelling?

18 But now God hath set the members, every one of them in the body as hee would.

19 And if all were one member, where were the body?

20 But now there are many members indeed, yet one body. And the eye cannot say to the hand, I need not thy helpe: or againe the head to the feete, You are not necessary for me.

21 But much more those that seeme to be the more weake members of the body, are more necessary:

22 And such as we thinke to be the baser members of the body, upon them we put more aboundant honour: and those that are our unhonest parts, haue more aboundant honestie.

23 And our honest parts need nothing: but God hath tempered the body, giving to it that wanted, the more aboundant honour.

24 That there might be no || schisme in the body, but the members together might be carefull one for another.

25 And if one member suffer any thing, all the members suffer with it; or if one member doe glory, all the members rejoyce with it.

26 And you are the body of Christ, and members of member.

Eph.4,11. 27 And * some verily God hath set in the Church, first Apostles, secondly Prophets, thirdly Doctors, next Miracles, then the graces of doing cures, helpes, governments, kinds of tongues.

28 Are all Apostles? are all Prophets? are all Doctors?

29 ‡ Are all miracles? haue all the grace of doing cures? do all speake with tongues? doe all interprete?

30 But pursue the better gifts. And yet I shew you a more excellent way.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: even so is Christ also.

13 For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Iewes or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free and haue all drunke of one spirit.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot do say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body: is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the eare doe say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body? is it therefore not of the body?

17 If all the body were an eye, where were then the hearing? If all were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But now God hath set the members, every one of them severall in the body, as it hath pleased him.

19 If they were all one member, where were the body?

20 Now are there many members, yet but one body.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I haue no neede of thee: nor againe, the head to the feete, I haue no neede of you.

22 Yea rather a great deale those members of the body which seeme to be more feeble, are necessary.

23 And upon those members of the body which we thinke to be lesse honourable, we bestow more honour: and our uncomely parts haue more comelinesse.

24 For our comely members need it not: but God hath tempered the body together, having given the more honour to that part which lacked.

25 That there should be no strife in the body: but that the members should haue the same care one for another.

26 And if one member suffer, all the members suffer with it. If one member be honoured, all the members rejoyce with it.

27 Ye are the body of Christ, and members in part.

*28 * And God hath ordained some in the Church, first Apostles, secondarily Prophets, thirdly, Teachers, then, them that doe miracles: after that, the gifts of healing, helpers, governours, || diversities of tongues.* Eph.4.11. || Or, kindes.

29 Are all Apostles? are all Prophets? are all Teachers? are all doers of miracles?

30 Haue all the gift of healing? do all speake with tongues? doe all interpret?

31 Covet after the best gifts: And yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XII.

Rhem. 1. 8 The word of wisedome.] All these gifts be those which the learned call Gratias gratis datas: which be bestowed often even upon ill livers, which haue not the other graces of God, whereby their persons should be gratefull, just, and holy in his sight.

Fulk. 1. This is an unlearned distinction of the Popish learned, which sheweth no difference betweene things of divers natures. For all Gods graces be freely given, as well those that are bestowed upon the elect, as upon the reprobate: neither are men gratefull, just, and holy in Gods sight by any gifts of justice or holinesse inherent, but onely by Iesus Christ, Ephe.1.6. Eph.2.7.8. Dividing to every man as he will (saith Ambrose) He saith as he will, not as it is due. Exhort. ad virg. Iustice inherent.

Rhem. 2. 29 Are all miracles?] S. Augustine ep. 137. giveth the same reason, why miracles and cures be done at the memories or bodies of some Saints more then at others: and by the same Saints in one place of their memories rather then at other places.

Fulk. 2. S. Augustine saith not, that any miracles are done by any Saints at any place of their memories, but by God where it pleaseth him. Is not Africa (saith he) full of the bodies of the holy Martyrs? And yet we know not that any such things are done here in any place. For as that which the Apostle saith: All the Saints haue not the gifts of healing, neither haue all the discerning of spirits: so neither in all memories of the Saints it is not his will that these things should be done, which divideth his owne to every man as he will. Therefore, when it is certaine that God hath or doth worke miracles in any place, we must [illegible]t call him to account, why he doth not the same in all places. But hereof it followeth not, that fained and [illegible]g miracles of Popery be brought by God or by his Saints: but seeing they tend to maintaine Heresie and Id[illegible]ry, we must say still with S. Augustine, Away with these fained miracles of lying men, or wonders wrought by de[illegible]ving devils, De vni. Eccl. c.16. Miracles.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XII.

Rhem. 3. 9 Faith in the same.] This faith is not another in substance then the common faith in Christ, but is of another accidentall quality onely, that is, of more fervor, devoti[illegible], zeale, and confident trust, specially for doing of miracles. Zealous faith.

Fulk. 3. Faith of doing miracles may be in wicked me[illegible] as you confesse sect. 1. therefore differeth in substance from justifying faith, which worketh by love. He ca[illegible] faith here, not this common faith, but that whereof he speaketh a little after: If I haue all faith, so that I can remoove mountaines. Theodoret upon this place. Photius and Oecumenius say, Abusively he calleth the effect by the name of the thing.

Rhem. 15 If the foot.] The Church is of exceeding great distinction of members, gifts, orders, and offices: yet of great concord, concurrence, mutuall communion and participation in all actions of her members among themselves, and with Christ the head of the body. Vnity.

24 Schisme in the body.] As Charity and unity of spirit is the proper band and weale of the common Body: so is division or Schisme, which is the interruption of peace and mutuall society betweene the parts of the same, the speciall plague of the Church, and as odious to God as rebellion to the temporall Soveraigne. Schisme.

CHAP. XIII.

That above all other gifts they should seeke after Charity: as that without which nothing profiteth, 4. and which doth all as is to be done; and remaineth also in heaven.

The Epistle, upon the Sunday of Quinquagesime, called Shrovesunday.

IF I speake with the tongues of men and of Angels, and haue || not charity: I am become as sounding Brasse, or a tinkling Cymball.

2 And if I should haue prophecy, and knew all mysteries, and all knowledge; and if I should ‡ haue all faith, so that I could remoove mountaines, and haue no charity, I am nothing.

3 And if I should distribute all my goods to be meat for the poore, and if I should || deliver my body so that I burne, and haue not charity, it doth profit me nothing.

4 Charity is patient, is benigne: Charity envieth not, dealeth not perversely: is not puffed up,

5 Is not ambitious, seeketh not her owne, is not provoked to anger, thinketh not evill:

6 Rejoyceth not upon iniquity, but rejoyceth with the truth:

7 Suffereth all things, beleeveth all things, hopeth all things, beareth all things.

8 Charity never falleth away: whether prophecies shall be made void, or tongues shall cease, or knowledge shall be destroyed.

9 For in part we know, and in part we prophesie.

THough I speake with the tongues of men, and of Angels, and haue not charity, I am as sounding brasse, or as a tinckling Cymball.

2 And though I haue prophecy, and understand all secrets, and all knowledge: yea if I haue all faith, so that I can remoove mountaines, and haue not charity, I am nothing.

3 And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poore, and though I give my body that I should be burned, and haue not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 Charity suffereth long, and is courteous: Charity envieth not, charity doth not frowardly, † swelleth not, † Or, is not puft up.

5 Dealeth not dishonestly, seeketh not her owne, is not bitter, thinketh not evill,

6 Rejoyceth not in iniquity, but rejoyceth in the truth:

7 Suffereth all things, beleeveth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

8 Though that prophecyings faile, either tongues cease, or knowledge vanish away, yet charity falleth never away.

9 For our knowledge is † unperfect, and our prophecying is unperfect; † Or, in part.

10 But ‡ when that ſhall come that is perfect, that ſhall be made voide that is in part.

11 When I was a little one, I ſpake as a little one, I underſtood as a little one, I thought as a little one. But when I was made a man, I did away the things that belonged to a little one.

12 We ſee now by a glaſſe in a darke ſort: but then face to face. Now I know in part: but then I ſhall know as alſo I am knowne.

13 And now there remaine Faith, Hope, Charity, ‖ theſe three; but the † greater of theſe is Charity.

10 But when that [illegible] is come, then that which is unperfect [illegible] done away.

11 When I was a child, I [illegible] I under[illegible] a child, I imag[illegible]: but as ſo[illegible] a man, I put away [illegible]neſſe.

12 Now we ſee in a glaſſe, even in a darke ſpeaking: but then ſhall wee ſee face to face. Now I [illegible] unperfectly: but then ſhall I know, even as I am knowne.

13 Now abideth Faith, Hope, and Charity, theſe three, but the chiefe of theſe is Charity.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XIII.

RHEM. 1. 2 Haue all faith.] This prooveth that faith is nothing worth to ſalvation without workes, and that there may be true faith without charity.

FVLK. 1. That faith which is void of good workes, is nothing worth unto ſalvation. Yet a man is iuſtified by faith without workes, but yet by ſuch a faith as worketh by loue. *Rom.*3. for a iuſtifying faith cannot be without charity. Good life (ſaith S. Auguſtine) is inſeparable from faith, which worketh by loue, De fide & oper. cap.23. Saint Ambroſe upon this text ſaith: To worke wonders, and to caſt out divels by faith, is nothing worth, except a man be an earneſt follower of good converſation. Leo ſpeaking of true faith and charity, ſaith, Tunc verum nomen ac vere eſt fructus amborum cum inſolubilis manet utriuſque connexio, ubi enim non ſimul fuerint ſimul deſinunt. Sine fide non diligitur, & ſine dilectione non creditur, Ser.7. de quadr. Gennadius apud Oecumenium, ſaith: He doth not now ſpeake of that faith of the beleevers which is common and generall: but of the gift of faith. For there was a certaine kind of gifts, that was called by the ſame name of faith, which was given to many at that time, for the manifeſtation of the preſence of this ſpirit. Of this gift alſo, our Lord ſaith in the Goſpel, If you ſhall haue faith as a graine of Muſtard ſeed, you ſhall ſay to the mountaine, Remoue and be caſt into the Sea, and it ſhall be done unto you. For our Lord ſpake not of the common faith, to them as unbeleevers, but his ſpeech was to his Diſciples: that is, if you ſhall haue the gift of faith: And that which our Lord in the Goſpel ſaid to be the greateſt, namely, to remoove mountaines, the Apoſtle ſaith, is nothing without charity.

Iuſtification by faith onely.

RHEM. 2 10 When that ſhall come.] By this text S. Auguſtine lib.22.Civ.c.29. prooveth, that the Saints in heaven haue more perfect knowledge of our affaires heere, then they had when they lived heere.

FVLK. 2 S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh in that place never a word of the Saints that are in heaven knowing our affaires here in earth, but of the perfect knowledge that all the Saints ſhall haue after the reſurrection. If the Prophet Eliſeus being abſent in body, ſaw his ſervant Giezi taking the gifts which Naaman the Syrian, whom the Prophet had cleanſed from his leproſie, gaue him, which the wicked ſervant thought to haue done cloſely, becauſe his maſter ſaw him not: How much more in the ſpirituall body (ſaith he) the Saints ſhall ſee all things, not onely if they ſhall ſhut their eyes, but alſo if they be abſent in body. For then ſhall that be perfect whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, &c. Therefore either ignorance or impudency was the author of this note.

Saints in heaven know not our affaires.

RHEM. 3 13 Greater of theſe.] Charity is of all the three the greateſt: How then doth onely faith, being inferiour to it, ſaue and iuſtifie, and not Charity?

FVLK. 3. Charity is greateſt, becauſe it is of longeſt continuance. Iuſtification is attributed to faith onely, becauſe faith onely doth apprehend the mercy of God promiſed in Chriſt, and not charity, though it continue, when faith and hope ceaſe, becauſe that is obtained which is beleeved and hoped. And that in reſpect of continuance, the Apoſtle ſaith, that charity is greateſt, the ancient Fathers doe confeſſe. Chryſoſtome ſaith upon this text. The greateſt of theſe is charity, namely in this point, becauſe they paſſe away: Charity continueth. In 1 Cor. Hom.34. Primaſius ſaith: In this preſent life there are three, in the life to come onely the loue of God and his Angels, and of all Saints. Therefore that is greater which is alwayes needfull, then that which ſhall once haue an end. S. Auguſtine De doct. Chriſt. lib.1. cap.39. ſaith upon this text. The greateſt of theſe is charity, becauſe when every one ſhall come to eternall life, the other two departing, charity ſhall continue more encreaſed, and more certaine.

Iuſtification by faith.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XIII.

RHEM. 1 Not Charity.] Without charity, both toward every particular perſon, and ſpecially toward the common body of the Church, none of all the gifts and graces of God be profitable.

Charity.

RHEM. 4. 3 Deliver my body.] Beleeue (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) aſſuredly, and hold for certaine, that no Heretike and Schiſmatike, that uniteth not himſelfe to the Catholike Church againe, how great almes ſoever he giue, yea or ſhed his blood for Chriſts name, can poſſibly be ſaved. For many Heretikes, by the cloke of Chriſts cauſe, deceiving the ſimple, ſuffer much. But where true faith is not, there is no juſtice, becauſe the juſt liveth by faith. So it is alſo of Schiſmatikes, becauſe where charity is not, juſtice can there be none: which if they had, they would never plucke in pieces the body of Chriſt, which is the Church. Auguſt. ſeu Fulg. de fid. ad Pet. c.39. So ſaith S. Auguſtine in divers places, not onely of Heretikes that died directly for defence of their hereſie, as the Anabaptiſts and Calviniſts now adaies doe: (for that is more damnable:) but of ſome Heretikes and Schiſmatikes that may die among the Heathen or Turkes for defence of truth or ſome Article of Chriſts religion. Auguſt. de verb. RHEM. 1. 4 Write them not.] Many great mysteries and truths are to be preserved in the Church, which for [illegible] to Gods providence, are not to be written in the booke of holy Scripture.

FULK. 1. The things which the seven thunders spake, John is commanded to seale up in silence, and not to utter. Therefore they were not Popish mysteries, to be delivered by tradition, but certaine secret judgements of God, which were revealed to John, for his confirmation in the faith, but not to be expressed for the instruction of the Church: for that it should not be profitable to make them knowne (saith Arethas) before the last times of the comming of Christ, seeing Daniel also was willed to seale up such sayings. Therefore this place will not serve, to give credit to your unwritten unites.

CHAP. XI.

Saint John measuring the Temple, 3 heareth of two witnesses that shall preach: 7 whom the beast ascending up from the sea shall kill, 11 but they rising againe ascend into heaven, 13 and seven thousand persons are slaine with an earth-quake: 15 And at the sound of the seventh Angel, the foure and twenty Seniors give praise and thanks to God.

AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and it was said to me, Arise, and measure the Temple of God, and the Altar, and them that adore in it.

2 But the court which is without the Temple, cast forth, and measure not that: because it is given to the Gentiles, and they shall tread under foot the holy city ‡ two and forty moneths.

3 And I will give to my two witnesses, and they shall prophesie a thousand two hundred sixty dayes, clothed with sackclothes.

4 These are the two olive trees and the two candlesticks that stand in the sight of the Lord of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire shall come forth out of their mouthes, and shall devoure their enemies; and if any man will hurt them: so must he be slaine.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it raine not in the dayes of their prophecie: and they have power over the waters to turne them into blood, and to strike the earth with all plague as often as they will.

‡ The great Antichrist.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony: the ‡ beast which ascended from the depth, shall make warre against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their bodies shall lie in the streets of the c great city, which is called spiritually Sodome and Ægypt, where their Lord also was crucified.

9 And there shall of tribes, and peoples, and tongues, and Gentiles, see their bodies for three dayes and a halfe: and they shall not suffer their bodies to be laid in monuments.

‡ The wicked rejoyce, when holy men are executed by the tyrants of the world, because their life and doctrine are burdenous unto them.

10 And the inhabitants of the earth ‡ shall bee glad upon them, and make merry: and shall send gifts one to another, because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt upon the earth.

11 And after three dayes and a halfe, the spirit of life from God entred into them. And they stood upon their feet, and great feare fell upon them that saw them.

12 And they heard a loud voyce from heaven, saying to them, Come up hither. And they went up into heaven in a cloud: and their enemies saw them.

4 These are two Olive trees, and two Candlestickes, standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouthes, and consumeth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, this wise must he be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it raine not in the dayes of their prophesying: and have power over waters to turne them to blood, and to smite the earth with all manner plagues, as often as they will.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XI.

RHEM. 1. 2 Two and forty.] Three yeeres and a halfe; which is the time of Antichriſts reigne and perſecution.

The time of Antichriſts reigne.

FULK. 1. That is a ſhort time, in compariſon of the eternall reigne of Chriſt. The ſame ſeaſon is called a time, and times, and halfe a time, Chap. 12. 14. and in this Chapter 1260 dayes, and three dayes and an halfe. Therefore it cannot be meant of three common yeeres and an halfe, more then of three uſuall dayes and an halfe. But it is numbred by moneths and dayes, for the comfort of the faithfull, that they may bee aſſured it is limited by God, and but ſhort in compariſon of the everlaſting kingdome of Chriſt. Hentenius, a Papiſt, in his Preface to his tranſlation of Arethas, ſaith: It is not poſſible, that Antichriſt in ſo ſhort a time of three common yeeres and an halfe, ſhould obtaine ſo many kingdomes and provinces. Yet our Remiſh Papiſts force not of impoſſibilities, ſo they might have an argument to prove, that the Pope is not Antichriſt.

RHEM. 2 8 Great city, which.] He meaneth Hieruſalem, named Sodome and Egypt, for the imitation of them in wickedneſſe. So that we ſee his chiefe reigne ſhall be there, though his tyranny may extend to all places of the world.

Rome the City of Antichriſt.

FULK. 2 Hieruſalem is not the city of Antichriſt, but Rome, by authority of which city Chriſt himſelfe (as you confeſſe, Chap. 17. Sect. 9.) was put to death, ſo alſo he is often crucified in his members. S. Hierome, Epiſt. 17. contendeth, that this place cannot be underſtood of Hieruſalem in Iewry. The Comment in S. Auguſtine, interpreteth the ſtreets of the great city, the midſt of the Church. Beda the city of the ungodly, but all the ancient Interpreters agree, that the chiefe raigne of Antichriſt ſhall be at Rome.

RHEM. 3 18 To render reward.] To repay the hire or wages (for ſo both the Greek word and the Latine ſignifie) due to holy men, proveth againſt the Proteſtants, that they did truly merit the ſame in this life.

Merit.

FULK. 3 God repayeth the reward which he promiſeth of his meere mercy, not which men deſerve by the merit of their workes. For all his Saints are juſtified freely by his grace, through faith, without reſpect of the merit of their workes, Rom. 3. 24. There is no hire (ſaith Hilarie) of a gift, becauſe it is due of the works, but God hath given a free reward to all men, by juſtification of faith, In Mat. chap. 20.

Enoch and Elias yet alive, ſhall preach in the time of Antichriſt.

RHEM. 4 3 My two witneſſes.] Enoch and Elias, as it is commonly expounded; for, that Elias ſhall come againe before the latter day, it is a moſt notorious knowen thing (to uſe S. Auguſtines words) in the mouthes and hearts of faithfull men. See lib. 20. de Civit. FULK. 4 [illegible] Enoch and Elias, [illegible] before the [illegible] of Chriſt [illegible] Church [illegible] S. Auguſtines words. [illegible] before Moſes, the other in [illegible] And concerning the [illegible] hath no ground in the Scripture. For the Prophecie of Malachie [illegible] confeſſeth that there is no mention of Enoch in the Scripture, [illegible] his comming againe. And where you ſay, that they live in Paradiſe, [illegible] upon this text, Many thinke this to be Micheas, or Heliſeus, or Moſes, but they are both dead, but the death of Ieremie is not found. For all our Ancients have delivered by [illegible] what credit is to be given to ancient tradition, without the Scripture, and how [illegible] S. Auguſtine ſaith not, it is a moſt [illegible] thing. But [illegible] the day of judgement. Ticonius [illegible] It is a matter they [illegible] commonly ſaid and thought of the faithfull. But that opinion true or falſe, pertai[illegible] Iewes are not converted, but Antichriſt [illegible] the teſtimony of [illegible] place is the ſame opinion of Elias to come before the judgement. In the third place he ſaith: [illegible] and Elias remaine in their mortall body: but of their comming to preach [illegible] ſome alſo thinketh they are not dead: but of their comming [illegible] nothing [illegible] But in [illegible] he ſaith the remnant of the Iewes ſhall beleeve in the end [illegible] in hand. Ambroſe indeed underſtandeth theſe witneſſes to be Enoch and Elias [illegible] commendeth that they muſt be Moſes and Elias. And theſe two Prophets (ſaith he) we underſtand to be thoſe that ſhall [illegible] comming, whom the Apocalypſe of Iohn ſaith, that they ſhall be ſlaine by Antichriſt, although there be divers opinions of many men, either of Enoch, or of Ieremie, becauſe that one of them [illegible] die as Elias. But we cannot [illegible] with the opinion of [illegible] the faith of the truth which the Lord hath revealed to the three [illegible] witneſſes, neither thinke that any other ſhall come, than they which were ſeene [illegible] for the confirmation of faith. You ſee what certaine judgement is to be taken of the authority and opinions of the Fathers, without the Scripture. On the other ſide, Proſper maketh no queſtion, but they ſhall be Enoch and Elias. Likewiſe Gregorie, and Beda in Mar. 9. ſpeaketh of the comming againe of Elias, but never a word of Enoch. Chryſoſtome alſo thinketh, that Elias ſhall come againe to convert the Iewes: but of Enoch he is ſo farre from affirming that he ſhall come, that he condemneth it of curioſity, to enquire what is become of him, or to what end he was tranſlated, in ep. ad Heb. hom. 22. in Gen. hom. 21. The later Writers, Oecumenius and Theophylact, follow Chryſoſtome for Elias, but of Enoch they ſay nothing. Damaſcen will have them both. Thus you ſee the matter is not ſo cleare in the opinion of antiquity, as the Papiſts would have it ſeeme by the multitude of quotations.

But you will prove that they be alive in Paradiſe: But what place is Paradiſe but heaven? as the Apoſtle declareth, 2 Cor. 12. 2. & 4. for earthly Paradiſe, either by the Flood, or before was defaced. Now, what doctrine it is to affirme, that men in mortall bodies aſcended into heaven, and that before the Aſcenſion of Chriſt, I leave it to the learned to conſider. As for your proofes, are like your doctrine: for firſt Eccleſiaſticus is no Canonicall Scripture, neither if it were, is it truly tranſlated in your vulgar Latine text: for in the Greeke there is no mention of Paradiſe. It is evident indeed, that Elias was taken up alive, but not that he continueth alive. Yea becauſe it is ſaid expreſly, that he was taken up into heaven, it is certaine that his body was not carried into heaven: for Chriſt was the firſt, that in his whole humanity aſcended into heaven. That which Irenæus ſaith cannot be true, becauſe he ſaith they were tranſlated into the earthly Paradiſe, where Adam was firſt placed, and that S. Paul was rapt up into that Paradiſe, who ſaith expreſly, that he was rapt into the third heaven, which is figuratively called Paradiſe, becauſe it is a place of felicity, as was that earthly garden which God planted in Eden. The teſtimony of the Ancients, which he alledgeth for a proofe, is no better then the like tradition of theirs, that our Saviour Chriſt was about 50 yeres of age, l. 2. c. 39. Iuſtin, or whoſoever was author of thoſe queſtions, thinketh not only Enoch & Elias to be alive, but alſo all thoſe whoſe bodies aroſe at the reſurrection of Chriſt, to be changed together at his comming: by which opinion, he overthroweth your opinion, who hold that they ſhall be ſlaine by Antichriſt. The teſtimonies of Scripture which you alledge, are altogether againſt you. For Malachie ſpeaketh but of one comming of Elias, which the Angel, Luk. 1. 17. and Chriſt himſelfe, Mat. 11. 14. & 17. 12. doth interpret of Iohn Baptiſt. So doth Hierome upon Malachie, aſcribing the opinion of his comming in the fleſh to Iewes and Iewiſh heretikes.

And that which deceived Chryſoſtome, and other of the ancient Fathers, to thinke that he ſhould come in perſon, was the corrupt tranſlation of the Septuagint, where in ſtead of Elias the Prophet (as it is in the Hebrew) they did reade Elias the Theſbite: upon which addition, S. Chryſoſtome groundeth that opinion in Mat. hom. 58. As though the Prophet muſt needs meane Elias in perſon, and not in ſpirit and office onely, becauſe he nameth his countrey, whereas Malachie hath not that addition, the Theſbite: neither in the Hebrew, nor in the vulgar Latine, nor in S. Hieromes tranſlation. Of the former place of Eccleſiaſticus, I have ſpoken before. In the latter he muſt be underſtood according to the Prophecie of Malachie, expounded of Iohn the Baptiſt, or elſe he hath no ground of his ſaying. Hyppolitus hath more fables then that of Enoch & Elias: for he holdeth that Antichriſt ſhall be a devill incarnate, and that not onely Enoch and Elias, but Iohn the Divine, the Writer of this Apocalypſe, ſhall alſo come with them before the ſecond comming of Chriſt. Let the indifferent Reader therefore judge, whether we be contentious and rebellious, becauſe we yeeld not to theſe various, inconſtant, and fabulous opinions of many of the ancient Fathers. Or rather whether you would not make the world ſecure of the ſecond comming of Chriſt, which conceive ſuch fantaſies, that it might be thought Antichriſt is not yet come.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XII.

RHEM. 1 14. A time and times.] This often infinuation that Antichrists reigne shall be but three yeeres and a halfe (Dan. 7, 25. Apoc. 11, 2, 3, and in this chap. v. 6. & 13, 5.) [illegible], which hath ruled so many ages.

FULK. 1. You may as well say that Antichrists reigne shall be but three dayes and an halfe. But the whole comprehending generally all the persecution that Satan shall raise against the Church, from the Ascension of Christ to the end, doth manifestly [illegible] of three common yeeres and an halfe [illegible] the holy Ghost [illegible] of halfe a mysticall or propheticall weeke, the measure whereof is knowne onely to God. And therefore it is sometime numbred by 1260. dayes, sometime by 42 moneths, sometime by three dayes and an halfe, [illegible] indefinitely a time and times, and halfe a time.

The time of Antichrists reigne.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XII.

RHEM. 2 [illegible] The woman fled.] The great persecution that the Church shall flee from, is in the time of Antichrist, and shall endure but three yeeres and a halfe, as is noted v. 14. in the margent. In which time for all that, she shall not want our Lords protection, nor true Pastors, nor be so secret, but all faithfull men shall know and follow her: [illegible] shee decay, erre in faith, or degenerate and follow Antichrist, as [illegible] the Church Catholike [illegible] in England in this time of persecution, because it hath no publike [illegible] of [illegible] may be said to be fled into the desert, yet is it neither unknowne to the faithfull that follow it, nor the enemies that persecute it: as the bad company that the Protestants talke of, [illegible] to their friends nor foes, because there was indeed none such for many ages together. And this is true; if we take this flight for a very corporall retiring into wildernesse. Where indeed it may be, and is of many expounded, to be a spirituall flight, by forsaking the joyes and solaces of the world, and giving her selfe to contemplation and penance, during the time of persecution under Antichrist. And by enlarging the sense, it may also very well signifie the desolation and afflictions that the Church suffereth and hath suffered from time to time in this wildernesse of the world, by all the forerunners and ministers of Antichrist, tyrants and heretikes.

The Church shall flee as to a desert in Antichrists time, but not decay or be unknowne, no nor for so short a time.

FULK. 2 The Author of the Comment in S. Augustine saith, that the time mentioned in vers. 14. signifieth a yeere and an hundred yeeres, by whose accompt, the persecution of Antichrist should be three hundred and fifty yeeres. And indeed from the time of the chasing away of the Church into desert places, when the Pope by cruell warres and tyranny, banished the faithfull whom he persecuted by the names of Waldenses, Albigenses, Pauperes de Lugduno, Picardi, &c. unto the time that the Gospel began againe to be openly professed by Wicleffe and others, it is about the time of 350 yeeres [illegible] not rashly judge. Beda saith: By the number of these dayes which maketh three yeeres and an halfe, the holy Ghost comprehendeth all the times of Christianitie, because Christ whose body the Church is, preached so long in the flesh. And upon vers. 14. he saith: He designeth the whole time of the Church [illegible] before in the number of dayes. Ambrosius Ansbertus saith: The number of 1260. dayes, in which the woman tarieth and is fed in the wildernesse, [illegible] the course of preaching or end of persecution, in which the old enemy [illegible] against the holy Church by [illegible] which he shall possesse: [illegible] comprehendeth the beginning either of the preaching or of the persecution in which Christ began to preach and suffer: yea the whole time of this present life which is [illegible] the beginning and the end. Rupertus [illegible] these dayes for so long time, as the Church being a stranger in the world, suffereth persecution. Haymo saith, it may be referred unto all the time from the Ascension of Christ to the end of the world. But in this desert you say, the true Church shall not decay, &c. nor faile, or degenerate and follow Antichrist. No verely, the true Church of Gods elect, shall alwaies continue constant and sound in faith, in all articles necessary to salvation: neither doe we ever say otherwise. But the greatest part of the visible Church shall be seduced by Antichrist, as it is manifest here, and 2 Thess. 2. Where you say, the bad company that we speake of, was for some worldes knowen neither to their friends nor foes. It is false, for to the true members of the church they were knowen, though not alwaies to their enemies. For this flight into the wildernesse, is granted to the Church for her preservation from the tyranny of Antichrist, who would not cease to persecute her, if she were within his reach and knowledge. But that there were such companies, it is manifest by this, that they have bin openly knowen in those daies to have had their communitie in Moravia, Bohemia, Calabria, Piemont, and other places. If you follow other allegoricall senses, you must be enforced to give over your fantasie of three vulgar yeeres and an halfe, to be the time of Antichrists raigne, which yet before you make to be so plaine, that you count us exceedingly blind with malice that will not see it.

The time of Antichrists persecution.

RHEM. 3 7. A great battell.] In the Church there is a perpetuall combat betwixt S. Michael (protector of the Church militant as he was sometimes of the Iewes Synagogue, Dan. 10, 21.) and his Angels, and the divell and his ministers. The perfect victory over whom, shall be at the judgement. Marke here also the cause why S. Michael is commonly painted fighting with a dragon.

18 Here is wiſedome, let him that hath wit, count the number of the beaſt: For it is the number of a man, and his number is ſix hundred threeſcore and ſix.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XIII.

Rhem. 1 3 In admiration.] They that now follow the ſimpleſt and groſeſt heretikes that ever were without ſeeing miracles, would then much more follow this great ſeducer working miracles.

Fulk. 1 This is the univerſality that the Papiſts brag of, when all the earth is in admiration of the lying ſignes and falſe miracles of Antichriſt: whereas the doctrine of the Goſpel, being confirmed by the miracles of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, hath no need of any other miracles.

Popiſh univerſality and miracles.

Rhem. 2 6 To blaſpheme his name.] No heretikes ever liker Antichriſt then theſe in our dayes, ſpecially in blaſphemies againſt Gods Church, Sacraments, Saints, Miniſters, and all ſacred things.

Fulke. 2 The whole religion of Popery, is nothing but blaſphemy againſt God and Chriſt, and his Church, and the bleſſed Angels and Saints, that dwell in heaven: while they teach that God onely doth not properly remit ſins, is not onely to be ſerved, Chriſt is not one onely high Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech. The Maſſe is a ſacrifice propitiatory for the quicke and the dead, the Angels and Saints are mediatours and advocates, the Virgine Mary may command her Sonne by her motherly authority. The blood of Thomas is meritorious of the kingdome of heaven, for all men that will pray to aſcend thither by it, with innumerable like blaſphemies. And the true Church of God that aſcribeth all honour and glory of our ſalvation to God onely and Chriſt our Saviour, the Antichriſtians blaſpheme to be hereticall, and perſecute with fire and ſword.

The blaſphemies of Antichriſt.

Rhem. 3 11 Another beaſt.] Another falſe prophet inferiour to Antichriſt, ſhall worke wonders alſo, but all referred to the honour of his maſter Antichriſt. So doth Calvine and other Arch-heretikes pervert the world to the honour of Antichriſt, and ſo doe their ſcholers alſo for the honour of them.

Fulk. 3 You know that Calvine and the reſt, whom you blaſphemouſly call Arch-heretikes, doe worke no miracles, therefore they cannot be this falſe prophet.

Calvine no falſe prophet.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIII.

Rhem. 4 1 A beaſt comming up.] This beaſt is the univerſall company of the wicked, whoſe head is Antichriſt: and the ſame is called (Apoc. 17.) the whore of Babylon. The ſeven heads be expounded (Apoc. 17.) ſeven Kings: five before Chriſt, one preſent, and one to come. The ten hornes be alſo there expounded to be ten Kings that ſhall reigne a ſhort while after Antichriſt. The Dragon is the Devill, by whoſe power the whore, or beaſt, or Antichriſt worketh: for in the words following (verſ. 3. & 4.) Antichriſt is called the beaſt, to whom the Dragon, that is, the Devill giveth that power of feined miracles; and as we adore God for giving power to Chriſt and his followers, ſo they ſhall adore the Devill for aſſiſting Antichriſt and giving him power.

Many myſteries expounded.

Fulk. 4 This beaſt (by conſent of the moſt ancient Interpreters, and other Fathers of the Primitive Church) is the Romane Empire, as it is enemy to God and Chriſt: one of the heads whereof is Antichriſt. The whore of Babylon, Apoc. 17. is the city of Rome, upholden by this beaſt, where the ſeven heads be alſo expounded to be ſeven hils upon which the woman ſitteth, which woman is there alſo ſaid to be the great city, which hath dominion over the kings of the earth, which can be none other but the city of Rome: For Rome onely had the kingdome at that time. Theſe ſeven kings are the ſeven principall heads of governement of the Romane Empire, whereof five were aboliſhed before Chriſt, one, (which was of the heathen Emperours) was preſent, and the ſeventh then to come is the Pope, which is Antichriſt. They that worſhip Antichriſt, worſhip the devill, not in their intent (for Antichriſt boaſteth himſelfe to be God) but becauſe they worſhip him who hath his power of the devill, and ſerveth the devill in deceiving the world.

6 14 The image of the beast.] They that now refuse to worship C[illegible] and then worship Antichrists:
And we may note here, that as the making or honouring of this image was [illegible] the honour of Antichrist, but wholly for it, as also the image of Nabuchodonosor [illegible] the worship thereof was altogether for the honour of himselfe: so is the worship of Christs image, the honour of Christ himselfe, and not against him, as Protestants madly imagine.

The honour of Christs image is for the honour of Christ.

6 They that refuse to worship Christs images, because God hath forbidden to worship any images, Exod. 20.
will never worship the image of Antichrist: no though it be not a dead image, but have a spirit and doe speake, as the Popes Legates and Deputies in every country do, which be nothing else but the image of Antichrist. But it is a very strange argument that you make in defence of the worshipping of Christs image: As the making and honouring of Antichrists image, is not against the honour of Antichrist, but wholly for it, and likewise of Nebuchadnezzars image: so is the honour of Christs image, the honour of Christ himselfe, and not against him. A very good similitude, if Christ had commanded, and not forbidden such honour to be given unto him: You shall not doe so to the Lord your God, Deut. 4. 23. and Cap. 12. 4. Therefore you might better conclude. As the worship of Antichrists image, and of Nebuchad-nezzars image is idolatry and false worship, so is the worshipping of the image of Christ, or any of his Saints. It is therefore a mad imagination of the Papists, to thinke that Christ will be worshipped with images, which he hath expresly forbidden to be made in any use of Religion. And if they were not made like to those things which they worship (as the Prophet denounceth to idolaters) that is void of sense and understanding, (as their images be which they worship) they would not for shame defend such grosse idolatry, to be true worship of God.

Worshipping of Images.

RHEM. 7 17 The character or the name.] As belike for the perverse imitation of Christ, whose image (specially as on the Rhood or Crucifix) hee seeth honoured and exalted in every Church, hee will have his image adored (for that is Antichrist in emulation of like honour, adversary to Christ) so for that he seeth all true Christian men to beare the badge of his Crosse in their foreheads, hee likewise will force all his to have another marke, to abolish the signe of Christ. By the like emulation also and wicked opposition, hee will have his name and the letters thereof to be sacred, and to be worne in mens caps, or written in solemne places, and to bee worshipped, as the Name of IESVS is and ought to be among Christian men. And as the ineffable name of God was among the Iewes expressed by a certaine number of foure characters (therefore called Tetragrammaton*) so it seemeth the Apostle alludeth here to the number of Antichrists names.*

Antichrists triple honour against the honour of Christ.

יהוה

And here it is much to be noted, that the Protestants pulling downe the image of Christ out of all Churches, and his signe of the Crosse from mens foreheads, and taking away the honour and reverence of the Name IESVS, doe make roome for Antichrists image, and marke, and name. And when Christs images and ensignes or armes shall be abolished, and the idoll of Antichrist set up in stead thereof, as it is already begun: then is the abomination of desolation which was foretold by Daniel and our Saviour.

The Protestants by abolishing of Christs image, and crosse, and reverence to the name Iesus, make a ready way to the honour of Antichrist.

FULK. 7 Antichrist by his triple crowne, signifieth the triple honour he usurpeth against the honour of Christ. The triple honour of Christ, is that he is our onely soveraigne King, high Priest, and Prophet in religion. Of all which honour the Pope doth goe about to spoile him, while he challengeth that he himselfe is the supreame head of the universall Church, the highest Priest in the same, and the onely Prophet that cannot erre. In stead of which triple honour due to Christ onely, he assigneth him to a Rhood or Crucifix, a superstitious marke of his Crosse, and the wearing of the name of IESVS in mens caps, the power and vertue whereof he hath driven out of their hearts. So usurping the true honour of Christ, he scorneth him rather then honoureth him, with dead images, vaine signes, and superstitious abusing of his holy and mighty Name: as the souldiers did when they crowned him with thornes, clothed him in a robe of purple, and gave him a reed in his hand in stead of a Scepter. And yet the Pope alloweth none of these counterfeit honours to be proper to Christ. For every Saint hath his Image, many Saints have their characters, especially Peter his crosse keyes, and Mary hath her name commonly, where IESVS hath his. Finally, he brought the world to that state, that no man might have any worldly affaires therein, except he acknowledged the Popes crosse keyes, that is his authority, or his soveraignty, or himselfe to be a member of the Romish, Italian or Latine Church. In which is contained the number of his name. But the Protestants in defacing the idols, and abolishing the superstitious abuse of the signe of the Crosse, and name of IESVS, have taken away the derision and mockery of Antichrist, which is contrary to the word of God, that they might restore to Christ his true honour that is due to him, as King, Priest, and Prophet, according to the holy Scriptures.

The Pope spoileth Christ of his true honour.

RHEM. 8 18 Let him count.] Though God would not have it manifest beforehand to the world, who in particular this Antichrist should be: yet it pleased him to give such tokens of him, that when he commeth, the faithfull may easily take notice of him, according as it is written of the event of other Prophecies concerning our Saviour. That when it is come to passe, you may beleeve. In the meane time we must take heed that we judge not over rashly of Gods secrets, the holy writer here signifying, that it is a point of high understanding, illuminated extraordinarily by Gods Spirit, to reckon right and discipher truly beforehand, Antichrists name and person.

Antichrists name secret. Ioh. 14, 29.

FULK. 8 As rashnesse is alwayes condemned, so are we here exhorted with wisedome and understanding to count the number of the beast, which is not innumerable, but the number of a man, such as by mans understanding may be found out, especially when we see the Prophecie in all other notes of Antichrist, to be fulfilled in the Pope.

RHEM. 9 18 It is the number of a man.] A man he must be, and not a devill or spirit, as here it is cleare, and by S. Paul,
2 Thess. 2. where he is called, The man of sinne. Againe, he must be one particular person, and not a number, a succession or whole order of any degree of men: because his proper name, and the particular number, and the characters thereof be (though obscurely) insinuated. Which reproveth the wicked vanity of heretikes, that would have Christs owne Vicars, the Successors of his chiefe Apostle, yea the whole order of them for many ages together, to be this Antichrist. Who by his description here, & in the said Epistle to the Thessalonians, must be one speciall man, and of a particular proper name, as our Lord Iesus is. And whosoever he be, these Protestants undoubtedly are his precursors, for as they make his way by ridding away Christs images, crosse, and name, so they exceedingly promote the matter by taking away Christs chiefe Minister, that all may be plaine for Antichrist.

Antichrist shall be one speciall man and of a peculiar name.

If the Pope had beene Antichrist, and had beene revealed now a good many yeeres since, as these fellowes say he is to them, then the number of this name would agree to him, and the prophecie being now fulfilled, it would evidently appeare that he hath the name and number here noted. For (no doubt) when hee commeth, the name of the letters or number of his name which before is so hard to know, will be easie. For he will set up his name in every place, even as

The Pope cannot be Antichrist.

[illegible]

FULK. 9 [illegible] by the description in Daniel, and by the [illegible] But taking the beast as you doe, for the

[illegible] persons [illegible] more
[illegible] of the Romane Emperours [illegible] then Emperours of Rome [illegible]
[illegible] there is no way for you to avoid, [illegible]
[illegible] Pope of Rome is the [illegible]
That you say the Pope is Christs Vicar, and Successour of the chiefe of the Apostles, it is nothing but beggerly [illegible] whole matter in controversie. Neither doth the [illegible] of Antichrist, 2 Thes. 2. prove that [illegible] as I have shewed in that place. Neither doth the abolishing of idolatry and [illegible]
[illegible] is defaced, make way for Antichrist, who [illegible] invented such meanes to [illegible] honour [illegible] himselfe. But if the Pope had beene Antichrist (you say) and revealed so long agoe, we should have knowne the number of his name agreeing unto him. So we doe, and it was found out soone after this Prophecie was [illegible] as is testified by Irenæus. That Antichrist shall set up his name in every place, as you set up the [illegible] of Iesus, is a vaine phantasie, and hath no proofe out of the Scriptures. We have found indeed the whole order of Popes since they have usurped that Antichristian name, to be Antichrist, even by the judgement of Gregorie Bishop of Rome. And many of his Predecessours foreworkers toward his kingdome, especially those that forged the decree of the Bishop of Romes primacie, which was dis[illegible] in the Councell of Africa. Yet that all the rest from [illegible] were foreworkers toward the kingdome of Antichrist, we neither say nor thinke, for many of them doubtlesse were true Bishops, faithfull teachers, and constant Martyrs.

RHEM. 10 18 The number 666.] For as much as the ancient Expositors and other doe thinke (for certaine knowledge thereof no mortall man can have without an expresse revelation) that his name consisteth of so many, and such letters in Greeke as according to the manner of numbering by the alphabet make 666, and for as much as the letters making that number may be found in divers names both proper and common: (as S. Irenæus findeth them in Lateinos and Teitan, Hippolytus in [illegible], Aretas in Lampetis, and some of this age in Luderus, *which was Luthers name in the Almaine tongue) therefore we see there can be no certainty, and every one frameth and applieth the letters to his owne purpose.
And most absurd folly it is of the heretikes, to apply the word* Lateinos to the Pope: neither the whole order in common, nor ever any particular Pope being so called. And S. Iren. the first that observed it in that word, applied it to the Empire and state of the Romane Emperours, which then was heathen, and not to the Pope of his dayes, or after him: and yet preferred the word Teitan as more agreeable with this admonition, that it were a very perilous and presumptuous thing to define any certainty beforehand of that number and name. And truly whatsoever the Protestants presume herein of the Pope, we may boldly discharge Luther of that dignity. He is undoubtedly one of Antichrists precursors, but not Anti-christ himselfe.

All framing of letters to Antichrists [illegible] is uncertaine. Iren. li. 5. [illegible]

FULK. 10 [illegible] many names may be invented, whose letters make this number, but the Spirit of God speaketh [illegible] of fained names, nor biddeth men to faine names that have this number in it, for thereof can come nothing but uncertainty. But he willeth him to count the number of his name, which then the beast had: which name many of the faithfull before Irenæus time judged to be Lateinos. And Irenæus affirmeth that it was very like to be so indeed, because the most true kingdome hath that name: for they be Latines (saith he) which now doe raigne.
By which we note first, that his judgement was, that Antichrist should be no singular man, but an order and succession of men. Secondly, that the beast then raigned in the heathen Emperours which afterwards should raigne in Antichrist. The toy of Luthers name is worthy to be laughed at, seeing it is no hard matter to draw any mans name almost to it: if you may change the letters at your pleasure, and take upon you to know a mans name better then himselfe. But you say it is most absurd folly to apply the word Lateinos to the Pope. And why so I pray you? is not a Latine, as well as the Romane Emperour? Your reason is, that neither the whole order, nor any particular Pope was so called. For any particular Pope we strive not, but is not the Pope head of the Latine Church, as the Emperour was of the Latine Empire? Therefore if the Emperour might be called Lateinos (by Irenæus judgement) much more the Pope, who is so much a Latine, that he will allow no exercise of religion but in Latine. Which hath condemned the Greeke Church, because it will not be subject to his Latine law. Which hath caused all private men to pray in Latine. Which alloweth no translation of the Scripture as authenticall, but his Latine, no not the originall of Hebrew and Greeke, which he blasphemeth to be corrupted: and therefore must give place to his Latine. In so much that the setter forth of the Complutense Edition, in his Preface to it saith, He placed the Latine text betweene the Hebrew and the Greeke, as Christ betweene two theeves. Finally, which is so notorious that he is the head of the Latines, that the ignorant people know no other proper difference of his religion but that it is Latine. That Irenæus applied that name to the state of the heathen Emperours, it was right, for then the sixth King raigned: and Antichrist the seventh head of the Latine beast was not come, as he is now in the Pa-pacie. That he preferred the name Teitan, it was because he saw not the fulfilling of this Prophecie in the com-ming of Antichrist, the accomplishment whereof he willed men to wait for, [illegible] [illegible] now that Antichrist is come and discovered, we see plainly that Lateinos is his name, [illegible] of the beast signifying Romane, hath the same number, and it is Yea we see that [illegible] the Hebrew name [illegible] of the Greeke letters, fulfilleth the same number. The time of not by chance that [illegible] in the account [illegible] especially the compilation of the Latine Service [illegible] falling about that yeere of our Lord 666: [illegible] [illegible] in all regions subject to the Romish tyranny. What time also Constans the Emperour having removed the chiefe ornaments of the ancient Empire of Rome to Constantinople, left the city of Rome to the Popes pleasure, maketh for the better understanding of this number. That you discharge Luther of the dignity of Antichrist, he is much beholding to you. But if you will make him undoubtedly one of his Precursors, you must prove his doctrine against Popery, to be contrary to the Scriptures: but that you will never be able to doe.

CHAP. XIIII.

[illegible]

1 AND I looked, and behold [illegible] and with him an hun-dred [illegible] thousand, hauing his [illegible] and the name of his Father written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voyce from heauen, as the voyce of many waters, and as the voyce of great thunder: and the voyce which I heard, as of harpers harping on their harpes.

3 And they sung as it were a new song before the seat and before the foure beasts, and the Seniors, and no man could ‖ say the song, but those hundred forty foure thousand, that were brought from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women. For they are ‡ virgines. These follow the Lambe whithersoeuer he shall go. These were bought from among men, c the first fruits to God and the Lambe:

5 And in their mouth there was found no lie; for they are without spot before the Throne of God.

6 And I saw another Angel flying thorow the middes of heauen, hauing the eternall Gospel, to euangelize vnto them that sit vpon the earth, and vpon euerie nation, and tribe, and tongue, and people.

7 Saying with a loud voyce, Feare our Lord, and giue him honour, because the houre of his iudgement is come: and adore ye him * that made heauen and earth, the sea and all things that are in them, and the fountaines of waters.

Psal.145. Acts 14.

8 And another Angel followed, saying, * Fallen, fallen is that great ‡ Babylon, which of the wine of the wrath of her fornication made all nations to drinke.

Esay 21. Ier.51. Apoc.18.

9 And the third Angel followed them, saying, with a loude voyce, If any man adore the beast and his image, and receiue the character in his forehead, or in his hand:

10 ‡ He also shall drinke of the wine of the wrath of God, which is mingled with pure wine in the cup of his wrath, and shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the sight of the holy Angels, and before the sight of the Lambe.

‡ The great damnation that shall follow them that forsake Christ & the Church and worship Antichrist or his image.

11 And the smoake of their torments shall ascend for euer and euer: neither haue they rest day and night, which haue adored the beast, and his image, and if any man take the character of his name.

12 Here is the patience of Saints, which ‡ keepe the Commandements of God and the faith of IESVS.

13 b And

AND I looked, and loe, a Lambe stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundreth, forty, and foure thousand, ha-uing his fathers name written in their fore-heads.

2 And I heard a voyce from heauen, as the sound of many waters, and as the voyce of a great thunder: and I heard the voyce of Harpers harping with their harpes.

3 And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the foure beastes, and the Elders, and no man could learne that song, but the hundred and forty and foure thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women, for they are virgines: These are they which follow the Lambe whithersoeuer he goeth: These were redeemed from men, being the first fruits unto God, and to the Lambe.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without spot before the throne of God.

6 And I saw another Angel flee in the mids of heauen, hauing the euerlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to all nations, and kindreds, and tongues, and people,

*7 Saying with a loude voyce, * Feare God and giue glory to him, for the houre of his iudgement is come: and worship him that made heauen and earth, and the sea, and fountaines of waters.*

Act.14.15. psal.146.6.

*8 And there followed an other Angel, saying, * Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, for she made all nations drinke of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.*

Esa.21.9. Ier.51.8.

9 And the third Angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receiue his marke in his forehead, or in his hand:

10 The same shall drinke of the wine of the wrath of God, yea, of the pure wine which is powred in the cup of his wrath, and he shall be punished in fire and brimstone before the holy Angels, and before the Lambe.

11 And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up euermore: and they haue no rest day nor night, which worshippe the beast and his image, and whosoeuer receiueth the print of his name.

12 Here is the patience of the Saints: here are they that keepe the commandements of God, and the faith of Iesus.

b The Spirit [illegible] the dead.

13 b And I heard a voyce from heauen, [illegible] follow them.

13 [illegible] from their labours, and their workes follow them.

14 And I saw, and behold a white cloud, and vpon the cloude one sitting like to the Sonne of man, hauing on his head a crowne of gold, and in his hand a sharpe sickle.

15 And an other Angel came forth from the temple, crying with a loud voyce to him that sate vpon the cloud, * Thrust in thy sickle, and reape, because the houre is come to reape, for the haruest of the earth is dry.

Ioel 3. Mat.13.

16 And he that sate vpon the cloude, thrust his sickle into the earth, and the earth was reaped.

17 And an other Angel came forth from the Temple which is in heauen, himselfe also hauing a sharpe sickle.

18 And an other Angel came forth from the altar, which had power over the fire: and he cryed with a loud voyce to him that had the sharpe sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharpe sickle, and gather the clusters of the vineyard of the earth: because the grapes thereof be ripe.

19 And the Angel thrust his sharpe sickle into the earth, and gathered the vineyard of the earth, and cast it into the great c presse of the wrath of God:

c λῆνὸν lacum, fat, trough, lake.

20 And the presse was troden without the city, and blood came foorth out of the presse up to the horse bridles, for a thousand sixe hundred furlongs.

14 And I looked, and behold, a white cloud, and vpon the cloud one sitting like vnto the Son of man, hauing on his head a golden crowne, and in his hand a sharpe sickle.

*15 And another Angel came out of the temple, crying with a loude voyce to him that sate on the cloud, * Thrust in thy sickle and reap, for the time is come to reape, for the haruest of the earth is ‖ ripe.*

Ioel 3.

‖ Or, dried.

16 And he that sate on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.

17 And an other Angel came out of the temple, which is in heauen, hauing also a sharpe sickle.

18 And another Angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire, and cryed with a loud cry to him that had the sharpe sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharpe sickle, and gather the clusters of the vineyard of the earth, for her grapes are ripe.

19 And the Angel thrust in his sharpe sickle on the earth, and cut downe the vineyard of the earth, and cast it into the great winefat of the wrath of God.

20 And the winefat was troden without the city, and blood came out of the fat, euen vnto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and sixe hundred furlongs.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XIIII.

RHEM. 1. 4 Virgins.] One state of life is more excellent then another, and virgins for their purity passing the rest, and alwayes accompanying Christ according to the Churches Hymne out of this place. Quocunque pergis, virgines sequuntur, &c.

FVLK. 1. This place prooveth not one state of life more excellent then another, for all the elect are such virgins as be here spoken of, as you confesse in your note upon the first verse.

RHEM. 2. 4 The first fruits.] c This the Church applyeth to the holy Innocents that dyed first for Christ.

FVLK. 2. Your Church applyeth it fondly to those Innocents, which is common to all Saints.

RHEM. 4. 12 Keepe the.] Faith is not ynough to salvation, without fulfilling of Gods commandements.

FVLK. 4. Faith without works doth iustifie before God: yet the keeping of Gods commandements is necessary for them that shall be saved after they beleeve, though no man in this life fulfill them perfectly.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIIII.

RHEM. 5. 13 From henceforth now.] This being specially spoken of Martyrs (as not onely S. Augustine seemeth to take it, but the Calvinists themselves, translating in Domino, for our Lords cause) the Protestants have no reason to use the place against Purgatory or prayer for the departed, seeing the Catholike Church and all her children confesse that all Martyrs are straight after their death in blisse, and neede no prayers. Whereof this is S. Augustines knowen sentence, He doeth injury to the Martyr, that prayeth for the Martyr. Ser. 17. de verb. Apost. cap. 1. And agayne to this purpose he writeth most excellently, tract. 84. in Ioan. We keepe not a memory of Martyrs at our Lords table, as we do of other that rest in peace, that is, for the intent to pray for them, but rather that they may pray for us. But if we take the words generally for all deceased in state of grace, as it may be also, then we say that even such, though they be in purgatory and Gods chastisement in the next life, and neede our prayers, yet (according to the foresaid words of S. Augustine) do rest in peace: being discharged from the labours, afflictions, and persecutions of this world, and (which is more) from the daily dangers of sinne and damnation, and put into infallible securitie of eternall ioy with unspeakeable comfort of conscience, and such in deed are more happy and blessed then any living, who yet are usually in the Scriptures called blessed, even in the middes of the tribulations of this life. Whereby we see that these words, from henceforth they shall rest from their labours, may truely agree to them also that are in Purgatory, and so here is nothing proved against Purgatory. Lastly, this adverbe, amodo, in Latine, as in Greeke, ἀπάρτι, doth not properly [illegible] as though the Apoſtle had ſaid, [illegible] there is [illegible] with [illegible] Chriſts [illegible] to bliſſe, except the impediment be in themſelues. [illegible] that die now in this ſtate of grace, and of the new Teſtament, in compariſon of [illegible] good [illegible].

Limbus patrum.

FVLK. 5. Though Beza doth tranſlate it ſo as it ſeemeth to pertaine onely to Martyrs, yet the phraſe doth not neceſſarily [illegible], for then he would haue ſaid rather, which are killed or ſlaine for the Lord. And ſeeing to liue in the Lord, or in Chriſt Ieſus is a phraſe of Scripture, ſignifying to liue godly, and in the faith of Chriſt, 2 Tim 3.12. ſo to die in the Lord, ſignifieth to die in the faith of Chriſt, as 1 Theſ. 4.16. the dead in Chriſt, are called all that haue died in the faith of Chriſt before his comming to iudgement. Therefore they that die in the Lord, are not they onely that die for the Lords cauſe; but all that die in the faith of Chriſt, who are to be comforted againſt the troubles of this life, and the perſecution of Antichriſt, and not they onely whom Antichriſt ſhall kill and murther, but euen they alſo that for the Lords cauſe are killed all the day long, and accounted as ſheepe of the ſlaughter, which is the condition of all Gods children in this life. Seeing then this bleſſedneſſe pertaineth to all that die in the faith of Chriſt, there is no purgatory paines for them after this life, nor any need of prayers. By that which S. Auguſtine ſaith of the memory of Martyrs uſed in his time, if we compare it with the elder uſage, in which they offered ſacrifice for Patriarkes, Prophets, Martyrs, and all the elect departed: as appeareth by Cyp. Ep. 38. Epipha. hær. 75. and the old Liturgies: it is eaſie to gather, that the ancient memories and oblations for the dead, were neither Maſſes nor prayers, but praiſes and thankſgiving, though afterward by little and little, the ſuperſtition of praying for the dead, and the opinion of purgatory began to be receiued. And yet purgatory was not confirmed in Saint Auguſtines time, as it appeareth by his doubting thereof in ſome places. Euch. ad Laurent. cap. 69. De fide & oper. cap. 16. De octo Quæſt. Dulc. q. 1. and his utter denying of a third place: Hypognoſtic. lib. 5. De verb. Apoſt. ſer. 14. But ſeeing you confeſſe the place may be underſtood of all that die in the fauour of God; you ſay, that though they be in purgatory, they reſt in peace according to S. Auguſtines wordes. But thoſe wordes of S. Auguſtine doe confute your purgatory, where there is no more reſt then is in hell, if we beleeue your fables of the torments of purgatory, which tell us that they differ onely, in that the one is temporall, the other eternall. They that prayed for the dead therefore in Saint Auguſtines time, counted them to reſt in peace, yet to be delayed of their bleſſed felicity for a ſeaſon: as the Greekes doe at this day which deny your purgatory, yet pray for the dead. But (ſay you) they reſt in peace, becauſe they be diſcharged of the trouble of this life, &c. A miſerable reſt, to be diſcharged of the common afflictions of this life (whereof they ſuffer leaſt, whom you affirme to goe to purgatory) to be tormented with helliſh paines after this life, and that for ſo many thouſand yeeres as the Popes pardons are able, to releaſe them, and yet will not of his charity giue them, but couetouſly ſelleth them. But it is more (you ſay) that they are diſcharged from daily danger of ſinne and damnation, and put to infallible ſecurity of eternall joy, with unſpeakeable comfort of conſcience. Verely, the elect that are juſtified by faith, though they be ſubject to ſinne of infirmity, yet are out of danger of damnation, euen while they are in this life. Rom. 8.1. and of ſinning unto death, 1 Iohn 5.18. and as for the infallible certainty of eternall joy, with unſpeakable comfort of conſcience, they haue alſo in this life by the teſtimony of Gods ſpirit, Rom. 8.16. Therfore although their ſtate were ſuch in purgatory, as you ſay, yet it were worſe then the ſtate of this life, in which be all the good things that you can ſay of purgatory, and yet there is not that terrible flame and torment which you ſay is in Purgatory.

Purgatory. Prayers for the dead.

But ſeeing they be ſoules and not bodies that be in Purgatory: I marvaile how they can haue ſuch unſpeakeable comfort of minde, wherein they ſuffer ſuch untollerable torments, as you hold their paines to be, or what pains they can ſuffer in their ſoules, which enjoy unſpeakeable comfort of their conſciences. For the unſpeakeable comfort of conſcience, will overcome all other griefes of body or minde: and the diſcomfort of conſcience, is the greateſt torment that the ſoule can ſuffer. As for your fables of burning, and ſcalding, whipping, and racking, yea, freezing of ſoules in the yce, and ſuch like, whereof your Legends and promptuaries are full, you may tell to olde wiues on winter nights by the fire ſide: but men indued with knowledge and underſtanding, will not be perſwaded that the conſcience feeling unſpeakeable comfort (as you ſay,) can be tormented with any ſuch things. Seeing therefore the holy Ghoſt ſaith, that the dead in Chriſt doe reſt from their labours, it is certaine they feele no purgatory paines, which are infinitly greater then any labours of this life, if they be ſuch as you would make men beleeue they are. Laſtly (you ſay) the Adverbe doth not ſignifie properly from this time forward, but it noteth together the time paſt with the time preſent. Verely S. Iohn uſeth it to ſignifie from this time forward, not onely in this place, but alſo in his Goſpell, Iohn 1.51. Where Chriſt ſaith to Nathaniel, from henceforth, you ſhall ſee heaven open, &c. Where he doth not note and joyne the time paſt with the time preſent, but ſpeaketh altogether of the time to come: ſo he meaneth, that from their death forward they are bleſſed, and reſt from their labours. Amodo tum, id eſt, à tempore mortis requieſcere, docet Beda in hunc locum. But that the Apoſtle doeth not meane they ſhould be bleſſed, becauſe they goe not into Limbus patrum, it is manifeſt by this reaſon, that all that went to Limbus patrum by your owne confeſſion were bleſſed, were in Abrahams boſome, and in happy reſt, and reſted from their labours, therefore they enjoyed that happineſſe, which is heere pronounced of the dead in the Lord. That you ende Limbus patrum at Chriſts aſcenſion, and hold that Chriſt by deſcending into hell, delivered the Fathers from thence, I marvaile where you place them, for thoſe fourty daies that were betweene his reſurrection and aſcenſion.

And if any of the elect died in that meane time, how they were delivered out of Limbus patrum, except you faine that Chriſt deſcended to hell after his reſurrection. But you ſay further, that ſuch as haue died ſince Chriſts aſcenſion, are in caſe to goe ſtraight to bliſſe, except the impediment be in themſelues. But the ſpirit acknowledgeth no impediment of bliſſe of them that die in the Lord, but ſaith they are bleſſed, that are dead in the Lord. Whereas if there had bin any other impediment, he could not haue pronounced them abſolutely bleſſed: but ſhould haue added the exception of that impediment, which might keepe them from bleſſedneſſe. Which ſeeing the ſpirit neither heere, nor any where in the Scriptures hath declared, it is but a forged impediment, that taketh away the joy and comfort which the ſpirit giveth to all them that die in the Lord. This bleſſedneſſe therefore is abſolute, and not in compariſon, nor with exception: and the reaſon of their bleſſedneſſe is added, for that they reſt from their labours and troubles. And their works follow them unto everlaſting reward, according to Gods promiſe, by whoſe grace they haue bin juſtified by faith, exerciſed in good works, and ended their courſe in the Lord.

4 Who ſhall not feare thee, O Lord, and glorifie thy Name? For thou onely art holy: and all Gentiles ſhall come, and worſhip before thee: for thy judgements are made manifeſt.

5 And after that I looked, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the teſtimony was open in heaven.

6 And the ſeven Angels came out of the Temple, having the ſeven plagues, clothed in pure and bright linnen, and having their breaſts girded with golden girdles.

7 And one of the foure beaſtes gave unto the ſeven Angels ſeven golden vialles, full of the wrath of God which liveth for evermore.

8 And the Temple was full of the ſmoke of the glory of God, and of his power, and no man was able to enter into the Temple, till the ſeven plagues of the ſeven Angels were fulfilled.

The harlot Babylon clothed with divers ornaments, 6 and drunken of the blood of Martyrs, ſitteth upon a beaſt that hath ſeven heads and ten hornes: 7 all which things the Angel expoundeth.

AND there came one of the ſeven Angels, which had the ſeven vials, and ſpake with me, ſaying, Come, I will ſhew thee ‡ the damnation of the great harlot, which ſitteth upon b many waters,

3 And he tooke me away in ſpirit into the deſert. And I ſaw a woman ſitting upon a ſcarlet coloured beaſt, full of names of blaſphemie, having ſeven heads, and ten hornes.

4 And the woman was cloathed round about with purple and ſcarlet, and gilted with gold and precious ſtone, and pearles, having a golden cup in her hand, full of the abomination and filthineſſe of her fornication.

5 And in her forehead a name written, || Myſtery: || Babylon the great, mother of the fornications and the abominations of the earth.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XVII.

Rhem. 1 1. The damnation.] The finall damnation of the whole company of the reprobate, called here the great whore.

Fulk. 1. The finall damnation of the whole company of the reprobate is deſcribed, c. 20. 14. &c. Therefore the great whore in this Chap. ſignifieth the congregation of Antichriſt, the members whereof be all ſpirituall Citizens of Rome: their whole faith and religion, depending upon the See of Rome, and their head uſurping all his tyranny, by pretenſe of right of that city. A lively image of which viſion God made manifeſt to the whole world, when a whore was made head of the Romiſh Church, called Iohn the 7. and of ſome the 8. commonly Pope Ione. Which ſo wringeth the Papiſts at the heart, that they have no way to ſhift it of, but by impudent denying of that which is ſo notorious, even in their owne ſtories of their Popes lives.

Pope Ione a lively image of the whore of Babylon.

Rhem. 2. 8 Was, and is not.] It ſignifieth the ſhort reigne of Antichriſt, who is the chiefe horne or head of the beaſt.

Rhem. 3 12 Ten kings.] Some expound it of tenne ſmall kingdomes, into which the Roman Empire ſhall be divided, which ſhall all ſerve Antichriſt, both in his life and a little after.

Rom. 1.

Fulk. 4. In the end of S. Peters Epiſtle, for a poore helpe to proove that Peter was at Rome, you will needs have Babylon to be taken for Rome, whereunto indeed the conſent of ancient Writers, mooved with the light of this chapter, agreeth. Yet can it neither neceſſarily nor probably be gathered out of that Epiſtle, ſeeing there appeareth no reaſon why he ſhould not call it Rome, being that City whereof he was Biſhop, (if we believe the Papiſts) and which ſhould be the head of Chriſtian religion, and the Ieruſalem of Chriſtians, as the Papiſts affirme. There appeareth, I ſay, no reaſon why he ſhould refuſe to call it Rome: (eſpecially ſeeing there is no other teſtimony in the Acts of the Apoſtles, of his comming thither) and why he ſhould call it by the odious and infamous name of Babylon, which was the old enemy of the Church, and the ſeate of Antichriſt, rather then S. Paul writing to the Romanes, or to Timothie of his perſecution at Rome. Except perhaps by the ſpirit of prophecy he did foreſee how his ſucceſſours in that place ſhould abuſe his name, and the dignity of that See, to ſet up the kingdom of Antichriſt there: and for that cauſe would admoniſh the faithfull, that they ſhould take Rome not for the Ieruſalem of Chriſtians, but for Babylon the city of Antichriſt, which in time to come, was to be revealed in that place. But in this Chapter where Rome is moſt plainely deſcribed under the name of Babylon, the Papiſts by all meanes would avoid the application, becauſe they ſee manifeſtly, that Babylon which is Rome, is heere deſcribed to be the ſeat and city of Antichriſt.

Babylon is Rome

Theſe are the fellowes that in expoſition of the holy Scriptures, be led onely by their prejudicate opinions and hereſies to which without any reaſon and ſincerity, they draw all things. And if you marke their notes from the beginning to the end, you ſhall ſee that in very few they have any colour out of the words of the text, to conclude their notes, but for the moſt part they bring their prejudicate opinions to the text, and ſo draw not their notes out of the Scripture, but draw the Scriptures to their opinions, which can never be concluded out of the Scripture. As for Peters being at Rome, we affirme it cannot be prooved out of the Scriptures: yet for the conſent of ancient Writers, we yeeld unto it, as to a matter of ſtory, but no article of our faith. And if Peters being at Rome were as certaine out of the Scriptures as Pauls comming thither, and being there, it could make nothing for the Antichriſtian authority, which the Pope claimeth under colour of his being there. Who if he were there, was the chiefe Apoſtle of the circumciſion, and not of the Gentiles, as it is manifeſt by the holy Scripture, Galatians 2. And what prerogative ſo ever he had, being an Apoſtle, it ceaſed with the death of his perſon, as the Apoſtleſhip of Paul, and of the reſt: although the fruit of their labours in preaching and writing, ſhall continue to the end of the world.

But S. Augustine (you ſay) and Arethas expound not this place of Rome, but of the ſociety of the ungodly. Saint Augustine indeed ſaith often, that Babylon repreſenteth the ſociety of the ungodly, as Ieruſalem the Church of the faithfull, but yet he acknowledgeth the old City of Babylon in Aſſyria, to have beene the head City of that ſociety before Chriſt, and Rome to be the head City of the ſame ſociety ſince the comming of Chriſt: and this he doth commonly inſinuate in his bookes De civit. Dei, as I have ſhewed before. Among which this one teſtimony ſhall ſerve us to repeat: We ought where need is to make report of the Aſſyrian kings, that it may appeare how Babylon which was the first Rome, commeth [illegible] the world [illegible]

And the affaires which we must enter into this booke, for the [illegible] the earthly and [illegible] ly, we must take out of the Greekes and Latines, where Rome is [illegible] the second Babylon. You see therefore most evidently, that as old Babylon of the Assyrians was the head of the society of the [illegible], against the Church of Church of the Iewes: so Rome of the Latines, is the head of the society of the ungodly, against the Church of the Christians. For this cause he calleth Rome another Babylon, the second Babylon, the Westerne Babylon, the daughter of the elder Babylon.

Concerning Arethas, as he tooke his Commentary out of the ancient Greeke Writers, so he cannot dissemble their judgement, that by Babylon is signified old Rome. But being a Grecian living far from Italy, and out of the tyranny of the Romish Antichrist, and knowing more disorder in Constantinople, in his time, then he did in Rome, he declareth that in his opinion, it signifieth rather Constantinople, which was called new Rome, then old Rome in Italy. Yet because all things could not agree to Constantinople, he inclineth to that opinion, that Babylon signifieth the world of wicked men. Neverthelesse he confesseth: That other writers having discussed this Revelation, have interpreted it to be olde Rome, or an universall Kingdome, which extendeth to the second comming of our Lord. And in the end he leaveth it to the Readers discretion to take it for old Rome or new Rome, or the time of the life of Antichrist. Therefore neither S. Augustine nor Arethas deny it to be expounded of Rome, but rather confirme that most ancient exposition; which also is cleere by the text it selfe, verse 9. and 18. As for later Writers, that lived under the tyranny of the Romish Antichrist, were glad to wrest it any whither, rather then to incurre the hatred of Rome, by discyphering it, to be the City of Antichrist. Yet sometime there have not wanted they, that have bin bold to tell the Pope openly, that Rome is Babylon. For the Church of Leodium being miserably afflicted by Pope Paschall the second, doth thus write against him. In times past I was wont to inter- prete, that Peter by Babylon would signifie Rome, because Rome at that time was confused with Idolatry and all filthinesse. But now my sorrow doth interpret unto me, that Peter calling the Church gathered together in Babylon, foresaw (by spirit of prophecy) the confusion of dissention, wherewith the Church at this day is rent in peeces. As for the poore men of Lyons, whom they called by the name of Waldenses, Leonistæ, and such like opprobrious names, did plainely affirme, and constantly beleeue, that the Church of Rome is this whore of Babylon, and the Pope Antichrist, as Reinerius an inquisitor witnesseth of them, which lived more then three hundred yeeres agoe. And saith they were more pernicious to the Romish Church, then all other Sects, for three causes. The first, Because it hath bin of longer continuance. For some say [illegible] hath endured since the time of Silvester. Other say it hath endured since the Apostles time. The second cause is, because it is more generall. For there is almost no Land, in which this Sect doth not creepe. The third cause, for that all other sects doe bring in an horror with the beinousnesse of their blasphemies against God. This sect of the Leonists, hath a great shew of godlinesse, because they live justly before men, and beleeue all things well concerning God, and all the articles which are contained in the Creed, they blaspheme and hate only the Church of Rome. This is the testimony of a cruell enemy and persecutor of them, by which you may see, that Antichrist after he was disclosed, was acknowledged by many true Christians, to be that he is, although many also were deceived by him (though none of the Elect finally) to their destruction.

The Author of the Commentary in Saint Ambrose name, and Tertullian, you confesse to understand this Babylon to be Rome, to whom afterward you adde Saint Hierome: so might you have done Primasius, and Victorinus, elder then Saint Hierome, and Ambrosius Ansbertus, who did write about seven hundred yeares agoe. But you say Rome was Babylon when it was Heathen, as in Tertullians time, and when Saint Iohn wrote this. Very good, that which was Babylon in Saint Iohns time, is the same that he prophecieth to be the chiefe city and seate of Antichrist, as it is manifest to all that reade the Prophecy. But Rome was then Babylon, ergo, Rome is the City which he prophecieth that it should be the seate of Antichrist. But in the dayes of Victorinus, Ambrose, Augustine, Hierome, Primasius, &c. Rome was not heathen, yet of them taken to be Babylon, therefore of them taken to be the City where Antichrist (when he was revealed) should sit, and not a resemblance onely of it. Fucherius de spiritualibus formulis cap. 10. Babylon aut mundus, aut Roma in Apocalypsi: Et Babylon magna venit; &c. Paulinus Epist. 10. ad Severum, calleth Rome Babylon, and the daughter of Babylon. Epist. 31. Peteret Romæ latentes sibi illas in Apocalypsi minas non ti- mere, si talia semper edernnt [illegible] Senatoris tui, ad Alethium. But to apply that to the Romane Church, and Apostolike See, either now or then (you say) it is most blasphemous and foolish. Indeed to apply it to the true Romane Church, or the right succession in the Apostolike See, which was in the dayes of Saint Iohn, or in the time of the Christian Emperours, it were both folly and blasphemy: but to apply it to the Church of Rome, and counterfeit succession of Popes, it is wisedome and holinesse. For Saint Iohn prophecieth not onely of the cruelty of the terrene estate of that City, but also of the false prophets and Antichrist, which should usurpe an Ecclesiasticall state and dignity in that City. The Church of Rome in deede, was one thing, and Babylon in Rome was another thing, while the Church of God was at Rome, and was persecuted by the heathen Emperours. But when the Emperour of Rome was Christian, one of the heads of the beast was wounded to death, as c. 13. even that sixt head, which was the persecutor in the time of Saint Iohn. But this head was healed in Constantius the heretike Emperour, Valens, and Iulian the Apostata, &c. And still the seventh head was to come. But great preparation was made for him, while the Bishop of Rome grew beyond the limits of a Christian Ministery, into forraine and heathenish dominion, as Socrates testifieth, lib. 7. cap. 11.
in the time of the Christian Emperours. And when the mystery of iniquity wrought not so closely in that See, but the forgery of the Bishops was discovered in the Africane Councell, unto which they obtruded a coun-terfet Cannon of the Councell of Nice for their primacy. And while Leo Bishop of Rome will not obey the decree of the generall Councell of Chalcedon, which gave equall priviledge of dignity to the Bishop of Constantinople, which was new Rome, with those which the Church of Rome before had claimed as peculiar to her alone, sess. ultim. In the best and most Christian times of Rome therefore, when the head of the Heathen Empire was wounded to death, it was counted of the Ancient Fathers to be Babylon heere spoken of, because of the seventh head, which is the kingdome of Antichrist, that was looked for, to come in place of the sixth head, which was the terrene state of heathenish, hereticall, and persecuting Emperours. Therefore not the true Church in Rome, but Rome the persecutor of the Saints, first in the Heathen and hereticall Emperours, afterward in the proude Popes and the Kings subject to them, is Babylon the mother of all abhominations.
And so great is the force, and so manifest is the light of truth, that you are compelled to confesse in the end, that Antichrist shall have his seat in Rome, though upon the eleventh Chapter you were resolute of Ierusalem.
But that you would discharge the Pope and the Popish Church, to whom all the Prophecies doe so aptly agree to be Antichrist and his Citie, you labor in vaine. For the blasphemous pride and heresies of the Pope and his Church, with the most abhominable lives of both, will easily convince that hee is the seventh head of RHEM. 5. 5 Mystery.] S. Paul calleth this secret and close working of abhomination, the mystery of iniquity, 2. Thess. 2. and it is called a little after in this chap. ver. 7. the Sacrament (or mystery) of the woman, and it is also the marke of repro- bation and damnation.

Mysterie.

FVLK. 5. Beda sayth: It is declared that this name is mysticall, because it is discerned onely by wisedome. As for the marke of reprobation it is not openly carried in the forehead, where this mysticall name is written, which S. Hierome in-terpreteth to be that inscription, Roma æterna. To Rome eternall. So the heathen writers called the city commonly, Urbs æterna, The eternall city, supposing that the Empire of Rome should be eternall. Whom the Papists succeeded when the civill Empire was removed from thence, setting up the [illegible] of Antichrist under the colour of Peters See, and the eternall rocke of the Church, [illegible] hell shall not prevaile. So blasphemously perverting the most comfortable promise of [illegible] of his Catholike Church, builded upon the doctrine, faith, and confession of [illegible], to the Bishops personall succession of Peter in the pontificall See of Rome. Where [illegible] example of Peters life is to be found, nor any such power was ever in Peters person [illegible] which he had, descended not by succession to any other, more then Pauls prerogative, or that which [illegible], or that which some enjoyned in their Apostleship, did descend to any of the Bishops that afterward succeeded in those Churches which they planted or instructed.

The name of blasphemy.

Peters prerogatiue descended not.

RHEM. 6 6 Drunken of the blood.] It is plaine, that this woman signifieth the whole corps of all the persecutors that have and shall shedde so much blood of the just, of the Prophets, Apostles, and other Martyrs from the beginning of the world to the end. The Protestants foolishly expound it of Rome, for that there they put heretikes to death, and allow of their punishment in other countreys. But their blood is not called the blood of Saints, no more then the blood of theeves, mankillers, and other malefactours: for the shedding of which by order of justice, no Common wealth shall answere.

This woman signifieth all persecutors of Saints.

Putting heretikes to death, is not to shed the blood of Saints.

FVLK. 6. The great abundance of blood that Rome hath shed, first under the heathen Emperours, and then under the Antichristian Popes, more then ever Babylon of the East did powre out, is sufficient to make her drunke with the blood of the Saints. For which cruelty she deserveth as well as Ierusalem, that all the righteous blood that hath beene shedde since the blood of righteous Abel, should be imputed to her, and required at her hands. They whom you call heretikes for the most part, and that are in any great number put to death at Rome, and by the tyranny of the Romish Inquisition: are the true Christians and Saints heere spoken of, whose godly way you call Here-sie, as the persecuting Iewes called it in S. Paul. Act. 24. 14. Therefore though we allow the punishment of Heretikes, both in our owne countrey and in others, yet we abhor the cruelty of Antichrist and his Church, which condemneth true Christians, and murthereth them under colour of heretikes, himselfe and his false prophets being the greatest and most blasphemous heretikes that ever were.

Rome drunke with the Saints blood.

RHEM. 7. 9 Seven hils.] The Angel himselfe here expoundeth these seven hilles to be all one with the seven heads and the seven kings: and yet the heretikes blinded exceedingly with malice against the Church of Rome, are so madde to take them for the seven hilles literally, upon which in old time Rome did stand: that so they might make the unlearned beleeve, that Rome is the seate of Antichrist. But if they had any consideration, they might marke that the Prophets visions here are most of them by sevens, whether he talke of heads, hornes, candlestickes, Churches, kings, hilles, or other things: and that he alludeth not to the hilles, because they were just seven, but that Seven is a mysticall number sometime Ten is, signifying universally all of that sort whereof he speaketh, so that the seven heads, hilles, or kingdomes (which are here all one) should be all the kingdomes of the world that persecute the Christians: being heads and mountaines for their height in dignity above others. And some take it, that there were seven speciall Empires, king-domes, or States, that were or shall be the greatest persecutors of Gods people, as of Ægypt, Chaldæa, Babylon, the Persians, and Greekes, which be five. Sixtly, of the Romane Empire which once persecuted most of all other, and which (as the Apostle here saith) yet is, or standeth, but the seventh, then when S. Iohn wrote this, was not come, neither is yet come in our daies, which is Antichrists state, which shall not come so long as the Empire of Rome standeth, as Saint Paul did Prophesie. 2. Thess. 2.

The Protestants madnesse in expounding the seven hils of Rome, the Angel himselfe expounding it otherwise.

FVLK. 7 The Angel doth not expound those seven hilles to be all one with the seven heades, and the seven kings, but sheweth most plainely, that the seven heads of the beast doe signifie seven hilles, upon which the woman sitteth, that is, the city is builded: For the woman vers. 18. is interpreted to be a city. Also these seven heads doe signifie seven kings. Therefore hilles are taken literally for hilles in one signification, as kings are in the other. For both these wordes hilles and kings, are the interpretation of this word, heades. And it had beene very superfluous to have added, that they are hilles, and upon which the woman sitteth, when he [illegible] meane nothing thereby, but they are kings, upon which the city doth not sit, but rather kings upon [illegible]
For every interpretation must be more plaine and cleare, then that which is interpreted. Therefore it [illegible] be a monstrous interpretation, to say the seven heads doe signifie seven hilles, when he meaneth no [illegible] kings: for it is more plaine to understand that heads are kings, then that hilles are kings. This is [illegible] brutish wrangling against so cleare light of truth, seeing you have also confessed before, that it may well be, Antichrist shall have his seate at Rome. sect. 4. And if we be blinded with malice against the Church [illegible] and so madde to take them for seven hilles literally, what were so many of the ancient Fathers, as [illegible] Saint Rome to be the sea of Antichrist, by the cleare description of her in this Chapter? Especially Victorinus [illegible]
Hierome. The seven heads (saith Victorinus) are seven hils, upon which the woman, that is, the city of Rome doth sit.
The other saith, Ep. 17. I suppose this place is holier then the Tarpejan rocke: which having beene so often stricken with thunder and lightnings from heaven, sheweth that it displeaseth the Lord. Reade the Apocalypse of Iohn, and consider

Rome is described plainely.

On the ſame hill did Eugenius the fourth build a moſt ſumptuous Monaſtery, and repaired the olde palace, as the principall ſeate of his Popedome. There is alſo an houſe of Charterhouſe Monkes, with the Church of Saint Croſſe in Hieruſalem. Beſides this, there is not one of the hils at this day, in which the Popes religion is not practiſed in Churches and Abbeyes. The mount of Aventine hath three Monaſteries, of Sabine, Boniface, and Alexius. The mount Exquilinus, hath the famous Minſter of S. Maria major, the Churches of Antony, Praxidis, Vitus, Euſebius, the forty Martyrs, Clemens, Peter ad Vincula, and Martin in montibus. Beſides the olde ruines of
S. Cyriacus Church, which is yet a title of a Cardinallſhip. The mount Viminalis hath the Churches of S. Lau- rence in Paliſperna & Potentiana. The mount Tarpeius or Capitoline hath a houſe of Friers called Ara Cœli, and a bricke houſe builded by Boniface the ninth, for keeping Courts. The mount Palatine hath the Churches of S. Nicholas and S. Andrew. To the mount Quirinalis, belongeth S. Maria De populo, &c. But if we had any conſideration, we might mark (you ſay) that the prophets viſions are moſt by ſevens & that, he alluded not to the hilles, becauſe they were juſt ſeven. We know ſeven to be a myſticall number of perfection as tenne, ſignifying Univer-ſality, of the thing ſpoken of: but when the Prophet himſelfe expoundeth the number of heads, of ſeven hilles, and knowing that the ſaid great city ſate upon ſeven hilles, wee muſt underſtand that hee calleth them ſeven hils, becauſe they were juſt ſeven: as the ſeven candleſtickes, and the ſeven ſtarres doe ſignifie the ſeven Churches, and the ſeven Biſhops of them to whom he writeth, becauſe they were juſt ſeven, as they be rehearſed by name,
c. 1. 11. & c. 2. & 3.

Likewiſe the ſeven kings or kingdomes, which is another interpretation of the ſeven heads, are called ſeven, becauſe they are juſt ſeven in number, as it is manifeſt by the account that the Angel maketh of them; ſaying, Five are fallen, one is, and the ſeventh is not yet come. And although ſome take it for ſeven ſpeciall kingdomes that perſecuted Gods people, yet it is manifeſt by the whole diſcourſe of the Chapter, that the Apoſtle meaneth of ſeven heads, or principall Rulers of the Roman Empire, as Kings, Conſuls, Decem viri, Tribuni militum, Dictators, Emperours, Popes: whereof five were fallen before S. Iohns time, the Emperour then was, the Pope was yet to come: which is the tyranny of Antichriſt, long ſince diſcovered, and is now not a little conſumed with the ſpirit of the Lords mouth, which is his holy word, preached in theſe daies, and ſhall be utterly aboliſhed by the comming of our Saviour Chriſt to judgement, as S. Paul did prophecy, 2 Theſſ. 2.

RHEM. 8 11 The ſame is the eight.] The beaſt it ſelfe [illegible] the congregation of all theſe wicked perſecutors, though it [illegible] may be called the eight. Or, Antichriſt him- conſiſt of the [illegible], yet for that the malice of all is complete [illegible] be counted the odde perſecutor, or the ac- ſelfe, though he be [illegible] the ſeven, yet for his extraordinary wickedneſſe, [illegible] complement of all [illegible]er and therefore is named the eight. Some take this beaſt called the eight, to be the devill.

What is the eight beaſt.

FVLK. 8 The kingdome of Antichriſt being one of the ſeven, that is a Romane tyranny, yet for that it is after another ſort then the other ſix, perſecuting the true Church under the colour of the head of the Catholike Church, is alſo called the eigth kingdome.

RHEM. 9. 18 The great city.] If it be meant of any one city, and not of the univerſall ſociety of the reprobate (which is the city of the devill, as the Church and the univerſal fellowſhip of the faithful is called the city of God) it is moſt like to be old Rome, as ſome of the Greekes expound it, from the time of the firſt Emperours, till Conſtantines dayes, who made an end of the perſecution. For by the authority of the old Romane Empire, Chriſt was put to death firſt, and afterward the two chiefe Apoſtles, and the Popes their ſucceſſours, and infinite Catholike men thorowout the world by leſſer Kings which then were ſubject to Rome. All which Antichriſtian perſecution ceaſed, when Conſtantine reigned, and yeelded up the city to the Pope, who holdeth not the kingdome or Empire over the world, as the heathen did, but the fatherhood and ſpirituall rule of the Church. Howbeit, the more probable ſenſe is the whole of the city of the devill, as the Author of the homilies upon the Apocalypſe in S. Auguſtine declareth.

The double interpretation of Babylon.

FVLK. 9. Without all peradventure the great city which in S. Iohns time had the dominion over the Kings of the earth, was none other but the city of Rome, and ſo it is expounded, not onely of ſome Greekes, but of the [illegible] of the Latine Writers, as Ireneus, Tertullian, Ambroſe, Victorinus, Hierome, Auguſtine, Primaſius, as ha[illegible] beene ſhewed before. Proſper alſo a Latine Writer De prom. & pred. cap. 7. ſaith: Who cannot underſtand [illegible] city be, ſith ſhe doth carry a cup full of the abhominations of uncleanneſſe, and fornication of the whole earth?
[illegible] it is called eternall which is temporall, verily it is a name of blaſphemy: where mortall men, though Kings,
[illegible] are called Divi*, that is, Gods, and their ſuppliants ſay unto them: to your Divine power, to your* [illegible] ears,

Rome plainly deſcribed.

[illegible]
[illegible] were called [illegible] of [illegible]
[illegible] tokens of [illegible]
[illegible] ders, [illegible]
[illegible] the Churches higher then the [illegible]ers, and ſuch like blaſphemous pompe of [illegible] [illegible] pride. Ambroſius Ansbertus alſo a Latine writer 700. yeares ſince, in his commentary upon Chapter 14.
verſ. 8. calleth Rome the ſecond Babylon, and upon this Chapter verſ. 3. he writeth thus: The Angell admo- niſhed us to know, that by the ſenſe of wiſedome following, the ſeven heads are ſeven hils, and ſeven kings, that he might ſhew that were the ſimilitude of thoſe kings, he had brought Rome, which ſitting aloft upon ſeven hils, ſometimes governed the monarchy of the whole world: that in the name of that city he had figured the power of the whole earthly kingdome.

Seeing therefore the conſent of moſt ancient writers, and your owne confeſſion added to the clearneſſe of the text, acknowledgeth that the city here ſpoken of, is the city of Rome: you cannot avoyde but the ſame city is the ſeate of Antichriſt the ſeventh head, as well as it was of the heathenish perſecutors that were the ſixth head. And although thoſe heathenish perſecutions did ceaſe while Conſtantine reigned, in whom the ſixth head was wounded to death, yea were they renued in his ſonne Conſtantius the Arrian, and his nephew Iulian the Apo-ſtata, who raiſed perſecution afreſh againſt the Church of God, though not ſo cruell as before. Where you ſay that Conſtantine yeelded the city of Rome to the Pope, in your meaning it is falſe, for he and his ſucceſſors for many yeeres after, held the dominion of that city. But in truth, by remooving the ſeat of the Empire partly to Conſtantinople, he yeelded place for the myſtery of iniquitie, to worke more eaſily, toward the open manifeſta-tion of Antichriſt. But the Pope (you ſay) holdeth not the kingdome or empire over the world as the heathen did, but the fatherhood and ſpirituall rule of the Church. That the Pope hath held the Empire over the kings of the earth, and practiſed as great pride and tyranny even againſt them that beare the name of the Romane Emperours, and againſt other kings of the earth: the ſtories are full of examples. And that he ſtill claimeth the ſame Empire and kingdome, his blaſphemous bull given out againſt the QVEENE of England, with other his antichriſtian practiſes againſt her crowne and dignity, doe manifeſtly declare. It is not therefore a fatherhood and a ſpirituall rule, which he claimeth moſt blaſphemouſly over all the Church: but under colour and pretence thereof, a temporall kingdome, and an earthly Empire over the kings of the earth. And as his predeceſſours the heathen Emperours, under title of their earthly Empire, uſurped the authority over all religion, and were called Pontifices maximi, that is, the chiefe governours of religion: So the Popes under the title of the chiefe government of religion, uſurpe all ſoveraignty of earthly dignity and temporall dominion. And ſeeing you confeſſe that by the authority of the Romaine Empire Chriſt was put to death, it is eaſie to conclude, that not Ieruſalem, but Rome which is ſpiritually called Sodoma and Ægypt, is that great city ſpoken of chap. 11. which as it crucified our Lord, ſo alſo it killeth his Prophets and Saints. Therefore without controverſie Babylon is Rome, the head and chiefe of all perſecutors of the Church of Chriſt, as old Babylon was of his people the Iewes, as Saint Au- guſtine himſelfe plainely teacheth. And ſo may the author of thoſe homelies in Saint Auguſtine be underſtood; that one city is principall in perſecution of the Church, though the Church hath many enemies beſide that city, and them that hold of it.

CHAP. XVIII.

The fall of Babylon, her judgement, plagues and revenges: for the which, 9 the kings, 16 and merchants of the earth that ſometime did cleaue unto her, ſhall mourne bitterly: 20 but heaven, and the Apoſtles and Prophets ſhall rejoyce.

AND after theſe things I ſaw another Angel comming downe from heaven, having great power: and the earth was illuminated of his glory.

2 And he cryed out in force, ſaying, *Fallen fallen is Babylon the great: and it is become the habitation of Divels, and the cuſtody of every uncleane ſpirit, and the cuſtody of every uncleane and hatefull bird:

Apoc. 14, 8.

3 Becauſe all nations have drunke of the wine of the wrath of her fornication: and the Kings of the earth have fornicated with her: and the merchants of the earth were made rich by the vertue of her delicacies.

4 And I heard another voyce from heaven ſaying, Goe out from her my people: that you be not partakers of her ſinnes, and receive not of her plagues.

5 Becauſe her ſinnes are come even to heaven, and God hath remembred her iniquities.

6 Render to her as ſhe alſo hath rendred to you: and double ye double according to her

AND after that, I ſawe another Angell come from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightned with his glorie.

*2 And hee cryed mightily with a ſtrong voyce, ſaying, Great Babylon, is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of Devills, and the holde of all foule Spirits, and a cage of all uncleane and hatefull birds:

4 And I heard another voyce from heaven ſaying, Come away from her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her ſins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

5 For her ſinnes are gone up to heaven, and God hath remembred her wickedneſſe.

6 Reward her even as ſhe rewarded you, and give her double according to her workes, and powre her workes: in the cuppe wherein ſhe hath mingled, mingle ye double unto her.

7 As much as ſhe hath glorified her ſelfe, and hath beene in delicacies, ‡ ſo much give her torment and mourning: becauſe ſhe ſaith in her heart, * I ſit a Queene, and Widow I am not, and mourning I ſhall not ſee.

18 And cryed ſeeing the place of her burning, ſaying, what other is like to this great citie?

19 And they threwe duſt upon their heads, and cryed weeping and mourning, ſaying: Woe, woe, that great city, in the which all were made rich that had ſhippes in the ſea, of her prices: becauſe in one houre ſhe is deſolate.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XVIII.

RHEM. 1

21 Babylon that great.] By this it ſeemeth cleare, that the Apoſtle meaneth not any one citie, but the univerſall company of the reprobate, which ſhall periſh in the day of judgement: The old Prophets alſo naming the whole number of Gods enemies myſtically, Babylon, as Ierem. c.52.

FVLK. 1.

The Angel ſheweth, that whereas Babylon boaſted that ſhe was eternall, ſhe ſhall be utterly deſtroyed, and never riſe againe. Therefore here is nothing to prove, that he meaneth not any one citie, but rather this hee meaneth the citie and kingdome of Rome, the See of Antichriſt, of whoſe utter deſtruction the Angel ſpecially propheſyeth. For the deſtruction of the univerſall company of the reprobate, in the day of judgement, is deſcribed afterward, cap. 20.11. and ſo to the end of the chapter. And *Ierem. c.*52. doth nothing elſe but hiſtorically deſcribe the captivitie of Babylon, by Nebuchadnezzar and his power, and the advancing of Iehoiachim by Evilmerodach king of Babylon, as every man will confeſſe that readeth the Chapter.

Rome is Babylon.

CHAP. XIX.

1 The Saints glorifying God for the judgement pronounced upon the harlot, 7 the mariage of the Lambe is prepared. 10 The Angel refuſeth to be adored of S. John. 11 There appeareth one (who is the word of God, and the King of kings, and Lord of lords) ſitting on a horſe, with a great army, and fighting againſt the beaſt and the kings of the earth and their armies: 17 the birds of the aire being in the meane time called to devoure their fleſh.

The Epiſtle for many martyrs. Alleluia.

AFter theſe things I heard as it were the voice of many multitudes in heaven ſaying, Allelu-ia, Praiſe, and glorie, and power, is to our God:

2 Becauſe true and juſt are his judgements which hath judged of the great harlot that hath corrupted the earth in her whoredome, and hath revenged the bloud of his ſervants, of her hands.

3 And ‡ againe they ſaid, Allelu-ia. And her ſmoke aſcendeth for ever and ever.

4 And the foure and twenty Seniors fell downe, and the foure beaſts, and adored God ſitting upon the Throne, ſaying: ‖ Amen, Allelu-ia.

5 And a voice came out from the throne, ſaying: Say praiſe to our God all yee his ſervants: and you that feare him, little and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunders, ſaying, Allelu-ia: becauſe our Lord God the omnipotent hath raigned.

7 Let us bee glad and rejoice, and give glory

AND after theſe things, I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, ſaying, Alleluia: ſalvation, and glory, and honour, and power be aſcribed to the Lord our God:

2 For true and righteous are his judgements, for hee hath judged the great whore which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath throughly avenged the bloud of her ſervants of her hand.

3 And againe they ſaid, Alleluia: and her ſmoke roſe up for evermore.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIX.

RHEM. 2. 4. Amen, Alleluia.] These two Hebrew words (as other els-where) both in the Greeke and Latin text are kept religiously, and not translated, unlesse it bee once or twise in the Psalmes. Yet doe the Protestants themselues keepe them in the Text of their English Testaments in these places. And [illegible] why they use them not in all places, but sometimes turne Amen, into Verily, whereof see the Annotation Iohn 8. v. 34. and in their Service bookes they translate, Alleluia, into Praise yee the Lord: As though Alleluia had not as good a grace in the act of serving God (where it is indeed properly used) as it hath in the text of the Scripture.

חללויה

The Church Catholike doth often and specially use this sacred word, to ioyne with the Church triumphant, [illegible] of Angels and Saints, who here are said to laude and praise God with great reioycing, by this word Alleluia, [illegible] often repeating thereof: as the Catholike Church also useth, namely in Easter time even till Whitsontide, [illegible] of Christs resurrection, which (as S. Augustine declareth epist. ad Ianuarium.) was the generall use of the Primitive Church, making a greater mysterie and matter of it then our Protestants now doe. At other times of the yeare also the [illegible] saith it was sung in some Churches, but not in all. And S. Hierome counteth it among the heresies of Vigilantius, That Alleluia could not be sung but at Easter. Advers. Vigilant. cap. 1.

Alleluia often used in the Church, specially in Easter time. Epist. ad Ian. 17. & cap. 15.

The truth is, by the use of the Scriptures it hath more in it then Praise yee the Lord, signifying with laude, glorifying and praysing of God, a great reioycing, with all mirth, and exultation of heart in the singers thereof, and that is the cause why the holy Church saith, Laus tibi Domine, Praise bee to thee, O Lord, in Lent, and times of penance and mourning, but not Alleluia; Which (as S. Augustine also declareth) is a terme of signification and mysterie, ioyned with that time, and then used specially in the Church of God, when shee representeth unto us in her service, the ioyes and beatitude of the next life: which is done specially at Easter, by the ioyfull celebrating of Christs glorious Resurrection and Ascension after the penall time of Lent which representeth the miserie of this life. See S. Augustine Ser. 2. & 5. chap. 9. and 6. c. 9. de Diversis tom. 10. And in his enarration upon the 148. Psalm. For in the titles and ends of divers holy Psalmes this Alleluia is full of mysterie and sacred signification. Where wee must aske the Protestants, why they haue left it out altogether, being in the Hebrew, saying neither Alleluia, nor, Praise yee the Lord, in the Bible 1577. and that nine times in the five last Psalmes.

It signifieth more then (as the Protestants translate it) Praise yee the Lord.

False translation.

Moreover, the said holy Doctor (lib. 2. de doct. Christ. c. 11.) affirmeth that Amen and Alleluia be not translated into any other language propter sanctiorem authoritatem, for the more sacred authoritie of the words so remaining, and epist. 178. he saith that it is not lawfull to translate them. Nam [illegible] est, &c. for it is to bee knowen (saith he) that all Nations doe sing Amen and Alleluia in the Hebrew words, which neither the Latine man nor the Barbarous may translate into his owne language. See S. Hierome also epist. 137. And namely for our Nation, Saint Gregory will beare us witnesse that our Countrey received the word Alleluia with their Christianitie, saying thus, lib. 27. Moral. c. 6. Lingua Britanniae quae nihil aliud noverat quam barbarum frendere, iamdudum in Divinis laudibus Hebraeum coepit resonare Alleluia. That is, The Britan tongue, which knew nothing else but to mutter barbarously, hath begun of late in Gods divine laudes and praises to sound the Hebrew Alleluia. And for Iurie, Saint Hierome epist. 17. cap. 7. writeth, that the Husbandmen at the plough sung Alleluia which was not their vulgar speech. Yea hee saith that in Monasteries the singing of Alleluia was in stead of a bell to call them together ad Collectam. in Epitaph. Paulae cap. 10.

Amen and Alleluia should not bee translated into vulgar tongues.

All Nations in the Primitive Church sung Amen & Alleluia.

This word is a sacred, Christian, mysticall and angelicall song: and yet in the new Service booke it is turned into, Praise yee the Lord, and Alleluia is quite gone, because they list neither to agree with the Church of God, nor with the use of holy Scriptures, no nor with their owne translations. But no marvaile that they cannot sing the song of our Lord, and of Angels in a strange Countrey, that is, out of the Catholike Church, in the captivitie of schisme and heresie. Lastly, wee might aske them whether it be all one to say Matth. 21. Hosanna, and Saue us we beseech thee: whereas Hosanna is withall a word of exceeding great congratulation and ioy which they expressed toward our Saviour. Even so Allelvia hath another manner of feast and signification in it, then can be expressed by, Praise ye the Lord.

The Protestants profane this word by translating it, and diminish the signification thereof. Epist. 136.

Vaine cavilling confuted.

FVLK. 2 For the Latine text, it is not to bee regarded, nor the Greeke of the old Testament, how it pleased the Interpreters to leaue these words untranslated. But in the Greeke of the new Testament, which is indited by the holy Ghost, it is materiall to consider, that these wordes (as commonly understood, and easie to bee understood of all Christians (are many times kept in their naturall sound, and not translated into Greeke. Partly because they were as well understood of them that professed the religion, either of the Iewes or Christians, as the Greeke words themselues: partly to expresse in relation of things done, more liuely the zeale of them that either affirmed any thing, or prayed God in these termes. But where you say, they bee not translated unlesse it be once or twise in the Psalmes, it is false: For Amen is used but in the end of foure Psalmes, which are according to your account Psal. 40. 71. 88. 105. And in every one of these places it is translated in the Greeke γένοιτο, γένοιτο, in the Latine Fiat, Fiat, which is in English, So be it, So be it, where in the Hebrew it is Amen, Amen: except in the last, where Amen is but once in the Hebrew. So is Alleluia twise at the least translated in the Greeke and Latine, Psalm. 134. 3. and 146. 1. αἰνεῖτε τὸν κύριον, in Latine, Laudate Dominum, which is in English, Praise yee the Lord. And wee also retaine those tearmes in many places of the new Testament, where they cannot conveniently bee translated, because they are so left in the originall. Why wee translate Amen sometimes Verily, in the place by you quoted, I haue declared enough to stay your marveyling. But in our Service bookes (you say) we translate Alleluia into Praise yee the Lord, as though it hath not as good a grace in the act of serving God, as in the text of the Scripture. Surely wee are perswaded, that Praise yee the Lord, which every man understandeth, hath a better grace and more agreeable to the doctrine of Saint Paul, 1. Cor. 14. in the act of the publike service of God, then Alleluia not understood but of the learned, although it bee in the text of the Scripture. As wee thinke of all other Hebrew words, which are to bee translated into the vulgar tongue, that the Church may take edifying by them. Wee may rather marvaile what mooved the Greeke and Latine Translatours, to leaue it so often in the Psalmes untranslated, and yet sometimes to translate it. And if Alleluiah in the act of serving God, haue such a grace aboue Praise yee the Lord, it hath the same aboue Laudate Dominum, which you your selues use in your daily service. But it is a great matter that you use this holy word Alleluiah, to ioyne with the Church triumphant, betweene Easter and Whitsontide: by which reaſon you are diſioyned from the Church triumphant, from [illegible] to Eaſter, in which time you [illegible] not uſe it, as Durand ſaith. But what [illegible] this is [illegible] the Church [illegible] by vſing this tearme, wee may conſider a little. [illegible], [illegible], Beda, and other Interpreters, vnder[illegible] the praiſe giuen to God, to bee of the Church militant [illegible] the Church triumphant. Which Church militant is ſaid to bee in heauen, becauſe the [illegible] on [illegible] in earth, [illegible] in heauen. Secondly, admit it ſhould bee meant of the Church triumphant, ſeeing the Angels [illegible] no ſound of wordes in praiſing of God, why [illegible] you [illegible] the [illegible] Hallelu-iah, rather then in the ſound of Laudate Dominum, or Praiſe yee the Lord? Thirdly, if the Angels [illegible] Spirits did uſe the ſound of the Hebrew word, yet they uſe [illegible] ſpeech which they all vnderſtand. But moſt times your Prieſts, yea and Biſhops, are ignorant of the vnderſtanding of that word, as appeareth by Durand, which hath ſo many fond interpretations of it, as would [illegible] hath but ſmall ſight in the Hebrew tongue. How much more therefore are your people ignorant [illegible]? Wherefore vſing that terme which you vnderſtand not, you ioyne not with the Church triumphant, which vnderſtandeth the tongue of the Angels, and praiſeth not God without vnderſtanding. But Saint Auguſtine ad Ian. maketh a greater matter of it [illegible].

Verily hee ſheweth that it was vſed in his time, being as commonly vnderſtood, as the reſt of the publike Seruice, but what neceſſary matter hee maketh not of it, neither thinketh the ſound to bee holier in Hebrew, then in Latine. If Vigilantius thought Alleluiah might neuer be ſung but at Eaſter, hee held a ſuperſtitious opinion: but the matter is not of ſuch weight to make an hereſie of it. More like it is, that Vigilantius miſliked the innouation attempted to be brought in by Hierome, who as ſome write, brought the common uſe of Alleluiah from Ieruſalem. But the truth is (ſay you) that by the uſe of the holy Scriptures, it hath more in it then, Praiſe yee the Lord: which if it be true, your vulgar Latine tranſlation hath erred as much as the Proteſtants, in tranſlating it Laudate Dominum: for that hath no more in it, then, Praiſe yee the Lord. And whereas this terme hath but two words in it, the Verbe and the Nowne; Your vulgar Tranſlator doth commonly (and for ought I know) alwayes tranſlate the Hebrew Verbe, by the Latine Verbe, Lauda, Laudate, Laudet, Laudent, Laudas, &c. In all which hee hath ſhamefully erred, if our tranſlation of Alleluiah be not right to ſay, Praiſe yee the Lord. As for that thing wherewith the praiſe of God ought to be ſet foorth in his Church, muſt be taught by Preachers, but cannot bee expreſſed by Tranſlators. If you would reply, becauſe it cannot be expreſſed, therefore the word muſt not be tranſlated, it is eaſie to reioyne upon you, that then the ſame Verbe muſt be left vntranſlated, ſo often as it is vſed in the Scripture, which were too great an abſurditie. Wherefore this is nothing elſe but a malicious, fooliſh, and vnlearned quarrell, againſt the vſage of our Church, in praiſing the Lord in that ſound of words, which the people vnderſtandeth. As for your ſuperſtitious and childiſh difference betweene Alleluiah and Laus tibi Domine: the one for Lent, the other for Eaſter, I leaue to your ſelues, as meete for your hypocriticall ſeruice, which is in ſound of lips and outward ſhew, not in ſpirit and truth.

The new found Sermons of Saint Auguſtine de diverſis, are matter meete for ſuch a queſtion. In Pſalme 148. hee maketh no ſuch fond difference, betweene Laus tibi Domine, and Alleluiah, but ſheweth that the Church before Eaſter, ſpending the time in faſting and prayer, did celebrate the ſtate of this life, but in praiſing God at Eaſter, did ſignifie the life to come, which yet was not in poſſeſſion: For this is Alleluiah, which wee ſing (ſaith hee) which is interpreted as you know, Laudate Dominum, Praiſe yee the Lord. Here you ſee all the people vnderſtood Alleluiah, as well as Laudate Dominum, and as well as our people vnderſtand, Praiſe yee the Lord. But it is a queſtion to bee asked, why we leaue it out altogether, no leſſe then nine times in the Bible 1577. in the fiue laſt Pſalmes. To anſwere you (for my part) I know no ſuch tranſlation, that leaueth it out as you ſay: for that Bible which I haue, printed 1577. hath Praiſe yee the Lord, ten times in the fiue laſt Pſalmes: for ſo many times Halleluiah is in the Hebrew. But in Pſalme 145. it is not in the Hebrew, and therefore not in the Engliſh; except peraduenture in ſome bookes of Pſalmes, printed for the ſpeciall uſe of reading and ſinging in the Church, it is omitted by the Printer, as all other titles and inſcriptions of the Pſalmes, which are not vſually read or ſung in the Church ſeruice. Which if it be ſo great a matter, we muſt aske the Papiſts, why they haue left out Alleluiah altogether in their Portuis ſecundum vſum Eccleſiæ Sarum, in euery Pſalme where it is both in the Hebrew, and in their owne vulgar Latine tranſlation, not onely in thoſe fiue laſt Pſalmes, but alſo in twelue other Pſalmes, namely, Pſalme 104. 105. 106. likewiſe Pſalme 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. Finally, Pſalme 134. and 135. But Saint Auguſtine (you ſay) affirmeth, that Amen and Alleluiah bee not tranſlated into any other language for the more holy authoritie of the words ſo remaining. Indeed hee ſaith, that the knowledge of the Hebrew and Greeke tongues is needfull for men of the Latine ſpeech, to vnderſtand ſuch words which are often found vntranſlated, as Amen, Alleluiah, Racha, Hoſanna. Of which hee ſaith, the antiquitie of the two former is kept for a more holy authoritie: meaning that they doe ſet forth more liuely the godly affection of them that vſed them in the Scriptures: as if men in Engliſh will tell a ſtory of a French man or German, when it commeth to his ſpeech, they will expreſſe a word or two of his Countrey language to make the narration ſeeme more liuely. But hee doth not affirme, that they bee not tranſlated into any language, for then hee ſhould ſpeake vntruely, as I haue proued in the beginning, ſeeing they were in his time tranſlated into Greeke and Latine; and hee himſelfe in Pſalme 148. tranſlateth Alleluiah, Laudate Dominum. Eucherius Alleluiah in Latinum ſonat, Laudate Dominum. Iuſt. lib. 2. cap. 2. Amen, vere ſiue fideliter. Remigius in Pſalm. 104. Interpretatur Alleluiah, Laudate Dominum. Neither doth hee meane, that there is more holineſſe in the ſound of Hebrew ſyllables, then of the Latine. But as the Hebrew tongue is called the holy tongue, becauſe the holy Scriptures of the old Teſtament were firſt written in it, which yet may be and haue beene in all good times of the Church, tranſlated into any other languages. In the ſecond place, Epiſt. 178. anſwering the like quarrels of the Arian Paſcentius (which cauilled that the Greeke word Homouſion was not found in the Scripture) Saint Auguſtine proueth, that the ſenſe and meaning thereof is found in the Scriptures, and this terme he vſeth, becauſe it was agreed upon in the Councell of Nice, where Greeke Biſhops were the chiefe that confuted the hereſie of Arius.

Now ſeeing the Church had receiued this Greeke terme, hee thought it meete to be vſed, and not to be altered, ſo long as it were vnderſtood and knowen to haue the ſenſe in the Scriptures. As for example, when the Church of all nations had receiued to ſing Amen and Alleluia in the Hebrew tongue, it was not lawfull for the Latine man, or the Barbarous man, to tranſlate them into their owne language: he meaneth in the publike ſeruice, ſeeing the people vnderſtood them, and the cuſtome of the Church is not without cauſe to be broken. But that they might not bee tranſlated into other ſpeeches, or pronounced in other languages, if the people vnderſtood them not, it is farre from S. Auguſtines meaning.

S. Hierome ep. 137. rendring a reaſon why theſe words and ſuch other, were reteined in the Scriptures, ſaith: That the Septuaginta, or the Apoſtles prouided, that ſeeing the firſt Church was gathered together of the Iewes, they

[illegible] of euery language, that [illegible] owne [illegible] them [illegible]

[illegible] of [illegible], Hoſanna, and Alleluia, [illegible], Praiſe yee the Lord. [illegible] maſſe, [illegible] our Nation, with their [illegible], receiued the Hebrew word Alleluia. [illegible] what of [illegible] long as they vnderſtood it? That the ploughmen in Paleſtine [illegible], [illegible] which they vnderſtood, becauſe it is all one in the Hebrew and Syriac language, which was their [illegible] tongue: and therefore they might well vnderſtand it in the [illegible], which was [illegible] in all the world abroade. But it is a ſacred, Chriſtian, myſticall, and angelicall ſong; and yet in the new ſeruice it is [illegible] Praiſe yee the Lord.

Why Sir? is not Praiſe yee the Lord a ſacred, Chriſtian, myſticall, and Angelicall ſong? doth nothing pleaſe you but that which the people vnderſtand not? That which the Angels ſung in the Syrian tongue to the Shepheards at the Natiuitie of Chriſt, was a ſacred, Chriſtian, myſticall and Angelicall ſong: yet you ſing it in your Maſſe, neither in the Syrian tongue in which they pronounced it, nor in the Greeke tongue, in which S. Luke did write it, but in Latine, and yet not in the Latine of your authenticall tranſlation, nor in deede truely tranſlated: for you ſing in Excelſis, and not in Altiſſimis, and yet I thinke it were but a ſmall matter to picke a quarell againſt you.

Therefore Alleluiah is not quite gone, as you ſay falſely, when wee haue the full ſenſe and meaning of it in our language, much better then you haue of that Angels ſong, which you call Gloria in Excelſis. Wee ſing therefore the Lords ſongs (his name be prayſed for euer) in our owne Countrey, and in our owne language, and in the middle of the Church of God, out of the filthy ſtinke of Babylonicall ſuperſtition.

But laſt of all you thinke you may aske us whether it be all one to ſay Mat. 21. Hoſanna, and ſaue us wee beſeech thee. And we thinke wee may anſwere you, that it is not all one: for Hoſanna ſignifieth, Saue we beſeech thee, not ſaue us. The people therefore prayed for the proſperitie and increaſe of the kingdome of Chriſt, as the Prophets taught them long before. And the Apoſtle to expreſſe their godly zeale, vſeth the very word which they uttered. That it was a word of exceeding congratulation and ioy, it is not in the ſignification of the Verbe, but in that ſpeciall uſe of it, and ſo in the word Alleluia. It is one thing to tranſlate, another thing to giue the ſenſe, according to the circumſtance of the text tranſlated.

Therefore Alleluia is as truly tranſlated, and may as well bee expreſſed in Engliſh by, Praiſe yee the Lord: as it is in Latine by, Laudate Dominum: witneſſe S. Auguſtine, S. Hierome, and your owne vulgar Latine Interpreter, who profane and diminiſh the ſignification thereof, by Laudate Dominum, as much as we doe, by Praiſe yee the Lord. I doubt not but your owne friends will bee aſhamed in their hearts, to ſee you thus wrangle, without any iuſt cauſe about ſo vaine a quarrell.

Beza.
Iuſtifications are good workes, not as the effects of faith iuſtifying, but becauſe they [illegible] with faith iuſtifie a man.

Rhem. 3. 8 Iuſtifications of Saints.] Here the Heretikes in their tranſlations could not alter the word iuſtifications into ordinances, or conſtitutions, as they did falſely in the firſt of Saint Luke, whereof ſee the Annotation there, verſe 6. but they are forced to ſay in Latine, iuſtificationes, as Beza: *and in Engliſh, righteouſneſſe, for iuſtifications they will not ſay in any caſe for feare of inconuenience.) Yea and they cannot deny but theſe iuſtifications bee the good workes of Saints. But where * they make this gloſe, that they bee ſo called, becauſe they are the fruites or effects of faith, and of the iuſtice which we haue by onely faith, it is moſt euidently falſe, and againſt the very text, and nature of the word. For there is no cauſe why any thing ſhould be called a mans iuſtification, but for that it maketh him iuſt. So that iuſtifications be the vertues of faith, hope, charitie, and good deedes, iuſtifying or making a man iuſt, and not effects of iuſtification, neither faith onely, but they altogether be the very ornaments and inward garments, beauty, and iuſtice of the ſoule, as here it is euident.*

Iuſtification by faith onely.

Fulk. 3. For our tranſlation of this word δικαιώματα Luke the firſt, the Reader may bee reſolued in that place. Wee tranſlate a word that hath diuers ſignifications, diuerſly, as the vnderſtanding of euery place requireth: So here wee tranſlate it iuſtifications, righteouſneſſe, or iuſt deedes, as the authour of the Homilies in Saint Auguſtine tranſlateth them Iuſte facta, or any thing that hath the ſame ſenſe. And we feare no inconuenience to tranſlate it iuſtifications in Engliſh: for our iuſtification before God by faith onely, will neuer bee ouerthrowne by that tearme, though we deny not, but theſe iuſtifications be the workes of Saints. But where we ſay they be ſo called, becauſe they are the fruites of faith, and of the iuſtice which wee haue by faith onely, (you ſay) it is moſt euidently falſe, and againſt the very text and the nature of the word. Concerning the text it is this. To her was granted, that ſhe ſhould bee clothed with fine linen or ſilke, cleane and ſhining: for the fine linen or ſilke are the iuſtifications of Saints.

This text compared with Apocalypſe chap. 7. ver. 14. ſheweth whence the beauty of this garment commeth, verily, not of the iuſtice of men, but of the blood of the Lambe, and the merite of his ſacrifice. Therefore the text hath no euidence for you. But the nature of the word affordeth you a ſtrong argument: for there is no cauſe (you ſay) why any thing ſhould be called a mans iuſtification, but for that it maketh him iuſt. Here you reaſon childiſhly of the etymologie of the Latine word iuſtifico, which ſignifieth indeed properly to make iuſt, but in Scripture is often vſed to account iuſt, to declare iuſt, to acquit in iudgement, as infinite words are vſed unto other ſignifications, then can be taken out of their preciſe etymologie, or deriuation.

Therefore you muſt reaſon (if you will gaine any thing) of the nature of the Greeke word δικαιώματα, except you will allow iuſtifications to be taken in as many ſignifications as δικαιώματα be. If you will doe ſo as reaſon will enforce you, there is cauſe why a thing may bee called a mans iuſtification, which doth not make him iuſt, but declare him to bee iuſt. In the Pſalmes oftentimes your vulgar Latine tranſlation vſeth this word Iuſtificationes tuas, for Gods iuſtifications, and Luke 1. Iuſtificationibus Domini, in the iuſtifications of the Lord. Might you not as well ſay, there is no cauſe why any thing ſhould be called the Lords iuſtification, but for that it maketh him iuſt.

If there be cauſe why any thing may be called the Lords iuſtification, which doth not make him iuſt, there is alſo cauſe, why a thing may be called a mans iuſtification, which doth not make him iuſt, but declare him to bee iuſt: and ſo are good workes the iuſtifications of Saints, becauſe they declare them to be iuſt, not becauſe they make them iuſt before God, as wee haue proued more at large Iames 2. Wiſedome is iuſtified of her owne children, and yet ſhee is not made iuſt by them. The Publicans and ſinners iuſtified God, yet they made not God iuſt. Ieruſalem hath iuſtified her ſiſter Sodoma, yet ſhe hath not made her iuſt. Wicked Iudges ſometimes doe iuſtifie the ungodly men, yet they make them not iuſt. The Phariſees iuſtified themſelues, yet they made not themſelues iuſt. The Lawyers call that a mans iuſtification, which maketh neither the man nor his cauſe iuſt, but declareth them to be iuſt.

[illegible] you may as well [illegible] two [illegible] of C[illegible], and are the ornament and outward garment, [illegible] the inward [illegible] of the ſoule. For garments are all without the thing clo-thed [illegible], and are not called inward, in reſpect of the thing clothed, but in reſpect of more outward gar-ments. Therefore this pure ſhining garment is the light of good workes, proceeding from inward faith, and ſhi-ning outwardly, the glory of their heauenly Father.

M. 4. 10 And I fell.] The Proteſtants abuſe this place, and the example of the Angels forbidding Iohn to adore him be-ing but his fellow ſeruant, and appointing him to adore God, againſt all honour, reuerence, and adoration of Angels, Saints, or other ſanctified creatures, teaching that no religious worſhip ought to be done unto them. But in truth it maketh for no ſuch purpoſe, but only warneth us that Diuine honour and the adoration due to God alone, may not bee giuen to any Angell, or other creatures. S. Auguſtine De vera relig. cap. ultimo. And when the Aduerſaries reply that ſo great an Apoſtle, as Iohn was, could not be ignorant of that point, nor would haue giuen diuine honour, unto an Angell (for ſo hee had beene an Idolater) and therefore that he was not reprehended for that, but for doing any reli-gious reuerence or other honour whatſoeuer to his fellow ſeruant: we anſwere, that by the like reaſon, Saint Iohn be-ing ſo great an Apoſtle, if this later kinde of reuerence had beene unlawfull and to be reprehended, as the Proteſtants hold it is no leſſe then the other, could not haue beene ignorant thereof, nor would haue done it.

S. Iohns adoring of the Angel, ex-plicated againſt the Proteſtants abuſing the ſame. The Proteſtants are refelled by their owne reaſon

Therefore they might much better haue learned of Saint Auguſtine (q.61. in Geneſ.) how this fact of Saint Iohn was corrected by the Angell, and wherein the errour was. In effect it is thus, That the Angell being ſo glorious and full of maieſtie preſenting Chriſts perſon, and in his name uſing diuers words proper to God, as, I am the firſt and the laſt, and aliue and was dead, and ſuch like, might well be taken of Saint Iohn, by errour of his perſon, to bee Chriſt himſelfe, and that the Apoſtle preſuming him to be ſo indeed, adored him with diuine honour: which the Angell cor-recting, told him hee was not God, but one of his fellowes, and therefore that he ſhould not ſo adore him, but God. Thus then we ſee, Iohn *was neither ſo ignorant, to thinke that any undue honour might be giuen to any creature: nor ſo ill, to commit idolatrie by doing undue worſhip to any Angell in heauen: and therefore was not culpable at all in his fact, but onely erred materially (as the Schoolemen call it) that is, by miſtaking one for another, thinking that which was an Angell, to haue beene our Lord: becauſe he knew that our Lord himſelfe is alſo * called an Angell, and hath often appeared in the viſions of the faithfull.*

S. Iohn erred onely in the per-ſon, miſtaking the Angell to bee Chriſt himſelfe, and ſo adoring him as God. Apoc. c. 1.

* Eſa. 9. in Græc. Mala. 3.

And the like is to be thought of the Angell appearing in the 22. of the Apoc. whether it were the ſame or another: for that alſo did ſo appeare, that Iohn could not tell whether it were Chriſt himſelfe or no, till the Angell tolde him. Once this is certaine, that Iohn did not formally (as they ſay) commit idolatry, nor ſinne at all herein, knowing all du-ties of a Chriſtian man, no leſſe then an Angell of heauen being alſo in as great honor with God, yea and in more then many angels. Which perhaps may bee the cauſe (and conſequently, another explication of this place) that the Angel knowing his great graces and merits before God, would not accept any worſhip or ſubmiſſion at his hands, though Iohn againe of like humilitie did it as alſo immediatly afterward chap. 22. which belike he would not haue done, if he had beene preciſely adviſed by the angell but a moment before, of errour and undutifulneſſe in the fact. Howſoeuer that be, this is evident, that this the Angels refuſing of adoration, taketh not away the due reuerence and reſpect we ought to haue to Angels or other ſanctified perſons and creatures, and ſo theſe words, See thou doe it not, ſignifie rather an earneſt refuſall, then any ſignification of crime to be committed thereby.

S. Iohn ſinned not in this adora-tion. Another explica-tion of this place.

FVLK. 4. This place is not abuſed by Proteſtants, but proveth invincibly againſt Papiſts, that all religious worſhip and ſervice, belongeth to God, and may not bee yeelded to any creature. But you ſay, it maketh for no ſuch purpoſe, but onely warneth us, that divine honour, and the adoration due to God alone, may not bee giuen to any creature: yet the text is plaine, that all religious worſhip and ſervice, is due to God alone, and to no creature. For the Angell ſaith not, worſhip God onely with this kinde of ſervice, but worſhip God: ſignifying that this ſervice was due onely to God. And this is that which Saint Auguſtine ſaith: De vera religione cap. ultimo. Quare honoramus eos &c. We honor the angels with loue, not with ſeruice, neither doe wee build temples to them: For they will not bee ſo honored of us, becauſe they know that we our ſelues, when we are good, are the temples of the higheſt God. There-fore it is rightly written, that a man was forbidden by the Angell, that he ſhould not worſhip him, but one God onely, under whom hee was a fellow ſeruant with him. But they which inuite us, that wee ſhould ſerue them, and worſhip them as Gods, are like to proud men, which if they might, would likewiſe bee worſhipped: but to ſuffer theſe men it is leſſe perillous, but to worſhip the Angel it is more dangerous. Afterward he concludeth in theſe words. Let religion therefore binde us to one God omnipotent, becauſe betweene our mind by which we underſtand him to be the Father and the truth, that is, the inward light by which we underſtand him, there is no creature interpoſed.

All religious worſhip belong-eth only to God.

By which ſentences it is manifeſt that hee meaneth, that all religious worſhip and ſervice, is due onely to God, and that whoſoever Angell or man, requireth or receiveth any religious worſhip or ſervice, hee uſurpeth that which is due onely to God. Where it is to be noted, that hee overthroweth your diſtinction of Latria and Du-lia, ſeeing hee denieth religious Dulia or ſervice, to bee due unto Angels, who are to be honoured with loue, not with ſervice. But where wee reply that Saint Iohn ſo great an Apoſtle could not bee ignorant, that no Angell is to bee worſhipped as God, and therefore intended not to worſhip the Angell as God. You anſwere by the like reaſon, if this later kinde of reverence had beene unlawfull, hee could not haue beene ignorant thereof, nor would haue done it. Here againe wee reply, it is manifeſt by his owne confeſſion, that hee was twiſe deceived in this point, not of ignorance, but of forgetfulneſſe in this extaſie of minde, while hee beheld the glory of the Angell that ſhewed him theſe things. But the other errour of worſhipping the creature as the Creator was too groſſe an errour, to enter into any ſo religious and wiſe an heart as the Apoſtle had. Athanaſius contra. Et adorent eum omnes angeli Dei; ſcilicet quia vere Deum et Dominum.*

Wee might haue learned (you ſay) of Saint Auguſtine, how this fact of Saint Iohn was corrected by the Angell.

Angel. Saint Auguſtine [illegible] ple [illegible] thou [illegible]) [illegible], that civill [illegible] proper to God. Neither let it moue (ſaith he) [illegible] man to adore him: for the Angel ſeemed or [illegible] therefore the worſhipper was to bee corrected. [illegible] the Angell deceived Iohn, to thinke that he [illegible] to God: whereas Angels are to be honoured (as he ſayd before) [illegible] ſervice. [illegible] ſay, the Angell was ſo full of Maieſtie repreſenting Chriſts perſon, and in his name uſing diuers words proper to God, As, I am the firſt and the laſt, and aliue that was dead, that hee might well be taken by Saint Iohn, by errour of his perſon to be Chriſt himſelfe. But this could not be for divers cauſes. For this was not the ſame perſon that appea-red in the firſt Chapter, like to the Sonne of man: which was Chriſt himſelfe, and no Angell that preſented his perſon. As Chriſt himſelfe appeared in his owne perſon to Saint Paul, Actes 9. and at other times, ſo did he there unto Iohn.

Secondly, S. Iohn confeſſeth, that this Angel which ſhewed him theſe things, was one of the ſeven Angels that had the ſeven vials, Chap. 17. 1. Therefore he could not be deceived in his perſon, to think he was Chriſt. Third-ly, he willed him immediatly before, to write, Bleſſed are they that are called to the Supper of the Lambe, which S. Iohn was not ignorant to be Chriſt, according to the viſion which he reporteth, Chap. 5. Therefore it is manifeſt, that S. Iohn knew this Angel not to be Chriſt, and therefore erred not in his perſon to thinke he was Chriſt, and intending to worſhip him as Chriſt, but to worſhip him as an heavenly Angel, that had ſhewed him theſe things, and opened theſe great myſteries unto him. Therfore in vaine you go about to excuſe his fault with your ſhame-leſſe diſtinction, which he doth plainly confeſſe, to the glory of God, and the edifying of the Church in the true and ſincere worſhip of God. Where you ſay, he was not culpable at all in his fact, and ſinned not in this adora-tion, you will belike remoue the crime from Iohn to the Angel, who forbade him the fact, wherein he ſinned not, nor was culpable at all. And it is a very groſſe error of your Schoolmen to hold, that if a man worſhip a devill in the ſhape of an Angel, he ſinneth not, nor committeth idolatry formally, but only erreth materially. As though ſin of ignorance and errour were no ſin, becauſe it is not ſo great as ſin againſt knowledge: and as though ſuch were not bound to learne to know God, that they worſhip none inſtead of God, nor with the worſhip that is due only to God. The man of God that beleeved the old Prophet which lied unto him, ſinned grievouſly, as appea-reth by his puniſhment, becauſe he tranſgreſſed the word of the Lord, and did not examine his prophecie, by that which he was aſſured to be the word of God, 1 Reg. 13. So if Iohn had worſhipped the Angel as Chriſt, he was culpable, becauſe he did not firſt conſider whether he were Chriſt indeed. But in truth he did ſo appeare to be one of the ſeven Angels, that Iohn could not be ignorant that he was not Chriſt.

But where you defend him by his knowledge of all duties of a Chriſtian man, you labour in vaine to excuſe him, ſeeing not onely in this place, but alſo after this admonition, he committed the ſame offence, as he confeſ-ſeth, Chap. 22. of humane frailtie and forgetfulneſſe, though not of generall ignorance of Chriſtian dutie. Up-on which place Ambroſius Ansbertus writeth thus: It is greatly to bee marvelled why Iohn contrary to the prohi-bition of the Angel, would haue worſhipped him the ſecond time. For before in like manner hee had forbidden him to adore him, and taught that God onely is to bee adored. What meaneth it therefore, that contrarie to his commande-ment, who verely as a meſſenger of truth, had told him before, that this honour of reverence was of dutie to be offered not to a creature, but to the Creator, he would now honour him againe? Unleſſe perhaps, he ioyned this and the former viſion together, and repeateth the ſame things which hee did before: or elſe being ſtricken with great aſtoniſhment of the viſions, he confeſſeth that he had forgotten that which the Angell commanded him before, and ſo would haue a-dored him againe.

That you affirme, Iohn to haue been in as great honour with God, yea and in more then many Angels: You ſhew your boldneſſe, to pronounce ſo confidently of that which no mortall creature knoweth. The word of God tel-leth us of the dignitie of the children of God after the reſurrection, to be equall with Angels, but in this frailtie of life whereto they are ſubiect, they muſt needs be inferiour to Angels, ſeeing Chriſt himſelfe in whom was no frailtie of ſinne, was made inferiour to the Angels, by the ſuffering of his death, Heb. 2. 9. Your ſecond explicati-on is yet more abſurd, that the Angel and S. Iohn ſhould ſtraine courteſie (as men doe) in yeelding and refuſing re-verence one of another. But the words of the Angel doe plainly confute this fond gloſſe. For rendring a reaſon why he will not be adored by Iohn, he ſaith, that he himſelfe is his fellow ſervant. He ſaith not that Iohn is in graces and merits before God as good as he. But he is a ſervant as well as he, bound to worſhip God their common Lord as much as he is: not to receiue worſhip of his fellow ſervant. Secondly he ſaith, that he is fellow ſervant not only of Iohn, but of the reſt of his brethren that haue the teſtimony of Ieſus. And cap. 22. and of them alſo that keepe the words of this booke, that is of all true Chriſtians. Therfore he ſtraineth not courteſie in reſpect of Iohns great graces & merites: for he will not receiue this worſhip of any Chriſtian, by the ſame reaſon that he re-fuſeth it of Iohn. Therfore as the words are manifeſt, Iohn is preciſely admoniſhed of the Angel, of error and un-dutifulneſſe in the fact, yet ſoone after of forgetfulneſſe falleth into the ſame errour and undutifulneſſe againe. But howſoever that be (you ſay) this is evident, that this the Angels refuſing of adoration taketh not away the due re-verence and reſpect we ought to haue to Angels, or other ſanctified perſons and creatures. This ſhould be eaſily gran-ted, if you could ſtay here. For we would not by any meanes take away the due reverence and reſpect we ought to haue to holy perſons and things, whatſoever be ſanctified by God. But it is evident, that this the Angels refu-ſing of adoration, taketh away all religious adoration or ſervice of Angels, or other creatures whatſoever, which is due onely to God. But where you ſay theſe words, See thou doe it not, ſignifie rather an earneſt refuſall, then a-ny ſignification of crime committed thereby, it is very abſurd. For theſe words be not only of refuſall, but of pro-hibition, (as every child knoweth,) and Saint Auguſtine in the places before mentioned doth teſtifie. Seeing therefore they prohibite that which was to be done (as Saint Auguſtine alſo confeſſeth) the doing of that which the Angell forbiddeth, muſt needs be a crime, whoſoever committeth it, and the greater after ſo earneſt a pro-hibition.

RHEM. 5. And marvell it is, that the Proteſtants making themſelues ſo ſure of the true ſenſe of every doubtfull place by confe-rence of other Scriptures, follow not heere the conference and comparing of Scriptures that themſelues ſo much or onely require. We will giue them occaſion and a methode ſo to doe, thus. Hee that doubteth of this place, findeth out three things of queſtion which muſt be tried by other Scriptures. The firſt, whether there ought to be or may be any re-ligious reverence or honour done to any creatures, taking the word religion or religious worſhip not for that ſpeciall ho-nour, which is properly and onely due to God, as S. Auguſtine ſometime uſeth it, but for reverence due to any thing that is holy by ſanctification or application to the ſervice of God. The ſecond thing is, whether by uſe of Scriptures, that honour be called adoration in Latine, or by a word equiualent in other languages, Hebrew, Greeke, or Engliſh. Laſtly, whether we may by the Scriptures [illegible] before the things, or at the feet of the perſons that we ſo adore. For of ciuill [illegible] to our Superiours by [illegible], or other worſhip, I thinke the Proteſtants will not ſtand with vs, though indeed their arguments make as much againſt the one as the other.

The [illegible] by conference of Scriptures might find religious a-doration of crea-tures.

Aug. de vera re-lig. cap. 55.

But for religious worſhip of creatures (which we ſpeake of) let them ſee in the Scriptures both old and new: firſt, whether the Temple, the Tabernacle, the Arke, the Propitiatory, the Cherubins, the Altar, the Bread of propoſition, the Sabbath, and all their holies, were not reuerenced by all ſignes of deuotion and religion: whether the Sacraments of Chriſt, the Prieſts of our Lord, the Prophets of God, the Goſpel, Scriptures, the name of IESVS, and ſuch like (which be by vſe, ſignification, or ſanctification made holy) are not now to be reuerenced: and they ſhall find all theſe things to haue bene reuerenced of all the faithfull, without any diſhonour of God, and much to his honor. Secondly, that this reuerence is named Adoration in the Scriptures, theſe ſpeeches doe proue, Pſal. 98. Adore ye his footſtoole, becauſe it is holy; and Heb. 11. He adored the top of his rod. Thirdly, that the Scriptures alſo warrant vs (as the nature of the word adoration giueth in all three tongues) to bow downe our bodies, to fall flat on the ground at the preſence of ſuch things, and at the feet of holy perſons, ſpecially Angels, as Iohn doth here, theſe examples proue: Abraham adored the Angels that appeared to him, Moyſes alſo the Angel that ſhewed himſelfe out of the buſh, who were creatures, though they repreſented Gods perſon, as this Angel here did that ſpake to S. Iohn. Balaam adored the Angel that ſtood before him with a ſword drawen, Num. 22. Ioſue adored falling flat downe before the feet of the Angel, calling him his Lord, knowing by the Angels owne teſtimony, that it was but an Angel. Who refuſed it not, but required yet more reuerence, commanding him to plucke of his ſhoes, becauſe the ground was holy, no doubt ſo made by the preſence of the Angel.

Three points herein examined and proued by Scriptures.

1 Religious worſhip of creatures.

2 The ſame is called adoration.

3 Falling proſtrate before the perſons or things adored.

Adoring of Angels.

Yea, not onely to Angels, but euen to great Prophets this deuotion was done, as to Daniel by Nabuchodonoſer, who fell flat vpon his face before him, and did other great offices of religion; which the Prophet refuſed not, becauſe they were done to God rather then to him, as Saint Hierome defendeth the ſame againſt Porphyrie, who charged Daniel with intolerable pride therein: and the ſaid holy Doctor alledgeth the fact of Alexander the great, that did the like to *Ioidas the high prieſt of the Iewes. Howſoeuer that be (for of the ſacrifice there mentioned there may be ſome doubt, which the Church doth alwaies immediatly to God, and to no creature) the fact of the Prophets (4. Reg. 2.) to Elizeus, is plainer, where they perceiuing that the double grace and ſpirit of Elias *was giuen to him, fell flat downe at his feet and adored. So did * the Sunamite. FVLK. 5. Concerning the expounding of doubtfull places of Scripture, by conference of other cleare places wherein you deride vs, Saint Auguſtine ſaith, Nothing almoſt is fetched out of theſe obſcurities, which is not found elſewhere, to be vttered moſt plainely. De Doct. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 6. Now this text is ſo cleare and euident of it ſelfe, as it is one of thoſe places, which may ſerue to expound the obſcuritie or difficultie of other texts, where any doubt may ariſe concerning religious adoration and ſeruice, which is due onely to God. But ſeeing you will be blind in the cleare light of the Sunne at mid-day, and make doubt of this place, where none at all needeth, but to cloake your ſhamefull idolatrie, yeelding religious worſhip and ſeruice to creatures: Let vs conſider your three doubts or queſtions. Firſt, whether there ought to be or may be any religious reuerence or honor done to any creature. But here (becauſe you haue Saint Auguſtine flat againſt the grand queſtion,) you diſtinguiſh of this word Religion, and religious by petition of principle or begging the matter in controuerſie, that there is one kind of religious worſhip proper to God, and another to creatures; whereas the queſtion is, whether all Religion, and religious worſhip and ſeruice be due onely to God. But becauſe I will not ſtriue with you about a terme, if we might agree about the matter: So that you will grant with Saint Auguſtine in the place by you quoted, That we may haue no Religion or religious worſhip and ſeruice of the workes of men, that is of Images; for the work-men themſelues that make ſuch things, are better then their works, whom yet wee ought not to worſhip: That we ought to haue no Religion or religious worſhip and ſeruice for dead men: For if they liued godly, they are not ſo taken that they ſeeke ſuch: but they will haue him to bee worſhipped of vs, by whoſe illumination they reioyce, that we are fellow-ſeruants of their dignitie or worthineſſe. Therefore they are to bee honoured for imitation ſake, they are not to bee adored for Religion.

Vnderſtanding of the Scriptures by conference.

God onely to be worſhipped with religious ſeruice.

Finally, that we ought to haue no religion of Angels, whom we honour with loue, not with ſeruice: I ſay, ſo that you will grant all this with S. Auguſtine, I will not hold you ſo hard at the ſtaues end for this terme Religious, but anſwer your queſtion. That there is a religious reuerence due to ſuch things as are holy by ſanctification, and application to the ſeruice of God, in reſpect that they are by God ſanctified and applied to his ſeruice. But this due reuerence and eſtimation of ſuch things, is no religious adoration, worſhip or ſeruice of thoſe things, or due to thoſe things. Therefore the Temple, the Tabernacle, the Arke, the Propitiatorie, the Cherubins, the Altar, the Bread of propoſition, the Sabbath, and all their holies, were eſteemed and reuerenced as holy things, but not adored, worſhipped or ſerued, by religious kneeling to them, bowing to them, or praying to them. Likewiſe the Sacraments of Chriſt, are to be reuerently eſteemed and honoured, as the ſeales of Gods promiſes: but not to be adored, worſhipped, ſerued, kneeled to, or prayed vnto.

For to omit the Lords Supper, becauſe it is in controuerſie, what true Catholike euer ſaid, that Baptiſme, or the water thereof is to be adored, worſhipped, ſerued, by bowing or kneeling to it, or by praying to it? The like I ſay of the Goſpel, Scriptures, or the name of Ieſus, to which no religious adoration, worſhip, or ſeruice is due, although they are to bee honoured and religiouſly eſteemed for God and Chriſts ſake, whoſe Word and Name they are. And although men may kneele while the Scripture is read, or bowe while Ieſus or Chriſt is named, yet to the Bookes or the ſound of the name, no adoration is to be giuen, but onely to God. As for Gods Prieſts and Prophets, are to be honoured with ciuill reuerence for Religions ſake, with Charitie as Saint Auguſtine ſaith of Angels, not with religious ſeruice, with duties of the ſecond Table, not with any dutie of the firſt Table.

Your ſecond queſtion is, Whether that honour be called adoration in Latine, or by a word equiualent in other languages. Whereto I anſwer, That in the Scripture that religious reuerence and due eſtimation of holy things, is neuer called Adoration, worſhip or ſeruice of thoſe things, nor by any word equiualent. For the Prophet, Pſal. 98. ſaith not, Adore his footſtoole, but Adore ye at or before his footſtoole: becauſe he is holy. For that 5. verſe is Secondly, [illegible] the Angel that ſhewed himſelfe out of the buſh, which was a creature, although he repreſented Gods [illegible] that ſpake here to Saint [illegible] Iohn, I [illegible]: [illegible] text is plaine, that it was the Lord himſelfe, and the Hebrew text calling him the Angel of the Lord, [illegible] plainly Chriſt, and no creature. So doth Saint Paul call him expreſly, 1 Cor. 10. 9. And Exod. 13. 32. he is called the Lord which led his people out of Egypt, that ſometime is called the Angel, becauſe he is the Angel of the Couenant, as Malachie calleth him, Malac. 3. 1.

Thirdly, Balaam adored the Angel that ſtood before him with a ſword drawen, Num. 22. I might anſwer peraduenture, that Balaams example is meet for [illegible] to follow. But indeed the Hebrew text ſaith not, that he adored the Angel, but that he inclined his head, and bowed himſelfe vpon his face, adoring God, which he ſaw his Angel ready to take vengeance of him. But Ioſue adored falling flat downe before the feet of the Angel, calling him his Lord, knowing by the Angels owne teſtimony, that it was but an Angel. I anſwer, he knew by the Lords teſtimony, that it was Chriſt himſelfe, the Prince of the armies of the Lord, that appeared to him in the ſimilitude of a man; [illegible] within three verſes after he is called Iehoua the Lord himſelfe. Wherfore neither this, nor any other examples you can bring, [illegible] adore, worſhip, or ſerue Angels.

Yet you proceed and ſay, that not onely to Angels, but alſo to great Prophets, this deuotion was done, as to Daniel by Nabuchodonoſor.

I anſwer, that no religious adoration was euer lawfully giuen to any Prophet, but ciuill adoration of loue, not of religious ſeruice, (though in reſpect of God, whoſe ſeruants they were) as all ciuill honour giuen to earthly Kings and other perſons in authoritie, is in reſpect of God, [illegible] miniſters they are, yet is no religious adoration, worſhip or ſeruice. And therefore it was ſhamefull Idolatrie that Nabuchodonoſor would haue offered ſacrifice to Daniel, who (without doubt) did withſtand him, though it be not expreſſed. Yet it is eaſily to be gathered, not only by the piety of Daniel, that would neuer admit ſuch a ſacrilege, but alſo by the 47. verſ. of that chap. where the Kings anſwer to Daniel is rehearſed, acknowledging that the God of the Iewes, is the only God, to whom only all religious ſeruice and worſhip is due. Therefore you doe ſhamefully ſlander the holy Prophet, in ſaying that he did not refuſe that adoration and outward offices of Religion, yea and Saint Hierome that he doth defend the ſame. And laſt of all, although Porphyrie was a wicked blaſphemer, yet it is ſhame to belie the deuill: for neither did Porphyrie charge Daniel with intolerable pride, but ſaid it was incredible, that ſuch a proud King would adore his captiue.

Therefore theſe be the words of Saint Hierome vpon Daniel 2. 46. At this place Porphyrie doth cauill, that the [illegible] King neuer would haue adored a captiue. As though the Lycaonians alſo would not haue offered ſacrifice to Paul and Barnabas, becauſe of the greatneſſe of their miracles. Therefore the errour of the Gentiles, which thinke all that is aboue themſelues to be Gods, ought not to be imputed to the Scripture, which doth report all things ſimply as they were done. But alſo wee may ſay this, that the King himſelfe did declare the cauſe of adoring and offering of hoſtes, incenſe, and ſacrifice, ſaying vnto Daniel: Verily, your God is the God of Gods, &c. Therefore hee doth not ſo much adore Daniel, as God which reuealed the myſteries in Daniel: as we reade that Alexander the great King of the Macedonians did to the high prieſt Ioiada. But if this interpretation be [illegible], we will ſay, that Nabuchodonozor being confounded at the greatneſſe and aſtoniſhment of the wonders, knew not what hee ſhould doe: as he that vnderſtood who was the true God, and Lord of Kings, and adored his ſeruant, and burned incenſe to him.

You ſee plainly, that S. Hierome doth not defend this religious ſeruice to haue bin lawfully offered to Daniel, but yeeldeth reaſons that might moue the proud King to worſhip Daniel, as the Lycaonians would [illegible]red Paul and Barnabas, or thinking to worſhip God in him, as Alexander did in giuing reuerence to Iaddus the high Prieſt. Finally, the falling downe before Elizeus by the children of the Prophets, and by the Sunamite, was ciuill and not religious adoration, ſo I ſay of Achior adoring Iudith. Therefore by comparing the Scriptures, we doe not find that religious adoration, worſhip, or ſeruice, may be done to any creature, how holy ſoeuer, but onely to God and Chriſt: which S. Iohn was manifeſtly forbidden to doe to any other. But you ſay, The Angel for cauſes might refuſe that which S. Iohn did lawfully doe vnto him. But the Angel might not forbid that which was lawfull to be done, except you will ſet him to ſchoole, and teach him ſuch diuinity as he neuer learned in heauen. For he doth here ſtreightly forbid him: ſaying, See thou doe it not, and addeth a reaſon why neither he ought to receiue ſuch adoration, nor Iohn to offer it: becauſe hee is fellow ſeruant with him, and all true Chriſtians, to whom no ſuch adoration is due: but onely to God. Which if it had not beene his expreſſe meaning, hee ſhould haue induced Iohn into an error, and cauſed him to thinke that God onely is to be adored, which is an errour by your doctrine, if Saints, Angels, Images, reliques, &c. may be adored with religious adoration. And if there were cauſes knowne to you, why the Angel might refuſe that which Iohn did lawfully vnto him, why doth he not rather expreſſe thoſe cauſes, then theſe which you hold to be no cauſes. If you know not thoſe cauſes, why do you dreame of that you know not, and deny thoſe to be cauſes which the Angel doth expreſſe? Namely, becauſe he is a ſeruant, not the Lord, a creature, not God to whom only all religious ſeruice is to be giuen.

But you coniecture there were cauſes why the Angel might refuſe, that Iohn might lawfully giue to him, as Peter did refuſe the honour giuen him by Cornelius, according to Saint Chryſoſtomes opinion. But you doe without ſhame ſlander Saint Chryſoſtome: for there is no word to proue that Cornelius did lawfully offer to adore Peter,

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XX.

RHEM. 1 2 Bound him.] Chriſt by his paſſion hath abridged the power of the devil for a thouſand yeres, that is, the whole time of the new Teſtament, untill Antichriſts time, when he ſhall be looſed againe, that is, be permitted to deceive the world, but for a ſhort time only, to wit, three yeares and a halfe.

FVLKE. 1. If a thouſand yeares ſignifie no certaine number of yeares, but the whole time of the new Teſtament, neither doe the 42 moneths of Antichriſts reigne ſignifie a certaine number of three yeares and a halfe, but rather the whole time of his reigne, which is but ſhort in compariſon to the eternall reigne of Chriſt.

The time of Antichriſts reigne.

RHEM. 2. 4 I ſaw ſeats.] S. Auguſtine li.20.de civit.Dei.c.9. taketh this to be ſpoken, not of the laſt judgement, but of the Sees or Conſiſtories of Biſhops and Prelates, and of the Prelates themſelves by whom the Church is now governed. And the judgement here given, can be taken no otherwiſe better, then of that which was ſaid by our Saviour, Matth.18. Whatſoever you bind in earth, ſhall be bound in heaven: and therfore the Apoſtle ſaith, What have I to judge of them that are without?

Biſhops conſiſtories and judiciall power. 1 Cor.5.

FVLK. 2. S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh not of popiſh Sees and Conſiſtories, in which the Prelates of the Antichriſtian Church take their eaſe in the one, and ſerve their covetouſneſſe, or exerciſe their cruelty in the other: but he ſaith, they are to be underſtood of Sedes præpoſitorum, the Seats of the overſeers, or governours of the Church, and of the governours themſelves, which exerciſe judgement by preaching the word of God, and exerciſing Chriſtian diſcipline.

RHEM. 3. 4 And the ſoules.] He meaneth (ſaith S. Auguſtine in the place alleged) the ſoules of Martyrs, that they ſhal in the meane time, during theſe thouſand yeres, which is the time of the Church militant, be in heaven without their bodies, and reigne with Chriſt: for the ſoules (ſaith he) of the godly departed, are not ſeparated from the Church, which is even now the kingdom of Chriſt: for elſe there ſhould be kept no memory of them at the altar of God in the communicating of the body of Chriſt: neither ſhould it availe to haſten to baptiſme in the perils of death, for feare of ending our life without it: nor to haſten to be reconciled, if we fortune for penance or of ill conſcience to be ſeparated from the ſame body. And why are all theſe things done, but for that the faithfull departed alſo be members of the Church? And though for an example the Martyrs be only named here, yet it is meant of others alſo that die in the ſtate of grace.

During a thouſand yeares (that is the time of this militant Church) Saints reigne with Chriſt in ſoule only.

FVLK. 3. Ergo, the reſt of the ſoules frie not in purgatory, while the Martyrs raigne in heaven with Chriſt. For although (ſaith S. Auguſtine) they are not yet with their bodies, yet their ſoules doe even now reigne with him, while theſe thouſand yeares doe run: wherefore it is read elſewhere in the ſame booke: Bleſſed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth now, even ſo ſaith the ſpirit, that they may reſt from their labours: for their works follow them. So the Church reigneth now, firſt with Chriſt in the living and in the dead. For therefore, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Chriſt died, that he might have dominion over the quicke and the dead. But he maketh mention of Martyrs ſoules only, for that they chiefly doe reigne being dead, which have fought for the truth to the death: But of a part we underſtand the whole, even the reſt that are dead which pertaine to the Church, which is the kingdome of God.

Purgatory.

RHEM. 5 The reſt lived not.] The reſt which are not of the happy number aforeſaid, but lived and died in ſinne, reigne not with Chriſt in their ſoules during this time of the new Teſtament, but are dead in ſoule ſpiritually, and in body naturally, till the day of judgement. S. Auguſt. Ibid.

The reſt are dead and damned in ſoule, during the ſame time.

RHEM. 4. 5 This is the firſt reſurrection.] As there be two regenerations, one by faith, which is now in Baptiſme: and another according to the fleſh, when at the latter day the body ſhall be made immortall and incorruptible: ſo there are two reſurrections, the one now of the ſoules to ſalvation when they die in grace, which is called the firſt, the other of the bodies at the latter day. S. Auguſt. li.20.de civit.c.6.

The firſt reſurrection of the ſoule only.

FVLK. 4. Regeneration in the elect, is ſealed to them by baptiſme. But ſeeing baptiſme may be given out of the Church, which ſhall afterward be effectuall in the Church, when they that were baptized by Heretikes, come to the Catholike Church, it is manifeſt that regeneration is not made in Baptiſme ex opere operato, of the worke wrought. For they may have the right ſeale of Regeneration, which yet have not the right faith and ſpirit of God, whereby they ſhould be regenerated.

Opus operatum. The worke wrought.

RHEM. 5. 6 They ſhall be Prieſts.] It is not ſpoken (ſaith S. Auguſtine lib.20. de Civit.cap.10.) of Biſhops and Prieſts onely, which are properly now in the Church called Prieſts: but as wee call all Chriſtians, for the myſticall Chriſme or oyntment, ſo all, Prieſts, becauſe they are the members of one Prieſt, of whom the Apoſtle Peter ſaith, A holy people, a Kingly Prieſthood. Which words be notable for their learning that thinke there be none

RHEM. 6 7 Satan ſhall be looſed.] In the whole 8. chapter of the ſaid 20. booke de Civit. Dei, in S. Auguſtine, is a notable commentary of theſe words, Where firſt he declareth, that neither this binding nor looſing of Satan is in reſpect of ſeducing or not ſeducing the Church of God: proving that whether he be bound or looſe, he can never ſeduce the ſame. The ſame (ſaith he) ſhall be the ſtate of the Church at that time when the devill is to be looſed, even as ſince it was inſtituted: the ſame hath it been and ſhall bee at all times in her children that ſucceed each other by birth and death. And a little after: This I thought was therefore to be mentioned, leſt any man ſhould think, that during the little time wherein the devill ſhall be looſed, the Church ſhall not be upon the earth, he either not finding it here when he ſhall be let looſe, or conſuming it when he ſhall by all meanes perſecute the ſame. Secondly, he declareth, that the devil to bee bound, is nothing els but not to be permitted by God to exerciſe all his force or fraud in tentations: as to be looſed, is to be ſuffred by God for a ſmall time, that is, for three yeeres and a halfe, to practiſe and prove all his power and arts of tentations againſt the Church and her children, and yet not to prevaile againſt them. Thirdly, this Doctor ſheweth by what great mercy our Lord hath tied Satan, and abridged his power during the whole millenary or thouſand yeeres, which is all the time of the new Teſtament untill then: and with what wiſdome he permitteth him to breake looſe that little time of three yeeres and ſix moneths, toward the latter day, which ſhall be the reigne of Antichriſt. Laſtly, he ſheweth what kind of men ſhall bee moſt ſubject to the devils ſeduction (even ſuch as now by tentation of heretikes goe out of the Church) and who ſhall avoyd it.

The binding and looſing of Satan explicated by S. Auguſtine.

The ſhort reigne of Antichriſt.

By all which we may confute divers falſe expoſitions of old and late heretikes: firſt, the ancient ſect of the Millenaries, that grounded upon theſe thouſand yeares named by the prophet, this hereſie, that there ſhould be ſo many yeares after the reſurrection of our bodies, in which we ſhould reigne with Chriſt in this world, in our bodies, in all delights and pleaſures corporall, of meats, drinks, and ſuch like, which they called the firſt reſurrection: of which hereſie Cerinthus was the author. Epiph. hær. 77. in fine. Hier. Comment. in c. 19. Mat. Auguſt. hær. 8. ad Quod vult Deum. Euſebius alſo, li. 3. hiſtoriæ, c. 33. ſheweth that ſome principall men were in part (though after a more honeſt manner concerning thoſe corporall delicacies) of the ſame opinion, by miſconſtruction of theſe words of S. Iohn. Whereby we learne, and all the world may perceive the holy Scriptures to be hard, when ſo great Clerks did erre, and that there is no ſecuritie but in that ſenſe which the Church alloweth of.

Millenarij or Chiliaſtæ.

The Scriptures hard.

The late Heretikes alſo by the ſaid Saint Auguſtines words are fully refuted, affirming not onely that the Church may be ſeduced in that great perſecution of the devils looſing, but that it hath been ſeduced even a great piece of the time when the Devill is bound: holding that the very true Church may erre or fall from truth to errour and idolatry, yea (which is more blaſphemy) that the chiefe governour of the Church is Antichriſt himſelfe, and the very Church under him, The whore of Babylon: and that this Antichriſt (which the Scriptures in ſo many places, and here plainely by Saint Auguſtines Expoſition, teſtifie, ſhall reigne but a ſmall time, and that toward the laſt judgement) hath been reveiled long ſithence, to be the Pope himſelfe, Chriſts owne Vicar, and that he hath perſecuted the Saints of their ſect for theſe thouſand yeares at the leaſt. Which is no more but to make the devill to be looſe, and Antichriſt to reigne the whole thouſand yeres, or the moſt part thereof, that is, almoſt the whole time of the Churches ſtate in the new Teſtament (which is againſt this and other ſcriptures evidently, appointing that to be the time of the Devils binding:) Yea it is to make Antichriſt and the Devill weaker toward the day of judgement then before, and the truth better to be knowne, and the faith more common, the nearer we come to the ſame judgement: which is expreſly * againſt the Goſpell, and this prophecie of S. Iohn.

By S. Auguſtines foreſaid explication, is evidently deduced againſt the Proteſtants that the Church cannot erre, and that the Pope cannot poſſibly be Antichriſt.

Matth. 24. Luke 18, 8.

An invincible demonſtration.

We ſee that the ſects of Luther, Calvin, and other be more ſpred through the world than they were ever before, and conſequently the Pope and his religion leſſened, and his power of puniſhing (or, as they call it) perſecuting the ſaid Sectaries, through the multitude of his adverſaries, diminiſhed. How then is the Pope Antichriſt, whoſe force ſhall be greater at the latter end of the world, then before? or how can it be otherwiſe, but theſe ſect-maſters ſhould be Antichriſts owne precurſors, [illegible] make Chriſts chiefe miniſters, and the Churches chiefe governours that have been theſe thouſand yeares and more, to be Antichriſts: and themſelves and their ſects to be true, that come ſo neare the time of the devils looſing and ſeduction, and of the perſonall Antichriſt?

FVLK. 6. Saint Auguſtine ſaith, which you doe fraudulently omit, to have a ſimple colour of his authoritie againſt us, If this be to the Devill, to be bound and ſhut up, not to be able to ſeduce the Church, then ſhall this be his looſing, that he may be able. God forbid. For the Church ſhall never be ſeduced by him, being predeſtinated and choſen before the conſtitution of the world, of which it is ſaid, The Lord knoweth who are his. And yet the Church ſhall be here even in that time in which the devill is to be looſed: as ſince the time it was inſtituted, it hath been here and ſhall be at all times in her children, or members which by birth ſucceed them that die. By this it is manifeſt, that Saint Auguſtine ſpeaketh not of the viſible eſtate of the Church, in which are many hypocrites, but of the Congregation of the Elect, that ſhall never faile while the world ſtandeth. Now let us ſee what you gather out of him. Firſt, againſt the olde Heretiques the Chiliaſts, in which errour certaine great Clerkes were intangled: whereupon you inferre, That the Scriptures are hard: and that there is no ſecuritie but in that ſenſe which the Church holdeth. Concerning the hardneſſe of the Scripture, it is a ſorry concluſion: becauſe one prophecie of things to come is hard, therefore the whole Scriptures are generally hard. But although wee graunt unto you that many things are hard in the Scripture, yet it will not follow, that all things are hard therein. Saint Auguſtine doth plainely teach you, De doctr. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 6. That the holy Ghoſt hath ſo magnifically tempered the Scriptures, that by plaine and eaſie places he might provide againſt famine, and by hard places he might wipe away loathſomneſſe, that commonly ariſeth of plentie and abundance eaſily gotten. What [illegible] of lying and ſlandering is this, [illegible] that any one of Gods elect might fall from Chriſt to idolatry finally, much leſſe the whole Church of the elect and predeſtinate, of which S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh. But this we ſay [illegible]: They which being overcome, doe follow the devill, pertained not to the predeſtinated number of the ſonnes of God. And that, It is to be confeſſed, that when iniquity aboundeth, the charitie of many waxeth cold: and what through the unaccuſtomed and moſt grievous perſecutions and deceits of the devill, when he is looſed, they which are not written in the booke of life are many that ſhould yeeld. We ſay not therefore, that the whole Church or any true member thereof ſhould be ſeduced unto deſtruction, but that many of the viſible Church, whoſe names are not written in the booke of life, have been ſeduced by Antichriſts perſecution and deceits, ſpecially ſince Satan was let looſe. We ſay alſo that the Pope which is the devils Vicar, and not Chriſts, is Antichriſt, which hath no lawfull government of the Church, but uſurpeth tyranny againſt the true Church of the elect. And that he with his Clergy which ſeduce the world with his blaſphemous doctrine, are the whore of Babylon, and not the Church of Chriſt. We ſay further, that the kingdome of Antichriſt, is but a ſhort time, in compariſon of the eternall kingdome of Chriſt, yet hath it continued many hundred yeeres, though not alwayes in like pride and tyrannie. But that he hath perſecuted the Saints, for a thouſand yeeres at the leaſt, we ſay not. For after he was firſt revealed in Pope Boniface the third, he did foreſee the errors of Purgatory and invocation of Saints, the uſe of Images, and ſuch like, which were found in the Church before him, and added many other errors unto them, ſeducing, firſt by [illegible] doctrine of faſting and continencie, forbidding meats and mariage. Having afterward [illegible] (as is expreſſed in the viſion of the beaſt with two hornes like the Lambe, yet ſpeaking like the dragon,) and procuring the full reſtauration of the decayed Romane Empire, (which is the beaſt with ſeven heads and ten hornes,) in the See of Rome. Which once obtained, he wallowed in all filthy pleaſures of the fleſh, like an harlot, poyſoning, and alluring the Kings of the earth to commit fornication with him, and having bewitched the earthly Princes to become obedient unto him, then at length Sathan was looſed. And the true Church, which deteſting thoſe abominations, and not able any longer to abide the [illegible], and [illegible] of his wicked reigne, departed out of Babylon, was moſt cruelly perſecuted, in thoſe whom they called Albigenſes, Waldenſes, Pauperes de Lugduno, Picardi, &c. And that more cruelly then ever the heathen Emperours perſecuted the Chriſtians before Conſtantines time. For in thoſe heatheniſh perſecutions for the moſt part, the Chriſtians were accuſed and condemned in ſome forme of law, but in theſe cruelties, bloody warres were held, and cruell battailes fought againſt them to deſtroy them utterly, if it had beene poſſible.

In Pope Sylveſter a lively [illegible] of the looſing of Sathan.

After which moſt cruell warres, when they were often driven into mountaines and deſert places of the Alpes, Appennine, Hercinia Sylva and other corners of the world, or elſe diſperſed and kept cloſe in all regions of Europe, the bloody Inquiſition was ſet up againſt them, which alſo hath conſumed many thouſands of them. Yet was it never able ſo to overcome them, but that not only diſperſed members, but even whole Churches of them continued in the deſert corners, untill it pleaſed God in this laſt time, to have his Goſpell openly preached, and his word to make warre againſt Antichriſt, and to have the victory as in the chap. 19. verſe 11. to the end of the chapter. Which prophecy is now in fulfilling, and ſhall be accompliſhed, let Antichriſt and all that take his part, rage never ſo much againſt it. We doe not therefore aſſigne the whole thouſand yeeres, or the moſt part to Antichriſts reigne. For we hold that the open tyranny of Antichriſt (though he ſhewed himſelfe in claime and uſurpation in part, and deceived many before) began at the end of the thouſand yeeres, when Sathan was let looſe, after which time, the Popes cruelty was greateſt, when his hereſie by the Schoolemen and the new ſects of Fryers were moſt ſtoutly defended.

But that Antichriſt and the devill ſhall be weaker toward the day of judgement, then they were before, and the truth better be knowen, and the faith more common among many, after Antichriſt is begun to be conſumed with the breath of our Lords mouth, which is his holy word: it agreeth not only with the prophecy of Saint Paul, but it is moſt clearely deſcribed in the chapter 19. verſe 11. to the end. Yea through the whole chapter, which is a prophecy of the joy of the Church, after the condemnation of Antichriſt and the whore of Babylon is knowen therein: and of the preparation of the Church, which is the Bride to the day of her marriage: of the victory of the word of God againſt Antichriſt: of the vaine attempts of Antichriſt, and the Kings of the earth to reſiſt the word of God and the kingdome of Chriſt. Againſt which there is [illegible] contrary in the Goſpell or in this prophecy of Saint Iohn. For though faith ſhall bee hard to be found at the comming of our Saviour Chriſt, and in fewe, in compariſon of the multitude of the unbeleevers, both open enemies and counterfeit Chriſtians, yet faith ſhall bee found in the elect, whom hee ſhall finde at his [illegible] as it is manifeſt, 1. Theſſ. 4. 17. though they bee not ſo many in number, as have beene in other ages, [illegible] before Antichriſt, nor ſo fewe, as were during the time of his greateſt tyranny and perſecution. [illegible] you ſee and confeſſe, that the Pope and his religion is leſſened, and his power of [illegible] diminiſhed, [illegible] (if it bee poſſible) that you might alſo ſee that the Pope is Antichriſt, who is now conſumed [illegible] [illegible] and with the [illegible] ſword that proceedeth out of the mouth of [illegible] of [illegible] made [illegible] and his [illegible] be [illegible], but [illegible] with the deuill and his angels, according to [illegible]. [illegible] and [illegible] of his Church [illegible] can any longer hide his wickedneſſe, which is laid ſo open by the preaching of the Goſpell, that all [illegible] ſee it: though ſuch as the God of this world hath blinded, will not open their eyes, but obſtinately reſiſt the light that is offered, to their owne [illegible].

RHEM. 7. 8 The campe of the Saints.] Saint Auguſtine in the ſaid 20. booke de Ciu. Dei, c. 11. It is not ſaith he, to bee taken that [illegible] gather in any place, as though the campe of the Saints or the beloued citie ſhould be but in one place, [illegible] indeed are no other thing but the Church of Chriſt ſpredde through the whole world. And [illegible] the Church ſhall then bee (which ſhall bee in all Nations euen then, for ſo much is inſinuated by the latitude of the earth here ſpecified) there ſhall the tents of Saints bee, and the beloued Citie of God, and there [illegible] ſhall bee beſieged by all her enemies, which ſhall bee in euery Countrey where ſhee is, in moſt cruell and forcible ſort. So writeth this profound holy Doctor. Whereby we ſee, that as now the particular Churches of England, Scotland, Flanders and ſuch like, bee perſecuted by their enemies in thoſe Countries, ſo in the time of Antichriſt, the Churches of all Nations, as of Italy, Spaine, France, and all other which now be quiet, ſhall be aſſaulted where [illegible] are, and much more, for that the generall perſecution of the whole, ſhall be greater than the particular perſecution of any Churches in the world.

The campe of Saints is the catholike Church through the world. As now Heretikes in particular countries, ſo Antichriſt ſhall perſecute the Churches of all nations.

FVLK. 7. That which you [illegible] ſay to be perſecution in the Church of England, Scotland, Flanders, &c. is in truth the leſſening and diminiſhing of Antichriſt and his Religion, which daily proceedeth euen in Italy, Spaine, France, and whereſoeuer hee maketh moſt cruell warres againſt the word of God. And that which you ſay ſhall bee, that the Church of all Nations is to bee aſſaulted moſt grieuouſly, hath already beene performed by Antichriſt the Pope. Although the battell here ſpoken of is a more generall conſent of all the enemies of the Church, inward and outward, ſecret and open, to make aſſault againſt it, though not in one place nor time, nor after one manner. But the vniuerſall hatred of all the reprobate, is figured under the names of Gog and Magog, in which the Papiſts and Mahometiſts are the chiefe, though enemies one to the other. Yet agreeing as the Phariſes and Sadduces in hatred of Chriſt, ſo theſe in perſecuting his Church. By this viſion therefore, the Church is comforted, alſo as ſhe is inſtructed in the former viſions, that neither the heathen perſecutors without the Church, nor Antichriſt ſitting in the middeſt of the temple of God, ſhould preuaile to deſtroy her, no more ſhould all the enemies of the Church conſiſting of hypocrites and infidels, which ſhould bee the greateſt number toward the end of the world, though they ioyned in one againſt her, be able to ouerthrow her, but in fighting againſt her, they ſhould gaine their owne vndoubted deſtruction.

RHEM. 9. There came downe fire.] It is not meant of the fire of Hell (ſaith Saint Auguſtine lib. c. 12.) into which the wicked ſhall bee caſt after the reſurrection of their bodies, but of an extraordinary helpe that God will ſend from heauen, to giue ſuccour to the Saints of the Church that then ſhall fight againſt the wicked [illegible], the very feruent and burning zeale of religion and Gods honour, which God will kindle in the hearts of the faithfull, to be conſtant againſt all the forces of that great perſecution.

What is meant by fire from heauen.

RHEM. 8. 12. Another booke.] This is the booke of Gods knowledge or predeſtination, wherein hee which before was hid to the world, ſhall be opened, and wherein the true record of euery mans workes ſhall be contained, and they haue their iudgement diuerſly according to their workes, and not according to faith onely, or lacke of faith onely. For, all infidels (as Turkes, obſtinate Iewes, & Heretikes) ſhall neuer come to that examination, being otherwiſe condemned.

The booke of euery mans workes, opened in the day of Iudgement.

FVLK. 8. Men ſhall bee iudged according to their workes which are the fruites of faith or infidelitie. But in the booke of life is not contained the record of euery mans workes, but the names of the elect onely: for which record there are other bookes opened before. Where you ſay infidels are otherwiſe condemned then for lacke of faith onely, it is true, and yet if they had that faith onely, by which God iuſtifieth the ungodly, they ſhould not be infidels, but faithfull and fruitfull in good workes, and not condemned, but glorified with the reſt of the elect.

*18 For I teſtify unto every man that heareth the wordes of the prophecie of this booke, If any man ſhal adde unto theſe ſayings, God ſhal adde unto him the plagues that are written in this booke. Deut.4. Pro.30.

19 And if any man ſhall take away from the wordes of the booke of this prophecie, God ſhall take away his part out of the booke of life, and out of the holy citie, and from the things which are written in this booke.

20 He which teſtifieth theſe things, ſaith, Surely I come quickely. Amen. Even ſo, come Lord Ieſus.

21 The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt bee with you all, Amen.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XXII.

RHEM 1. 2 The tree of life.] Chriſt is our tree of life: in the Church, by the B. Sacrament: and in heaven by his viſible preſence and influence of life everlaſting both to our bodies and ſoules: of whom Salomon ſaith, the tree of life to all that apprehend him. Prov.3.

RHEM. 1. Christ is our [illegible], not onely by the [illegible] (for [illegible] they onely should be partakers of [illegible] of his Works, which last is [illegible].

2. [illegible] to adore the Angel: though [illegible] 10.

FVLK. 2. We [illegible] are [illegible] the word of God, [illegible], and to adore before an Idol, yet [illegible] they not [illegible] one. For [illegible] boweth before an Idol, that in [illegible] detesteth it. But to [illegible] before the Arke, propitiatorie, [illegible] which God by his word alloweth, is not to adore the Arke, propitiatorie, Altar, &c. But God in those places, or in presence of those things.

Adoration.

RHEM. 3. 11 Let him be iustifyed yet.] Man by Gods grace, and doing good works, doth increase his iustice.

FVLK. 3. Man doing good workes by Gods grace, doth increase that iustice which is a fruit of iustification by faith. But that iustice by which he is iust in the sight of God, [illegible] increaseth not by good workes: for it is perfect in Christ, in whom we are iust through faith. Iustus autem iustitia factus. [illegible] Psal 10. Christ saith, [illegible]

Iustification.

RHEM. 4. 12 According to his workes.] Heaven is the reward, hire, and repayment for good works, as all the Scriptures, yet the adversaries [illegible] not see it.

FVLK. 4. Heaven is the reward freely given to our good workes by the grace of God, not of the merite of workes, nor as an hire to him that worketh, Rom. 4. 4. But as an inheritance to the children of God, Matth. 25. 34. Rom. 8. 17. And it is said to be due, and rendred or repayed, not because it is merited or deserved by us, but by Christ, and promised to us. And this is the doctrine of all the Scriptures, howsoever the enemies of Gods grace labour to obscure it.

Merite.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XXII.

RHEM. 11 He that hurteth.] It is not an exhortation, but a commination or threatning, that how farre soever the wicked increase in [illegible], God hath provided answerable punishment for them.

RHEM. 5 18 If any man shall adde.] The author of the Commentaries upon this booke, bearing the name of Saint Ambrose, saith thus of this point: He maketh not this protestation against the expositors of his prophecy, but against Heretikes, for the Expositor doth adde or diminish nothing, but openeth the obscuritie of the narration, or sheweth the morall or spirituall sense. Hee curseth therefore Heretikes that used to adde somewhat of their owne that was false, and to take away other things that were contrary to their heresies. So saith this auncient Writer. And this was the propertie of them in all ages, and so is it of ours now, as we have noted through the whole Bible, and as we have in sundry places set forth to the sight of all indifferent Readers in the new Testament, that all the world may see that the Apostles curse is fallen upon them, and may beware of them.

The curse against adding or diminishing is against Heretiks, not Catholike expositors.

FVLK. 5 You shall never be able to prove that we have added any thing that is false, or taken away any thing that is true in the whole Bible. What you have done even in this translation, and in your annotations, I leave to the iudgement of the indifferent Readers that will peruse this answer, as also the defence of our translations against the slanderous booke of Gregory Martin.

RHEM. 6. 20 Come Lord Iesus.] And now O Lord Christ most iust and mercifull, we thy poore creatures that are so afflicted for confession and defence of the holy, Catholike, and Apostolike truth, conteyned in this thy sacred booke, and in the infallible doctrine of thy deare spouse our mother the Church, we cry also unto thy Maiesty with tendernes of our hearts unspeakeable, COME LORD IESVS QVICKLY; and iudge betwixt us and our Adversaries, and in the meane time, give patience, comfort, and constancy, to all that suffer for thy name, and trust in thee. O Lord God our onely helper and protector, tarry not long. AMEN.

A briefe petition unto IESVS Christ, to come quickly, as S. Iohn heere speaketh, and to iudge the cause of Catholikes and Protestants.

FVLK. 6 The words of your prayer bee good and godly, but that they proceede not from a faithfull heart, not onely your wilfull and obstinate maintaining of errours, against the most cleere light of the truth, with your intollerable licentiousnesse of lying and slandering the Saints of God, doe sufficiently declare: but also your horrible practices of treason and murder, of our most gracious and Soveraigne Lady, your naturall liege Queene, by your emissaries, Campion, Parsons, and other like trumpets of sedition, and other ministers of your wickednesse, Throgmorton, Somervill, Parry, Savage, Babington, &c. and the Spanish invasion by you procured and intended against your country, doth openly crie out against you, that you are men void of all feare of God, faith, good conscience, and religion: so that every true Christian man may say of you with the Prophet, Ps. 36. The wickednes of the ungodly hath said in my heart, there is no feare of God before his eies, &c. Therfore though you can speake good words in hypocrisy, yet your heart knoweth, and your cauterized conscience cannot but beare witnesse that you dare not abide the triall of Gods iudgement, howsoever (as al wicked offenders do commonly) you doe presumptuously appeale unto it: I will say no more, but with the whole Church of GOD conclude:

COME LORD IESVS.
AMEN.

God be praysed.
